BILL OF COMPLAINT.

The plaintiff brings this its bill of complaint against the above named defendants and each of them and respectfully shows to this Court the following statements of the grounds upon which the jurisdiction of this Court depends, and of the ultimate facts upon which it asks relief, all of which said facts it is informed and believes and, therefore, duly alleges to be true:

1. Plaintiff, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the banking laws of the United States with its principal place of business in the City of New York in the State of New York, and is engaged in and authorized to engage in a general banking and trust business. It is a resident and citizen of the State of New York within the meaning of the Judicial Code of the Laws of the United States.

Defendants, The Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, are each corporations existing under the laws of the State of Indiana with their principal places of business in the City of Indianapolis, State of Indiana, and are each residents and citizens of said State of Indiana.

Defendant, the City of Indianapolis, is a municipal corporation existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Indiana, and is located in the Southern Federal Judicial District of Indiana.

Defendants, William J. Mooney, Sr., A. Dallas Hitz, Alfred M. Glossbrenner, Edward W. Harris and Charles S. Raub, as members of the Board of Trustees of Utilities for the City of Indianapolis, and Henry L. Dithmer, Broadhurst Elsey, Fred W. Jungclaus, Roy Sahm, David J. Angus, Isaac E. Woodward, and Russell J. Ryan, as members of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, and each of them, are residents of the City of Indianapolis, State of Indiana, and citizens and residents of the State of Indiana.

2. The grounds upon which the jurisdiction of this Court rests in this suit is the diversity of citizenship between the plaintiff herein and each and all of the defendants as herein above named. This cause is of a civil nature and the matter in controversy herein exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of three thousand dollars ($3,000.00).

3. Plaintiff brings this suit as Trustee under a deed of trust executed on the 1st day of October, 1902, by defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, to secure the payment of the principal and interest of certain first mortgage bonds of said The Indianapolis Gas Company, and for and in behalf of the holders and owners of said bonds and pursuant to the rights granted to the original trustees and their successor or successors under said deed of trust, and at the specific instance and request of the holders and owners of $415,000.00 in principal amount of said bonds. The plaintiff seeks a declaratory judgment to determine and fix the rights of the plaintiff as mortgagee and as trustee as aforesaid, and to determine the rights of the plaintiff and the obligations of the several defendants under or growing out of a certain lease indenture, hereinafter more particularly described, executed by and between the defendants, The Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis on September 30, 1913, which said lease indenture, and the property leased thereunder, is part and parcel of the property of this trust of which this plaintiff is trustee, and plaintiff seeks further relief by way of injunction to preserve and protect the said property and the corpus of its trust, to prevent loss, waste, and damage to the same, and to prevent irreparable loss and damage to the holders of said bonds. Plaintiff further alleges that there exists a real and actual controversy as to the validity and as to the rights and obligations under said lease, all as more particularly hereinafter set out. Plaintiff has no plain, complete or adequate remedy at law, and adequate relief can only be administered in a court in equity.

4. On the 1st day of October, 1902, defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, duly bargained, sold and conveyed under said mortgage deed of trust all of its property, both real and personal, presently owned and thereafter to be acquired, to The Trust Company of America, a banking corporation then existing and doing business in the City of New York and one Ferdinand Winter, a citizen of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, as trustees to secure the payment of principal and interest of an authorized first mortgage bond issue in the amount of Seven Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($7,500,000.00), said bonds being described and designated as The Indianapolis Gas Company first consolidated mortgage five percent gold bonds. The Trust Company of America at the time of the execution of the mortgage deed of trust and at all times hereinafter mentioned, up to and including February 24, 1912, was duly authorized and empowered to hold in trust the property transferred and conveyed in trust to it and to execute the trusts thereby created and became and was until February 24, 1912 the duly acting and qualified corporate trustee under the mortgage deed of trust. On February 24, 1912, The Trust Company of America was duly merged pursuant to the laws of the State of New York with The Equitable Trust Company of New York. Said The Equitable Trust Company of New York was on February 24, 1912, and at all times hereinafter mentioned, up to and including May 31, 1930, duly authorized and empowered to hold in trust the property transferred and conveyed in trust to it and to execute the trusts created by said mortgage deed of trust and became and was until May 31, 1930, the duly acting and qualified corporate trustee under the mortgage deed of trust. On May 31, 1930, The Equitable Trust Company of New York was duly consolidated with the plaintiff. The plaintiff was on May 31, 1930, and at all times hereinafter mentioned, and still remains, duly authorized and empowered to hold in trust the property transferred and conveyed in trust to it and to execute the trusts created by said mortgage deed of trust and became and is now the duty acting and qualified corporate trustee under the mortgage deed of trust. Said Ferdinand Winter died in March, 1935, and plaintiff is now the sole acting and qualified trustee under said mortgage deed of trust, a copy of which is herein set out, made a part of this bill of complaint and marked Exhibit A.

Of the total authorized issue of said first mortgage bonds, bonds in the principal amount of Six Million Eight Hundred Eighty-One Thousand Dollars ($6,881,000) have now been authenticated and delivered by the trustee and are in the possession and ownership of numerous and widely scattered individuals and corporations. All and each of the bonds of said authorized issue become due and payable on the 1st day of October, 1952.

5. Prior to the 30th day of September, 1913, defendants, The Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, were both and each separately engaged in the manufacture and distribution of gas to the inhabitants of Indianapolis. On said 30th day of September, 1913, the said The Indianapolis Gas Company executed and delivered to defendant, Citizens Gas Comany of Indianapolis, an indenture of lease covering the gas plants, systems, easements, franchises and rights theretofore operated and owned by it, all of which said property was covered by and included in the aforesaid mortgage deed of trust of which plaintiff

6 is the present trustee. A true copy of said indenture of lease is hereby made a part of this bill of complaint, is set out herein and marked Exhibit B.

Said lease is for a term of ninety-nine (99) years commencing October 1st, 1913, and provides that the lessee, its successors and assigns, during the term of said lease shall maintain and operate the leased property, making all necessary repairs, renewals, replacements, and extensions, so that the efficiency and value of said property shall not become impaired; provides that the lessee may require the lessor to obtain from the trustee of said mortgage deed of trust the authentication and delivery of additional bonds of said The Indianapolis Gas Company for the purpose of reimbursing the lessee for capital expenditures made on account of extensions and betterments to the plant and system of The Indianapolis Gas Company; provides that upon the maturity of the mortgage bonds theretofore or thereafter issued under said mortgage deed of trust, the lessee shall refund the same or provide for their extension or refunding by appropriate action in which the lessor shall join; and said lease further provides that the lessee during the term of said lease shall pay directly to the trustee of said mortgage deed of trust, now this plaintiff, as part of the rental thereunder, without relief from valuation or appraisement laws, and with attorneys' fees, the interest on all five percent fifty year gold bonds secured by said deed of trust, so long as the said bonds or any of them shall be outstanding, and also the interest as it shall from time to time fall due on any bonds which may be issued in refunding, renewing or extending the bonded indebtedness of the lessor under the provisions of said lease.

6. The said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, lessee under the aforesaid 99-year lease, was organized in 1905 under the general laws of the State of Indiana, providing for the incorporation of manufacturing and mining companies. Although organized as a corporation for profit, it was and is actually a quasi-public corporation, its purposes and objects being fixed and controlled by a certain franchise and contract granted and entered into on the 25th day of August, 1905, by and between the City of Indianapolis and three individual citizens, viz., Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz

Schmidt. A true copy of said franchise and contract, together with the Articles of Incorporation of said company and all amendments thereto, is hereby made a part of this bill, set out herein and marked Exhibit C.

Said franchise and Articles provided, among other things, that all the capital stock of said company should be held by Trustees, one of whom should be named by the Mayor of Indianapolis, which said Board of Trustees should have full, complete and irrevocable power during the life of the corporation to hold the stock and vote the same as fully and completely as if they were the owners thereof and to name and select members of the Board of Directors; provided that owners of said stock should hold only a certificate for said share or shares, which said certificates were assignable and entitled the holders thereof to all dividends declared and paid by said company on said share or shares; provided that upon the expiration of 25 years and when said certificate holders had received an amount equal to the face value thereof with a certain specified interest, the said certificates should all be deemed fully paid and cancelled and the Trustees and Directors should then convey to said City of Indianapolis all the right, title and interest of said company in its said property and gas plant, subject to all legal obligations of the company, to be held and owned by said City for the use and benefit of its inhabitants; and said franchise and articles contained other appropriate provisions respecting the management of the company's property and means and methods for its transfer to the City of Indianapolis under certain specified conditions, all as more fully appears in said Exhibit C to which reference is hereby made.

Said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has at all times continued to exist and operate under the provisions of said franchise and its Articles which embodied the terms of said franchise, and said Articles have only been amended to permit the increase of its capital stock and the issuance of first mortgage bonds.

As hereinabove set forth all rights, property and assets acquired by said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis were as a matter of law and equity acquired for the benefit of the inhabitants of the City of Indianapolis, subject to a charge in favor of the stockholders, creditors and other persons having valid claims and rights against said corporation or its 7 property, and at all times from its creation of said company was the trustee of a public charitable trust for the benefit of the inhabitants of the City of Indianapolis, said trust being subject to only such charges in favor of stockholders and creditors as above described.

7. On May 21, 1913, prior to the execution of the aforesaid lease, the parties thereto, to wit, said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company, made joint petition to the Public Service Commission of Indiana for leave to execute the same and for approval thereof, all in conformity with the statutes of the State of Indiana which authorize a public utility to acquire by purchase or lease the property of a competing utility, and in conformity with the policy of said state as announced therein. Said joint petition showed:

That said companies, since the completion of the plant of the Citizens Gas Company, had been active and aggressive competitors with consequent duplication of lines, waste and inefficiency;

That the interests of the public generally required unified management of both properties to eliminate future duplications of facilities and to eliminate the expense and waste of dual operation; and

That the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis being a "co-operative institution" organized for the purpose of affording to the public the benefits of cheap gas with limited dividends to the stockholders, and providing for an ultimate transfer of the property on certain conditions to the City of Indianapolis for the benefit of the entire public, the proposed lease would promote the realization of the purposes of the organization of said company.

Upon the filing of said joint petition one Frank S. Fishback, a citizen of Indianapolis and a stockholder of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, filed with said Public Service Commission an intervening petition opposing the approval of the proposed lease from The Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis on the following grounds:

(a) That the rental provided therein was greatly excessive;

(b) That The Indianapolis Gas Company had no power to enter into the proposed lease under its charter and had no franchise to occupy the streets; and

(c) That the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis had no power to enter into the proposed lease for the following reasons, namely:

That the term of the proposed lease was for a period longer than the Lessee's corporate life;

That the City of Indianapolis was the true owner of the Lessee's property and that said Lessee Company had only the right to the use thereof until the charges for money invested therein and other obligations were paid and discharged; and

That the approval of three-fourths of the capital stock of the Lessee's Company was required under the law, which said requirement had not been complied with.

Said joint petition and said intervening petition of said Fishback came on for hearing before said Public Service Commission of Indiana, and said Commission having heard the evidence thereon did on October 1st, 1913, make a certain finding and order in which the value of the plant and property of The Indianapolis Gas Company was found to justify the proposed rental and in which the execution of said lease, the same being found to be in the public interest, was duly affirmed, ordered and approved. A true copy of said finding and order is hereto attached, made a part hereof and marked Exhibit E.

8. Following the approval by the Public Service Commission of Indiana as hereinabove recited, the said lease from The Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was duly executed and delivered and thereafter, before the said lease became operative, the said Frank S. Fishback filed a petition for rehearing and contended:

That the performance of the terms of the lease would render impossible the fulfillment of the contract of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis with the City of Indianapolis as the same related to the taking over of said property and plant of the said Citizens Gas Company by said City; and

That the City of Indianapolis had not given its consent to said lease.

8 On the 28th day of November, 1913, the Public Service Commission of Indiana overruled the aforesaid petition for a rehearing, and immediately thereafter the Citizens Gas Company took possession and control of the plant and system and all of the other property of The Indianapolis Gas Company described in said lease and covered by the mortgage deed of trust of which this plaintiff is the successor trustee.

In all of the proceedings before the Public Service Commission of Indiana, upon the joint petition of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company, upon the intervening petition of the said Frank S. Fishback, and upon the petition for a rehearing filed by the said Frank S. Fishback, the defendant, the City of Indianapolis, was duly served with notice to appear and through its duly appointed and authorized counsel did in fact appear and participate therein. No objection by petition to said Commission or otherwise was ever made by said City of Indianapolis either to the execution of said lease or to the orders made by said Commission, and said City has never, by any proceeding, act or suit, sought in any court to have set aside or vacated the determinations or orders of said Public Service Commission of Indiana, or to enjoin the enforcement thereof, or to prevent in any way such orders or determinations from being effective.

9. Following the proceedings and orders in and of said Public Service Commission of Indiana, said Frank S. Fishback did file an action in equity against the Public Service Commission of Indiana, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis in the Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana, asking that said 99-year lease executed with approval and upon order of said Public Service Commission of Indiana be declared null and void and that the defendants be restrained and enjoined from carrying out the provisions thereof upon the following grounds, among others, to wit:

(a) That the defendant, Public Service Commission of Indiana, was without power or authority to order or permit the parties to enter into said lease;

(b) That the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was without power or authority under the law to enter into the lease for the reason that consent thereto had not been obtained from three-fourths of the capital stock of said company;

(c) That the City of Indianapolis had not given its consent to such lease, and it had not granted any right to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to operate the plant and system of The Indianapolis Gas Company as therein provided;

(d) That the payment of rentals as provided in said lease was of such an amount as would render the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis unable to pay thereafter the dividends and other payments to its stockholders as required in its Articles of Incorporation and by-laws;

(e) That the said lease constitutes a lien and encumbrance upon the property and earnings of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, thereby impairing the obligation of the contract existing between said company and its stockholders and the City of Indianapolis.

(f) That the trustees, directors and officers of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis were not by law or otherwise authorized to enter into said lease for a period of ninety-nine (99) years; and

(g) That said lease was void upon other grounds which had been raised and presented by said Fishback in his petition to the Public Service Commission of Indiana and his petition for rehearing there filed.

Before said cause came on to be heard the defendant, the City of Indianapolis, through the Board of Public Works thereof had formally accepted and recognized said lease by requiring extensions to be made in the lines and mains of The Indianapolis Gas Company, as provided in subsection 6 of section 27½ of said lease, which provision had been inserted in said lease at the instance of the City of Indianapolis, and these facts, together with the fact that the City of Indianapolis had appeared before the Public Service Commission and through its counsel participated in the proceedings before such Commission, were duly set forth in a joint answer filed by the several defendants in said suit. Thereupon plaintiff filed nine additional paragraphs of complaint amplifying the contentions originally made by him as hereinabove set forth.

9 To the answer of defendants the plaintiff filed a demurrer, and to each of the nine additional paragraphs of the complaint the defendants, respectively, filed demurrers. The demurrer to the answer was overruled and each of the demurrers to said additional paragraphs of the complaint was sustained, and each party declining to plead over, final judgment was rendered that plaintiff take nothing and that the defendants recover their costs. Thereupon the plaintiff undertook to perfect an appeal to the Supreme Court of Indiana, which appeal upon final hearing was dismissed by that Court on the ground that same had not been duly perfected as required by law; and the judgment of the Superior Court ever since has been and now is in full force and effect.

10. At the time of the execution and delivery of said 99-year lease $4,833,000 face amount of Indianapolis Gas Company First Mortgage Bonds had been issued and were outstanding. Subsequent thereto and subsequent to the proceedings hereinabove set forth upon the request of The Indianapolis Gas Company, additional bonds in the principal amount of $2,048,000 were authenticated and delivered by the Trustee, and were delivered in turn by The Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis pursuant to the provisions of said lease to reimburse said company for capital expenditures on account of extensions and betterments to the plant and system of the Indianapolis Gas Company, theretofore made by it as lessee, all or substantially all of which bonds were sold by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis as provided by said lease. The aforesaid additional bonds were widely sold and distributed and were acquired and purchased in reliance that the same were secured by a valid and enforceable 99-year lease to a responsible corporation, that said corporation, its successors and assigns, was legally obligated to pay the interest thereon as a part of the rental under said lease, and that the validity of said lease had been judicially and finally determined by the Public Service Commission of Indiana and by the courts of Indiana.

11. From and after November 28, 1913, the plant and property of The Indianapolis Gas Company was operated by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis under the aforesaid 99-year lease and was continuously so operated by said Company until possession thereof, in September, 1935, was delivered as hereinafter alleged to the defendant, the City of Indianapolis. During all of that period of time and for more than twenty-one years, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis accepted and enjoyed the profits and use of the property as granted under said 99-year lease, it was relieved from the waste and expense of competition and duplication of facilities, and it operated and maintained the leased plant and property as a unified part of its own plant and system without regard to the preservation of the leased property as an independent, separable and competitive system. The City of Indianapolis and the residents and inhabitants thereof have had the full benefit and advantage of such operations, and of the profits produced thereby and of the protection thus given to the public charitable purposes to which the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis were dedicated.

12. On March 20, 1929, the City of Indianapolis, through its Board of Public Works, adopted a resolution in which, after reciting the terms of the franchise and Articles of Incorporation of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, demand was made on said Company to mortgage its property, pay off the bonded indebtedness and certificate holders for both common and preferred stock and then to convey its property to the said City, reserving to the City the right to furnish funds for such purpose.

13. Subsequent to the giving of said foregoing notice, one Newton Todd, a stockholder of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, filed a bill of complaint in this Court seeking to restrain and enjoin the transfer of its property by the said Citizens Gas Company to the City of Indianapolis upon the following grounds, among others, to wit:

(a) That the charter of the Citizens Gas Company and the contract with the City of Indianapolis, pursuant to which said Company was organized, did not create a public charitable trust;

(b) That the City of Indianapolis could not validly acquire the property of said Citizens Gas Company without a vote of its inhabitants and the consent of the Public Service Commission; and

(c) That the stockholders of the Citizens G .s Company were not estopped from asserting the invalidity of the contract and agreement of August 25, 1905, between the City of Indianapolis and the incorporators of the Citizens Gas Company.

The City of Indianapolis was made a party defendant in the aforesaid cause and filed its separate Answer alleging, among other things:

(a) That a public charitable trust was created in favor of the citizens and gas consumers of Indianapolis through the execution of the contract and franchise between said City and incorporators of said Citizens Gas Company; and

(b) That the Act of the General Assembly of Indiana of March 11, 1929, which said Act affirmed and validated all of the provisions of said franchise and Articles of said Citizens Gas Company, did not violate any constitutional rights of the owners of stock of the said Citizens Gas Company.

The issues thus joined were heard by this Court and the relief prayed for was denied and on appeal of said cause to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, said latter Court affirmed the decision of this Court and held and adjudged that the property of said Citizens Gas Company was a public charitable trust in favor of the inhabitants of the City of Indianapolis and that upon the extinguishment of the charge against said property in favor of the certificate holders to the extent of their investment said property might then be conveyed to the City of Indianapolis as a continuance of the trust, the City being the successor to the said Citizens Gas Company as Trustee thereof.

14. In the meantime, after said action by Newton Todd had been commenced but before it was decided by the United States District Court, one Allen G. Williams had brought suit as a resident and taxpayer of the City of Indianapolis on behalf of himself and other resident taxpayers of said City in the Marion Superior Court of Indiana to establish a trust in all of the property devoted to the manufacture, sale or distribution of artificial gas in the City of Indianapolis, to recover the property from alleged delinquent and insolvent Trustees, and for the appointment of a receiver to administer said trust until such time as it should be turned over to its lawful beneficiaries. The defendants, the City of Indianapolis, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, The Indianapolis Gas Company, and your petitioner and Ferdinand Winter, Trustees under the mortgage deed of trust from The Indianapolis Gas Company, were made defendants in this cause of action and each of said defendants appeared therein and filed a demurrer to the Bill of Complaint, which demurrer was duly sustained, and final judgment was rendered in favor of the defendants. The plaintiff, on appeal to the Supreme Court of Indiana, made, among others, the following contentions:

(a) That the lease between the Citizens Gas Company and The Indianapolis Gas Company was invalid;

(b) That the action of the Public Service Commission of Indiana in approving said lease was an unlawful and invalid exercise of its power; and

(c) That the Act of the Indiana General Assembly creating and defining the powers granted to said Public Service Commission was an invalid denial of the plaintiff's constitutional rights.

The decision of the Supreme Court of Indiana, sustaining said decision and overruling all of the foregoing contentions of the Appellant, held that the lease executed between the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company was valid and that both the parties thereto had the power to execute the same and that, by reason of the approval and the judgment upon said lease by the said Public Service Commission, there was no basis presented for any claim of invalidity.

15. Subsequent to the final decree in the foregoing suits and on or about June 1, 1935, the defendant, the City of Indianapolis, for the purpose of obtaining funds with which to acquire the property and assets of the said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, in accordance with the right reserved in the resolution adopted on March 20, 1929, as hereinbefore alleged, offered for sale and sold $8,000,000 face amount of City of Indianapolis Gas Plant Revenue 4½% Bonds and in the public offering thereof represented among other things:

(a) That said bonds were issued to provide funds to permit the said city to exercise its franchise rights to acquire property owned by Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis;

(b) That upon the consummation of this acquisition the said City will control a business supplying the entire
11 domestic and commercial gas requirements of the City of Indianapolis and its suburbs;

(c) That said Citizens Gas Company held a lease for 99 years covering the properties and business of The Indianapolis Gas Company, thereby giving to it the control of the entire gas business of the City of Indianapolis and its environs;

(d) That the property covered by said lease from The Indianapolis Gas Company had a depreciated physical value of $9,181,960 and a reproduction value of $12,730,490, as against which the capital value of said company's outstanding first consolidated mortgage 5% gold bonds was $6,881,000 and the capital value of its outstanding stock was $2,000,000; and

(e) That upon the acquisition of the property operated by the Citizens Gas Company the City of Indianapolis would cause the same to be continuously operated as a gas system in an efficient manner and at reasonable cost, and would use all reasonable efforts to resist competition and maintain the exclusive right to serve gas in the City of Indianapolis and in Marion County and the towns therein.

16. Following the sale of the aforesaid bonds, and prior to September 9, 1935, the City of Indianapolis paid, or provided for payment, direct to the holders of the common stock of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis the sum of $3,125,000 in full satisfaction of their interest in the property and assets of said Company; paid, or provided for payment, direct to the holders of preferred stock of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis the sum of $1,050,000 in full satisfaction of their interest in the property and assets of said Company; and paid, or provided for payment, direct to the holders of outstanding bonds of the Citizens Gas Company the sum of $2,858,500 representing the full face amount of such outstanding bonds, all of which was done with full knowledge of the obligations of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis under the aforesaid 99-year lease, with full knowledge that after the retirement of all of its capital stock said company would be without means for meeting or paying its said obligations and without notice to the plaintiff herein or to the holders of bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company for whom plaintiff is Trustee.

17. On or about September 9, 1935, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis transferred all of its property to the defendant the City of Indianapolis as successor trustee and executed and delivered to said City an instrument of transfer and assignment, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked Exhibit E and made a part hereof, setting forth that the City of Indianapolis had taken all of the necessary steps in the exercise of its right to acquire, take over and administer as a public charitable trust all of the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis; that the said assignment was made subject to all legal obligations of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, including the legal obligations of said company under a certain lease dated September 30, 1913, from The Indianapolis Gas Company; and that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis would make and execute any and all further instruments necessary to carry out and execute the public charitable trust as aforesaid, including proper conveyances covering said company's real property and leasehold interests. On the same date, namely September 9, 1935, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis executed and delivered to the defendant, the City of Indianapolis, an assignment of lease covering the aforesaid 99-year lease dated September 30, 1913, from The Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company, a copy of which assignment is hereto attached, marked Exhibit F and made a part hereof.

18. Upon the receipt of the foregoing instruments of assignment, the defendant, the City of Indianapolis, through its department of utilities, accepted the assignment and transfer under the terms and conditions set forth in Exhibit E, but adopted a resolution purporting to reject the assignment of the lease from The Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and caused public notice of such purported rejection to be recorded in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana, a copy of which resolution and notice is made a part hereof, set out herein and marked Exhibit G. At the same time the defendant, the City of Indianapolis, adopted a resolution, which plaintiff is informed and therefore alleges, recited that in order to prevent an interruption of service to the consumers in the territory theretofore served by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the City would use and operate the plant and system of The Indianapolis Gas Company for a temporary pe-

12 riod without prejudice to its alleged right to reject the said 99-year lease and repudiate the lessee obligations thereunder. The City thereupon did take possession of all and singular the properties of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and all of the properties of said The Indianapolis Gas Company covered by the terms of said lease and continued the operation of all said gas system and is now so operating the same. Plaintiff is further informed and therefore alleges, that following the aforesaid resolution, the City of Indianapolis sought to enter into negotiations with The Indianapolis Gas Company for a revision or cancellation of said lease, and that for at least a part of the period subsequent to said resolution the possession and operation by the City of Indianapolis was consented to by defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, but without any waiver by said company of any of its rights, which condition was expressly stipulated to by the parties. All of the aforesaid acts by the City of Indianapolis and by The Indianapolis Gas Company, however, were done without notice to the plaintiff herein and without the knowledge or consent of the plaintiff or of the holders of bonds for whom plaintiff is Trustee.

19. Upon the execution and delivery of the 99-year lease to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis as authorized and approved by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, the same became, in accordance with the provisions thereof, subject to the mortgage deed of trust of which this plaintiff is the successor trustee; and further, in accordance with the provisions of said mortgage deed of trust, became a part of the trust estate thereunder and subject to all of the terms and provisions thereof, as fully and completely as though said lease had been executed and delivered prior to the execution and delivery of the aforesaid mortgage deed of trust; and the provisions of said 99-year lease, requiring the lessee to pay interest as the same should fall due upon the then outstanding bonds and upon the bonds which might thereafter be issued under said original mortgage deed of trust, were made for the benefit of the mortgage trustee and the bondholder beneficiaries of the mortgage estate, and upon the execution and delivery of said 99-year lease the mortgage trustee, its successors and assigns became vested with a distinct and independent right to require the lessee, its successors and assigns, to recognize and perform all of the lessee's obligations and engagements thereunder in so far as the same should directly affect the property rights of the holders of bonds issued under said original mortgage deed of trust, of which the plaintiff is successor trustee.

20. By virtue of the findings and orders of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, the final decree and judgment in the case of Fishback v. Public Service Commission of Indiana, et al., the final decree and judgment in the case of Todd v. Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, et al. and the final decree and judgment in the case of Williams v. Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, et al., all as hereinbefore set forth, the defendants are each and severally estopped to deny that the aforesaid 99-year lease, from the date of its execution, was and still is a valid obligations of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, its successors in trust and assigns.

21. By reason of the operations of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the acceptance by it and by the City of Indianapolis for more than 21 years of all of the benefits under said 99-year lease including the benefits of consolidated operation of the leased property, and by reason of the acts of the defendants in causing the Trustee under the aforesaid mortgage deed of trust to authenticate and deliver additional bonds to reimburse the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis for capital expenditures on account of extensions and betterments to the plant and system of The Indianapolis Gas Company theretofore made by it as lessee, and by reason of the other acts of the several defendants in causing said bonds to be sold and distributed as bonds secured by a valid 99-year lease to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, its successors in trust and assigns, all as hereinbefore more fully set forth, the defendants are each and severally estopped to deny that the aforesaid 99-year lease, from the date of its execution was and still is a valid obligation of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, its successors in trust and assigns.

22. By reason of the acts of the City of Indianapolis in exercising its franchise rights to acquire all of the property and assets of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, by the resolution adopted March 20, 1929, by the sale of revenue bonds in the amount of $8,000,000, by representations

13 made in connection with the sale of said bonds, by acceptance of the assignment hereinbefore referred to which is marked Exhibit E and made a part hereof, and by the retirement by the said City of all the common and preferred stock of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by direct payment for said stock to the holders thereof without notice to the plaintiff herein or its bondholders and with full knowledge of the obligations of the Citizens Gas Company under said 99-year lease and with full knowledge that said Company would thereby become unable itself to meet or pay the rentals thereafter accruing under said lease, all as hereinbefore more fully alleged, the said defendant is estopped to deny, and in equity and good conscience may not deny, that it is directly and primarily liable for all of the debts and obligations of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis including the obligations under the aforesaid 99-year lease and the obligation to pay to the plaintiff herein direct the interest due and to become due upon all bonds now issued and outstanding and which may hereafter be issued under the said mortgage deed of trust of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

23. The City of Indianapolis, through its department of utilities, at the time it refused to accept the assignment of said lease, all as aforesaid, nevertheless denied and does now deny its obligation as successor to and assignee of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis of any and all liability for the obligations of the lessee under the terms and provisions of said lease. Plaintiff is informed and therefore alleges, that on September 30, 1935, said City of Indianapolis, through its board of directors for utilities, did advise by letter to the said The Indianapolis Gas Company that it was ready to undertake the negotiation of a new lease and that pursuant to said letter certain negotiations have been in progress between defendant, the City of Indianapolis, and The Indianapolis Gas Company, which this plaintiff believes and alleges look toward a cancellation of said lease and the destruction and waste of the valuable security and rights belonging to this trust and all to the damage thereof.

24. Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that on or about March 2, 1936, the City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company entered into a further written contract whereby said defendants have undertaken to agree that the City shall continue to operate said gas properties without being bound or agreeing to be bound by any of the covenants of said 99-year lease, that during the continuation of said agreement the City of Indianapolis shall not be required to pay to plaintiff the interest upon The Indianapolis Gas Company bonds as required under said 99-year lease, that in lieu of paying rent for the use of said gas properties the City shall pay to the Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis, Indiana, a sum equal to the rental stipulated under said 99-year lease, and that the funds so deposited by the City shall be held until such time as the City and The Indianapolis Gas Company may agree upon their disposition or until the obligations of the City shall be finally determined in a suit between the parties the character of which is not set forth. By said agreement of March 2, 1936, the plaintiff and the bondholders for whom plaintiff is Trustee are deprived of valuable property rights, and are threatened with default in the payment of interest hereafter payable under said mortgage deed of trust and under said 99-year lease; and the mortgaged property and its good will and going concern value are threatened as a result of the continued denial by the City of Indianapolis of its obligations under the aforesaid 99-year lease, all of which has impaired and injured and threatens to further impair and injure the value of the outstanding bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company, of which the plaintiff is Trustee.

25. This plaintiff is informed and therefore alleges, that defendants, The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis, through its directors for utilities, are now negotiating toward an agreement for the use of said property of said The Indianapolis Gas Company covered by said mortgage deed of trust and said indenture of lease under terms and conditions which deprive this plaintiff and the holders of said first mortgage bonds of their rights, all as set out and provided in said mortgage deed of trust and in said indenture of lease, all to the irreparable damage and injury to the trust and the owners of said first mortgage bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company, for whom this plaintiff brings this action.

Wherefore Plaintiff Prays:

1. That process issue against the defendants requiring them and each of them to answer this bill, but not under oath or affirmation, the benefit whereof being hereby expressly waived by the plaintiff.

14 2. That this Court by judgment and decree declare said lease to be a valid and binding obligation in all its terms and conditions upon the defendants, The Indianapolis Gas Company, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the City of Indianapolis and the trustees and directors for utilities of said City and upon all the property formerly owned by said the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, which is now owned and operated by the City of Indianapolis, through its board of directors for utilities.

3. That this Court by judgment declare that said lease is in equity and law the property of plaintiff, as trustee under the mortgage deed of trust, and is part of the security for the full and faithful performance of the obligations thereunder of the said The Indianapolis Gas Company.

4. That pending a hearing and final judgment in this cause, said defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, be by order of this Court restrained and enjoined from making or entering into any contract or agreement or performing any contract which may already have been entered into or doing any act or thing to impair, rescind or modify the aforesaid lease to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis or to alter the obligations of the lessee thereunder.

5. That pending a hearing and final judgment in this cause, said defendant, the City of Indianapolis, being in possession of the leased property, be directed and enjoined by mandatory order of this Court to maintain and preserve the leased property as provided and required under the terms of said lease.

6. That pending a hearing and final judgment in this cause, said defendant, the City of Indianapolis, be ordered to pay direct to this plaintiff all of said interest payments as they become due and payable in accordance with the provisions of said lease, or in the alternative to pay the aforesaid sums to the Clerk of this Court to be held and disbursed by him subject to the further orders of this Court.

7. That this Court in its final decree enter judgment against the defendants who shall be found liable therefor in the amount of all unpaid interest payable under said lease to the plaintiff herein, together with interest thereon from the several dates upon which such interest payments accrued at the rate of six per centum per annum, and that the defendant, the City of Indianapolis, be ordered to observe and perform all of the lessee obligations in said lease set forth and to promptly and regularly pay direct to this plaintiff all of the interest payments as they shall thereafter become due and payable in accordance with the provisions of said lease.

8. That the reasonable expenses of the plaintiff in and about the bringing and prosecution of this suit, including reasonable attorneys' fees for plaintiff's solicitors, be determined and that judgment for the same be entered against defendants, and each of them.

9. That all and such other and full relief as may be proper and equitable in the premises be given.

28 right to agree upon a plan or scheme for reorganization, which plan or scheme, when so agreed upon in writing and signed by such majority in interest, shall be in all respects binding and obligatory upon all the holders of such bonds or coupons.

VIII. And the Gas Company, for itself, its successors, and assigns, covenants and agrees to and with the said party of the second part, and its successors in the trust hereby created, that it will promptly and in apt time pay or cause to be paid all taxes and assessments that may be levied, assessed or imposed upon all and any of its property above described, or hereby conveyed or intended to be conveyed; that it will not allow or suffer any execution upon any judgment or decree of any court of record to be levied upon any of its property, and that it will not do or refrain from doing any act which shall render it liable to any suit or suits in equity for its dissolution, or for any remedy under any provision of any law of the State of Indiana at the time in force; and that it will keep alive the franchise of said Company to be a corporation, either by renewal, extension or other lawful proceedings until all of the bonds hereby secured shall have become due and payable either by declaration and notice, as herein provided or upon maturity.

IX. And the Gas Company for itself, its successors and assigns, in consideration of the premises, further covenants and agrees to and with the said party of the second part and its successors in said trust, that said party of the first part and its successors shall and will, at all times hereafter, provide for and pay the principal and interest of and upon the bonds hereinbefore recited and described, as the same shall become due and payable, and that it will at all times hereafter cause an office to be kept open in the City of New York, in the State of New York, for the transfer and registration of said bonds, and that any and every default in the due performance of this covenant shall be deemed and taken to be a waiver of due presentment and of a demand for payment of :il and any of the bonds and coupons aforesaid which may become payable during the continuance of such default.

X. The Gas Company for itself, its successors and assigns, further covenants and agrees, that it will keep the property hereby mortgaged, liable to be injured or destroyed by fire, reasonably insured, and in case of destruction or damage by fire, all insurance money derived from such insurance shall be by it properly applied to replace, restore, or repair such property as may have been injured or destroyed, or to the purchase of other property needed for the maintenance or operation of its said natural and artificial gas plants, and such replaced or restored property shall immediately become subject to the lien of this mortgage.

XI. The Gas Company for itself, its successors and assigns irrevocably waives all benefit of any present or future valuation, stay, extension or redemption laws, and hereby irrevocably waives all right to have the mortgaged property and franchises marshalled upon any sale thereof, and consents that the same may be sold as one property.

XII. For the debt and bonds secured hereby the Gas Company is liable in personam, and any deficiency, after exhausting the mortgage security, may be enforced against the Gas Company, but not against its officers, directors, or stockholders individually; and it is expressly agreed between the parties hereto, and by every person who shall take or hold any bond or bonds issued hereunder, that no persons who are now or who may hereafter become officers, directors, or stockholders of the Gas Company shall in anywise be held liable for the payment of either the principal or interest of the bonds secured hereby, and any such liability is hereby expressly waived.

XIII. If any bond issued hereunder shall be mutilated, lost, or destroyed, the Gas Company may, under terms and conditions prescribed by its board of directors, issue and deliver in lieu thereof a new bond of like tenor, amount, and date, and bearing the same serial number, which bond, when so issued, shall be certified by the Trust Company, Trustee, upon due proof of such mutilation, loss, or destruction, and upon receiving indemnity satisfactory to the Trustees.

XIV. The Trustees agree to execute the trusts of these presents upon the following terms and conditions:

The Trustees may employ agents or attorneys in fact to aid it in the execution of said trust, and provided they shall have exercised reasonable prudence and care in the selec-

29 tion and employment of such agent or agents for any such purposes, they shall not be responsible for loss or damages in the premises caused by the act, neglect or default of such agent or agents.

All the covenants, conditions, provisions and agreements herein contained may be specifically enforced by any court of competent jurisdiction.

The Gas Company shall and will indemnify and save harmless the Trustees against any loss and damage to which it may be subjected by the execution of this trust not caused by the personal misconduct or neglect of the Trustees.

The right of action under this indenture is vested exclusively in the Trustees, and under no circumstances shall any bondholder or bondholders have any right to institute an action or other proceeding under this indenture for the purpose of enforcing any right herein and hereby provided, or of foreclosing this mortgage, except in case of refusal on the part of the Trustees to perform any duty imposed on them by this indenture, and all actions and proceedings for the purpose of enforcing the provisions of this indenture shall be instituted and conducted by the Trustees according to their sound discretion, but the Trustees shall be under no obligation to institute any such suit or to take any proceedings under this indenture, or to enter any appearance or in any way defend any suit in which they may be made defendant, or to do anything whatever as Trustees until they shall be indemnified to their satisfaction against any and all costs and expenses, outlays and counsel fees and other reasonable disbursements, and against all claims for damages for which they may become liable or responsible on proceeding to carry out such request or demand. The Trustees may nevertheless begin suit or appear in and defend any suit or to do any act in their judgment proper to be done by them as such Trustees, without such indemnity, and in such case it shall be compensated therefor from the trust fund.

The Trustees shall be under no obligations to recognize any person as owner or holder of any bond secured hereby, or to do or refrain from doing any act pursuant to the request or demand of any persons, until such supposed holder or owner shall produce such bonds and deposit the same with the Trustees.

It shall be no part of the duty of the Trustees to file or record this indenture as a mortgage of conveyance of real estate, or as a chattel mortgage, or to renew such mortgage, or to procure any further, other or additional instruments of further assurance, or to do any other act which may be necessary or proper to be done for the continuance of the lien hereof, or for giving notice of the existence of such lien, or for extending or supplementing the same, nor shall it be any part of their duty to effect insurance against fire or other damage on any portion of the mortgaged property or to renew any policies of insurance or to keep themselves informed or advised as to the payment of any taxes or assessments, or to require such payment to be made, but the Trustees may in their discretion do any or all of the matters and things in this paragraph set forth, or require the same to be done; they shall only be responsible for reasonable diligence in the performance of the trust. They shall be entitled to be reimbursed for all proper outlays of every kind by them incurred in the discharge of their trust, and to receive a reasonable and proper compensation for any services that they may at any time perform in the discharge of the same; and such compensation and disbursements shall constitute a lien on the mortgaged property and premises.

In case at any time it shall be deemed necessary by the Trustees of the Gas Company to make any investigation respecting any fact relative to any proposed action of or by such Trustees, the certificate of the Gas Company under its corporate seal, attested by the signature of its President and the affidavit of one or more of its Directors, shall be conclusive evidence of such fact for the purpose of protecting the Trustees in any action that they may take by reason of the supposed existence of such fact.

All recitals, statements of fact and representations herein contained are made on behalf of the Gas Company, and the Trustees assume no responsibility as to the correctness of the same, nor are the Trustees to be understood as making any representations as to the character, extent or value of the above-described property, or in reference to the title thereto, or the right or power of the Gas Company to mortgage the same.

The Trustees may resign and discharge themselves of the trusts created by these presents, upon a notice in writing to the Gas Company given three months before such resignation shall take effect, or upon such shorter notice as may be accepted by the Gas Company as adequate notice, and upon due execution of proper conveyances and assignments.

The Trustees may also be removed upon reasonable notice, with or without cause, upon the written request of the holders of a majority of said bonds, evidenced by an instrument or concurrent instruments in writing, executed under the hands and seals of the said holders of a majority in amount of the bonds secured hereby and then outstanding. In the event of the failure of not less than a majority as aforesaid to agree upon new trustees, the same may be appointed by the judge of the Circuit Court of Marion County, in the State of Indiana, upon application made by the Gas Company, or by the holders of a majority of said bonds, and upon such notice as such judge may prescribe. Any vacancy in the office of the Trustees hereunder, however arising, may be permanently filled in such manner as may be agreed upon by and between the Gas Company and the holders of such majority of said bonds; or in the event of their failure to agree, may be filled by the judge of the Circuit Court aforesaid upon application made as above.

XV. And the Gas Company doth covenant with the Trustees, as follows:

First: That the Gas Company will execute further and necessary assurance of the title to said premises, and will forever warrant said title.

Second: That all the covenants, stipulations and agreements of this indenture shall extend to the successors and assigns, or other legal representatives of the parties hereto, respectively.

To Have and to Hold the same unto the Lessee, its successors and assigns with the right to demand and receive for its own sole use and benefit all tolls, rents, dividends, earnings, profits, revenues and income to be derived from the same, or any part thereof, and from the exercise of the rights, powers and franchises and other property hereby demised unto the lessee, for the term of ninety-nine years from the first day of October, 1913, on the following conditions, to-wit:

The lessee and lessor consent and agree that the Public Service Commission of Indiana and any other Commission or body that may be created by the State of Indiana in the place and stead of said Public Service Commission shall at all times have the same power, authority and right to regulate the rates, tolls, charges and service of said lessee and lessor, or either of them, in the same manner and to the same extent as said Commission would have if said lessee was operating under an indeterminate permit as defined in and according to the provisions of the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, and this lease shall continue and be in full force and effect so long as said lessee shall abide by and observe the terms of said condition and agreement but in no event to exceed ninety-nine years. And if at any time said lessee denies or disputes the right of said Public Service Commission or other commission or body created in the stead of said Public Service Commission to so regulate the rates, tolls, charges or service of said lessee or lessor or either of them as fully and to the same extent and manner as might lawfully be done if said lessee and lessor were operating under an indeterminate permit, then said commission or body subject to the conditions set forth in Article 27½ Section (8) hereof may declare this lease terminated and the same shall thereafter be null and void.

36 And said term of this lease is also on the provision and condition that said lessee shall keep and perform all covenants and agreements herein contained on its part to be kept and performed, and shall yield and pay the rent which it hereby covenants and agrees to yield and pay to the amount and in the manner and at the time and the place hereinafter provided.

1. The Lessor covenants that during the continuance of this lease it will either maintain its corporate organization or that if for any reason by expiration of its corporate life or otherwise it cannot maintain the same that it will seasonably cause all its property hereby leased to be transferred to a new corporation which will in the same way either maintain its corporate organization or in turn convey its property to another which will so do, and for that purpose the Lessor and its successors will hold all necessary meetings, elect all necessary directors and officers and make and keep all necessary records, reports and returns required by law, and will at the request and expense of the Lessee exercise or cause to be exercised all franchises and do and perform or cause to be done or performed all acts, lawful and consistent with its rights hereunder, as shall be proper and necessary for the due protection, preservation and full enjoyment of the Lessee of all the property, rights, franchises, contracts and interests hereby demised or granted to it, and the proper extension or renewal from time to time of such right and franchises, and further to carry out the true intent and meaning of this instrument, provided the Lessee shall assume the responsibility for securing all extensions of such franchises as hereinafter provided. The Lessor covenants that the Lessee may use the name of the Lessor in bringing, prosecuting or defending any suits or proceedings in law or equity which may be necessary or proper in the opinion of the Lessee, for taking action hereafter for the protection and preservation and full enjoyment by the Lessee as such, of all the property rights, franchises and privileges hereby leased, or do or undertake any act or thing that may be necessary or proper in the opinion of the Lessee for the full enjoyment of this lease, but the Lessee shall have and hold the Lessor harmless and indemnified from and against all loss, cost, damage and expense whatsoever arising therefrom.

The Lessee may at all reasonable and convenient times have access to and make copies of the Lessor's plats, deeds, grants and other instruments and documents containing or constituting the evidence of its right and title to the properties, contracts, powers, rights, privileges and franchises hereby leased and demised.

2. The Lessor covenants that the Lessee shall have full, quiet and uninterrupted possession and enjoyment of the leased property during the term hereby created as long as there shall be no forfeiture of this lease by the award of arbitrators or otherwise as herein provided, and that it will warrant and defend the Lessee in such use and enjoyment of the entire property as described above during the entire term of this lease, subject, however, to the lien of the mortgage herein mentioned and described; provided, however, this covenant shall not be construed as imposing any liability upon the Lessor to secure extensions or renewals of franchises now enjoyed or a warranty for the continued enjoyment of franchises now held by the Lessor.

And provided also this covenant shall not be deemed as imposing any obligation upon the Lessor to preserve present grade lines and locations of its pipes and mains, but the entire obligation arising out of any change in any such grade lines or locations shall be and hereby is assumed by the Lessee.

3. The Lessor covenants that in case any part of the property hereby leased shall become so worn or damaged, as to be no longer suitable or safe for use, or if any of said property shall become no longer necessary for the purposes for which it was leased, the Lessee may sell, alter, change or replace such property, and the Lessor will act with the Lessee in any sale thereof, and in executing and delivering such instruments as may be necessary to transfer the Lessor's title therein to the vendee, provided that such sales shall always be in accordance with the terms of all mortgages at that time existing upon the property, and provided further that in the absence of mortgage provisions for such a transaction, the proceeds of any such sale or sales shall be applied to the substitution of property of value at least equal to that sold, the title to which shall be taken in the name of the Lessor, or shall be expended to increase the value of the 37 other property hereby leased, or shall be applied toward the redemption and retirement of the Lessor's bonds under the above-mentioned mortgage.

4. The Lessor covenants that it will at any time or times hereafter upon reasonable request of the Lessee make, do and execute, or cause or procure to be made, done and executed, all and every such further and other reasonable acts, conveyances, transfers, assignments and assurances for the better and more effectually vesting and confirming the property hereby leased or intended so to be, in and to the Lessee as such.

5. The Lessor covenants that it will at the Lessee's request and expense comply with all requirements of law in so far as the Lessee cannot act in its stead, and will in like manner at all times when it cannot be done by the Lessee, itself, do such acts and execute such instruments as may be necessary or proper to carry out the true intent of these presents.

6. The Lessor covenants that at the date of the execution hereof the total authorized bonded indebtedness secured upon the property of the Lessor is Seven Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($7,500,000) par value of bonds secured by the said mortgage of The Indianapolis Gas Company to the Trust Company of America and Ferdinand Winter, Trustees, dated October 1st, 1902, of which bonds Four Million Eight Hundred Thirty-three Thousand Dollars ($4,833,000) at par have been issued and are outstanding.

All or any part of the uncertified and unissued bonds of the Lessor which may be in the hands of the Trustees under its said mortgage may be used by the Lessee for the purpose provided in said mortgage, and to that end whenever the Lessee shall need funds for any such purpose, it shall in writing notify the Lessor of the amount of money required for such purpose; such notice shall be signed by the President or Vice-President of the Lessee, attested by its Secretary and sworn to by one of the officers of the Lessee, and shall conform to the provisions of the said mortgage of the Lessor relating to the issue and delivery of the bonds secured by said mortgage; whereupon the Lessor shall by resolution of its Board of Directors call upon the Trustee under said mortgage in the manner therein provided for the certification and delivery of such an amount of said bonds as may be certified and delivered for the purpose at the time under the terms of said mortgage, and upon receipt of said bonds the Lessor shall deliver the said bonds to the Lessee to be used by it for the purpose aforesaid, it being expressly understood that the Lessee shall provide the funds necessary to make such extensions or betterments over and above the amount which may be realized upon said bonds so certified and delivered to it, and shall have no lien against the property of the Lessor on account thereof, and no claim for the repayment thereof by the Lessor, except as is in paragraph Fifteen hereof expressly provided.

It is expressly understood and agreed, however, that no bonds of the Lessor shall be used by the Lessee for the purpose of making any extensions or betterments to the plant and system of the Lessor, which are not reasonably necessary or desirable in developing the plant and system of the Lessor, considered as a separate and complete system apart from the property, plant and system of the Lessee; and should the Lessor not deem the extensions and betterments so proposed to be made by the Lessee to the Lessor's plant and system, on account of which bonds of the Lessor are desired to be used by the Lessee, of the character thus defined, then the question shall be submitted to arbitrators as hereinafter provided, and the conclusion of such arbitrators shall be final and binding on both parties hereto.

The Lessor covenants that it will not, during the term of this lease authorize the creation of any mortgage or other lien upon its property hereby demised, except the same be made in renewal or continuation of the mortgage hereinbefore mentioned, or pursuant to the provisions of Article 27 hereof, and that it will create no debts, becoming a party to no contracts, and incur no obligations of any kind whatsoever during the term of this lease which would constitute a lien upon the property hereby leased or in any way interfere with the Lessee's use and enjoyment thereof.

7. The Lessor covenants that whenever, during the term of this lease, the principal of the bonds secured by the mortgage hereinbefore mentioned upon the Lessor's property shall become due and payable, the Lessor will upon the written request of the Lessee execute in the name of the Lessor, all necessary papers and instruments as shall be requisite 38 to the extension of the time of payment of the principal so maturing, or to the discharge thereof by the substitution therefor of renewal bonds and mortgage. The Lessor covenants to do all acts and things necessary or proper to be done on its part to obtain such extension, renewals or refunding, the negotiations for which shall be controlled by the Lessee. No greater amount of bonds in principal shall be issued or secured by any such renewal or refunding mortgage than the amount of bonds thereby refunded and such refunding bonds shall not bear a higher rate of interest than five per cent. per annum.

Such bonds shall be sold by the Lessee at the highest price which it is able to obtain for the same and the proceeds shall be applied to the retirement of the outstanding bonds; should such refunding bonds be sold below par, then the Lessee shall pay any additional sum necessary to complete the payment of the outstanding bonds, and shall have no lien upon the property or charge against the Lessor therefor; should such refunding bonds sell at a premium, then such premium shall belong to the Lessee. Until payment in full of the principal and interest of all bonds secured by the existing mortgage or by any renewal or refunding mortgage, such bonds and any mortgage by which they are secured shall be and remain a lien upon all of the property, contracts, powers, rights, privileges and franchises of the Lessor which are now subject or which may hereafter become subject to the lien of any such mortgage, superior in all respects to any right of the Lessee under this lease. And any such refunding mortgage shall cover all property of the Lessor covered by this lease and not theretofore disposed of, and also all additions, extensions or betterments thereto made by the Lessee hereunder, and the lien of such mortgage thereon shall be superior to any right, title or interest therein of the Lessee or of any person claiming under the Lessee.

In event the Lessee shall fail at least six (6) months prior to the maturity of the mortgage bonds of the Lessor hereinabove referred to, or of any renewal or refunding bonds issued to retire the same, to complete arrangements for the refinancing of such outstanding obligation and furnish satisfactory evidence to the Lessor that it has so done, then the Lessor shall be permitted to take entire charge of such refinancing, including the sale of such renewal or refunding bonds at the best price which it is reasonably able to obtain therefor, and the Lessee shall thereupon pay to the Lessor upon demand the difference between the par amount of the bonds so refunded and the net amount realized from the sale of a like amount of refunding bonds.

8. The Lessor covenants and agrees that the Lessee may make physical connections of its pipe lines with those of the Lessor, such connections to be made at the expense of the Lessee and to remain its sole property.

9. The Lessee covenants and agrees that it will take over said leased property subject to the existing contract with Semet Solvay Company dated June 11, 1912, covering the installation of by-product coke ovens and other betterments and enlargements and other matters related thereto, and will fully carry out and perform all the obligations of the Lessor thereunder, and it will cause said contract to be fully performed in its essential features by the said Semet Solvay Company unless it is found wise and expedient to alter said contract which may be done with the written consent of the Lessor, and said consent is not to be unreasonably withheld.

In consideration of which agreement on the part of the Lessee, the Lessor agrees that it will provide the funds as the same may be needed to carry out the provisions of said contract, provided the total sums so to be provided, including all sums paid on account of such contract before the date hereof shall not exceed the aggregate sum of Six Hundred Thousand Dollars. In event the total cost of such work shall exceed such aggregate sum of Six Hundred Thousand Dollars, the Lessee shall provide any such additional funds and the Lessor is expressly relieved from any and all liability on account thereof as between the parties hereto, except as hereinafter in Article Fifteen hereof provided, and as between the Lessor and any other party whatsoever, the Lessee shall assume all such liability and protect and save harmless the Lessor on account thereof.

It is expressly understood and agreed as between the parties hereto that should the Lessor hereafter sell the real property heretofore referred to as reserved from the operation of this lease, it may use the proceeds of the sale in paying the expense of installing the new coke oven plant in this Article referred to, and if the Lessor shall have paid such ex-
39 pense with other funds, the Lessor may, as against the Lessee, reimburse itself through the proceeds of such sale.

10. It is further covenanted and agreed between the parties that the Lessor as an incident to the practical operation of said leased property hereby assigns to the Lessee all accounts and bills receivable held and possessed by the Lessor, (other than accounts or bills receivable on account of bonds of the Lessor heretofore sold by it) which shall be collected by the Lessee and from the proceeds thereof the Lessee shall pay all accounts and bills payable of the Lessor other than the mortgage bonds hereinabove mentioned and other than any bills or accounts payable representing payments on account of the improvements referred to in Paragraph Nine hereof, paying over to the Lessor any balance which may remain; provided, however, the Lessee shall receive reasonable compensation for the collection of such accounts. The Lessor guarantees the collectibility of said accounts and bills receivable to an amount sufficient to pay all of its accounts payable.

11. It is further covenanted and agreed between the parties that the Lessee shall be permitted to use as its own all coal, coke, oil, gas, meters, pipe, fittings, tools, horses, wagons, automobiles and all supplies and merchandise of any kind on hand belonging to the Lessor. An inventory and appraisal thereof as of the day this lease takes effect shall be made by two appraisers, one selected by each of the parties hereto and two copies thereof shall be signed by the parties hereto and one original copy delivered to each. At the termination of this lease whether by lapse of time, by forfeiture or for any other cause, the Lessee agrees to deliver to the Lessor in good condition, useful and salable supplies and merchandise of a like value or to pay to the Lessor in money the difference between the value of the property returned and the total value of the inventory.

12. It is further mutually covenanted and agreed that there shall be made as of the day when this lease takes effect a full, complete and particular inventory and description of all the estate and property, real and personal, belonging to the Lessor and coming into the possession of the Lessee by virtue of this lease, other than that covered by the inventory referred to in the last paragraph hereof. Such inventory shall be made by two competent persons, one selected by each party, and such inventory shall be made in duplicate, properly identified and an original furnished to each party. To such inventory there shall be added at the completion of the construction work now under way a complete description thereof, and on the 1st day of February, 1914, and semi-annually thereafter during the continuance of this lease there shall be added to such inventory a complete description of all changes, removals, extensions, additions and betterments made by the Lessee during the preceding six months, thereby furnishing an accurate record of the property covered by this lease, and which the Lessee is by this agreement obligated to preserve, maintain and return.

13. The Lessee hereby covenants and agrees that it will faithfully comply with all the provisions of the franchises from the city of Indianapolis and all obligations imposed upon it by law or by the Public Service Commission or other body having legal authority in the premises, and do all things necessary to preserve its right to do business in the city of Indianapolis. That it will so far as the same may be necessary to that end, secure new franchises from time to time from the city of Indianapolis or other public authorities having power to grant said franchises to do business in the city of Indianapolis. That at or before the termination of the corporate life of the Lessee, the Lessee will so far as it is legally able so to do, either extend its corporate life or cause a new corporation to be formed to which it will transfer all its then property and assets, and cause said new company expressly to assume all the obligations of this lease. And the like duty shall be assumed by all successive companies acquiring said property as a part of the consideration for their so acquiring said property as such successors in title. All of which agreements however are expressly subject to the rights now held by the city of Indianapolis under the terms of the franchise granted to the Lessee by said city.

14. The Lessee covenants that it will during the continuance of this lease pay, satisfy and discharge as the same shall accrue all taxes, rates, charges, licenses and assessments, general and special, ordinary and extraordinary, of every nature and description which are now a lien or may be lawfully imposed or assessed during the continuance of this lease in any way upon the Lessor with reference to its capital stock or property, earnings, contracts, rights, privileges or franchises hereby demised, or upon the rental herein reserved, so far as the same may constitute the basis for an income tax and upon all dividends declared during the continuance of this lease upon the capital stock of the Lessor, for which the Lessor as a corporation shall in any manner be liable, and also all sums of money which the Lessor may now be or may hereafter become liable to pay by law, contract or otherwise, for the possession, enjoyment or perpetuation of any of its rights, powers, privileges or franchises; provided, however, from the taxes and assessments thus to be paid there shall be deducted all taxes or assessments against the Lessor on account of the real estate above mentioned which is reserved from the operation of this lease, or on account of any property hereafter acquired by the Lessor which is not a part of the property covered by this lease; said payments to be made as the same become due to the officers or other persons entitled by law to receive the same; and in the event that said Lessee shall fail to make any such payments when the same become due, the Lessor may at any time thereafter make such payments and recover the amount thereof with interest thereon from the date of such payments and all costs, attorney's fees and other expenses from the Lessee, without prejudice to any rights secured to the Lessor by this lease for breach of any covenants hereof; it being understood and agreed, however, that if the Lessee shall desire to resist by legal proceedings, the payment of any tax or assessment, and shall so notify the Lessor, the Lessor shall not pay nor shall the Lessee be obliged to pay any such tax or assessment until thirty days after the final adjudication thereupon by the Court having jurisdiction in such cases, and in the event that the Lessee shall take an appeal from any adjudication upon such tax or assessment, then the Lessor shall not pay nor shall the Lessee be obliged to pay such tax or assessment until thirty days after final adjudication upon such appeal. It is however expressly agreed that the Lessor shall pay its proportionate part of the taxes for the year 1912 based on the portion of the year 1913 which has expired when this lease goes into effect.

15. The Lessee hereby accepts the gas plants of the Lessor and the estate and property, real and personal, hereby demised as the same actually are at the date hereof, except as herein otherwise provided, and covenants that it will, subject to the provision of existing and future municipal grants, during said term renew, repair, replace and extend the same, so as to maintain and keep the demised premises in as good order, repair and condition as the same are now, or may be put upon the completion of the construction contract hereinabove referred to, and in their present state of efficiency; and so as to comply with all requirements of law or ordinance of any municipality or of the Public Service Commission or other body, that it will from time to time at its own expense (except as otherwise provided in Article Nine hereof) make all extensions, additions, alteratic , improvements, renewals and betterments which may be necessary or proper with reference to the premises and property hereby demised and for the use and operation thereof, and will do and perform all other things necessary to make and maintain said gas plants and system as first class, modern and efficient gas plants and system, that all lands, structures, improvements, betterments, extensions and renewals added to or made upon the demised premises, and all rights, privileges and franchises acquired by the Lessee in connection with the demised premises shall immediately become the property of the Lessor and be treated as part of the demised premises and be subject to all the terms, conditions and provisions of this indenture in like manner as if they had been vested in the Lessor at the date of this instrument.

Provided, however, that upon the expiration of the term of this lease, or if before the expiration of the term thereof this lease be terminated for any cause other than the default of the Lessee, then upon such termination, the Lessor shall pay to the Lessee, any sum paid by the Lessee in excess of the funds furnished by the Lessor for the construction of the betterments now under way referred to in Article Nine hereof, and in addition thereto the actual value at the time of such expiration or termination of all then existing additions, betterments, improvements, extensions and renewals made by the Lessee to and of the leased property, which are properly chargeable to capital account, except such as shall have been made out of the proceeds of the sale of, or insurance on, the property now owned by the Lessor, or shall have 41 been made in the renewal of or substitution for property existing at the commencement of the term of this lease, and thereafter worn out or destroyed; or shall have been paid for out of the proceeds of bonds of the Lessor, as herein provided; but the payment of such value shall be postponed to the lien of the mortgage upon the property of the Lessor hereinbefore mentioned, and of any refunding or renewal mortgages or mortgage executed pursuant to the provisions of Article 27 hereof to the extent that may be necessary for the payment of the bonds secured thereby. Such value shall be ascertained and fixed by the award of arbitrators, to be chosen as provided in Article Twenty-eight hereof, and the award of the arbitrators or the majority of them shall be final and binding upon the parties hereto.

For the purpose of ascertaining at such expiration or termination of this lease what additions the Lessee shall have made which shall then be the subject of valuation as herein provided, copies of the inventory herein provided for by the terms of Article 12 shall be deposited, duly certified by the persons who shall have made the same, with the Lessor and the Lessee, respectively. At the termination of this lease as aforesaid, another inventory shall be made by persons selected in the same way, and a comparison of the two shall be made for the purpose of ascertaining what, if any, additions have been so made and then exist, for the purpose of valuation as aforesaid. But nothing herein shall be construed to be an addition, which is furnished or used by the Lessee in renewal or in place of or in substitution for any of the property hereby leased, saving to the extent that the additions shall at the termination of the lease, possess value in excess of what would then be the value of the matter or thing for which such substitution or renewal was made. Provided, however, any pipe lines of the Lessor which may have been heretofore injured by electrolysis and which may on account thereof be replaced by the Lessee, the cost of such replacement shall not be deemed as a maintenance or repair charge, but as a new extension or betterment for which the Lessee shall be entitled to repayment on the condition at the time and in the manner in this section of the lease provided.

On this further conditon, however, the right of the Lessee to thus treat pipe lines heretofore injured by electrolysis shall be limited to such pipe lines as may be replaced by the Lessee on or before July 1st, 1918, and the Lessee shall at the time it replaces any such pipe, notify the Lessor in writing thereof and of its claim that the necessity for such replacement is due to electrolysis, and unless the Lessor shall in writing assent to such claim, then the matter shall be settled by arbitrators selected as hereinafter provided.

It is further expressly understood and agreed however that nothing herein contained shall require the Lessee to make repairs upon and maintain the coal gas plant of the Lessor or to return the same in its present condition, it being the expectation and understanding of the parties that said coal gas plant may be abandoned by the Lessee whenever it shall cease to be necessary or profitable to continue the operation thereof.

16. The Lessee covenants that it will before the expiration of each and every franchise of the Lessor as now held or hereafter secured, take steps to secure and will use all reasonable endeavor in the name of the Lessor to secure an extension or renewal of all such franchises, to the end that there may be at all times during the continuation of this lease present operative franchises in the name of the Lessor wherever it is legally necessary or desirable to have such franchises; and the Lessor will in all reasonable ways cooperate in the securing of such extensions or renewals. But no such franchise shall be procured by the Lessee in the name of the Lessor which is unreasonable or detrimental to the Lessor, and if the Lessor shall object to the terms of any such proposed franchise, the question as to its reasonableness from the standpoint of the Lessor shall be submitted to arbitrators elected as hereinafter provided, and their decision shall be final and conclusive.

In event the Lessor shall at any time during the term of this lease deem it necessary or expedient that a new franchise, license or permit be procured, to do business in the city of Indianapolis or in any part of the territory reached by its system, from the city of Indianapolis, or other municipality, or from the Public Service Commission or other board, agency or officer authorized to grant such franchise, license or permit, it may do so in its own name, and such franchise, license or permit shall thereupon pass under and become a part of the property covered by this lease, and the Lessee shall do all things necessary to maintain and 42 preserve such franchise, license or permit; provided, however, the Lessee shall not be required to accept the benefits of and operate under any such franchise, license or permit if arbitrators selected as hereinafter provided shall decide that the same diminishes the rights or increases the burdens of the Lessee hereunder to an extent materially detrimental to its interests.

The right of the Lessor to surrender its existing franchise and accept in lieu thereof an indeterminate franchise under the provisions of the "Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act" shall not be abridged by the execution of this lease, and on and after such acceptance of an indeterminate franchise, or if and when by operation of law the Lessor becomes subject to such indeterminate franchise or to regulations, terms, conditions, or other requirements touching the construction, repair, maintenance and operation of the leased property, other or different from or additional to those now in force, the obligations of the Lessee under this lease shall not be affected thereby, but such indeterminate franchise and all the provisions of any such law or ordinance to be performed and observed by the Lessor shall be performed and observed on its behalf by the Lessee.

17. The Lessee covenants to insure and keep insured such parts of the leased property as are of an insurable nature for such sums and in such manner as shall reasonably protect the same against loss or damage by fire and as shall be usual in like properties and to exhibit to the Lessor or its agents the policies whenever reasonably requested and to apply all sums received by virtue of any such insurance to the rebuilding, replacement or repair of the property damaged or destroyed, whenever necessary or desirable in the judgment of the Lessee for the operation of leased property, or when not so necessary or desirable, then to extensions, betterments and renewals of property, subject to this lease, or to the retirement of the Lessor's bonds as the Lessor and Lessee may mutually agree.

Provided, however, that the Lessee may adopt such other plan or method of protection against loss by fire, whether by the establishment of an insurance fund, or otherwise, as may be approved by the Board of Directors of the Lessor. It is understood and agreed, however, that the Lessee will at all times comply with the insurance clause contained in the existing mortgage upon the demised property or any renewal thereof or any refunding mortgage. In case of any failure on the part of the Lessee to keep said property so insured or protected from loss by fire, it shall be lawful for the Lessor to cause said property to be insured, and the Lessor may recover the amount of any payments of premiums for such insurance, with interest thereon from the date thereof, from the Lessee, without prejudice to any rights secured to the Lessor by this lease for breach of any covenant thereof.

It is understood by and between the parties hereto that the provisions thus made for the restoration of the demised property, or any part thereof, which may be destroyed or injured by fire, shall be treated and shall operate as a waiver by the Lessee of any right, whether statutory or otherwise, on its part to surrender said leased property or any part thereof by reason of destruction or injury by fire or otherwise, the object being to require the Lessee, notwithstanding such event to continue the term of this lease and to make the payments and perform the covenants herein required, anything in the statutes of the State of Indiana to the contrary notwithstanding.

18. The Lessor covenants to deliver to the Lessee the property herein demised free of any and liens whatsoever except the bonded indebtedness secured by its mortgage and except taxes not delinquent. The Lessor agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Lessee against any and all suits now pending and claims now existing or hereafter asserted as the result of any act done by the Lessor, its agents, servants and employes prior to the beginning of the term of this lease.

19. The Lessee covenants at its own cost and expense to operate said gas plants and system and the other leased properties in compliance with the laws of the State of Indiana and in compliance with requirements of franchises, contracts and orders of Public Service Commission or other public authority and to make all returns and do all things that may by law be required in respect to the whole or any part of the leased property or the business conducted thereon, and that it will furnish all equipment and apparatus of every description necessary for the proper use and operation of said gas plant and system and other leased property in accordance with the requirements of this lease.

43 The Lessee further covenants to save the Lessor harmless from the payment of any claim, debt or liability whatsoever growing out of the present construction and condition or of the working, maintaining or operating or future construction of said leased property subsequent to the date of the beginning of the term of this lease during the term of this lease or growing out of any fault or neglect of the Lessee or its agents or employes or their violation of any law or municipal ordinance, or order or requirement of any commission or other public authority now existing or hereafter lawfully existing, the Lessee taking upon itself the same duties, obligations and liabilities in respect of such leased property and its appendages and appurtenances and the working, maintaining and operating the same as if the Lessee by succession had become the corporate owner thereof.

20. The Lessee further covenants that it will perform all of the grants to the Lessor from or contracts by it with any state, city, town, county or governmental body, in relation to the leased property and not do or omit or suffer to be done or omitted any act or thing which shall be ground for forfeiture of any of the franchises, rights and privileges or easements derived thereunder for the construction and maintenance and operation of gas plants and system or any part thereof, of which the Lessee shall at any time be in possession under this lease, or which shall be a breach of any condition or obligation imposed upon the Lessor by the Mortgage hereinbefore mentioned, or any renewal or refunding mortgage, or mortgage executed subject to the provisions of Article 27 hereof, or by any other contract entered into by the Lessor; and said Lessee shall and will hold the Lessor harmless from all liability, cost or expense arising during the term hereby created for or upon the bonds heretofore or hereafter executed to any city, town or county conditioned for the faithful performance of the obligations of the Lessor under its grant from or contract with any such city, town or county.

21. The Lessee covenants with the Lessor that it will pay as rental for the demised premises and property in gold coin of the United States without relief from valuation or appraisement laws and with attorney's fees.

(1) The interest as the same shall from time to time fall due on the $4,833,000 of bonded indebtedness of the Lessor now outstanding, being part of the authorized issue of the $7,500,000 par value of five per cent. fifty year gold bonds, secured by mortgage to the Trust Company of America and Ferdinand Winter, Trustees, dated October 1st, 1902, so long as the said bonds or any of them shall be outstanding; also the interest as it shall from time to time fall due on any bonds which may be issued in refunding, renewing or extending the bonded indebtedness of the Lessor under the provisions of Article 27 hereof. Also the interest on any escrow bonds under said mortgage which may hereafter be certified and used under the provisions of this lease for betterments and extensions. It being, however, expressly understood that the pro rata proportion of the interest on outstanding bonds from April 1st, 1913, to the beginning of the term of this lease shall be paid by the Lessor.

(2) The Lessee will pay to the Lessor as additional rental for the demised property:

On the 31st day of December, 1913, at the rate of One hundred and twenty thousand dollars ($120,000), per annum for that portion of the year 1913 during which this lease may be effective, and on the 30th day of June and the 31st day of December thereafter Sixty thousand dollars ($60,000), Provided that when the maximum price of gas to the general consumer shall be fixed at a sum more than 45 and not more than 50 cents per thousand cubic feet sixty days or more prior to the date when any semi-annual payment of rent shall be due, then such semi-annual payment and all subsequent semi-annual payments until a further reduction in the price of gas as hereinafter provided shall be made, shall be in the sum of $65,000.00 and provided further that when the maximum price of gas to the general consumer shall be fixed at a sum not more than 45 cents per 1000 cubic feet sixty days or more prior to the date when any semi-annual payment of rent shall be due then such semi-annual payment and all subsequent semi-annual payments during the period that this lease shall be effective shall be in the sum of $67,500.00.

It is agreed by the parties hereto that the price of gas shall be deemed to have been fixed when so established by voluntary act of the Lessee or by act of the Lessee under orders of the Public Service Commission or the State of Indiana, provided, however, that if said Lessee shall within sixty (60) days

44 appeal from any such order of the Public Service Commission fixing a new rate for gas, the change in the amount of rent herein provided shall not become effective until such appeal has been decided by the last court to which it may be carried by said Lessee; and when any such appeal shall be so decided by the last court to which said Lessee may apply, any change in the amount of rental shall become effective as of the date on which such court shall order the change in the maximum net price of gas to the general consumer to take effect.

All such payments shall be made free and clear of all charges, taxes, assessments and impositions whatsoever. The sums thus to be paid under Subdivision 2 of this article shall be paid to the Lessor or its nominees as follows: Twenty (20) or more days before any such payment becomes due, the Lessor shall declare a dividend of an amount equal to said payment to the holders of the shares of its capital stock, and the Lessee, as agent of the Lessor, shall pay the amounts of such dividends thus declared to such persons and in such amounts to each as shall be certified to the Lessee under oath by the treasurer of the Lessor at least twenty (20) days before the sum to be paid becomes due and payable, as entitled to receive the same on the day the same becomes due and payable by virtue of their respective holdings of the capital stock of the Lessor. The Lessor, in the interest and for the benefit of the holders of its stock, hereby requests and directs the Lessee thus to pay for the benefit of the Lessor said sums of money, the payment of which are provided for in said Subdivision 2 of this article, directly to the holders of said shares respectively, in such amounts to each as shall be certified to the Lessee under oath by the treasurer of the Lessor at least twenty days before the sums to be paid under said subdivision 2 of this article become due, and to accept the receipts of the persons to whom such payments shall be made in lieu of the receipt of the Lessor therefor (which receipt may consist of the endorsement of the payee on the dividend checks) with the same effect as if such payments had been made to the Lessor and receipted for by it; and the Lessee, in pursuance of said request and direction, hereby agrees that it will make said payment of said sums, the payments of which are provided for in said subdivision 2 of this article, to said shareholders certified to it as aforesaid, in the amounts in each case so certified, it being agreed that said certificates so presented to it from time to time shall exempt it from all liability to inquire or be informed concerning the performance of prerequisite conditions.

It is agreed between the parties hereto that the instructions and agreement last above written for the payment of said sums shall not be varied without the consent in writing of the Lessor and of the holders of three-fourths of said shares of stock of the Lessor.

And the Lessee further agrees that it will, at the request of the Lessor, endorse upon each certificate of stock its said agreement to make said payments to the holders thereof, in pursuance of and according to the terms herein stated.

3. Such sum not exceeding Three Hundred Dollars ($300) per year as may reimburse the Lessor for its actual and reasonable disbursements made for the purpose of and incidental to the maintenance of its corporate organization.

22. The Lessee covenants to perform and observe all the covenants and agreements of the Lessor, except those as to the payment of the principal of the bonds, contained in its mortgage to the Trust Company of America, dated October 1st, 1902, securing an issue of bonds in the sum of Seven Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($7,500,000) hereinabove referred to, or in any mortgage executed pursuant to the provision of Article Twenty-seven hereof, and that as to the principal of said bonds it will refund or renew the same at maturity as provided in Article Seven hereof; and also all covenants and agreements of the Lessor, except those as to the payment of the principal of the bonds contained in any refunding or renewal or other mortgage executed pursuant to the provisions of Articles Seven and Twenty-seven of this lease.

As between the parties hereto it is agreed that the Lessee may at any time invest its funds in the outstanding bonds of the Lessor, but its acquirement thereof shall not be deemed a cancellation or retirement thereof unless the Lessee expressly elects to have the same cancelled or retired.

23. The Lessee covenants that at the expiration of this lease through lapse of time or otherwise, the Lessee shall surrender to the Lessor the demised property, rights, privileges, franchises, and all improvements, additions and extensions thereto, and all properties, real and personal rights, privileges and franchises acquired by the Lessee hereunder or in pursuance of this instrument, upon payment therefor by the Lessor, in accordance with the provisions of Article Fifteen hereof, except as the same may have been sold, conveyed, altered, changed, abandoned, removed or replaced in accordance with the terms of this instrument; and upon such expiration or termination the Lessee shall permit the Lessor immediately to resume possession of all and singular the demised premises and property and of such additions thereto, and shall thereupon at the request of the Lessor, make, execute and deliver all such deeds, releases or other instruments which the Lessor may reasonably require in order to revest in the Lessor at once the full and complete title thereto.

24. The Lessee covenants that the Lessor, by its agents or representatives may at all proper and reasonable times enter upon the demised property and estate and inspect the same for the purpose of ascertaining its condition and whether the covenants and agreements of the Lessee herein contained are being substantially complied with.

25. It is expressly agreed and notice is hereby given that the Lessee shall have no right under any circumstances to create liens against the property of the Lessor hereby leased without the consent of the Lessor, and no person claiming by, under or through the Lessee shall have any right to assert any lien against the Lessor's property.

26. It is further understood and agreed by and between the parties hereto that immediately after the date of the beginning of this lease an account shall be taken of all extensions or betterments properly chargeable to capital account made after February 28th, 1913, (other than those embraced under the contract with the Semet Solvay Company above referred to) and that as between the parties hereto the Lessor shall be permitted to drawn down escrow bonds of the issue now outstanding hereinbefore referred to on account of such improvements and any others which it has made for which it is entitled to draw down escrow bonds, to an amount which will produce, if sold at 85 per cent. of par, the total cost of such extensions or betterments made since February 28th, 1913, other than those covered by the said Semet Solvay Contract. And such bonds thus drawn shall be the sole property of the Lessor to be used by it as it may see fit, and the interest hereafter falling due thereon shall be a part of the rental to be paid by the Lessee under the first subdivision of Article Twenty-one hereof. But except as herein provided, the Lessor shall not draw down escrow bonds on account of any betterments, extensions or additions made by the Lessor.

27. In event during the term of this lease all escrow bonds of the Lessor secured by the Mortgage dated October 1st, 1902, hereinbefore referred to, shall have been used to defray the expense of making betterments and extensions to the plant and system of the Lessor made by the Lessee under the provisions of this lease, and it thereupon becomes necessary or advisable in order to meet the expense of further extensions and betterments to the plant of the Lessor that additional bonds shall be authorized and issued secured by a mortgage or deed of trust upon the property of the Lessor hereby leased, then the parties hereto mutually covenant and agree that they will take all steps and do all things necessary to authorize and issue such additional bonds as may be reasonably necessary for such purposes, and the rights and obligations of the parties with reference to any such additional mortgage and the bonds secured thereby shall be similar in all respects to the rights and obligations created by this instrument with reference to the oustanding mortgage dated October 1st, 1902, hereinabove referred to.

The mortgage securing the payment of additional bonds may be executed at or before the maturity of the bonds secured by the mortgage of the Lessor dated October 1st, 1902, and such additional bonds may be included in an entire authorized issue of bonds, part of which may be issued or held in escrow to take up, refund or renew upon the terms and conditions prescribed in Article Seven hereof, the bonds secured by said mortgage of the Lessor dated October 1st, 1902, and all such additional and refunding and renewal bonds may be refunded or renewed, as provided in said Article Seven.

27½. It is further covenanted and agreed by and between the parties hereto as follows, to-wit:

46 (1) That immediately upon the approval of this lease by the Public Service Commission, the said Indianapolis Gas Company shall file with the Clerk of the City of Indianapolis, and shall also file with said Commission a written declaration, legally executed, that it surrenders its license, permit or franchise, and desires to receive by operation of law in lieu thereof, an indeterminate permit as provided in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act; said Indianapolis Gas Company shall also file with said Public Service Commission a certified copy of its written declaration filed with the Clerk of said City of Indianapolis, to which shall be attached a certificate of said Clerk certifying to the date upon which said written declaration was filed in the Office of said Clerk of said City of Indianapolis. Provided, nevertheless, that if the execution of this lease be prevented by judicial action or be set aside as the result of judicial proceedings, then such surrender of the Indianapolis Gas Company of its license, permit or franchise and the acceptance by it of an indeterminate permit shall be set aside and said company be reinstated without prejudice in its license, permit or franchise so surrendered.

(2) That in any subsequent valuation for rate making purposes of the properties owned by the Lessor and the Lessee herein, or either of them, the value of the plants and equipments upon which the said Indianapolis Gas Company and the said Citizens Gas Company or either of them shall be entitled to earn an income, shall include only property actually used and useful for the convenience of the public, and shall not include the value of any unnecessary duplications of parts of said property or properties, and such value of all of the property owned by the Lessor and the Lessee or either of them shall for rate making purposes be determined exactly the same as if both companies were operating under indeterminate permits as provided in the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

(3) That in any rate making proceedings hereafter to be determined fixing rates for gas produced, and sold by the said Indianapolis Gas Company, and the Citizens Gas Company or either of them, the amount of stocks and bonds of either of said companies now outstanding shall not be deemed to have been capitalized against the public by the Act of the Public Service Commission of Indiana in approving this lease.

The interest and dividends on the stocks and bonds of either of said companies now outstanding shall not be deemed to be or permitted by the act of the Public Service Commission of Indiana in approving this lease to become fixed charges, the payment of which must be provided for in establishing a just and reasonable rate for the product produced, transmitted, furnished or sold by said Indianapolis Gas Company or said Citizens Gas Company, or either of them.

(4) That the power to regulate the rates at which gas produced, transmitted, furnished or sold by or through the Indianapolis Gas Company shall during the term this lease is in force remain in the Public Service Commission of Indiana, as fully and completely as it is now vested in said commission, and by the approval of this lease said Commission shall not be deemed to have waived its right to determine the rate at which gas so produced, sold or transmitted by or through the said Indianapolis Gas Company shall be sold.

(5) That the said Citizens Gas Company shall hereafter while this lease is in force permit the Public Service Commission of Indiana (or whatever legal commission or authority, that may have conferred upon it powers now conferred upon the Public Service Commission to fix rates for the service produced or sold by Public Utilities) to fix and determine the rates and charges at which gas produced, transmitted or sold by it through the properties now operated by it or by the Indianapolis Gas Company as fully and completely as if the said Citizens Gas Company had surrendered its license, permit or franchise and received an indeterminate permit as provided in the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

(6) That the said Citizens Gas Company hereby binds itself, its successors, and assigns to extend the various lines and mains of its plant as set forth in Section 17 of its franchise as amended and in addition thereto, to extend the mains of the combined plants of the Lessor and Lessee to the extent of at least three miles in any one year, such mains to be of adequate size to serve the consumers along such extensions. In addition to such minimum requirements, the Public Service Commission of Indiana, or any body succeeding to its duties, shall be permitted, upon petition of the proper authorities of the City of Indianapolis, to order additional extensions to a reasonable amount upon proper evidence that such extensions are necessary and will, if made, provide a reasonable return on the cost thereof.

After the Citizens Gas Company shall cease to operate under the franchise from the City of Indianapolis now held by it, said company, its successors and assigns, shall make such extensions to its mains as may be required by the Public Officials having authority in the premises.

(7) The said Citizens Gas Company hereby covenants and agrees to file with the Public Service Commission of Indiana so that the same may be effective on the first day of January 1914, a schedule showing the following rates, tolls and charges for gas transmitted, produced and sold by it, to-wit:

For the first 50,000 cubic feet of gas transmitted, sold or furnished by it to any one consumer in any one month through one meter 55 cents per thousand cubic feet.

45 cents per thousand cubic feet for all in excess of 50,000 cubic feet and not in excess of 100,000 cubic feet furnished to one consumer in any one month through one meter.

40 cents for each 1000 cubic feet of gas in excess of 100,000 cubic feet furnished to one consumer in any one month through one meter.

(8) That the Lessor and the Lessee, each for itself hereby expressly covenants and agrees that this lease shall remain in full force and effect so long as each one separately of the conditions hereinabove set forth numbered respectively 1-2-3-4-5-6 and 7, shall be complied with not to exceed a term of 99 years, and the Lessor and the Lessee, each for itself, covenants and agrees with each other and with the Public Service Commission of Indiana, that the violation of any one of said conditions numbered as aforesaid shall, at the option of the Public Service Commission of Indiana forfeit this lease and render the same null and void. Provided, however, before declaring such forfeiture for any such cause or as provided in the habendum clause of this lease such Public Service Commission shall give not less than thirty (30) days' notice of its proposed action to each of the parties hereto, and if within thirty (30) days thereafter the party not in default shall begin action to compel the party in default to do or cease doing the thing on account of which such Public Service Commission proposes declaring such forfeiture and shall diligently prosecute such action to final decision, then the Public Service Commission shall not proceed further in the matter of such forfeiture until the final determination of such action. And if as a result of such action, or prior thereto by the voluntary act of the defaulting party, the default shall be corrected then the Public Service Commission shall not be authorized to forfeit this lease.

(9) The approval of this lease by the Public Service Commission of Indiana shall not be deemed in any wise to authorize the issuance of any bonds by either the Lessor or Lessee or any of the purposes specified by the terms of this lease, without the consent of such Public Service Commission to such issuance being obtained from time to time as is now or may hereafter be by law provided.

(10) That the execution of this lease by the Lessor and the Lessee as herein provided shall be conclusively presumed to be an acceptance by the Lessor and Lessee of each one separately of the conditions and terms herein set forth.

28. If any difference shall arise between the parties hereto relative to the construction of this lease or the performance of any of the covenants hereof, and in all cases in which the appointment of arbitrators is provided for herein, such arbitrators shall be selected as follows:

(a) The parties in the first instance may by agreement submit any difference calling for arbitration to one or more arbitrators to be agreed upon, or

(b) Failing to agree upon an arbitrator or arbitrators, and within ten days after such failure to agree, either party hereto may make written application to any judge of the Superior or Circuit Court of Marion County, Indiana, willing to act for the appointment of three disinterested persons who shall be competent experts concerning the matter in dispute to whom shall be committed the final decision of the point or points in controversy by a majority vote. Said arbitrators, before entering upon their duties, shall take 48 an oath that they have no interest of any kind in either company and that they will faithfully and honestly discharge the duties committed to them. Or the parties hereto may by mutual consent refer any such matter for adjustment to the Public Utilities Commission of the State of Indiana.

29. The Lessor and Lessee mutually covenant that they will each look for the carrying out of the obligations of this lease solely to the corporate assets and franchises of the other, and such assets shall not embrace any claim which might under any circumstances be enforcible in any way whatsoever against a stockholder, director or officer, under any statute or other law now or hereafter in force, or against a stockholder by reason of any insufficiency in the payment of capital stock. Any personal, statutory or other liability of any stockholder, director or officer of either the Lessor or the Lessee, whether such liability now exists or hereafter arise, being a part consideration for this lease is hereby expressly waived.

30. This lease is made upon the condition that whenever and as often as the Lessee shall make default in the payment of any sum required to be paid by it under this lease, or shall fail to perform or observe any other covenant or condition contained herein to be kept or performed by the Lessee, and such default shall continue for the period of sixty (60) days after written notice and demand by the Lessor, the Lessor shall have the right at its option by and under the award of arbitrators, as herein provided, and without arbitration in case of the failure to pay any installment of rent or of interest upon bonded indebtedness of the Lessor, as hereinabove provided, to terminate this lease and to reenter upon and take possession of all the leasehold property, franchises, rights and privileges hereby lease and demised, together with all the additions, extensions and improvements, made thereto, and franchises acquired in connection therewith, by the Lessee as contemplated herein, and the same shall own, hold and possess as of its former estate.

The arbitrators herein referred to shall be appointed as in Article Twenty-eight herein provided, and if they or a majority of them shall find that the Lessor is entitled hereunder to terminate this lease and re-enter as aforesaid, they shall so notify the Lessee in writing, and if thirty (30) days thereafter the Lessee shall still be in default in the payment of any sum (except as to any installment of rent or of interest upon bonded indebtedness of the Lessor as to which defaults there is to be no arbitration) or in the performance of any covenants or conditions of this lease, then upon the expiration of such period of thirty days this lease shall terminate without further notice, and the Lessor shall thereupon be entitled, without any proceedings whatever at law or in equity, to re-enter as aforesaid and to expel the Lessee and all persons claiming under it as aforesaid from the property hereby demised and every part thereof, without prejudice to its rights of action for arrears of rent or any breach of covenant. And provided also that if the Lessee shall desire to resist by legal proceedings the payment of any tax or assessment, as herein provided in Article Fourteen, failure to pay the same pending the adjudication thereof shall not be construed as a default, or a subject of arbitration between the parties. Such arbitrators shall also, in the event of a termination of this lease as aforesaid, adjust, settle and determine all damages, claims and demands between the parties hereto growing out of the termination of this lease, and all other matters of difference between the respective parties hereto, and any award so made by said arbitrators shall be conclusive and binding upon the said parties.

31. The failure or omission of the Lessor to enforce a forfeiture of this lease and re-enter upon the demised premises for default of performance by the Lessee of any of the obligations thereunder to be performed by the Lessee shall not be deemed a waiver of the right to forfeit and re-enter for any other or subsequent default.

32. In the event that any of the agreements in this lease contained, not substantially affecting the rentals to be paid, or the maintenance and operation of the leased property, or other matter going to the essence of the contract, shall be by a court of final jurisdiction adjudged ultra vires and void, the validity of this agreement in other respects shall not be affected by such nullity.

In event it should be determined by a court of final jurisdiction that the contract is ultra vires or void because of the length of the term created, and that such term is in ex-49 cess of the authority of either party hereto to contract, then this lease shall nevertheless be binding upon the parties hereto for the longest term for which the parties hereto might lawfully contract.

An Ordinance ratifying, confirming and approving a certain contract and agreement made and entered into on the 25th day of August, 1905, between the city of Indianapolis, by and through its board of public works, and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, viz.:

Contract.—Capital Stock.—Earnings—Mortgages.—Trustees. 1. This contract and agreement made and entered into by and between the city of Indianapolis, Marion County, Indiana, by and through its board of public works, party of the first part, hereinafter designated as the "City," and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, for themselves and their associates and assigns, of the city of Indianapolis, Marion county, Indiana, and hereinafter designated as parties of the second part, witnesseth:

Whereas, The said Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, parties of the second part, for themselves, associates and assigns, have presented their written petition to the said board of public works of said city of Indianapolis asking permission to enter upon and lay, construct, maintain and operate a system of pipes in and along the streets and alleys and other places of said city for the distribution and sale of gas to such city and to such of the inhabitants thereof as desire to be supplied therewith;

Now, Therefore, The said city of Indianapolis, party of the first part, by and through its board of public works aforesaid, in consideration of the several agreements of the said Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, parties of the second part, and their associates and assigns hereinafter stipulated and set forth, does hereby grant, authorize, empower and permit the said parties of the second part, their associates and assigns, subject to the ratification and approval of the common council of said city, to enter upon the streets, alleys, avenues and other public places and parts of said city and to excavate and construct the necessary ditches, trenches, conduits and tunnels and to place, lay, bury, maintain, operate and repair a system of pipes therein of such size as the parties of the second part and their associates and assigns may require for the distribution and supply of gas to said city, and the inhabitants thereof, for fuel and heating and lighting purposes, together with the right to construct, maintain and repair all necessary regulations, valves, curb boxes and safety appliances and other appurtenances, subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

1. Provided, However, That said Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, their associates and assigns, before exercising any of the rights herein conferred, shall organize a corporation under and in accordance with the laws of Indiana to carry out the purpose of this grant, to which corporation this franchise and all interests thereunder shall be assigned which articles of incorporation shall, among other matters, provide as follows:

(a) The Capital stock shall be not less than one million ($1,000,000.00) dollars, to be divided into shares of twenty-five ($25.00) dollars each.

(b) No increase of capital stock shall be made except it be provided that such new stock shall be submitted to the public at public auction upon thirty days' notice of the time and place of sale to be published in three Indianapolis newspapers having the largest city circulation, at which time said stock shall be sold at the best price obtainable therefor and any premium offered and paid for such stock shall go to the surplus capital of said company and shall bear no dividend.

(c) The said company by its board of directors shall make and publish in at least two Indianapolis newspapers of general circulation, a semi-annual public statement in detail of the affairs of said company, including the accounts of its assets and liabilities, disbursements and receipts; and the controller of said city shall have the right to investigate the books of said company at any time for the purpose of examining into the correctness of said report, or for other purpose; and the city civil engineer shall have the right at any time to make examination of said company's plant and property.

(d) The entire capital stock of the corporation shall be placed under the control of a board of five (5) trustees 52 and their successors, who shall be stockholders in said company, who shall be designated in said articles of incorporation and one of whom shall be nominated by the mayor of said city; which said board of trustees shall have full, complete, exclusive and irrevocable power, during the continuance of this corporation, to hold said stock and vote the same as fully and completely as if they were the owners of said capital stock; to elect directors, as herein provided, and to fill any vacancy that may occur in said board of directors. Said entire capital stock shall be voted as a unit; and in case said trustees shall not agree as to how said stock shall be voted, the majority of them shall cast the vote of the board. If a vacancy shall occur in said board of trustees by death, resignation, removal from the city of Indianapolis, or otherwise, such vacancy shall be filled by the remaining members of the board, except that the mayor of said city shall appoint the successor to the trustee originally named by such mayor; and in the event of the failure of said board or mayor to fill such vacancy, the Marion circuit court shall, upon application of any stockholder, after said trustees or mayor have had ten (10) days' notice in writing of said application, and shall have in the meantime failed to fill such vacancy, appoint some competent person to fill the same.

Any member of the board of trustees may be removed by the Marion circuit court upon the showing that said trustee is an employe or holder of any of the securities or capital stock of any other company organized for the purpose of manufacturing or delivering gas to consumers residing in, or in the vicinity of the city of Indianapolis, or for any corrupt practice or any misconduct which said court may deem detrimental to the interests of said company. Removal from the city of Indianapolis shall, ipso facto, vacate the office of any trustee.

(e) Said trustees shall issue to each subscriber to the capital stock of said company, upon full payment by such subscriber to said company of the amount of his subscription, and upon the stock therefor being issued to said trustees as above provided, a certificate showing the amount of stock held by said trustees in trust for said subscriber; and said subscriber or holder of said certificate by assignment, shall be entitled by virtue thereof to receive from said company all dividends which shall be declared, not, however, exceeding ten per centum per annum, payable semi-annually in money or in payment of any indebtedness of the holders of such certificates as consumers of the gas of said company, so long as said certificates remain outstanding and uncancelled as hereinafter provided.

(f) The earnings of said company shall be used in the following order, to-wit; first, to the payment of matured debts and operating expenses; second, to the payment semi-annually of said dividends of ten per centum per annum and any unpaid accrued dividends; third, to such extensions and betterments as may be ordered by the board of public works of said city; and the excess to the payment in whole or partial payments of the amounts subscribed: Provided, however, That when any part of the amount subscribed and paid in by any certificate holder has been repaid only the balance unpaid shall thereafter be entitled to receive such dividend of ten per centum per annum.

(g) When said certificate-holder shall have received, by dividends or otherwise, upon said certificates an amount equal to the face value thereof together with interest thereon at the rate of ten per centum per annum payable semi-annually, then said certificates issued to said subscribers shall be deemed fully paid and cancelled and it shall be the duty of the trustees and directors of said company to convey said gas plant and property belonging to said company to said city, to be owned and operated or leased by it, and all the rights, title and interest of said company or its certificateholders, stockholders, officers, directors or trustees, shall be deemed to be fully paid and extinguished, and all such certificates, whether of stock or otherwise, shall be surrendered and cancelled and said corporation shall be wound up.

(h) The business and prudential concerns of the corporation shall be managed by a board of directors consisting of nine (9) members, to be after the first year, annually elected by the board of trustees, and said annual election shall be held on the second Monday of January of each year thereafter.

(i) If upon the expiration of the term and period of the franchise granted by said city of Indianapolis to said parties and assigned to said company, the same shall terminate 53 without the payment of said certificates, together with dividends thereon, at the rate of ten per centum per annum, then upon notice to such effect to be given said board of directors by the board of public works of said city at least six months before the expiration of said franchise period, the said board of directors shall mortgage its gas plant and property for such sum as to enable it to pay its stock or certificate-holders an amount which with what has already been paid will equal the full amount of such subscription with dividends estimated at the rate of ten per centum per annum thereon, and with the proceeds thereof, or with the mortgage notes so issued in proper amounts, pay off and discharge the amounts due such certificate-holders and convey said plant to said city subject to such obligations and other legal obligations against said company: Provided, however, That by the terms of said mortgage such obligation shall bear interest not exceeding six per centum per annum and be payable on or before ten years from date of execution.

City Bound by Contract. 2. And it is agreed and understood that all of the above stipulations to be provided in the articles of incorporation of the company to be formed by said Potts, Stalnaker and Schmidt, and their associates shall bind and be enforceable by said city against said company as conditions of this contract.

Purchase of Consumers' Gas Trust Co.'s Mains. 3. And provided further that this grant is made upon the following additional conditions, to-wit: That said Potts, Stalnaker and Schmidt, their associates and assigns, shall secure, acquire or construct, and put in operation a fuel gas plant for the purpose of supplying gas under this franchise, with not less than one hundred miles of mains in the streets and alleys of said city, within eighteen months from the date of the sale of the Consumers' Gas Trust Company mains now pending, and failing therein, shall forfeit all rights hereunder: Provided, however, the board of public works may at any time after said sale of the Consumers' Gas Trust Company's mains now pending, by written notice require said second parties, their associates and assigns, to file a bond within thirty days in the sum of twenty five thousand ($25,000) dollars with surety to the approval of said board, conditioned for the faithful performance of this contract and the acquiring or construction and putting in operation of such fuel gas plant with at least one hundred miles of mains laid in the streets and alleys of said city and upon failure of said second parties, their associates and assigns to comply with said notice and order for the filing of such bond, this franchise contract shall become void and all the rights, privileges and interest granted or arising hereunder to said second parties, their associates and assigns, shall at once become void and of no effect, and provided further that said board of public works may, in its discretion, extend the time above fixed for the construction of such plant to a date not more than six months after the expiration of the date as above provided.

Bond of Indemnity. 4. Before said parties of the second part or their assigns shall enter upon or take possession of any street, alley, avenue or other public place within said city for said purposes aforesaid, they or their assigns shall execute to said city of Indianapolis a good and sufficient bond to be maintained throughout the term of this franchise, in the sum of twenty-five thousand ($25,000) dollars, with surety to the approval of said board of public works, and conditioned for the indemnification of said city against all loss by reason of damages sustained by any person, firm or corporation by reason of the construction or operation of said gas plant by the said parties of the second part, or their assigns, and for the faithful performance by said parties of the second part and their assigns of each and every stipulation and agreement contained in this contract.

Protecting City. 5. Said second parties for themselves and their assigns agree to indemnify and hold harmless said city, its officers and employes from the payment of any and all damages, costs, expenses, royalties, patent fees, attorney's fees or any other sum of money whatsoever by reason of any action or demand for any infringement of any patent or copyright, or by reason of any demand or suit against said city on account of any act of omission or commission by said second parties or their assigns; and upon written notice said second parties or their assigns shal defend any suit against said city on account of any such matter, and shall prosecute or defend any appeal therein and promptly pay any final judgment that may be recovered therein against said city.

54 Diagram of Streets to be Occupied. 6. Before entering upon or commencing operations in any streets, alleys, or public ground of said city, said parties of the second part, or their assigns, shall furnish to the board of public works of said city a plan showing the street, alley, avenue or other place to be opened and the proposed location of the pipes therein, with a general specification giving particulars as to the kind and size of pipes to be used. Duplicate plans shall be submitted to and approved by the city civil engineer before any street is opened for any purpose whatever, and one copy of said plan shall be retained by said city. Said parties of the second part, or their assigns, shall also file in the office of the board of public works within sixty (60) days after laying the mains in any street, alley or public place a full and complete map showing the position and size of the pipes therein.

Permit to Work in Streets. 7. All work done in or upon any of the streets, alleys or public places of said city, either in the original construction or in making repairs, shall be done upon permits issued by the board of public works, and all trenches shall be dug and pipes laid and the trenches or ditches closed within the shortest possible time within which the same can be done with skillfulness and dispatch. All work shall be done so as to interfere as little as possible with public use and travel upon said streets, alleys and public ground, and the said parties of the second part and their assigns shall restore and maintain the streets and other places in their original condition and shall clear the streets and other places occupied by the parties of the second part and assigns of dirt and rubbish.

Supervision of Inspectors. 8. In the construction or repair of that part of such plant as is located in any of the streets, alleys, avenues or public places of said city, the same shall be subject to the supervision of inspectors to be appointed by the board of public works, and all necessary expenses for the employment of such inspectors which may be necessary for such purposes, shall be paid by the said parties of the second part or their assigns to the city controller on demand.

Service Pipes. 9. All service pipes connecting with said mains of the parties of the second part or their assigns, shall be placed and located at such points and locations as shall meet the approval of the owner of the property whose premises are to be connected by such service pipes and service lines to property line of streets and alleys. Provided, however, that where service pipes are already laid in connection with a system of mains secured by second parties or their assigns, no relocation of such service pipes shall be required. Said service pipes to property lines and curb boxes shall be put in at the expense of said parties of the second part and their assigns, who shall also furnish all necessary meters and safety devices free of charge to each consumer of gas. Provided, however, That the parties of the second part and their assigns shall be entitled to require a deposit of not to exceed five dollars with each meter furnished, which deposit shall be held and returned to such consumer upon the surrender by him of such meter in good condition, the same as when originally installed, natural wear excepted.

Mains. 10. All mains shall be laid with reference to the present grade of the street, alley or public ground through which the mains shall be placed, and in case the grade of such streets, alleys or public places shall be changed the parties of the second part and their assigns shall cause such pipes to be relaid in conformity to such changed grade at their expense and the parties of the second part or assigns shall not be entitled to damages by reason of such change of grade.

Materials, Quality. 11. All materials used in the equipment or construction of said plant shall be of the best quality and the mains of said company shall at all times be of sufficient size to render adequate service. All pipes shall be so laid and located as not to interfere with the city's sewers, water or other pipes, or those of any other person or company, and when the city shall determine to lay any sewer, water or other pipe in any street, alley or public ground occupied by the pipes of the parties of the second part, or their assigns, or change the location of any such pipe, the parties of the second part or their assigns, shall, at their own expense, lower, elevate, change or remove their pipes so as not to interfere with the use of sewer or water pipes.

Complying With Ordinances—Mains. 12. In the construction, maintenance and repair of any of said pipes of said parties of the second part or assigns, they shall comply 55 with all ordinances and regulations existing, or that may hereafter be passed by the common council of said city of Indianapolis, or resolutions or regulations made by the board of public works applicable to the parties of the second part or their assigns, concerning the manner of laying, constructing or repairing mains and connections of said plant, and they shall also be liable for any damages by reason of their failure to comply with any of said regulations, resolutions or ordinances, and shall save the city harmless from any and all damages by reason of said neglect.

Quality of Gas. 13. The parties of the second part, for themselves and their assigns, further agree that the gas so to be furnished, sold and distributed shall have at least six hundred (600) British thermal units per cubic foot, measured according to standard methods employed for such purposes.

Price of Gas. 14. The parties of the second part and assigns further agree that the price to be charged the consumer for gas so to be furnished under this contract shall never at any time exceed the sum of sixty (60) cents per thousand cubic feet, and in the event said parties of the second part or their assigns shall ever increase its rates for gas in excess of sixty (60) cents per one thousand (1,000) cubic feet, aforesaid, for gas furnished under the terms of this contract, then and in that event all the rights, privileges and franchises herein granted shall at once become null and void and its right to longer occupy or use any of the streets, alleys, avenues, public places or other parts of said city may be terminated, and the city shall have the right to acquire said plant as herein provided as upon the termination of the franchise period.

Refilling Excavations. 15. In the event the parties of the second part, or assigns, should fail to refill any excavation made in the construction or repair of any portion of said plant, or fail to restore any street, alley or public ground to its former condition, the said city of Indianapolis, through its board of public works, may, after five (5) days' written notice to the parties of the second part or assigns, at their office in said city, do such work and make repairs as may be necessary and the cost thereof shall be paid to the controller of said city by said second parties, or assigns within ten (10) days from the date upon which itemized bills are presented therefor.

Emergency Fund—Repairs. 16. Before said parties of the second part or assigns shall commence the work of construction, they or their assigns shall deposit with the city treasurer of said city to the credit of said board of public works the sum of five hundred ($500.00) dollars, and shall so maintain said sum on deposit during the entire life of this contract or franchise, which shall be designated as an "emergency fund." Whenever, in the opinion of the board of public works, an emergency arises in any part of any street, alley or public ground, which has been caused by the parties of the second part or assigns, and they shall fail, on notice, to immediately repair the same, the said board of public works may cause such repairs to be made at once, and if the cost thereof be not promptly paid by the parties of the second part or assigns on presentation of itemized bill therefor, such cost shall be paid from such emergency fund, which fund shall be immediately reimbursed by said parties of the second part or assigns; or said board of public works may deduct an amount equal to any payment made by it out of any sum due said parties of the second part or assigns and may add the same to such emergency fund.

Extension of Lines—Forfeiture. 17. The parties of the second part hereby bind themselves, their successors and assigns, to so extend the various lines and mains of said plant that all the inhabitants of said city may be supplied with gas for fuel and lighting purposes, when they may reasonably require the same and when a petition therefor has been presented to the board of public works signed by the owners of property in any territory in said city asking for such extension, and in which said owners or occupants of at least three houses already erected shall bind themselves to make five or more stove or grate connections or fifteen or more burners and to use the same for each five hundred (500) feet of space that said lines are asked to be extended. Whenever such petition has been filed with the said board of public works it shall cause written notice to be given to the parties of the second part, their successors or assigns, which may be served on any officer or employe of said parties of the second part or assigns, at the main Indianapolis office of said parties or assigns, requiring said parties of the second part or assigns to appear before said board of public works 56 at a certain hour specified in said notice in not less than five days after the serving of such notice, to show cause why the prayer of said petitioners should not be granted. Such notice shall contain an accurate description of the streets, alleys and public places through and along which such extension is asked and the territory and inhabitants of which it is proposed to supply with gas as aforesaid. On the day and at the time named in such notice the board of public works shall give to the parties of the second part or assigns, if they so desire, a full hearing on the question as to whether such petition has been signed by the required number of owners and occupants of property who have agreed therein to take and use the number of stoves or grate connections or burners, and whether such extension should be required; if said parties of the second part or assigns should not appear before said board of public works at the time fixed in said notice, said board of public works may act upon such petition and upon such evidence or information as it may have from any source. If said board of public works, after such hearing, shall decide that said petition has been signed as hereinbefore provided and contains the agreement as to burners or stove connections herein required, and that such extension may reasonably be required, it may make an order requiring such extension and fixing the time within which said work of extension shall be completed, reasonable time being given, written notice of which shall be given the parties of the second part, or assigns, and if the parties of the second part or assigns should fail or refuse to make such extension within the time limited, unavoidable delays excepted, the parties of the second part or assigns shall forfeit and pay to said city the sum of fifty ($50.00) dollars for each and every day that the completion of such extension is delayed beyond the period so fixed, which sum shall be considered as liquidated damages for breach of this contract; provided, however, that said parties of the second part or assigns shall not be required to proceed with the extension of any lines, pipes or mains between the first day of November and the first day of April of the following year, in any year, and provided further that such extension shall not be required by said board of public works of said city unless the earnings of said company will permit the same after the payment of the dividend of ten per centum per annum, upon the subscribers' certificates; and provided further, that after three years from the date of this ordinance such extensions may be required by said board of public works of said city to an extent not exceeding in the aggregate in any one year ten thousand feet of mains of adequate size to serve the consumers along such extension, without regard to the previous payment of the dividend of ten per centum per annum upon the subscribers' certificates.

Agreement to Take Gas—Extension of Lines—Forfeiture.

18. If it shall appear that the extension petitioned for can not be made by said board of public works in the manners heretofore provided in the foregoing section, then such extension may be required of said company upon the following terms and conditions, to-wit: The property owners of any territory in said city not supplied with gas by said company may petition the board of public works of the city for such extension, and shall therewith file their agreement to take at par for cash an amount of the capital stock of said company sufficient to cover the cost of the material and labor of making such extension, together with agreement of property owners or occupants of at least three houses already erected along such proposed lines binding themselves to take at least five stove connections, or fifteen burners, and use the same, for each five hundred feet that said mains are asked to be extended. Said board of public works of said city shall thereupon fix a day for the hearing of said petition, giving said company at least ten days' notice in writing and shall hear all parties interested therein and shall determine by an order, from which there shall be on appeal, if said petition is properly signed by the required number of property owners who have agreed to take the stove connections or burners, and use the same as above provided and to determine also if said petitioners have sufficiently subscribed therefor and are responsible under their obligation to take an amount of the capital stock of said company which at its face value would cover the cost of material and labor of making such extension together with service connections to the property lines, such cost to be determined by an estimate of the city civil engineer, and in such order said board of public works shall require said company to make such extensions on said conditions and fix the time within which the work shall be completed. And it shall be the duty of the board of directors of said company, upon such order of the board of public works, to offer for sale as 57 herein provided any of the subscribed capital stock, or if necessary, to increase the capital stock, and so offer for sale such increase to an amount sufficient to cover the estimated cost of such extension; and if said stock be not sold at more than the face value thereof, then the same shall be taken and paid for by said petitioners at the face value thereof and thereupon such extensions shall be made. And if said company shall fail or refuse to make such extension within the time fixed therefor, unavoidable delays excepted, it shall forfeit and pay to said city fifty ($50.00) dollars for each and every day of such failure or delay.

Meter. 19. The parties of the second part, or assigns, shall use no meter, nor require the use of any meter in the measurement of gas sold under the provision of this contract, except such as will accurately measure all gas passing through it, and it is agreed that any meters whose measurement shall exceed two per cent (2 per cent.) fast or two per cent. slow, will be considered inaccurate.

Test of Meters—Forfeiture on Failure to Furnish Gas. 20. Said board of public works shall at all times have authority to inspect or cause to be inspected and to test or cause to be tested any meters in use by the parties of the second part or assigns, or to inspect and test the apparatus, mains or plant of said company, and to test or cause to be tested the quality of the gas and the calorific and illuminating value of the same for the purpose of determining whether the same does comply with the terms and provisions hereof. And [any] unsafe apparatus or imperfect meters shall immediately be replaced upon order of said board of public works. And upon order of said board of public works the gas of said company shall be made to conform to the standard herein fixed, and if said company shall fail to make its gas of the standard and quality herein fixed within a period of five days after such order, it shall forfeit to said city the sum of one hundred ($100.00) dollars for each day's failure to comply with such order, and in addition to the above penalty the city shall have the right by any proper action at law or equity, to compel said company to furnish gas of the quality herein prescribed.

Term of Franchise. 21. This contract and agreement shall be in force from and after the date of its ratification by the common council of said city and for a period of twenty-five years thereafter, and thereafter all rights of said company to occupy the streets and alleys of said city shall terminate and cease.

Property Becomes City's 22. If the plant and system of mains of said company shall not have become the property of said city by the cancellation of the certificates of subscribers and conveyance of such property to such city by the board of directors and trustees of said company on or before the expiration of the aforesaid period of said franchise, then said city, by and through its board of public works, upon the expiration of said franchise period, shall have the right to pay any balance remaining due said certificate holders and the plant and property of said company shall be conveyed to said city as above provided to be owned and operated, or owned and leased by it; or, at the option of said city, the board of directors of the corporate successor of the second parties shall, as hertofore provided, upon the conclusion of said franchise period, mortgage its plant and with the proceeds thereof, or with the mortgage notes issued in proper amounts, pay off and discharge the amount due certificate holders, and thereupon convey said plant to said city subject to such obligations and other legal obligations against said company.

Insolvency of Company. 23. If at any time the company operating under this franchise should become insolvent and be ordered sold by any proper judicial authority, the city of Indianapolis reserves the right to acquire all the property and rights of said company by the payment of its bona fide indebtedness and any balance due the certificate or stockholders of said company, and upon the tender by said city of the amount of such indebtedness and amount due certificate or stockholders the trustees and directors of said company shall upon demand execute proper instruments transferring all such property and rights to said city of Indianapolis to be owned and operated or leased by it.

Assignment of Contract. 24. This contract shall not be assigned nor in any manner transferred, whether directly or indirectly, except as herein provided by second parties to the corporation to be organized by them, without the consent of the board of public works, and approved [approval] of the common council of said city.

58 In Witness Whereof, The said city of Indianapolis has caused its corporate name to be hereunto affixed by its board of public works and the said Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt have hereunto set their hands, all in triplicate, this 25th day of August, A. D., 1905.

Amendments.

Reserve Fund for Required Extensions.

The Board of Directors may, at any dividend-declaring time, deduct from the earnings before determining the amount dividend then to be declared such a sum as, in their judgment, may reasonably be required to defray the cost and expense of making such extensions as the Board of Public Works may, under the Franchise of the Company, require the company to make within the six months' period ending June 30, or December 31 next thereafter as the case may be. Such an amount shall be carried as an asset of the amount in a contingent fund for making such extensions. Against such fund shall be charged the cost of such extensions so required to be made by said Board of Public Works. The amount remaining in such fund at the end of each six months' period shall be returned to the earnings account, then to be dealt with as the circumstances of the case may require.

Approved by Trustee Nov. 22, 1910.

65 Depreciation.

The Board of Directors may, in their discretion, from time to time cause to be charged off of the assets of the corporation such a sum as, in their judgment, represents the reasonable depreciation of its assets as shown according to the last preceding inventory of the assets of the corporation and deduct such amount from the apparent earnings otherwise applicable to the payment of dividends; and all such sums so charged off on account of such depreciation shall be contingently credited to depreciation account, against which shall be charged from time to time the cost of making good such depreciations as may from time to time be ordered by the Board. And if thereafter by actual experience it has been found that a greater sum has been accumulated in such depreciation fund than fairly represents the amount of such depreciation, all things considered, making such amount over and above a just estimate of such depreciation, it may be withdrawn from such fund and be placed in current funds for dividend purposes.

Approved by Trustee Nov. 22, 1910.

Time for Paying Dividends.

Within ninety days after the first of January and July in each year, the Directors shall cause a careful account to be taken of all of the earnings of the company within the six months preceding such named dates, and after making reasonable deductions therefrom for depreciation and anticipated extensions required to be made by the Board of Public Works, they shall declare and pay from such earnings such a dividend to the stockholders as the surplus of such earnings may justify.

Approved by Trustee Nov. 22, 1910.

This contract and agreement made and entered into by and between the city of Indianapolis, of Marion County, Indiana, by and through its Board of Public Works, party of the first part, and the Citizens' Gas Company of Indianapolis, Indiana, a corporation organized and acting under and pursuant to the laws of the State of Indiana, party of the second part, witnesseth:

Whereas, Said city of Indianapolis, on the 25th day of August, 1905, entered into a certain contract with Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, which contract was approved by an ordinance adopted by the Common Council of the city of Indianapolis, and approved by the Mayor of the city of Indianapolis, August 30, 1905, by the terms of which contract there was granted unto said Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, for themselves and their assigns, a franchise for the manufacture and sale of gas; and

Whereas, Said contract, pursuant to the provisions of Section 24 thereof, was assigned to the said Citizens' Gas Company, party hereto, and,

Whereas, It is desired for the mutual benefit and accommodation of the parties that certain provisions of said contract shall be amended;

Now, Therefore, it is agreed by and between the parties hereto as follows:

Sec. 1524. 1. That Section 17 of said contract, hereinabove referred to, be amended to read as follows:

The parties of the second part hereby bind themselves, their successors and assigns, to so extend the various lines and mains of said plant that all the inhabitants of said city may be supplied with gas for fuel and lighting purposes, when they may reasonably require the same and when a petition therefor has been presented to the Board of Public Works signed by the owners of the property in any territory in said city asking for such extension, and in which said owners or occupants of at least three houses already erected shall bind themselves to make five or more stove or grate connections or fifteen or more burner connections, and to use the same, for each five hundred (500) feet of space that said lines are asked to be extended. Whenever such petition has been filed with the said Board of Public Works it shall cause written notice to be given to the parties of the second part, their successors or assigns, which may be served on any officer or employe of said parties of the second part or assigns, at the main Indianapolis office of said parties or assigns, requiring said parties of the second part or assigns to appear before said Board of Public Works at a certain hour specified in said notice in not less than five days after the serving of such notice, to show cause why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted. Such notice shall contain an accurate description of the streets, alleys and public places through and along which such extension is asked and the territory and inhabitants of which it is proposed to supply with gas, as aforesaid. On the day and at the time named in such notice the Board of Public Works shall give to the parties of the second part, or assigns, if they so desire, a full hearing on the question as to whether such petition has been signed by the required number of owners and occupants of property who have agreed therein to take and use the number of stoves or grate connections or burners, and whether such extension should be required; if said parties of the second part or assigns should not appear before said Board of Public Works at the time fixed in said notice, said Board of Public Works may act upon such petition and upon such evidence or information as it may have from any source. If said Board of Public Works, after such hearing, shall decide that said petition has been signed as hereinbefore provided, and contains the agreement as to burners or stove connections herein required, and that such extension may be reasonably required, it may make an order requiring such extension and fixing the time within which said work of extension shall be completed, reasonable time being given, written notice of which shall be given to the parties of the second part, or assigns, and if the parties of the second part, or assigns, should fail or refuse to make such extension within the time limited, unavoidable delays excepted, the parties of the second part, or assigns shall forfeit and pay to said city the sum of fifty ($50.00) dollars for each and every day that the completion of such extension is delayed beyond the period so fixed, which sum shall be considered as liquidated damages for breach of this contract: Provided, however, That said parties of the second part, or assigns, shall not be required to proceed with the extension of any lines, pipes or mains between the first day of November and the first day of April of the following year, in any year; and, Provided further, That such extension shall not be required by said Board of Public Works of said city unless the earnings of said company will permit the same after payment of the dividend of ten per centum per annum, upon subscribers' certificates; and, Provided, further, That such extensions may be required by said Board of Works of said city during the five years beginning January 1, 1912, to an extent not exceeding in the aggregate in any one year twenty thousand (20,000) feet of mains of adequate size to serve the consumers along such extension; during the five years beginning January 1, 1917, to an extent not exceeding in the aggregate in any one year twenty-five thousand (25,000) feet, and during the remaining term of the franchise, i. e., beginning January 1, 1922, to an extent not exceeding in the aggregate in any one year thirty thousand (30,000) feet, without regard to the previous payment of the dividend of ten per centum per annum upon the subscribers' certificates.

Sec. 1525. 2. That Section 24 of said contract hereinabove referred to be amended to read as follows:

This contract shall not be assigned, nor in any manner transferred, whether directly or indirectly, without the consent of the Board of Public Works, and approval of the Common Council of said city, except by way of mortgage or deed of trust, and as a part of the security for bonds of the company, and which mortgage or deed of trust shall contain, among others, the following limitations and conditions:

First. That such bonds shall bear interest at not to exceed five (5) per cent. per annum.

Second. That there be set aside annually as a sinking fund or otherwise applied toward the immediate or future re-67 tirement of such bonds, a sum equal to at least one-half ($\frac{1}{2}$) of one per cent. of the total bonds at the time outstanding, beginning not later than five (5) years after issue thereof.

Third. That bonds may be certified at or after the date of the execution of such mortgage or deed of trust to the amount of the bonds heretofore authorized for the purpose of refunding the same, and in addition thereto bonds to the amount of forty (40) per cent. of the present capital stock of the company, which stock has been sold at not less than par, may be certified and used for proper corporate purposes, but that no other bonds shall be issued and certified except for betterments, replacements and extensions to the plant of the company hereafter made or other property for any of the company's corporate purposes hereafter acquired, and this only to the extent of eighty (80) per cent. of the cost thereof: Provided, however, The foregoing shall not be deemed as in any wise affecting the transfer of this franchise heretofore made to the Citizens Gas Company, which transfer was expressly authorized by the terms of Section twenty-four (24) of such franchise, as originally adopted.

In Witness Whereof, The said city of Indianapolis has caused its corporate name to be hereunto affixed by its Board of Public Works, and the said Citizens' Gas Company has caused this instrument to be executed in its name and on it's behalf by its president and the due execution thereof to be attested by its secretary and its corporate seal hereto affixed, this 29th day of November, A. The undersigned, being the holders of record, and the sole voting stockholders of all the stock of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a corporation organized and acting under and pursuant to the Manufacturing and Mining laws of the State of Indiana, have this day executed the following certificate of amendment to the Articles of Incorporation of said company, the same being executed under and pursuant to the Act of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, as set out in the Acts of 1913, page 681.

1. Article IV of said Articles of Incorporation is hereby amended to read as follows:

IV.

The amount of capital stock of the Company shall be four million dollars ($4,000,000), of which two million dollars ($2,000,000), divided into shares of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) each, shall be common stock, and two million dollars ($2,000,000), divided into shares of One hundred dollars ($100.00) each, shall be preferred stock. The capital stock of said company may be increased as by law provided. Any additional preferred stock shall have equal preferences, both as to principal and dividends, (except as the rate of dividends may vary) with the preferred stock herein authorized. The holders of the preferred stock shall be entitled to receive the dividends expressed in the preferred stock certificate be-68 fore any dividends are paid on account of the common stock and no further or additional dividends, and, on liquidation of the company, shall be entitled to receive the par value of the preferred stock, plus all accrued dividends, before any sum if paid on account of the common stock. The preferred stock shall bear such rates of dividends, be subject to redemption at such time and on such terms, and shall be disposed of and issued upon such terms and conditions as the Board of Directors of the Company may deem best. The preferred stockholders shall not have any voting rights in the company. Any premium paid for any stock of the company, common or preferred, shall go to the surplus capital and shall bear no dividend.

2. Article VI of the said Articles of Incorporation is hereby amended to read as follows:

VI.

The entire capital stock of the corporation shall be placed under the control of a board of five (5) trustees and their successors, who shall be stockholders in said company, who shall be designated in said articles of incorporation and one of whom shall be nominated by the mayor of said city, which said Board of Trustees shall have full, complete, exclusive and irrevocable power, during the continuance of this corporation, to hold said stock and vote the same as fully and completely as if they were the owners of said common stock, including the right to elect directors, as herein provided, and to fill any vacancy that may occur in said Board of Directors. Said entire common capital stock shall be voted as a unit; and in case said trustees shall not agree as to how said stock shall be voted, the majority of them shall cast the vote of the board. If a vacancy shall occur in said Board of Trustees by death, resignation, removal from the City of Indianapolis or otherwise, such vacancy shall be filled by the remaining members of the Board, except that the mayor of said city shall appoint the successor to the trustee originally named by such mayor; and in the event of the failure of such board or mayor to fill such vacancy, the Marion Circuit Court shall, upon application of any stockholder, after said trustees or mayor have had ten (10) days' notice in writing of said application, and shall have in the meantime failed to fill such vacancy, appoint some competent person to fill the same.

3. Article VIII of said Articles of Incorporation is hereby amended to read as follows:

VIII.

Said trustees shall issue to each subscriber to the common capital stock of said company, upon full payment by such subscriber to said company of the amount of his subscription, and upon the stock therefor being issued to said trustees as above provided, a certificate showing the amount of stock held by said trustee in trust for said subscriber; and said subscriber, or holder of said certificate by assignment, shall be entitled by virtue thereof to receive from said company all dividends which shall be declared, not, however, exceeding ten per centum per annum, payable semi-annually in money or in payment of any indebtedness of the holders of such certificates as consumers of the gas of said company, so long as said certificates remain outstanding and uncancelled as herein provided.

4. Article IX of said Articles of Incorporation is hereby amended to read as follows:

IX.

The earnings of said company, after the payment of operating expenses and taxes, shall be applied, subject to the discretion by law vested in the directors, but which discretion shall not affect the order in which such application shall be made, in the following order, to-wit:

First, to the payment of any accrued and unpaid dividends upon any preferred stock of the company at the time outstanding; second, to the payment of dividends at the rate of not to exceed 10 per centum per annum upon the common stock, and any unpaid and accrued dividends at the same rate on account of prior years, third, to the payment in whole or partial payments of the par value of the common stock of the company; provided, however, that when any part of the amount subscribed and paid in by any certificate-holder has been repaid, only the balance unpaid shall thereafter be 69 entitled to receive such dividends of ten per centum per annum.

5. Article X of said Articles of Incorporation is hereby amended to read as follows:

X.

When all outstanding preferred stock of the Company shall have been retired and the holders of the certificates representing the common stock shall have received by dividends, or otherwise, upon said certificates, an amount equal to the face value thereof, together with interest thereon at the rate of ten per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, then said certificates shall be deemed fully paid and cancelled, and it shall be the duty of the trustees and directors of said company to convey said gas plant and property belonging to said company to the city of Indianapolis, subject to all outstanding legal obligations of the company, to be owned and operated or leased by it, and all the rights, title and interest of said company or its certificate-holders, stockholders, directors, or trustees, shall be deemed to be fully paid and extinguished, and all such certificates, whether of stock or otherwise, shall be surrendered and cancelled and said corporation shall be wound up.

6. Article XII of said Articles of Incorporation is hereby amended to read as follows:

XII.

If, on the 30th day of August, 1930, that being the date of the expiration of the term and period of the franchise granted by the city of Indianapolis, to Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, and which was thereafter assigned to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, said certificates representing the common stock of the company, together with dividends thereon, at the rate of ten per centum per annum, shall not have been paid, then upon notice of such fact to be given to the directors of said company by the board of public works of said city at least six months before the expiration of such franchise period, the said board of directors shall mortgage its gas plant and property for such sum as to enable it to pay the holders of the certificates representing its common stock, an amount which, with what has already been paid, will equal the full amount of such stock with dividends estimated at the rate of ten per centum per annum thereon, together with the amount necessary to redeem any outstanding preferred stock, and with the proceeds thereon, after redeeming any outstanding preferred stock in accordance with the provisions therefor contained in the stock certificates, or with the mortgage notes so issued in proper amounts, pay off and discharge the amounts due such holders of the certificates representing its common stock and convey said plant and property to said city, subject to such mortgage and other legal obligations against said company; provided, however, that by the terms of said mortgage such obligation shall bear interest not exceeding six per cent per annum and be payable on or before ten years from date of execution.

In Witness Whereof, the undersigned have hereunto set their hands this 11th day of August 1921.

70 EXHIBIT D.

Finding and Order

By Public Service Commission of Indiana.

71 Finding and Order.

In this case the Citizens Gas Company and the Indianapolis Gas Company have filed a petition asking for an order of this Commission authorizing the Indianapolis Gas Company to lease to the Citizens Gas Company and the Citizens Gas Company to lease from the Indianapolis Gas Company for a period of ninety-nine years all of the plant and property of said Indianapolis Gas Company used in the manufacture and sale of gas and its by-products in the city of Indianapolis.

A hearing on the petition was had. Smith, Hornbrook and Smith appeared for the Citizens Gas Company, Ferdinand Winter for the Indianapolis Gas Company, and Joseph B. Kealing, corporation counsel for the city of Indianapolis, for said city. During the progress of said hearing Frank S.

Fishback appeared by Gavin, Gavin and Davis and Woodburn Masson, and as a stockholder in the Citizens Gas Company filed a protest against granting said two gas companies the right to execute said lease on the terms proposed. Said hearing was continued, resumed and adjourned from time to time and much evidence introduced and a valuation of the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company was made by the staff of the Commission, and by experts employed by said company. From the great mass of evidence the following facts are found, and deemed pertinent.

The Indianapolis Gas Company was organized in 1891, its plant being composed of three small plants then operating in the city of Indianapolis. Since said date said company has operated in said city and during a period of some years, while natural gas was abundant in Indiana fields, said company supplied natural gas to said city for heating and to some extent for lighting purposes, and during that period produced but a comparatively small amount of artificial gas for lighting purposes. Said company has three hundred and seventy-five miles of mains in said city, more than forty-one thousand meters, water and coal gas plants and is just completing a modern coke oven plant of large capacity. Its capital stock is two million dollars par value and its bonded indebtedness four million eight hundred and thirty-three thousand dollars. The plant is in good condition throughout and is well managed.

The Citizens Gas Company was organized in 1905, as a citizens organization for competitive purposes with a view to producing gas at sixty cents per thousand cubic feet, and since its organization it has produced gas at that price and at a profit. Its stock is held and voted by a board of trustees selected from the representative citizens of Indianapolis and stockholders of the company, and in such a way as to practically insure the continued management of the affairs of the company as much in the interest of the consumers of gas as in the interest of the stockholders. Its management has been of a very high order throughout its entire existence. It has a capital stock of $1,250,000 and a bonded indebtedness of $1,247,000.

The two plants are so constructed and laid out as to adapt the two to a single working plant of great efficiency and under one management they can be operated at a great saving as compared with the cost of operating them as separate and competitive plants.

The valuation of the plant of the Indianapolis Gas Company is, in the opinion of the Commission, sufficient to justify, under the circumstances, a rental such as is proposed in the subjoined lease. On account of the late date at which the valuation of the plant was begun the engineers have been unable to furnish the Commission complete data of their work and the engineer appointed on the staff of the Commission has been able to furnish tentative values only, and we deem it not advisable to attempt to fix at this time a definite value of the plant, but leave that for a later and separate consideration.

The lessee and lessor have tendered for the approval of the Commission a lease containing all the terms and conditions as agreed upon by and between said parties, which lease is as follows. (Here Insert.)

And the Commission finds that said lease, before being approved, should be changed and modified so as to comply with the following provisions and conditions:

1. That before said lease shall be executed and legalized the said Indianapolis Gas Company shall file with the clerk of the city of Indianapolis, and shall also file said Commission a written declaration, legally executed, that it surrenders its license, permit or franchise, and desires to receive by operation of law in lieu thereof, an indeterminate permit as provided in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission
72 Act; said Indianapolis Gas Company shall also file with said Public Service Commission a certified copy of its written declaration filed with the clerk of said city of Indianapolis, to which shall be attached a certificate of said clerk certifying to the date upon which said written declaration was filed in the office of said clerk of said city of Indianapolis; Provided, That if the execution of this lease be set aside by judicial proceedings, then such surrender and acceptance of an indeterminate permit shall be set aside and said Company be reinstated without prejudice in its license, permit or franchise so surrendered.

2. That in any subsequent valuation, for rate-making purposes, of the properties owned by the Lessor and the Lessee herein, or either of them, the value of the plants and equipments upon which the said Indianapolis Gas Company and the said Citizens Gas Company, or either of them, shall be entitled to earn an income, shall include only property actually used and useful for the convenience of the public, and shall not include the value of any unnecessary duplications of parts of said property or properties, and such value of all the property owned by the Lessor and Lessee, or either of them, shall for rate-making purposes be determined exactly the same as if both said companies were operating under an indeterminate permit, as provided in the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

3. That in any rate-making proceedings hereafter to be determined fixing rates for gas produced and sold by the said Indianapolis Gas Company and the Citizens Gas Company, or either of them, the amount of stocks and bonds of either of said companies now outstanding shall not be deemed to have been capitalized against the public by said proceedings.

The interest and dividends on the stocks and bonds of either of said companies now oustanding shall not be deemed to be or permitted by this proceeding to become fixed charges, the payment of which must be provided for in establishing a just and reasonable rate for the product produced, transmitted, furnished or sold by said Indianapolis Gas Company or said Citizens Gas Company, or either of them.

4. That the power to regulate the rates at which gas produced, transmitted furnished or sold by or through the Indianapolis Gas Company shall during the term of said lease remain in the Public Service Commission of Indiana as fully and completely as it is now vested in said Commission, and by the approval of this lease said Commission shall not be deemed to have waived its right to detemine the rate at which gas so produced, sold or transmitted by or through the said Indianapolis Gas Company shall be sold.

5. That the said Citizens Gas Company shall hereafter permit, during the term of this lease, the Public Service Commission of Indiana (or whatever legal commission or authority, that may have conferred upon it powers now conferred upon the Public Service Commission to fix rates for the service produced or sold by public utilities) to fix and determine the rates and charges at which gas produced, transmitted or sold by it through the properties now operated by it or by the Indianapolis Gas Company as fully and completely as if the said Citizens Gas Company had surrendred its license, permit or franchise and received an indeterminate permit as provided in the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

6. That the said Citizens Gas Company hereby binds itself, its successors, and assigns, to extend the various lines and mains of its plant, as set forth in Section Seventeen of its franchise as amended, and in addition thereto, to extend the mains of the combined plants of the Lessor and the Lessee, to the extent of at least three (3) miles in any one year, such mains to be of adequate size to serve the consumers along such extensions. In addition to such minimum requirements, the Public Service Commission of Indiana, or any body succeeding to its duties, shall be permitted, upon petition of the proper authorities of the city of Indianapolis, to order additional extensions to a reasonable amount, upon proper evidence that such extensions are necessary, and will, if made, provided a reasonable return on the cost thereof.

After the Citizens Gas Company shall cease to operate under the franchise from the city of Indianapolis now held by it, said company, its successors and assigns, shall make such extensions to its mains as may be required by the public officials having authority in the premises.

7. The said Citizens Gas Company hereby covenants and agrees to file with the Public Service Commission of Indiana, as that the same may be effective on the first day of 73 January, 1914, a schedule showing the following rates, tolls and charges for gas transmitted, produced and sold by it, to wit:

For the first fifty thousand (50,000) cubic feet of gas transmitted, sold or furnished by it, to any one consumer in any one month, through one meter, fifty-five cents (55c) per thousand cubic feet.

Forty-five cents (45c) per thousand cubic feet for all in excess of fifty thousand (58,000) cubic feet and not in excess of one hundred thousand (100,000) cubic feet, furnished to any one consumer in any month, through one meter.

Forty cents (40c) per thousand cubic feet of gas in excess of one hundred thousand (100,000) cubic feet, furnished to any one consumer in any one month through one meter.

8. That the Lessor and the Lessee, each for itself, hereby expressly covenants and agrees that this lease shall remain in full force and effect so long as each one separately of the conditions hereinafter set forth, numbered respectively 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7, shall be complied with, not to exceed a term of ninety-nine (99) years, and the Lessor and the Lessee, each for itself, covenants and agrees with each other and with the Public Service Commission of Indiana, that the violation of any one of said conditions numbered as aforesaid shall, at the option of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, forfeit this lease and render the same null and void; provided, however, before declaring such forfeit for any such cause or as provided in the habendum clause of this lease, such Public Service Commission of Indiana shall give not less than thirty (30) days' notice of its proposed action to each of the parties hereto, and if, within thirty (30) days thereafter the party not in default shall begin action to compel the party in default to do or cease to do the thing on account of which said Public Service Commission proposes declaring such forfeit, and shall diligently prosecute such action to final decision, then the Public Service Commission shall not proceed further in the matter of such forfeit, until the final termination of such action, and if as a result of such action or prior thereto, by voluntary act of the defaulting party, the default shall be corrected, then the Public Service Commission shall not be authorized to forfeit this lease.

9. The approval of this lease by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, shall not be deemed in anywise to authorize the issuance of any bonds by either the Lessor or the Lessee for any of the purposes specified by the terms of this lease, without the consent of such Public Service Commission to such issuance being obtained from time to time, as is now or may hereafter be provided by law.

10. The Lessee will pay to the Lessor as additional rental for the demised property:

On the first day of December, 1913, at the rate of one hundred and twenty thousand dollars ($120,000) per annum, for that portion of the year 1913, during which this lease may be effective; and on the 30th day of June and the 31st day of December, thereafter, sixty thousand dollars ($60,000). Provided, that when the maximum price of gas to the general consumer shall be fixed at a sum more than forty-five cents (45c) and not more than fifty cents (50c) per thousand cubic feet, sixty days or more prior to the date when any semi-annual payment of rent shall be due, then said semi-annual payment of rent and all subsequent semi-annual payments until a further reduction in the price of gas as hereinafter provided shall be made, shall be in the sum of sixty-five thousand dollars ($65,000); and provided further, that when the maximum price of gas to the general consumer shall be fixed at any sum not more than forty-five cents (45c) per thousand cubic feet sixty days or more prior to the day when any semi-annual payment of rent shall be due, then said semi-annual payment and all subsequent semi-annual payments of rent shall be in the sum of sixty-seven thousand and five hundred dollars ($67,500).

11. The execution of this lease by the Lessor and the Lessee as herein provided shall be conclusively presumed to be an acceptance by the Lessor and the Lessee of each one separately of the terms and conditions herein set forth.

Comes now the said Citizens Gas Company and the said the Indianapolis Gas Company and submit the following lease as embodying the said provisions and conditions herein fixed by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, said lease being in words and figures as follows: (Here insert)

And the Commission, having examined said lease and being advised in the premises, now orders that the same be approved and spread upon the records of said Commission.

74 I, J. L. Reily, Secretary of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, hereby certify that the above and foregoing order is a true and complete copy of an order this day made by said Commission, as appears of record in my office.

Witness my hand and seal this first day of October, 1913.

Indianapolis, Indiana,
October 1, 1913.

Secretary.

75 EXHIBIT E.

Instrument of Transfer and Assignment of Personal Property of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

76 Instrument of Transfer and Assignment of Personal Property.

Whereas, the City of Indianapolis has taken all the necessary steps and performed all the required conditions in the exercise of its right to acquire, take over and administer as a public charitable trust all the property of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, pursuant to the terms and provisions of the original and amended articles of incorporation of said Company and the franchise agreement entered into on the 25th day of August, 1905 between the said City, by and through its Board of Public Works, and Alfred F. Potts, Frank W. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, which franchise and contract was assigned to and accepted by the said Company on the 24th of May, 1906; and

Whereas, the right of the City of Indianapolis to acquire, take over and administer the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, as the beneficiary of the said public charitable trust, has been legally established and adjudicated by the judgment and decision of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana in the suits instituted by Newton Todd and by John J. Cotter and others against the said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and others, which judgment and decision was affirmed upon appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, and a petition for a writ of certiorari to the United States Supreme Court thereafter denied; and

Whereas, the City of Indianapolis has deposited with The Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis, in a special account to the credit of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the sums of $2,500,000 and $1,050,000, to be held by the said Company as trust funds to be used for the sole purpose of retiring, respectively, the outstanding common stock of said Company at the par value thereof plus dividends at the rate of 10% per annum and retiring the outstanding preferred stock of said Company at 105% of the par value thereof, (said Company, by its Board of Directors, has furnished and made provision for the funds necessary for the payment of the dividend upon such preferred stock for the current quarter expiring August 31st, 1935.); and

Whereas, nothing further remains to be done by the City of Indianapolis to entitle it to have all the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, including the property hereafter described, conveyed and transferred to said City, pursuant to the provisions of said franchise agreement and the original and amended articles of incorporation of said Company and in accordance with the judgment and decision of said Courts.

Now, Therefore, in consideration of the premises and for the purpose of carrying out and executing the public charitable trust as aforesaid, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Indiana, hereby sells, transfers, assigns and delivers to the City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Indiana, all of the personal property and chattels owned and belonging to said Company of any nature or form whatsoever, and meaning hereby to include all property, (excepting real property), tangible and intangible, personal and mixed, executed and executory contracts, accounts, deposits, cash and any other form of personal and chattel property whatsoever, whether or not used by the said Company in its business of the manufacture and sale of gas and by-products of gas.

Attached hereto is a list of executory contracts executed in the name of or assigned to the said Company which are intended to be specifically assigned and the benefits transferred to the said City hereby. The inclusion of such list of specific contracts shall not be deemed to exclude any other executory or executed contracts or agreements of said Company, but all such contracts and agreements shall be deemed to be assigned and transferred to said City by this instrument.

This instrument shall be deemed also to assign and transfer to the said City all the contracts and policies of insurance, of any nature and for whatsoever, held and possessed by the said Company, and the said City shall have the benefit to and right to recover any payments thereunder for the remainder of the unexpired term of any and all of such contracts and policies.

This instrument shall be deemed also to assign and transfer to the said City all the right, title and interest of the said Company in and to the capital stock of Milburn By-Prod-77 ucts Coal Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of West Virginia, the wholly owned subsidiary corporation of said Company.

The foregoing transfer and assignment is made, however, subject to the following exceptions and conditions:

1. Said transfer and assignment is made pursuant and subject to, and in conformity with the terms, conditions and agreements contained in the original and amended articles of incorporation of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the franchise agreement entered into between said Company's assigners and the City of Indianapolis, under date of August 25th, 1905, as aforesaid, and Chapter 78 of the Acts of 1929 of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana.

2. Said transfer and assignment is made subject also to the mortgage executed by Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the Bankers Trust Company of New York, Primary Trustee, and The Union Trust Company of Indianapolis, Ancillary Trustee, under date of July 1, 1912, and recorded in Mortgage Record 593, page 399, in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana, in the principal amount of $10,000,000, and to all other existing liens, incumbrances and assessments of any nature whatsoever.

3. Said transfer and assignment, and the conveyance of the real property and the assignments of the leases hereinafter mentioned, separate instruments for which conveyance and assignments are being executed and delivered contemporaneously with this instrument, are made subject to all unpaid current obligations, bills and pledges of the said Company, including obligations incurred in the ordinary course of business of the Company, contracts for the purchase of coal and other supplies, contracts for the sale of products, pledges for charitable and other purposes, and all other current obligations, accounts and contracts of every nature whatsoever. Resolution for Rejection of Assignment of Lease Between The Indianapolis Gas Co. and Citizens as Company of Indianapolis.

83 Resolution for Rejection of Assignment of Lease Between The Indianapolis Gas Co. and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

Whereas, pursuant to rights and duties heretofore established, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, an Indiana Corporation, has this day executed and tendered to the City of Indianapolis and its Board of Directors for Utilities, instruments of transfer of all of its property, including a deed of conveyance of real estate, assignments of lease interests, and assignments of personal property, subject to the legal obligations of said Company including the obligation of a certain lease bearing date of September 30, 1913, by and between the Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, recorded in Miscellaneous Record 78 at page 257 and following in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana; and

Whereas, said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has also this day executed and tendered to the City of Indianapolis and its Board of Directors for Utilities an instrument purporting specifically to assign said The Indianapolis Gas Company lease to said City, subject to the terms and conditions contained in said lease; and

Whereas, this Board deems said lease to be onerous and disadvantageous to the City of Indianapolis, and in the discretion of this Board said lease should not be taken over, adopted, or assumed, but should be wholly rejected, its assignment not accepted, and said lease should not be recognized as one of the obligations, if such it is, of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to which any property of said Company is subjected when in the possession of the City of Indianapolis; and

Whereas, this Board in its discretion determines that the other property of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis should be accepted upon the condition that such property is not subject to any obligation to said The Indianapolis Gas Company;

Now Therefore be it Resolved By The Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, in the exercise of the discretion conferred upon it by law, and on behalf of the City of Indianapolis:

1. That the City of Indianapolis by this Board accept the tendered assignments, transfers, and conveyances of all of the property of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, an Indiana corporation, excepting, however the certain lease executed by The Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, to said Citizens Gas Company, bearing date of September 30, 1913; and on the assumption and condition that such acceptance in no way obligates the City of Indianapolis to said The Indianapolis Gas Company under said lease.

2. That the City of Indianapolis by this Board refuses to assume and be bound in any manner by the terms and provisions of said lease.

3. That the City of Indianapolis by this Board rejects and refuses to accept the assignment of said lease tendered by said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to the City.

4. That the City of Indianapolis by this Board refuses to recognize said lease as an obligation of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis which the City is bound to accept, or which in any respect whatsoever is one to which the property of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, when transferred to this City, is in any manner subject or which constitutes a charge upon such property.

5. That the following instrument be executed and served upon The Indianapolis Gas Company and recorded in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana:

Rejection of Assignment of Lease and Refusal to Assume, Take Over Or Be Bound Thereby.

The City of Indianapolis, Indiana, by its Board of Directors for Utilities of its Department of Utilities, hereby refuses to take over, adopt, or assume the certain lease bearing date of September 30, 1913, executed by The Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, to Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, an Indiana corporation, and recorded in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana, in Miscellaneous Record 78 at page 257 and following; rejects the assignment of said lease tendered to said City by said Citi-
84 zens Gas Company of Indianapolis; and refuses to recognize said lease as an obligation of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis which this City is bound to accept, or which in any respect whatsoever is one to which the property of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, when transferred to said City, is in any manner subject or which constitutes a charge thereon.

SEPARATE ANSWER OF DEFENDANT, THE INDIANAPOLIS GAS COMPANY, TO THE BILL OF COMPLAINT.

Comes now The Indianapolis Gas Company, a defendant in the above entitled cause, and for its separate answer to the Bill of Complaint therein respectfully states that:

1. Answering the first paragraph of the Bill, it admits the allegations therein set out.

2. Answering the second paragraph of the Bill, it admits the allegations therein set out.

3. Answering the third paragraph of the Bill, it admits the allegations therein set out.

4. Answering the fourth paragraph of the Bill, it admits the allegations therein set out.

5. Answering the fifth paragraph of the Bill, its admits the allegations therein set out.

6. Answering the sixth paragraph of the Bill, its admits the allegations therein set out.

7. Answering the seventh paragraph of the Bill, it admits the allegations therein set out.

95 8. Answering the eighth paragraph of the Bill, it admits the allegations therein set out.

9. Answering the ninth paragraph of the Bill, it admits the allegations therein set out.

10. Answering the tenth paragraph of the Bill, this defendant admits that at the time of the execution of said ninety-nine year lease its first mortgage bonds in the principal amount of $4,833,000 had been and were issued and outstanding and that susequent to the execution of said lease, and during the operation of its property thereunder by defendant, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, additional bonds in the principal amount of $2,048,000 were authenticated by the Trustee and delivered by this defendant to defendant, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, to reimburse said latter company for capital expenditures made upon this defendant's property. This defendant denies any knowledge or information sufficient to make answer to the allegation in this paragraph of the Bill, that its bonds sold subsequent to the execution of said lease were sold in reliance upon the validity and effect of the said lease.

11. Answering paragraph eleven, this defendant admits the allegation therein contains.

12. Answering paragraph twelve, this defendant admits the allegation therein contained.

13. Answering paragraph thirteen, this defendant admits the allegation therein contained.

14. Answering paragraph fourteen, this defendant admits the allegation therein contained.

15. Answering paragraph fifteen, this defendant admits the allegation therein contained.

16. Answering paragraph sixteen, this defendant admits the allegation therein contained.

17. Answering paragraph seventeen, this defendant admits the allegation therein contained.

18. Answering paragraph eighteen, this defendant admits the allegation therein contained.

96 19. Answering paragraph nineteen, this defendant admits the allegation therein contained.

20. In answering paragraphs twenty and twenty-one of the Bill, this defendant denies that it has ever contended or admitted that the said ninety-nine year lease was not and is not a valid and binding obligation upon this defendant, and defendants, The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and the City of Indianapolis as assignee and successor in trust to said latter company.

21. Answering paragraph twenty-two of the Bill, this defendant says that it is not sufficiently informed concerning what is alleged in said paragraph to make answer thereto.

22. Answering the twenty-third paragraph of the Bill, this defendant admits the defendant, City of Indianapolis, through its Department of Utilities, has denied any liability and obligation as assignee and successor to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, under the terms and provisions of said ninety-nine year lease, and did so notify this defendant by letter. This defendant further admits that it undertook with defendant, City of Indianapolis through its Department of Utilities, negotiations looking to a settlement of the controversy concerning the use of its said property covered by said lease, but it denies that it at any time abandoned or waived or negotiated to abandon or waive any rights which at law or in equity belong to this plaintiff or the trust which it represents, or to affect them in any way unless with the full consent of plaintiff and the bondholders for which it is trustee.

23. Answering the twenty-fourth paragraph of the Bill, this defendants admits the execution of an agreement with the City of Indianapolis providing that if said City through its Department of Utilties continued the operations of this defendant's property pending the settlement of the controversy as to the said City's obligations as assignee and successor to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis under said ninety-nine years lease, and should deposit certain funds in the Indiana National Bank, it should not thereby waive any right it might have to deny that said lease is 97 an obligation binding upon it, if such rights there be, substantially as alle, d in said paragraph of the Bill; but it denies that in so doing it gave any consent to the withholding of payment of any interest on any bonds, or deprived or agreed to the deprivation of this plaintiff, or the holders of bonds for whom it is suing, of any valuable property right or security underlying said bonds. This defendant further says that said agreement, providing that no waiver of any rights by any party thereto should result from such operation of the defendant's property, was entered into by it to prevent a failure and break-down of public service in the furnishing and distribution of gas to the citizens and gas users of the City of Indianapolis, which in the then belief of this defendant appeared to be otherwise imminent and unavoidable. By the terms of said agreement all rights under and pursuant to the terms and provisions of said ninety-nine year lease, which properly belong to this plaintiff as Trustee under said Mortgage Deed of Trust, this defendant believes and therefore avers so far as could be done if said purpose to avert a break-down of said public service be accomplished, were expressly reserved and protected.

24. Answering the twenty-fifth paragraph of the Bill, this defendant denies that it is now negotiating with defendant, City of Indianapolis, for the use of its property by said City under any agreement, lease or arrangement which deprives or would deprive this plaintiff or the holders of this defendant's outstanding bonds of any rights or privileges which either at law or in equity properly inure to them by the terms and provisions of said Mortgage Deed of Trust. This defendant has at all times and does now, admit the obligation and liability of its entire property, both real and personal, to the performance of the terms and provisions of the said Mortgage Deed of Trust, and this obligation and liability it has never at any time denied or sought to evade by any agreement with any co-defendant in this cause, nor does it do so now.

98 25. This defendant denies each and every allegation in the Bill not hereinabove admitted, controverted or specifically denied.

Wherefore this defendant denies that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief prayed for in the Bill of Complaint against this defendant, and prays that as to it the Bill of Complaint be dismissed with costs.

The City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation; William J. Mooney, A. Dallas Hitz, Alfred M. Glossbrenner, Edward W. Harris and Charles S. Rauh, as Members of the Board of Trustees for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis; Henry L. Dithmer, Broadhurst Elsey, Fred W. Jungclaus, Roy Sahm, David J. Angus, Isaac E. Woodard and Russell J. Ryan, as Members of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, defendants in the above entitled cause, for their separate and several answer to the plaintiff's bill of complaint and by way of counter-claim say:

1. These answering defendants admit all of the averments contained in subdivision 1 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

2. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in subdivision 2 of plaintiff's bill of complaint that jurisdiction is sought to be aserted in this cause on the ground of diversity of citizenship between the plaintiff and all of the defendants; that this cause is of a civil nature and that the matter in controversy herein, exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of $3,000; but these answering defendants aver on information and belief that this action is a collusive one in which jurisdiction is sought to be conferred upon this court over a controversy existing solely between the defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, and a citizen and resident of the Southern District of Indiana, Indianapolis Division, and these answering defendants, all of whom are citizens and residents of said Southern District of Indiana, Indianapolis Division, which is a controversy over which this Court has no jurisdiction, by reason of diversity of citizenship or otherwise, all as hereinafter in Subdivision 26 of this answer more particularly averred.

3. These answering defendants admit the averments 102 contained in subdivision 3 of plaintiff's bill of complaint that the plaintiff is Trustee under a deed of trust executed on the 1st day of October, 1902, by defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company, to secure the payment of the principal and interest of certain first mortgage bonds of said The Indianapolis Gas Company, but deny that the plaintiff has any right to maintain this suit as trustee for the reasons hereinafter in subdivision 26 of this answer more particularly averred.

These answering defendants deny, on information and belief, that this suit is brought by plaintiff as Trustee for and on behalf of the stockholders and owners of said bonds and pursuant to the rights granted to the original Trustees and their successor or succesors under said deed of trust.

These answering defendants have no knowledge as to whether this suit was commenced and is attempted to be prosecuted at the special instance and request of the owners and holders of $415,000 in principal amount of said bonds and neither admit nor deny said averments, but request that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof; but these answering defendants aver on information and belief that if said request was made it was a part of a collusive arrangement to attempt to confer jurisdiction on this Court which did not otherwise exist, all as hereinafter in subdivision 26 of this answer more particularly averred.

These answering defendants admit that the plaintiff seeks a declaratory judgment of this Court to determine and fix the rights of the plaintiff as mortgagee and as Trustee and to determine the rights of the plaintiff and the obligations of the several defendants under or growing out of a certain lease executed on the 30th day of September, 1913, by and between the defendants, The Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a copy of which lease marked Exhibit B is made a part of plaintiff's bill of complaint and admit that the plaintiff seeks further relief by way of injunction; but these defendants deny on information and belief that the plaintiff has any right to maintain such an action, deny that it is entitled to any relief whatever, and deny that there is any necessity for injunctive relief to preserve or protect the property and corpus of said trust, to prevent loss, waste and damage to the same or to prevent irreparable loss and damage to the holders of said bonds.

These answering defendants admit that a real and actual controversy exists as to the binding force and effect of said lease of September 30, 1913, but they allege:

(a) That such controversy exists between these answering defendants and The Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, and aver that the plaintiff has no legal interest in or right to be heard in connection with such controversy; and

(b) That such controversy exists only as to the binding force and effect of said lease of September 30, 1913, upon these answering defendants after the transfer of the property and assets formerly held by the Citizens Gas Company as Trustee of a public charitable trust to the City of Indianapolis as the successor Trustee of said trust, which transfer was made on September 9, 1935, and allege that as to these defend-
103 ants, no controversy ever existed as to the binding force and effect of said lease for and during the term of trusteeship of said Citizens Gas Company.

These answering defendants deny on information and belief that the plaintiff has no plain, complete or adequate remedy at law and that adequate relief can be administered only in a Court of Equity, but aver that the plaintiff is not entitled to any relief either at law or in equity in connection with this controversy and has no standing to maintain this action.

4. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in subdivision 4 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

5. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in subdivision 5 of plaintiff's bill of complaint, but in that connection allege:

That the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was not the owner in its individual right of the property used by it in the manufacture and distribution of gas to the inhabitants of Indianapolis, but was merely the Trustee of a public charitable trust; that the instruments creating that trust, including the franchise, articles of incorporation and by-laws of said Citizen Gas Company of Indianapolis, are made a part of plaintiff's bill of complaint, identified as Exhibit C and are by reference made a part of this answer.

These answering defendants aver on information and belief that prior to the 30th day of September, 1913, the plaintiff as trustee, and defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company, either had actual knowledge of, or were bound in law by knowledge of, the following facts in connection with the Citizens Gas Company and its affairs:

First. Of the provisions of the ordinance of the City of Indianapolis approved August 30, 1905, whereby a franchise was granted to certain individuals therein named on the condition that they should organize a corporation to carry out the purposes of said franchise.

Second. Of the assignment of said franchise made by the individual grantees thereof to the Citizens Gas Company on May 24, 1906.

Third. Of the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis which were adopted on May 23, 1906.

Fourth. Of the by-laws of the Citizens Gas Company approved January 13, 1908.

Fifth. Of all amendments made to said by-laws prior to September 30, 1913.

Sixth. Of an additional ordinance of the City of Indianapolis approved May 22, 1912.

Seventh. That the Citizens Gas Company was the initial Trustee named in said franchise contract and that at the end of the period of said franchise and, to wit: on the 30th day of August, 1930, was obligated, when the conditions fixed in the franchise contract precedent to the transfer had been complied with, to transfer the property operated by it as Trustee in the manufacture and distribution of gas to the City of Indianapolis and that all rights of the Citizens Gas Company as such Trustee would terminate approximately 77 years before the expiration of said 99 year lease.

104 These answering defendants further aver that at the time of the execution of said lease of September 30, 1913, substantial doubt existed as to the right of the Citizens Gas

Company of Indianapolis to execute a lease which would be binding beyond the term for which it was to operate said property as Trustee and that in recognition of such doubt there was inserted in said lease of September 30, 1913, the following provision:

"In the event it should be determined by a court of final jurisdiction that this contract is ultra vires or void because of the length of the term created, and that such term is in excess of the authority of either party hereto to contract, then this lease shall nevertheless be binding upon the parties hereto for the lengthiest term which the parties hereto might lawfully contract."

These answering defendants aver on information and belief that the above quoted provision was inserted in said lease at the request of defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company, and was drafted and phrased by its then counsel, Ferdinand Winter.

These answering defendants aver that such provision constituted notice to the plaintiff's predecessor trustee, to plaintiff and to each owner and holder of the stock and bonds of said The Indianapolis Gas Company, whether issued or purchased before or after September 30, 1913, that a doubt existed as to the right of the Citizens Gas Company to enter into a lease with The Indianapolis Gas Company beyond the term of the franchise hereinbefore referred to approved by the Common Council of the City of Indianapolis on August 30, 1905; and that neither the plaintiff, nor The Indianapolis Gas Company, nor any owner of the bonds or stock of The Indianapolis Gas Company can in equity be permitted to assert that it or he acquired rights without knowledge that a serious doubt existed as to the validity and binding effect of said lease after the transfer of said trust property to the said City as successor trustee, upon the City of Indianapolis as such or as Trustee, or upon the beneficiaries of said Public Charitable Trust which consist of the present and prospective users of gas in the City of Indianapolis.

That said lease of September 30, 1913, while containing all of the provisions averred in the fifth paragraph of the plaintiff's bill of complaint also contains many other conditions burdensome in character and said lease although conceded for the purpose of this litigation to be valid for the period of said franchise contract and until the property for which the Citizens Gas Company was Trustee was conveyed to the City of Indianapolis as Trustee was ultra vires, invalid and void after the expiration of the term of the trusteeship of the Citizens Gas Company and the time necessary to transfer said property to the City of Indianapolis as successor trustee for the specific reasons and on the specific grounds hereinafter in Subdivision 27 of this answer more particularly set forth.

6. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in the first two literary paragraphs of subdivision 6 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

These answering defendants deny that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has at all times continued to 105 exist and operate under the provisions of its franchise and its Articles of Association which embodied the terms of said franchise but allege the facts to be as follows:

(a) That from the date of the organization of said Citizens Gas Company it continued to exist and operate under the terms of said franchise until August 27, 1921, at which time, pursuant to the terms of an Indiana Statute Authorizing it so to do, it filed its declaration of surrender of said franchise and accepted an indeterminate permit with the result that from said date until September 9, 1935, it continued to operate as a public utility under an indeterminate permit, but that said indeterminate permit did not have the effect of modifying or rendering nugatory the terms of said franchise contract insofar as they created said Public Charitable Trust and defined the terms and conditions thereof, the rights, duties and liabilities of the Citizens Gas Company as original Trustee of the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee and of the present and prospective gas consumers of Indianapolis as the beneficiaries of said trust.

(b) That on the 9th day of September, 1935, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis transferred its gas producing and distributing plant to the City of Indianapolis and thereupon ceased to be Trustee of said Public Charitable Trust and has not at any time since said date had any rights, powers, duties or responsibilities as such Trustee.

(c) That under the terms and provisions of subdivision (g) of said franchise contract approved by the Common Council of the City of Indianapolis August 30, 1905, the duty now rests upon said Citizens Gas Company to wind up its corporate affairs and dissolve and although steps have not been taken for this purpose, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis is legally bound and obligated voluntarily to dissolve its corporate existence and has not right to continue such existence beyond the time reasonably necessary for the purpose of winding up its affairs, all of which can properly and lawfully be done within one year from this date.

These answering defendants admit that the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis were amended on August 27, 1921, and that by such amendment the authorized stock of the Company was increased to $4,000,000, of which $2,000,000 was to be common stock and $2,000,000 preferred stock, but they deny that the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company were ever amended so as to permit the issuance of mortgage bonds by said corporation.

These answering defendants aver that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis issued its first mortgage bonds under a mortgage or deed of trust dated July 1, 1912, and that on September 9, 1935, there were outstanding in the hands of the public $2,745,000 par value of said mortgage bonds which had been issued not only without any authority having been granted so to do by its Articles of Incorporation but in violation of the express provisions of subdivision (i) of the franchise contract adopted by the City of Indianapolis which required that upon the expiration of the franchise period that if the term thereof should terminate without the payment of the certificates of beneficial interest to-106 gether with dividends thereon at the rate of ten per cent per annum the Board of Directors of the Citizens Gas Company

"shall mortgage its gas plant and property for such sum as to enable it to pay its stock or certificate holders an amount which with what has already been paid will equal the full amount of such subscription with dividends estimated at the rate of ten per cent per annum thereon and with the proceeds thereof, or with the mortgage notes so issued in proper amounts, pay off and discharge the amounts due such certificate holders and convey said plant to said City subject to such obligations and other legal obligations against said Company; provided, however, that by the terms of said mortgage such obligation shall bear interest not exceeding six per cent per annum and be payable on or before 10 years from date of execution."

That said provision above quoted was intended to insure the payment of the certificates of beneficial interest issued by the Voting Trustees of the Citizens Gas Company and to enable the City of Indianapolis to pay off the precedent obligations against said trust property at the date of the expiration of the franchise contract.

That on August 30, 1930, when said franchise contract expired by its terms said precedent obligations of the Citizens Gas Company had not been discharged and there was due thereon at that time to the owners of preferred stock and to the certificate holders of said Citizens Gas Company a sum of approximately $3,500,000.

That the mortgage so executed by the Citizens Gas Company and the bonds issued thereunder were void and unenforceable as such because they were issued without proper corporate authority and in direct violation of controlling provisions of the franchise contract and said public charitable trust; that these answering defendants were advised by counsel that because the moneys obtained from the sale of said bonds were used for the benefit of the Citizens Gas Company and for the purchase of property which was added to its plant an equitable lien was thereby created on the plant and property for which the Citizens Gas Company was Trustee and as a result thereof the City of Indianapolis has paid on account thereof the principal on said bonds with interest to September 15, 1935, and not thereafter, on all of said $2,745,000 face value of bonds except $44,000, which have not yet been presented for payment and holds itself ready to pay the remainder of said bonds with interest to September 15, 1935, upon surrender of the same.

These answering defendants admit that all the rights, property and assets acquired by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis were acquired by it as Trustee for the benefit of the present and prospective users of the City of Indianapolis, but deny that the trust is for the benefit of all of the inhabitants of Indianapolis; they further admit that said trust property was acquired subject to a charge in favor of the stockholders, creditors and other persons having valid claims and rights against the property of said trust and admit that from the time of the creation of said Citizens Gas Company to September 9, 1935, said Company was the Trustee of 107 a public charitable trust for the benefit of those inhabitants of the City of Indianapolis who were or might become gas users; said trust being subject only to such charges in favor of stockholders and creditors as hereinbefore referred to.

7. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in Subdivisions 7 and 8 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint except that they:

(a) Deny that the Public Service Commission of Indiana either directly or indirectly attempted to approve or did approve the lease of September 30, 1913, executed between The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company as valid and binding upon the City of Indianapolis after the property operated by the Citizens Gas Company should have been transferred to the City of Indianapolis in accordance with the terms of the franchise contract and public charitable trust above referred to.

(b) Deny that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was made a party to said proceedings before the Public Service Commission as Trustee of a Public Charitable Trust; and aver that all proceedings had before the Commission and the order entered by the Commission were had and conducted upon the theory that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was the owner of said property for the period of its corporate life and thereafter that the City of Indianapolis was the owner of the property.

(c) Deny that said Frank S. Fishback ever asserted any rights as the beneficiary of a Public Charitable Trust; and aver that said Fishback originally appeared in said proceedings before the Public Service Commission of Indiana solely as a stockholder of the Citizens Gas Company and a taxpayer of the City of Indianapolis.

(d) Deny that the City of Indianapolis appeared in said proceedings before the Public Service Commission as Successor Trustee of said Public Charitable Trust; and aver that no issue was presented to or heard or determined by the Public Service Commission of Indiana involving the existence of a Public Charitable Trust or the rights of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis as Initial Trustee, of the City of Indianapolis as Succeeding Trustee, or of the beneficiaries of such trust consisting of the present and prospective gas consumers of Indianapolis.

8. These answering defendants aver that the approval of said lease of September 30, 1913, by the Public Service Commission of Indiana is not res adjudicata as to the binding effect of said lease upon these answering defendants subsequent to September 9, 1935, for each of the following reasons:

First. Said lease of September 30, 1913, which was submitted to the Commission for its approval contained in subdivision 32 thereof the provisions hereinbefore in subdivsion 5 of this answer set out were to the general effect that if for any reason the lease was ultra vires or void because of the length of the term created and in excess of the authority of either party to said lease, then that the lease should be binding for the term for which the parties might lawfully contract. The effect of the approval of the Public Service Commission of the lease under the law of Indiana could 108 and did extend no further than the approval of such lease for the period of time for which the parties might lawfully contract.

Second. The statutes of Indiana existing and in effect on September 30, 1913, did not attempt to confer any judicial power upon the Public Service Commission of this State. Under the provisions of the Constitution of Indiana and particularly Section 1 of Article III thereof, which was in force on September 30, 1913, and continuously since that date, the powers of Government are divided into three separate departments, the legislative, the executive, including the administrative, and the judicial; and no person charged with official duties under one of these departments has any power to exercise any of the functions of another such department. Under said constitutional provisions the Public Service Commission of Indiana could not lawfully be granted any judicial power and was without authority to hear, determine or decide justiciable controversies. That the question of whether a Public Charitable Trust existed in the property operated by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the further question as to whether the Trustee of such a Public Charitable Trust had the right to become the Lessee in a lease extending for approximately 77 years after the termination of its trusteeship, which lease contained onerous and burdensome conditions, were judicial questions which under the Statutes and Constitution of the State of Indiana the Public Service Commission of Indiana was without authority to hear and determine; and its approval of said lease of September 30, 1913, did not and could not adjudicate either or both of said questions.

Third. At the time said Public Service Commission of Indiana approved said lease of September 30, 1913, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was operating the gas manufacturing and distributing plant for which it was the Trustee and it was not for more than twenty years thereafter that said property was conveyed to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee. Any attempt on the part of the Public Service Commission of Indiana to hear, determine or adjudicate the validity of said lease of September 30, 1913, after the property of said Public Charitable Trust should have been transferred to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee was without any legal or binding force whatever and could not operate as an estoppel or res adjudicata.

Fourth. The Public Service Commission of Indiana under the Statutes and Constitution of this State is purely an administrative body with no authority to hear, determine or decide justiciable controversies and its act and order approving said lease of September 30, 1913, amounted to no more than its determination that the terms of the lease were at that time in its opinion advantageous and the approval of said Public Service Commission thereto should be given and said order of the Public Service Commission has no further or different legal effect.

9. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in subdivision 9 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint, but in connection therewith aver:

(a) That in said action commenced by the said Frank S. Fishback in the Superior Court of Marion County, Indi-109 ana, such steps were taken as that a judgment was entered against him by said Superior Court in said cause on the 15th day of February, 1921, and that the appeal prosecuted therefrom to the Supreme Court of Indiana by the said Fishback was dismissed on the 8th day of March, 1923.

(b) That the Citizens Gas Company was made a party defendant to such litigation not as a Trustee, but in its individual capacity and that no claim was made or asserted in such litigation that the property held and operated by the Citizens Gas Company was that of a Public Charitable Trust.

(c) That the City of Indianapolis was made a party defendant to said suit individually and not as Trustee.

These answering defendants aver that the judgment, order and decree of the Marion Superior Court in the case of Frank S. Fishback vs. The Public Service Commission of Indiana, referred to in subdivision 9 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint is not res adjudicata and does not prevent consideration of any question involved in this cause against these defendants, for each of the following reasons:

First. Under the Statutes in effect at the time of the c-mencement of said action and continuously thereafter until the appeal of Fishback was dismissed by the Supreme Court of Indiana no appeal could be taken from any order of the Public Service Commission of Indiana except from an order fixing rates or regulations, practices, acts or service; that the action commenced by Fishback and prosecuted by him in said Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana, was not an appeal under a statute but was a suit in equity to set aside and vacate in its entirety the order entered by the Public Service Commission of Indiana in approving said lease of September 30, 1913; that the sole question which could be lawfully heard and adjudicated by the Court in such action was whether said order of the Public Service Commission was valid or invalid; that inasmuch, as heretofore averred, the Public Service Commission could exercise no judicial power and had no authority to determine or adjudicate the validity of said lease, the Superior Court of Marion County, in the case commenced and maintained by the said Fishback could not adjudicate or determine the validity of said lease.

Second. The cause of action in the Fishback case and the cause of action in this case are essentially different in that in the Fishback case the sole question involved was whether the administrative order of the Public Service Commission approving the lease was valid or invalid, while here, the question involved is the binding effect of such lease on these answering defendants subsequent to September 9, 1935, on which date the property formerly operated by the Citizens Gas Company as Trustee was transferred to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee. Inasmuch as the causes of action are different, the Fishback decree cannot be res adjudicata of any questions except those actually litigated therein and these answering defendants aver that none of the questions involved in this case were litigated or decided in the Fishback case.

110 Third. At the date of the rendition of the judgment of the Marion Superior Court in the Fishback case and at the time Fishback's appeal was dismissed by the Supreme Court of Indiana there was not in effect in the State of Indiana any declaratory judgment statute and the Superior Court was without power to determine or decide questions which might arise in the future, but which had not then arisen, that is to say, the binding effect of said lease of September 30, 1913, against these answering defendants subsequent to the date of the transfer of the trust property to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee.

Fourth. That in said Fishback case it was pointed out to the Court in the demurrer of the defendant therein filed to the sixth paragraph of plaintiff's complaint, in referring to the lease of September 30, 1913, between the Citizens Gas Company and The Indianapolis Gas Company, that "the lease set out in the complaint itself provides that if for any reason the lease should be held to be for too long a term it should be valid for such length of time as a lease could lawfully be made." That said Fishback case was heard and determined on the theory that whether the said lease was valid for its entire term or not, the action of the Public Service Commission in approving the same could not be vacated or set aside.

Fifth. That the estoppel of the Fishback judgment in law extends only to facts in issue as they existed at the time judgment was rendered and does not prevent a re-examination of the same questions between the same parties where in the interval the facts have changed or new facts have occurred which may alter the legal rights or relations of the parties thereto; that since the judgment and decree in the Fishback case facts have occurred which alter the rights and relations of the parties hereto, towit: the transfer of the trust property to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee on September 9, 1935, and the judgment and decree rendered in the Fishback case is therefore not determinative of the rights of the parties thereto as of this date.

Sixth. That in said Fishback case both the City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company were defendants, but on the pleadings in that case no issue was raised and none was heard or determined as between the said defendants involving the validity of said lease of September 30, 1913.

Seventh. That in said Fishback case all of the defendants thereto were sued in their individual capacities and not as Trustees and no issue was heard, determined or decided by the Court involving the existence of said Public Charitable Trust or the effect of that legal status upon the validity of the lease of September 30, 1913, upon the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee or upon the beneficiaries of said trust.

10. These answering defendants admit the averments of subdivision 10 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint that at the date of the execution and delivery of said 99 year lease, $4,833,000 total face amount of The Indianapolis Gas Company first mortgage bonds had been issued and were outstanding; but allege that all of these bonds had been sold prior to the execution of said lease and without any knowl-111 edge or belief upon the part of the purchasers that such a lease would be executed.

These answering defendants further admit that subsequent to the time of such approval, upon the request of The Indianapolis Gas Company, additional bonds in the principal sum of $2,048,000 were authenticated by the Trustee and were delivered by The Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, pursuant to the provision of said lease, for the purpose of reimbursing said Citizens Gas Company for capital expenditures on account of extensions and betterments to the plant and system of The Indianapolis Gas Company theretofore made by the Citizens Gas Company as Lessee, all or substantially all of which bonds were sold by the Citizens Gas Company as provided in said lease. But these answering defendants aver that the Citizens Gas Company was only reimbursed to the extent of ninety per cent of the expenditures so made by it for improvements in and additions to the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company and that the property so added to the plant of The Indianapolis Gas Company was at the time the said additions were made reasonably worth the entire respective sums expended therefor by the Citizens Gas Company.

These answering defendants admit that said additional bonds were sold and distributed, but how widely they do not know. They deny that said bonds were acquired and purchased in reliance upon the proposition that they were secured by a valid and enforceable 99 year lease to a responsible corporation and that said corporation, its successors and assigns were legally obligated to pay the interest thereon as a part of the rental under said lease, or that the validity of said lease had been judicially and finally determined by the Public Service Commission of Indiana and by the courts of Indiana.

On the contrary, these answering defendants aver that at the time said additional bonds aggregating $2,048,000 were sold and delivered the purchasers thereof were charged with notice by reason of the provisions of said lease of September 30, 1913, and particularly subdivision 32 thereof hereinbefore in subdivision 5 of this answer set out in full, that a serious doubt existed as to the validity and enforceability of said lease after the expiration of said franchise contract and that such purchasers purchased and acquired said bonds, not only without any belief in or reliance upon the fact that said 99 year lease was legally enforceable but charged with notice as to the probable invalidity thereof after the transfer of the trust property to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee and that said bondholders cannot now be heard to assert that these answering defendants are thereby estopped to contest the validity of said lease subsequent to September 9, 1935.

These answering defendants further aver that the said lease executed by The Indianapolis Gas Company to Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis under date of September 30, 1913, was on or about such date recorded in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana, in Miscellaneous Record 78 and page 257 and following of the records in such office; such recordation being in the time and manner required by law for notice to all concerned of the existence and contents of such lease.

112 That as hereinbefore averred the validity of said lease after the expiration of the term of the trusteeship of the Citizens Gas Company had never been determined by the Public Service Commission of Indiana or the Courts of Indiana either by administrative order or judicial decree and said bondholders could not have relied upon any such order or decree.

11. With respect to subdivision 11 of the bill of complaint, these answering defendants admit that the plant and property of The Indianapolis Gas Company was operated by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis from November 28, 1913, until September 9, 1935, when possession thereof was delivered to the City of Indianapolis, but aver that the operation by the Citizens Gas Company was as the Trustee of a Public Charitable Trust. They further admit that the operation referred to was under the terms of said lease of September 30, 1913, but for the reasons hereinafter in subdivision 27 hereof more specifically stated, they deny that said lease was valid for the full term of 99 years, and aver that it was only valid, if at all, only until the expiration of said franchise contract and until the trust property was conveyed by the Citizens Gas Company to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee.

These answering defendants admit that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis accepted and enjoyed the use of the property granted under said lease of September 30, 1913; admit that it was thereby relieved from the waste and expense of competition, but deny that it was relieved of the duplication of facilities; admit that it has operated and maintained the leased plant and property as a unified part of its plant and system; but in this connection the answering defendants aver that in such operation the Citizens Gas Company was acting solely as the trustee of a Public Charitable Trust.

These answering defendants further aver that The Indianapolis Gas Company has during all of said time received the rentals due it under the terms of said lease; that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has paid all taxes in connection therewith and all other burdens imposed upon it by the terms of said lease, and that the payments so made to or in behalf of The Indianapolis Gas Company during the period from 1913 to 1935, inclusive, were as follows:

These answering defendants further admit that the City of Indianapolis and its gas consumers had the benefit and advantage of the operation of said leased property, but deny that over the period of the lease any profits have been produced thereby and deny that the Public Charitable Trust has been protected thereby. On the contrary these answering defendants aver:

(a) That the payments made to The Indianapolis Gas Company during the period of years above referred to, viz.: from 1913 to 1935 were largely in excess of the fair value of the use of said property during said time.

(b) That during many of the years referred to Citizens Gas Company was operated at a loss and one of the factors contributing materially to the existence of such loss was the excessive rental and other considerations required to be paid to and on behalf of said The Indianapolis Gas Company under the terms of said lease.

(c) That said lease is presently burdensome and not advantageous to said trust property, all as hereinafter in subdivision 27 hereof more specifically alleged.

(d) That the bondholders and stockholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company have benefited to an inequitable, unfair and unreasonable extent because of payments made to them or on their behalf under the terms of said lease.

12. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in the 12th subdivision of the plaintiff's bill of complaint, but allege in connection therewith that the Citi-
114 zens Gas Company of Indianapolis by the execution of its mortgage hereinbefore described had disabled itself from performing the demand made upon it by the City of Indianapolis to mortgage its property, and that as hereinbefore averred said mortgage was invalidly executed and void but the existence of said mortgage as a practical proposition destroyed the ability of the Citizens Gas Company to provide funds for the purpose of paying off the precedent charges against said Gas Company.

13. These answering defendants admit the averments of subdivision 13 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint except they allege that it was finally adjudged and determined that the beneficiaries of said Public Charitable Trust were those inhabitants of the City of Indianapolis who were then or who might thereafter become gas users, and aver, for reasons in subdivision 20 of this answer specifically stated, that the decision in said Todd case is not res adjudicata of any question involved in this case.

14. These answering defendants admit that as alleged in subdivision 14 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint one Allen G. Williams brought suit as an inhabitant and taxpayer on behalf of himself and other resident taxpayers of the City of Indianapolis in the Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana, and aver that the complaint in that case alleged the following:

(a) That a Public Charitable Trust existed in the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and that the plaintiff was entitled to a determination that such a trust existed.

(b) That a conspiracy was formed in 1913 to destroy said Public Charitable Trust and among the overt acts of said conspiracy were procuring the enactment of the Public Service Commission Act of Indiana, the approval by that Commission of the lease between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the Citizens Gas Company, the surrender by the Citizens Gas Company of its franchise and the acceptance of an indeterminate permit and the obtaining of a degree from the United States District Court at Indianapolis by the Citizens Gas Company enjoining the enforcement of confiscatory rates.

(c) That the lease between the two companies was void because:

First. It was in contravention of a contract clause of the Federal Constitution.

Second. That inasmuch as the Public Service Commission Act was invalid it had no authority to approve the lease and its approval was a denial of due process in violation of the fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Third. That the lease was executed as the result of a conspiracy, the object and purpose of which was to destroy the Citizens Gas Company for the benefit of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

These answering defendants admit that the complaint in said Williams case also sought the appointment of a receiver to administer said trust and that the defendants hereto, the City of Indianapolis, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, The Indianapolis Gas Company and the plaintiff were made defendants in said cause of action and each of them appeared therein and filed a demurrer to the bill of complaint, which demurrer was duly sustained and final judgment rendered in favor of defendants in said cause; and further admit that on appeal to the Supreme Court of Indiana the three contentions which are set out in subdivision 14 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint herein, were made by the plaintiff Williams, in said cause, but allege that said Williams in his complaint and in the proceedings of the Supreme Court of Indiana contended that said lease of September 30, 1913, was invalid for the reasons herein set forth and that there was not presented in the said Williams complaint nor heard, or adjudicated by the Court any issue whatever on the question of the validity of said lease, after the time of the transfer of the property of the trust to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee.

These answering defendants further admit that the Supreme Court of Indiana affirmed the decision in said Williams case, but they deny that the Supreme Court determined or adjudicated the questions involved in this case as to the validity of said lease.

These answering defendants aver that although The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis and the plaintiff in this cause were defendants in said Williams case, that none of said defendants presented for the determination of the Court any issue as between themselves or any of them as to the validity of said lease.

These answering defendants further aver that the City of Indianapolis filed a motion in said Williams case to strike out parts of the complaint in which appears the following statement:

"The validity of the Public Charitable Trust set up in the complaint is in no wise affected by the validity of such lease. If the lease is valid the leasehold created thereby constitutes a part of the Public Charitable Trust and is subject to be administered in the same way as property owned by the Citizens Gas Company in its own right. If for any reason the lease is invalid, it would fall without the scope of the trust."

These answering defendants aver that the decree in the Williams case is not res adjudicata as to the validity or binding effect of said lease of September 30, 1913, upon these answering defendants after the transfer of the property of the trust to the City of Indianapolis as Succeeding Trustee on September 9, 1935, for each of the following reasons:

First. The estoppel of a judgment extends only to the facts in issue as they existed at the time the judgment was rendered and does not prevent a re-examination of the same questions between the same parties where in the interval the facts have changed or new facts have occurred which may alter the legal rights or relations of the parties. These answering defendants aver that the Williams case was heard, tried, determined and adjudicated prior to September 9, 1935, and that the facts and circumstances have been altered and changed since the date of said adjudication by reason of the transfer of the property of the trust on said last named date to the City of Indianapolis as Succeeding Trustee.

116 Second. That the cause of action involved in the Williams case was different from that involved in this case in that a taxpayer of the City of Indianapolis therein attempted to procure a determination of the invalidity of said lease on the ground that the execution of the same violated the Constitution of the United States and of the State of Indiana and the execution of the same had been obtained as the result of a conspiracy; that none of the questions involved in this cause were actually litigated in the Williams case or passed upon or determined by the Court in said case. Inasmuch as the causes of action in the two cases are not the same it is only matter which were actually determined and litigated in the Williams case which could bind any of the parties thereto and the judgment in that case is therefore not res adjudicata on the questions here involved.

Third. In the Williams case said The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis were co-defendants. As heretofore alleged the causes of action in the Williams case and in this case were different. No issue was presented for determination or adjudicated in said Williams case as between the co-defendants thereto and under such circumstances the estoppel of the Williams' judgment is applicable only as between those who were adverse parties in that case.

15.* These answering defendants admit the averments of subdivision 15 of plaintiff's bill of complaint in the year 1935 the defendant, City of Indianapolis, offered for sale and sold $8,000,000 aggregate face amount of the City of Indianapolis Gas Plant Revenue 4½% Bonds and that said bonds were sold for the purpose, among other things, of permitting the City of Indianapolis to discharge certain precedent obligations of the Citizens Gas Company as initial trustee and thereupon to acquire certain property owned by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis as Trustee of said Public Charitable Trust. These defendants aver that the facts in this connection are as follows:

(a) That in pursuance of resolutions adopted in April, 1935, by the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis a public offering for the sale of said bonds was made on May 4, 1935; that notice of such public offering was caused to be published in the Indianapolis Star, Indianapolis Times and the Indianapolis News, three newspapers of general circulation in the City of Indianapolis and that such substantial publicity was given to such offering not only in the papers above mentioned but in financial publications generally throughout the United States; that no acceptable bid was received on May 4th, 1935, and thereafter by a resolution of said Board of Directors adopted May 7th, 1935, another public offering of said gas plant revenue bonds was directed to be made on May 28th, 1935; that notice of such public offering was published in said three newspapers on May 11th, 1935, and substantial publicity of said offer was contained in news items in the leading financial papers in the United States.

(b) That the joint bid of Halsey, Stuart & Co., and Otis & Co., for said bonds, which was submitted at the time fixed in said offering, was accepted by the Department of Util-
117 ities and the City of Indianapolis on May 29, 1935, and the proceeds of the bond issue were received on June 27, 1935.

(c) That a copy of the notice published by the City Controller of the City of Indianapolis pursuant to said resolution adopted May 7th, 1935, which is substantially identical with the notice first published, is attached hereto, marked Exhibit A and made a part of this answer. That in said notice the following statement was made about the use of the proceeds of said bonds:

"The proceeds of such bonds are to be used for the taking over of certain property owned by Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and/or in which it has an interest, including the redemption or extinguishment of its capital stock and/or for the payment of certain of its obligations and for the necessary expense incurred in connection therewith, including the expense of the city incident to obtaining such funds, as well as for the purpose of making certain betterments, improvements, extensions and additions to such property."

These answering defendants deny that the City of Indianapolis made any representation in said public offering that upon the acquisition of the property the City of Indianapolis would control the business, supplying the entire domestic and commercial gas requirements of the City of Indianapolis and its suburbs, or that the Citizens Gas Company held a lease for 99 years covering the properties and business of The Indianapolis Gas Company, thereby giving it the control of the entire gas business of the City of Indianapolis and vicinity; or that the property covered by said lease from The Indianapolis Gas Company had a depreciated physical value of $9,181,960 and a reproduction value of $12,734,090 as against which the capital value of said Company's outstanding first consolidated mortgage 5% gold bonds was $6,881,000 and the capital value of its outstanding stock was $2,000,000; or that upon the acquisition of the entire property operated by the Citizens Gas Company the City of Indianapolis would cause the same to be continuously operated as a gas system in an efficient manner and at a reasonable cost and would use all reasonable efforts to resist competition and maintain the exclusive right to serve gas in the City of Indianapolis and in Marion County and in the towns therein.

These answering defendants allege that after said revenue bonds were sold the purchasers thereof issued a circular, a copy of which marked Exhibit B is filed herewith and made a part of this answer; that in said circular it is stated that an appraisal made by an independent engineer as of January 1, 1935, showed the cost of reproduction new and the depreciated physical value of the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company to be in the amount alleged in Subdivision 15 of plaintiff's bill of complaint, but these answering defendants aver that such appraisal was made by an employe of the purchaser of the bonds; that these answering defendants had nothing to do with the making of said appraisal and have never represented, publicly or otherwise, to any person that the values of the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company were as therein stated, but on the contrary have always claimed and now claim that the plant and property of The Indianapolis Gas Company, both its cost of reproduction new and its depreciated physical value, are many millions of dollars less than the figures stated in said circular. That none of these answering defendants had anything to do with the printing, publication of said circular identified as Exhibit B and that the only representations made by the City of Indianapolis or these answering defendants in connection therewith were those set out in the published notice identified as Exhibit A.

These answering defendants further aver that prior to September 9, 1935, and before the transfer of the property and assets for which the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was Trustee to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee and towit, on the 10th day of July, 1935, The Indianapolis Gas Company was notified in writing by the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis that the City of Indianapolis denied that the lease of September 30, 1913, was enforceable against it after the transfer of said property to said city; and said The Indianapolis Gas Company took no steps to prevent said transfer being made.

16. These answering defendants deny the averments of subdivision 16 of the bill of complaint that following the sale of said gas plant revenue bonds prior to September 9, 1935, the City of Indianapolis paid or provided for the payment directly to the holders of the Certificates of Beneficial Interest of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis the sum of $3,125,000 in full satisfaction of the sums due them and paid or provided for payment direct to the holders of the preferred stock of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis the sum of $1,050,000 in full payment of the sums due such preferred stockholders, and aver that the City of Indianapolis, by its Board of Directors for Utilities, caused the sums of $2,500,000 and of $1,050,000 to be paid to Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis for the retirement of its common stock and redemption of its preferred stock, and thereupon said Company took appropriate steps to cause, and caused, the retirement of its common stock and redemption of its preferred stock. They admit that the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis offered to pay to the holders of the outstanding bonds of the Citizens Gas Company the amounts due thereon together with interest to and including September 15, 1935, but allege that the amount of such bonds oustanding in the hands of the public at the time of such offer was only $2,745,000; but deny that such steps were taken with knowledge of any obligations of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis under said lease of September 30, 1913, after such transfer, because no such obligation in fact existed, or with knowledge that after the retirement of its capital stock said Citizens Gas Company would be without means for meeting or paying its obligations, but on the contrary allege that at the time, each and all of said steps were taken by the City of Indianap-119 olis it was advised that said lease was not valid or enforceable against these answering defendants after the transfer of the property and assets of the Citizens Gas Company as original Trustee to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee and further aver that the retirement of said stock and other obligations was made because of the fact that in the Todd case, referred to in subdivision 13 of plaintiff's bill of complaint, it had been held that a Public Charitable Trust existed in the property of the Citizens Gas Company subject to the precedent charge in favor of stockholders and creditors; that these answering defendants have been advised that while the mortgage securing the bonds of the Citizens Gas Company was not valid or within the power of the mortgagor to execute that the debt created thereby did constitute an equitable lien upon the property of said Company; that the payments so made to the holders of beneficial certificates, the holders of preferred stock and the owners of said bonds of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis did not and could not in any way affect the ability of the Citizens Gas Company to perform its obligations, as the sums due were not due to the Citizens Gas Company, but on the contrary the sums due were due to persons who had a right to have such obligations discharged in connection with the transfer of the trust assets to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee.

These answering defendants admit that they themselves gave no notice to the plaintiff herein or the holders of bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company for whom the plaintiff is Trustee that said transfer was to be made, but allege on information and belief that the plaintiff had knowledge long prior to September 9, 1935, that said transfer was to be made and that many of the bondholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company had such notice and that neither the plaintiff nor such bondholders took any steps or commenced any action to prevent such transfer being made.

17. With respect to the averments in subdivision 17 of the bill of complaint. These answering defendants admit that on September 9, 1935, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis executed two instruments of transfer and assignment, correct copies of which marked Exhibits E and F are made a part of plaintiff's bill of complaint; but these answering defendants deny that in Exhibit E the transfer and assignment of the assets were made subject to the obligation of said lease of September 30, 1913. On the contrary, they aver that subdivisions 4 and 5 of said assignment contain the following provisions:

"4. This transfer and assignment also are made subject to all other legal obligations of said Company, including the legal obligations of said Company, if any, under each of the leases hereinafter mentioned.

5. The assignment of the lease agreement made and entered into the 30th day of September, 1913, between said Company and The Indianapolis Gas Company, whereby the latter company leased certain property for the manufacture and sale of gas and gas by-products to said Company for a term of ninety-nine years, and the assignment of the agreement of lease executed the 18th of July, 1933, between John J. 120 Reilly, Receiver of Majestic Building Company, and said Company, are expressly excluded from this instrument of transfer and assignment, separate instruments of assignment of such lease agreements being executed and delivered contemporaneously with this instrument.

This section in no way modifies or alters the provisions of the last preceding section that this transfer and assignment are made subject to all legal obligations of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, including the legal obligations of said Citizens Gas Company, if any, under each of said two leases."

That said above quoted language was included in said assignment because prior to the execution thereof these answering defendants had advised the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis that the City of Indianapolis would not accept any assignment of said lease of September 30, 1913, but would reject the same and the language of said assignment was therefore so written as to impose no obligation upon the City of Indianapolis unless such liability already existed as a matter of law, which these answering defendants deny.

That on the same day the Citizens Gas Company executed the instrument identified as Exhibit F, purporting to be an assignment of said lease of September 30, 1913, but that the City of Indianapolis and these answering defendants refused to accept the same and adopted a resolution, a correct copy of which, marked Exhibit G is made a part of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

18. With respect to subdivision 18 of the bill of complaint, these answering defendants admit that the City of Indianapolis accepted the assignment and transfer under the terms and conditions set forth in Exhibit E, but allege that they rejected the assignment of said lease of September 30, 1913, admit that they caused public notice of such rejection to be recorded in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana, and that a copy of said resolution marked Exhibit G is correctly set forth in plaintiff's bill of complaint.

These answering defendants further allege that on the same day, towit: September 9, 1935, they caused to be served on said The Indianapolis Gas Company a copy of the said resolution; also a copy of the rejection recorded in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana.

These answering defendants further allege that for a substantial time prior to September 9, 1935, they had asserted that said lease of Septetmber 30, 1913, was not valid and binding upon these answering defendants after the transfer of the assets and property of said public trust had been made to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee and that continuously from no later than the 10th day of July, 1935, until the present date The Indianapolis Gas Company has been advised of this contention and has had full knowledge of the position of these answering defendants in respect of the validity of said lease.

These answering defendants further admit that the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities adopted a resolution referred to in subdivision 18 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint, a true and correct copy of which marked Exhibit C is filed herewith and made a part of 121 this answer; that said resolution was adopted September 9, 1935, and a copy thereof served on said The Indianapolis Gas Company on the same day. It is admitted that by the terms of said resolution the City of Indianapolis, in order to prevent an interruption of service to the consumers who were then receiving a supply of gas through the mains of The Indianapolis Gas Company did take possession of the plant of The Indianapolis Gas Company but for a temporary period and without prejudice to its rejection of said lease of September 30, 1913. These answering defendants allege that at the time such operation was commenced and continued there were approximately 50,000 persons whose available supply of gas could be obtained only through the mains of The Indianapolis Gas Company and that The Indianapolis Gas Company was fully aware of this situation. Said resolution contained the following statements:

"That the City by operating the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company for a period limited to six months, commencing September 9, 1935, did not assume or adopt said lease of September 30, 1913, nor recognize said lease as an obligation binding upon the city or its property; that the City was not to be considered as acting under said lease; that if The Indianapolis Gas Company refused to permit such temporary use of its property upon the terms stated in said resolution the City of Indianapolis would immediately discontinue such temporary use and relinquish the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company to that Company to be thenceforward operated by it; that The Indianapolis Gas Company was requested forthwith to state its position with respect to said temporary use."

These answering defendants further allege that said resolution contained an offer to pay for the temporary use of said property for a period of six months from September 9, 1935, by making payments similar to those contemplated and equal in amount to those provided for a like period of time by said lease between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the Citizens Gas Company; that on the 30th day of September, 1935, The Indianapolis Gas Company directed a letter to the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, a copy of which marked Exhibit D is attached hereto and made a part of this answer.

That in accordance with the agreement of The Indianapolis Gas Company contained in said letter of September 30, 1935, and relying upon the terms of said letter the City of Indianapolis paid, between September 30, 1935, and March 9, 1936, the sum of $292,809.95 to or for the benefit of said The Indianapolis Gas Company, of which said sum $171,575.00 was used in paying interest on bonds issued under the mortgage for which plaintiff is trustee. That thereafter and prior to March 9, 1936, by means of a letter dated March 2, 1936, addressed to The Indianapolis Gas Company and accepted by it on the same day, an agreement was entered into for the continued operations by the City of Indianapolis of the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company pending a compromise of the differences between said parties or a determination of that controversy by litigation; that a correct copy of said accepted proposition marked Exhibit E is attached hereto and made a part of this answer; that by the terms of said 122 agreement it was agreed between the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis and said The Indianapolis Gas Company that the City of Indianapolis could operate the plant and property of said Company without prejudice to its position or rights and that The Indianapolis Gas Company, by accepting the payments provided for thereunder, had not waived its right to assert that the lease of September 30, 1913, was a valid and binding lease upon the City of Indianapolis and said Department of Utilities or against any property of either.

That pursuant to the terms of said agreement of March 2, 1936, the City of Indianapolis paid to The Indianapolis Gas Company $171,575 on the 24th day of March, 1936, which sum was used in the payment of the semi-annual instalment of interest on the outstanding bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company due March 30, 1936, being the bonds secured by the mortgage for which plaintiff is trustee; that also in pursuance of said agreement the city has deposited with The Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis as escrow agent prior to the filing of this answer the sum of $231,575.00 and has paid as taxes on behalf of The Indianapolis Gas Company the sum of $67,486.57.

On information and belief these answering defendants allege that the execution of said agreements and the payments made thereunder were with the knowledge and without the objection of the plaintiff and were with the knowledge and without the objection of a large number of the bondholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

These answering defendants allege that neither the plaintiff nor any bondholder at any time prior to the commencement of this action served any notice on these answering defendants or on The Indiana National Bank, Escrow Agent, under said agreement, objecting to or disapproving in whole or in part any of the acts or things done on their behalf by The Indianapolis Gas Company, all as alleged in this paragraph of answer; that the bondholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company have accepted benefits under the terms of said agreement, that is to say, the receipt of more than $350,000 in cash which they have received and retained and which has never been tendered or repaid to the City of Indianapolis; that the plaintiff and the bondholders whom it represents cannot now be heard to say that these agreements are invalid as to them and in this connection the answering defendants aver that prior to the commencement of this action the plaintiff and the bondholders for whom it is purporting to act had full knowledge or notice of the facts alleged in this paragraph of answer and made no attempt to restore to the City of Indianapolis any part of the consideration received by virtue of such agreement by the bondholders whom it represents.

These answering defendants admit that shortly after September 9, 1935, they suggested to The Indianapolis Gas Company the possibility of a revision by mutual agreement of said lease, but deny that any negotiations looking towards such an agreement were entered into; and aver the facts in that connection to be as follows:

(a) That it was soon realized by these answering defendants and The Indianapolis Gas Company that on account of income taxation of stockholders and bondholders of the 123 Indianapolis Gas Company, no such revision could as a practical matter be accomplished; that thereupon these answering defendants expressed to The Indianapolis Gas Company a willingness to negotiate for the purchase from The Indianapolis Gas Company all of its plant and property used or useful in manufacturing or furnishing gas or by-products to the City of Indianapolis if reasonable terms for the purchase of such property could be agreed upon and the property transferred to the City of Indianapolis with the consent of The Indianapolis Gas Company, its stockholders and bondholders, but not otherwise; that such proposal necessarily involved a termination of said lease if a satisfactory agreement could be entered into, but did not involve any revision of the existing lease or any cancellation of the lease except upon purchase by the City of the plant of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

(b) That it was at all times definitely stated to The Indianapolis Gas Company that no such proposal for the purchase of the plant or the property of such Company would be made unless these answering defendants were advised that a request for such proposal was desired, not only by the stockholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company, but by a substantial portion of the bondholders of such Company.

(c) That on the 10th day of February, 1936, the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis did make a proposal to The Indianapolis Gas Company for the acquisition of its property upon terms therein stated, which proposal was made at the request of The Indianapolis Gas Company, and before such proposal was made these answering defendants were advised by The Indianapolis Gas Company and believed such advice to be true that a substantial number, though not all, of the bondholders and stockholders of The Indnanapolis Gas Company desired such a proposal to be made.

These answering defendants aver on information and belief that all or a portion of the bondholders at whose instance and request the plaintiff claims it has commenced this action had knowledge of such negotiations as were pending and that the proposal made was invited by a substantial group of bondholders and stockholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company

19. With respect to subdivision 19 of this complaint, these answering defendants admit that upon the execution and delivery of said lease of September 30, 1913, the same became subject to the deed of trust in which plaintiff is Successor Trustee and to such provisions thereof as are valid in law, but they deny that said lease was ever valid or enforceable for any period of time after the transfer of the property of said trust to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee; they admit that the lease to the extent and for the term for which it was valid, if at all, but not otherwise, became a part of the trust estate covered by said mortgage to the same extent as though it had been executed and delivered prior to the execution and delivery of said deed of trust, except they aver that the plaintiff or its predecessor trustee and the bondholders who it represents had by the terms of said lease of September 124 30, 1913, due notice and warning of the probable invalidity of said lease for a term longer than the period of the franchise contract heretofore referred to which expired on August 30, 1930, and such additional peciod as was reasonably necessary within which to complete the transfer of the trust assets to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee and allege that for the reasons hereinafter specifically set forth in subdivision 27 of this answer said lease, if valid, was not valid for a longer period.

These answering defendants admit that the covenant in said lease of September 30, 1913, requiring the payment of rent was made for the benefit of The Indianapolis Gas Company and for the indirect benefit, so far as the same was applicable to the payment of interest on the mortgage bonds of the bondholders, but deny that such covenant was valid for a period of 99 years or binding upon the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee; and deny that the mortgage trustee is vested with a distinct and independent right to enforce the performance of the lessee's obligations and engagements under said lease in so far as the same directly affect any supposed rights of the holders of bonds, but on the contrary aver that The Indianapolis Gas Company, in the first instance, is the sole person with any legal right to enforce whatever obligations may exist under said lease of September 30, 1913, and that the plaintiff has no standing to seek to enforce the same until there has been a refusal on the part of The Indianapolis Gas Company so to do, which these answering defendants allege on information and belief has not occurred. They therefore allege that the plaintiff has no capacity to sue in this cause and that as hereinafter more particularly averred this suit is a collusive one and cannot be maintained by this plaintiff.

20. With respect to the averments of subdivision 20 of plaintiff's bill of complaint, these answering defendants admit that the lease of September 30, 1913, if valid at all, was valid and enforceable against Citizens Gas Company according to its provisions, during the term of the trusteeship of the Citizens Gas Company and until September 9, 1935, and aver that all payments of rental due thereunder have been duly made, but for the reasons hereinbefore specifically stated these answering defendants deny that the final decree and judgment in the case of Fishback v. The Public Service Commission of Indiana and in the case of Williams v. The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, et al., estop these answering defendants from asserting the invalidity of said lease on and after September 9, 1935. With respect to the decree in Todd v. Citizens Gas Company, referred to in subdivision 20 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint, and more particularly described in subdivision 13 thereof, these answering defendants aver that no issue was presented for the determination of the Court or adjudicated by the Court in that cause with respect to the validity of the lease of September 30, 1913, either before or after September 9, 1935, and aver that the judgment and decree of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana in said cause is not binding or res adjudicata on these answering defendants as to any questions involved in this cause, for each of the following reasons:

First. The Indianapolis Gas Company was not named as a party in the Todd suit and the bill of complaint contains no averments showing that it is entitled by representation to rely on any adjudication in that cause as an estoppel.

Second. The cause of action in the Todd case and in this case are essentially different and are not the same causes of action. The question involved in the Todd case and actually determined by the Court was whether a Public Charitable Trust was created in favor of the then gas consumers of the City of Indianapolis and the prospective users of such gas by means of the franchise ordinance of August 30, 1905, and the other relevant documents in connection therewith, whereas, the cause of action in this case is the question of the validity of the lease executed September 30, 1913, and the right of the Trustee of a Public Charitable Trust, to execute a lease as lessee which attempts to bind the trust estate by onerous terms and conditions for a period of 77 years after the expiration of the Trustee's term of office, which term was definitely fixed by the trust instrument. The causes of action not being the same there could be no estoppel by way of judgment except as to the issues actually tried and adjudicated by the Court in the Todd case. These answering defendants allege that the Court in the Todd case did not hear, determine, decide or adjudicate the questions involved in this case; that no issue as to such questions was even presented to the Court for its determination and that no evidence was heard or decision made with respect to the questions here involved.

Third. The estoppel of a judgment extends only to the facts in issue as they existed at the time the judgment was rendered and does not prevent a re-examination of the same questions even between the same parties, where in the interval the facts have changed or new facts have occurred which may alter the legal rights or relations of the parties. These answering defendants aver that the Todd case was heard, tried, determined and adjudicated prior to September 9, 1935, and that the facts and circumstances have been altered and changed since the date of said adjudication by reason of the transfer of the property of the trust on said last named date to the City of Indianapolis as Succeeding Trustee.

Fourth. That there was not in force at the date of the entry of the final decree in the Todd case any Federal Declaratory Judgment Act which authorized or empowered the Court to decide any question involving any difference between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis with respect to the rights of the parties under said lease of September 30, 1913, prior to a refusal upon the part of the City of Indianapolis to be bound by the terms of said lease.

These answering defendants further aver that there was not at the date of the judgment and decree in the Todd case any existing controversy between The Indianapolis Gas Company and its stockholders or bondholders or this plaintiff and these answering defendants, or any of them, with respect to the validity of said lease.

21. With respect to the averments of subdivision 21 of plaintiff's bill of complaint, these answering defendants admit that the Citizens Gas Company operated under said 126 lease and operated the property included thereunder from the 28th day of November, 1913, to and including the 8th day of September, 1935, and received the income from such operations, but allege that during all of said time The Indianapolis Gas Company received the rentals contracted for and that the benefits to The Indianapolis Gas Company largely exceeded the benefits to the City of Indianapolis; they admit that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis as Trustee requested the Trustee under the mortgage of The Indianapolis Gas Company to authenticate and deliver additional bonds to reimburse the Citizens Gas Company for capital expenditures on account of extensions and betterments to the plant and system of the Citizens Gas Company, but allege that the Citizens Gas Company received reimbursement therefor only to the extent of ninety per cent of the value of said improvements; and allege that the title to all of the improvements so made vested in The Indianapolis Gas Company; they deny that any of the answering defendants ever caused said bonds to be distributed and sold as bonds secured by a 99 year lease.

These answering defendants deny that they are estopped to assert that said lease of September 30, 1913, is not a valid and binding obligation on these answering defendants from and after September 9, 1935.

22. With respect to the averments of subdivision 22 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint, these answering defendants deny that by the sale of revenue bonds or by any representations made in connection with said bonds, or by acceptance of the assignment identified as Exhibit E and attached to plaintiff's bill of complaint, or by the retirement of the Certificates of Beneficial Interest and the preferred stock of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis or by the payment of the bonds of the Citizens Gas Company that these answering defendants have estopped themselves from asserting and maintaining that said lease of September 30, 1913, is unenforceable against these answering defendants after September 9, 1935; and deny that in equity and good conscience they have no right to assert the invalidity of said lease at the present time; and deny that they are under any obligation to pay the plaintiff herein any sum of money whatever on account of said lease.

These answering defendants direct the Court's attention to the preceding averments of this answer wherein all the facts in connection with the averments contained in the 22nd subdivision of the plaintiff's bill of complaint have been admitted to the extent that they are true, denied or explained.

23. These answering defendants admit the averments of the 23rd subdivision of plaintiff's bill of complaint that the City of Indianapolis and all of the answering defendants denied on September 9, 1935, and continuously have since denied that the lease of September 30, 1913, is a binding and enforceable obligation against these answering defendants, or any of them, after the transfer of the trust property from the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, Trustee, to the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee, which transfer occurred on September 9, 1935. These answering defendants admit that on September 30, 1935, in a letter of that date,
127 the City of Indianapolis did advise The Indianapolis Gas Company that it was willing to undertake the negotiation of a new lease, but alleges that negotiations to that end were never entered into by The Indianapolis Gas Company and these answering defendants, or any of them; they further aver that on February 10, 1936, the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, at the request of The Indianapolis Gas Company, made a proposal to it looking towards the purchase of the entire plant and property of The Indianapolis Gas Company and as a part of such purchase the extinguishment of such lease, but that the City of Indianapolis has never been willing to enter into any negotiations with The Indianapolis Gas Company without the consent and approval of its bondholders or properly constituted representatives thereof and so advised The Indianapolis Gas Company repeatedly prior to the commencement of this action. These answering defendants deny that any negotiations have been undertaken or conducted by the City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company which would have the effect of destroying or wasting or impinging upon any rights of said trust or which would damage the bondholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

With respect to subdivision 24 of the bill of complaint, these answering defendants admits that an agreement was executed between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis on March 2nd, 1936, all as hereinbefore specifically alleged, a copy of which marked Exhibit E is attached to and made a part of this answer, but these answering defendants deny that said agreement deprived the plaintiff or the bondholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company of valuable property rights and allege that at and prior to the date of the execution of the agreement the City of Indianapolis had declined to pay the sum of $171,575, which was the interest due on The Indianapolis Gas Company bonds on March 30, 1936, and was declining and had declined to make any further payments to or for the benefit of The Indianapolis Gas Company; that The Indianapolis Gas Company, by the execution of said agreement reserved to itself the full right to assert the validity of the lease of September 30, 1913, procured a payment of $171,575, which was applied in payment of interest on the bonds under the mortgage for which the plaintiff is trustee and that said bondholders accepted said interest and have never repaid or offered to repay the same to the City of Indianapolis. In addition, as hereinbefore specifically alleged, the City of Indianapolis has paid to the date of the filing of this answer $231,575.00 to The Indiana National Bank as escrow agent for The Indianapolis Gas Company, a large portion of said sum being for the benefit of the bondholders of said Company, and these answering defendants allege on information and belief that the plaintiff and the bondholders which it represents had full knowledge prior to the commencement of this action of the existence of said agreement, the contents thereof and the payments made to The Indiana National Bank as Trustee in pursuance thereof and that under the terms of said agreement the City of Indianapolis, through its Department of Utilities, was to 128 continue to operate the property owned by The Indianapolis Gas Company and never repudiated the same or served any notice on the City of Indianapolis or these answering defendants of their refusal to be found thereby, but with their knowledge, approval and consent and by their action they have induced the City of Indianapolis to continue to make said payments and to operate the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company and are now estopped by their own conduct from contesting or challenging said agreement of March 2nd, 1936, or from asserting that it was made in violation of their rights or from claiming that the execution of said contract or the steps taken thereunder violated the rights of the plaintiff or said bondholders if any they have.

These answering defendants expressly deny that the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company now has any good will or going concern value of any kind.

These answering defendants further deny, for reasons hereafter in subdivision 27 of this answer stated, that said lease repeatedly referred to as a 99 year lease has any validity or binding effect upon these answering defendants after September 9, 1935.

25. These answering defendants deny that at the time this bill of complaint was filed, or for a long time prior thereto, The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis were engaged in the negotiation of any agreement, but allege that the proposition made by the City of Indianapolis to The Indianapolis Gas Company under date of February 10, 1936, had never been accepted by said Gas Company and no counter proposal had ever been made and that the City of Indianapolis had been advised prior to the commencement of this action by The Indianapolis Gas Company that the proposal so made was unacceptable to the bondholders and stockholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company. These answering defendants further deny that they have at any time attempted to negotiate or have been willing to negotiate and conclude any settlement of the controversy between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis without the full consent and approval of the bondholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company and appropriate action evidencing such consent on the part of the bondholders as well as the stockholders of said Indianapolis Gas Company and allege on information and belief that these facts were known to the plaintiff prior to the commencement of this action.

26. These answering defendants aver on information and belief that the plaintiff has no right to maintain this action and that this suit is a collusive one because of the following, all of which are alleged on information and belief:

(a) That the controversy in this cause exists solely and exclusively between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis.

(b) That The Indianapolis Gas Company has fairly and in good faith at all times represented the interests, both of its stockholders and bondholders, in said controversy, and has continuously asserted and is now asserting that the lease of September 30, 1913, is a valid and binding obligation upon these answering defendants for the full term thereof and 129 has at no time taken any action which was inconsistent with that position or precluded it from asserting the validity of said lease in litigation or otherwise.

(c) That no demand was made on The Indianapolis Gas Company to commence an action in the courts of the State of Indiana to obtain a declaratory judgment of the validity of said lease or to bring any other proceeding, legal or equitable, to accomplish that purpose prior to the commencement of this action, or if in the alternative such a demand was made it was with the understanding in advance that the demand would be refused in order to enable the plaintiff to maintain this action. That The Indianapolis Gas Company has at all times been able and willing to commence and prosecute such actions as were necessary for the establishment of its rights.

(d) That the action taken by The Indianapolis Gas Company in entering into the agreements which it did enter into with the City of Indianapolis were in good faith and were calculated to and did inure to the benefit of the plaintiff and to the bondholders whom it represents and that, as hereinbefore averred, the bondholders accepted the benefits of said agreements and have continued to retain such benefits including the payment of interest to them in a sum of approximately $350,000 and the plaintiff with full knowledge of the existence and character of said agreements prior to the commencement of this action has never attempted to repudiate or rescind the same and has never served notice on the City of Indianapolis that it is not bound thereby.

(e) That The Indianapolis Gas Company has cooperated with plaintiff in the preparation of the complaint filed in this cause.

27. These answering defendants allege that said lease of September 30, 1913, is not a valid or enforceable obligation against these answering defendants or the property of said Public Charitable Trust from and after September 9, 1935, for each of the following reasons:

First. The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis at the date of the execution of said lease was the Trustee of a Public Charitable Trust and had no express or implied power as such Trustee to execute said lease and to agree to the terms and conditions therein contained, if at all, for any period of time beyond the terms for which it was Trustee and particularly for a period of 77 years thereafter; that the term of said lease in and of itself under the conditions stated rendered said lease invalid; and the effort to bind its successor Trustee, which is a municipal corporation, to perform the terms and conditions of said lease was ultra vires and void.

Second. That said lease contains, among others, the following provisions which are illegal and unenforceable:

(a) An agreement that the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee will re-finance the present outstanding bond issue of The Indianapolis Gas Company in the principal amount of approximately $6,881,000 during the remaining 77 years of the term of said lease and if the bonds of that Company should sell below par that it will pay the difference to The Indianapolis Gas Company.

130 (b) An agreement for the increase in the annual rental of $10,000 a year when gas is sold at more than 45c and less than 50c a 1,000 cubic feet and an additional increase of $5,000 a year when gas is sold at 45c or less per 1,000 cubic feet.

(c) An agreement on the part of the Successor Trustee at all events without respect to whether payment therefor can be made from the revenues of The Indianapolis Gas property and without respect to whether by making such payments the City of Indiaanpolis would become indebted beyond its constitutional debt limitation to pay the rent reserved which, including payments for the benefit of the stockholders and bondholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company and taxes, has average almost $600,000 per annum for five years immediately preceding September 9, 1935.

Third. That at the time said lease was executed, on the 30th day of September, 1913, and continuously ever since, the City of Indianapolis was and has been a city of the first class. That at the time said contract was made there was in force in Indiana the following statute:

"No executive department, officer or employee thereof shall have power to bind such city to any contract or agreement, or in any other way, to any extent beyond the amount of money at the time already appropriate by ordinance for the purposes of such department; and all contracts and agreements, express or implied, and all obligations of any and every sort, beyond such existing appropriations are declared to be absolutely void: Provided, That the Board of Public Works shall have power to contract with any individual or corporation for lighting the streets, alleys and other public places or for supplying the city with gas, water, steam, power, heat or electricity, and for the collection, removal and disposal of garbage, ashes or refuse, on such terms and for such times, not exceeding the term fixed by Section 254 (48-7302) of this Act, as may be agreed upon; but any such contract shall be submitted to the Common Council of such city and approved by ordinance before the same shall take effect, and, if so approved, shall immediately become effective: Provided, further, That nothing herein contained shall prevent any such department from issuing any bond or other obligation expressly authorized by this act and provided for by ordinance." (Section 48-1507 Burns' Ind. Statutes Annotated 1933.)

Section 48-7302 referred to in the above quoted statute confers authority upon cities to enter into contracts to furnish the city

"with water, motive power, heat or light, * * *."

That the statute referred to contains the following proviso:

"That no such contract shall be entered into by any such city or town for furnishing such city or town and its inhabitants with water, motive power, drainage, sewerage, heat or light, upon or along the streets of such city or town for a term longer than twenty-five (25) years: and, provided further, that before any such contract shall be made by any city of the first, second, third or fourth class such con-
131 tract shall be first agreed to by the Board of Public Works of said city, after which agreement, such Board shall cause a proper ordinance approving and confirming such contract to be presented for adoption by the Common Council of such city."

These answering defendants aver that at and prior to the execution of said lease of September 30, 1913, no appropriation had ever been made by ordinance by the City of Indianapolis to make the payments called for under the terms of said lease and that said lease, prior to its execution, was not agreed to by the Board of Public Works of said City nor was any ordinance ever adopted by the City of Indianapolis approving or confirming said lease, adopting the provisions thereof or attempting to bind the City of Indianapolis to the performance of such lease; that the Public Service Commission Act of Indiana did not repeal directly or by implication the provisions of the statutes above referred to and that the same were on September 30, 1913, and continuously ever since have been in full force and effect.

That at no time subsequent to September 30, 1913, has the City of Indianapolis made any appropriation for the purpose of paying any sum due under said lease of September 30, 1913, nor has its Board of Public Works of its Common Council attempted to ratify, approve or confirm said lease; that under the laws of Indiana said lease, when it was executed without such approval, was absolutely void and could not be ratified.

Fourth. That said lease of September 30, 1913, was and is onerous and burdensome upon the City of Indianapolis and the property of said Public Charitable Trust and for that reason was a lease which the initial trustee had no power to make beyond the definitely fixed term of its trusteeship; that among its burdensome provisions are the following:

(a) The payment of annual rent in a sum largely exceeding a fair return on the fair value of the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

(b) The requirement heretofore referred to that the Lessee should during the entire term of the lease re-finance the bond issue of The Indianapolis Gas Company and if it should sell said bonds below par to pay the difference to said The Indianapolis Gas Company.

(c) The requirements heretofore referred to penalizing the Lessee in the event it reduced the price of gas.

Fifth. That said lease being burdensome and onerous in its character, as hereinbefore averred, was not binding upon the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee and did not constitute an asset of said trust which it was bound to accept, but on the contrary it had the right under the law of Indiana to reject the same.

Sixth. That said lease was executed in violation of the terms of said Public Charitable Trust in that under the terms of said trust the Citizens Gas Company was required to dissolve upon the termination of its trusteeship whereas under the terms of said lease it is required to continue its corporate existence for the entire term of said lease, or to cause 132 its property to be conveyed to another corporation which shall maintain its existence for the full franchise period.

counterclaim.

Counter-Claim.

These answering defendants by way of counter-claim complain of the plaintiff, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, as Trustee, The Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, an Indiana corporation, and by way of cross counter-claim allege:

That the plaintiff, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of New York and is a citizen and resident of the State of New York; that it is a successor trustee under a deed of trust executed on the 1st day of October, 1902, by the defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, to secure the payment of the principal and interest of certain bonds which are now outstanding in the hands of the public in the total principal amount of $6,881,000.

That on the 30th day of September, 1913, the defendants, The Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, entered into a written lease for a term of 99 years, a copy of which written lease marked Exhibit B is made a part of the plaintiff's bill of complaint and by reference a part of this counter-claim.

That at the date of the execution of said lease said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the lessee therein, was not the absolute owner of the property consisting of a gas manufacturing and distributing plant which it was then operating, but was merely the initial trustee of a public charitable trust, created pursuant to the terms and conditions of a certain franchise, Article of Incorporation and By-laws of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, copies of which marked Exhibit C are made part of plaintiff's bill of complaint, and by reference a part of this counter-claim; that on said September 30, 1913, when said lease was executed to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, its terms of trusteeship of said public charitable trust was by the relevant documents hereinbefore referred to limited to the date when said franchise contract expired, to wit: August 30, 1930, and such time thereafter as was necessary for a transfer of said trust property to the successor trustee, the City of Indianapolis.

That said transfer was made on September 9, 1935, and that said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis is no longer the trustee of said public charitable trust.

There is a present existing controversy between this counter-claimant and defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company, as to whether said lease of September 30th, 1913, is a valid and enforceable obligation against these counter-claimants or the property of said public charitable trust from and after September 9, 1935; that The Indianapolis Gas Company has asserted for more than a year continuously last past and is now asserting that said lease is valid and binding upon these counter-claimants for the term thereof and that counter-claimants, and particularly the City of Indianapolis, are liable with respect to the lessee's covenants under 133 said lease as fully as if the City of Indianapolis had expressly accepted an assignment of said lease.

That the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has an interest in the determination of said controversy because on September 9, 1935, it tendered to these counter-claimants an assignment of said lease, a copy of which marked Exhibit F is made a part of the plaintiff's complaint and by reference a part of this counter-claim, which assignment these counter-claimants refused to accept.

That the plaintiff, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York as Trustee under said Mortgage and Deed of Trust securing bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company, although it has no legal right so to do, is asserting that said lease is valid and binding, and is for that reason made a party defendant to this counter-claim.

These answering defendants aver that said lease of September 30, 1913, is not a valid or enforceable obligation against these answering defendants or the property of said public charitable trust from and after September 9, 1935, for each of the following reasons:

First. The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis at the date of the execution of said lease was the Trustee of a Public Charitable Trust and had no express or implied power as such Trustee to execute said lease and to agree to the terms and conditions therein contained for any period of time beyond the term for which it was Trustee and particularly for a period of 77 years thereafter; that the term of said lease in and of itself under the conditions stated rendered said lease invalid; and the effort to bind its successor Trustee, which is a municipal corporation, to perform the terms and conditions of said lease was ultra vires and void.

Second. That said lease contains, among others, the following provisions which are illegal and unenforceable:

(a) An agreement that the City of Indianapolis as Successor Trustee will refinance the present outstanding bond issue of The Indianapolis Gas Company in the principal amount of $6,881,000 during the remaining 77 years of the term of said lease and if the bonds of that Company should sell below par that it will pay the difference to The Indianapolis Gas Company.

(b) An agreement for the increase in the annual rental of $10,000 a year when gas is sold at more than 45c and less than 50c a 1,000 cubic feet and an additional increase of $5,000 a year when gas is sold at 45c or less per 1,000 cubic feet.

(c) An agreement on the part of the Successor Trustee at all events without respect to whether payment therefor can be made from the revenues of The Indianapolis Gas property and without respect to whether by making such payments the City of Indianapolis would become indebted beyond its constitutional debt limitation to pay the rent reserved which, including payments for the benefit of the stockholders and bondholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company and taxes, has averaged almost $600,000 per annum for the five years immediately preceding September 9, 1935.

Third. That at the time said lease was executed, on 134 the 30th day of September, 1913, and continuously ever since, the City of Indianapolis was and has been a city of the first class. That at the time said contract was made there was in force in Indiana the following statute:

"No executive department, officer or employee thereof shall have power to bind such city to any contract or agreement, or in any other way, to any extent beyond the amount of money at the time already appropriated by ordinance for the purposes of such department; and all contracts and agreements, express or implied, and all obligations of any and every sort, beyond such existing appropriations are declared to be absolutely void: Provided, That the Board of Public Works shall have power to contract with any individual or corporation for lighting the streets, alleys and other public places or for supplying the city with gas, water, steam, power, heat or electricity, and for the collection, removal and disposal of garbage, ashes or refuse, on such terms and for such times, not exceeding the term fixed by Section 254 (48-7302) of this act, as may be agreed upon; but any such contract shall be submitted to the Common Council of such city and approved by ordinance before the same shall take effect, and.

if so approved, shall immediately become effective: Provided, further, that nothing herein contained shall prevent any such department from issuing any bond or other obligation expressly authorized by this act and provided for by ordinance." (Section 48-1507 Burns' Ind. Statutes Annotated 1933, Column 9.)

Section 48-7302 referred to in the above quoted statute confers authority upon cities to enter into contracts to furnish the city "with water, motive power, heat or light, * * * * * * *"

That the statute referred to contains the following proviso: "That no such contract shall be entered into by any such city or town for furnishing such city or town and its inhabitants with water, motive power, drainage, sewerage, heat or light, upon or along the streets of such city or town for a term longer than twenty-five (25) years; and, provided further, that before any such contract shall be made by any city of the first, second, third or fourth class such contract shall be first agreed to by the Board of Public Works of said city, after which agreement, such Board shall cause a proper ordinance approving and confirming such contract to be presented for adoption by the Common Council of such city."

These answering defendants aver that at and prior to the execution of said lease of September 30, 1913, no appropriation had ever been made by ordinance by the City of Indianapolis to make the payments called for under the terms of said lease and that said lease, prior to its execution was not agreed to by the Board of Public Works of said City nor was any ordinance ever adopted by the City of Indianapolis approving or confirming said lease, adopting the provisions thereof or attempting to bind the City of Indianapolis to the performance of such lease; that the Public Service Commission Act of Indiana did not repeal directly or by implication the provisions of the statutes above referred to and that the same were on September 30, 1913, and continuously ever since have been in full force and effect.

135 That at no time subsequent to September 30, 1913, has the City of Indianapolis made any appropriation for the purpose of paying any sum due under said lease of September 30, 1913, nor has its Board of Public Works or its Common Council attempted to ratify, approve or confirm said lease; that under the laws of Indiana said lease, when it was executed without such approval, was absolutely void and could not be ratified.

Fourth. That said lease of September 30, 1913, was and is onerous and burdensome upon the City of Indianapolis and the property of said Public Charitable Trust and for that reason was a lease which the initial trustee had no power to make beyond the definitely fixed term of its trusteeship; that among its burdensome provisions are the following:

(a) The payment of annual rent in a sum largely exceeding a fair return on the fair value of the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

(b) The requirement heretofore referred to that the Lessee should during the entire term of the lease re-finance the bond issue of The Indianapolis Gas Company and if it should sell said bonds below par to pay the difference to said The Indianapolis Gas Company.

(c) The requirement heretofore referred to penalizing the Lessee in the event it reduced the price of gas.

Fifth. That said lease being burdensome and onerous in its character, as hereinbefore averred, was not binding upon the City of Indianapolis as successor Trustee and did not constitute an asset of said trust which it was bound to accept, but on the contrary it had the right under the law of Indiana to reject the same.

Sixth. That said lease was executed in violation of the terms of said Public Charitable Trust in that under the terms of said trust the Citizens Gas Company was required to dissolve upon the termination of its trusteeship whereas under the terms of said lease it is required to continue its corporate existence for the entire term of said lease, or to cause its property to be conveyed to another corporation which shall maintain its existence for the full franchise period.

That these counter-claimants are entitled to a judgment and declaration of this Court that said lease of September 30, 1913, is not a valid and binding obligation against counter-claimants, but on the contrary is invalid, void and unenforceable against counter-claimants and against said trust property taken over by the City of Indianapolis as successor Trustee.

Wherefore, these answering defendants and counter-claimants pray:

1. That plaintiff's bill of complaint be dismissed for want of equity.

2. That this Court adjudge and declare:

(a) That these answering defendants and counter-claimants are not nor is any of them liable under the covenants of said lease and that the property of said Public Charitable 136 Trust taken over by these answering defendants, or any of them, is not subject to the terms and provisions of said lease.

(b) That said lease of September 30, 1913, is invalid and void as against these answering defendants from and after September 9, 1935.

(c) That said lease of September 30, 1913, was void as against the City of Indianapolis from the date of its execution because made in violation of the Indiana statutes.

(d) That the use of the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company by these answering defendants since September 9, 1935, has been with the consent and approval of The Indianapolis Gas Company and binding upon its bondholders and this plaintiff and that no estoppel arises out of such operation against these answering defendants to deny the validity of said lease.

(e) That the agreement of March 2, 1936, between defendants, The City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company is valid and binding according to its terms upon plaintiff and defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, and that the continued use by defendant, the City of Indianapolis, of property of The Indianapolis Gas Company under and pursuant to the terms of such agreement is binding upon not only the defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, but also the plaintiff and the bondholders represented by it.

(f) That neither in the Todd, the Fishback nor the Williams cases was there any adjudication that said lease was binding upon these answering defendants at any time after the transfer of the trust property to the City of Indianapolis as successor Trustee.

3. For the costs of this action and all other proper relief agreeable to equity and good conscience.

137 Exhibit A.

Notice of Indianapolis Gas Plant Revenue Bond Offering.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned as City Controller of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, by authority of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, will on Tuesday, May 28, 1935, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 12 noon, at his office in the City Hall in said City, receive written sealed bids in appropriate form for an offering of Indianapolis Gas Plant Revenue Bonds in the aggregate principal amount of Eight Million Dollars ($8,000,000). Such bids will be opened at noon on said date, and such bonds will be sold to the highest bidder, being the maker of the bid which will give the City the lowest interest cost for the moneys so borrowed; the right to reject any and all bids being reserved. Bids for less than all of the bonds of said issue will not be accepted. Bids will be accepted or rejected with reasonable promptness. Bids may be conditioned upon the approval of counsel to be selected and employed by the bidder as to the legality of the issue. Each bidder shall make a deposit of One Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000) in the form of a check certified by a responsible bank or trust company located in the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, or in the States of New York, Illinois, or Ohio, payable to the order of the City Controller of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, such checks to be returned to those bidders whose checks are not accepted. In event a successful bidder fails to perform the terms of his bid, the City shall retain the proceeds of his check as liquidated damages; and by making deposit of such check with the City Controller the bidder shall be deemed to have agreed that the amount of such liquidated damages is reasonable.

The proceeds of such bonds are to be used for the taking over of certain property owned by Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and/or in which it has an interest, including the redemption or extinguishment of its capital stock and/or for the payment of certain of its obligations and for the necessary expense incurred in connection therewith, including the expense of the City incident to obtaining such funds, as well as for the purpose of making certain betterments, improvements, extensions and additions to such property.

Said bonds are to be payable solely from the income and revenues of such utility property and are not to be an indebtedness of the City payable out of taxes. Said bonds are to be issued in denominations of One Thousand Dollars each, and numbered consecutively, commencing with 1. They are to be registerable as to principal, but not as to interest. They are to be exempt from taxation as to principal and income as prescribed by the Indiana statutes. Payment of their principal and interest are secured by a charge upon all the revenues from the operation of all of the gas system owned and/or operated by the City of Indianapolis.

Said bonds are to be issued under the authority of the Indiana statutes, including Chapter 77 of the Acts of 1929, Chapter 67 of the Acts of 1931, and Chapter 125 of the Acts of 1933 as amended by Chapter 311 of the Acts of 1935 138 of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana (the latter having been House Bill 469).

Said bonds are to become due at such time or times, and in such manner with such accompanying pertinent provisions, as shall be specified by the terms of the accepted bid; but there shall be no bonds maturing in less than two (2) nor more than forty (40) years from the date of issuance.

The interest rate upon said bonds is to be that fixed by the terms of the accepted bid therefor, but shall not exceed five and one-half per cent per annum, and shall be evidenced by coupons attached to said bonds and payable semi-annually.

Said bonds are not to be sold at a discount in excess of five (5) per cent.

Both bonds and interest coupons are to be payable at the office of the Treasurer of Marion County, Indiana, as ex-officio Treasurer of the City of Indianapolis, and/or at such bank or trust company or office, whether in Indianapolis, or in Chicago, Illinois, or New York City, New York, or elsewhere, as may be agreed upon between said Board and the successful bidder for said bonds, or in the absence of such an agreement specified by said Board.

Said bonds are to be dated as of such date as may be agreed upon between said Board and the successful bidder, not inconsistent with law.

Bids shall specify also either:

(1) Serial maturities for said bonds, but no bonds to mature in less than two (2) years from the date of their issuance, and the ultimate maturity date to be between twenty-nine (29) and forty (40) years from their date if issuance; the City to agree to pay not less than Four Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($450,000) and not more than Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($500,000), the amount to be specified in the bid, each year after the first two years from the date of said bonds, out of the revenues from the operation of such gas system, for combined principal and interest on said bonds, to be available therefor in such proportions as the bidder may specify in his bid; or

(2) The maturity of said bonds at the expiration of not to exceed forty (40) years from their date of issuance, with sinking fund provisions, to wit: The City agrees to pay out of the revenues from the operation of said gas system, not less than $50,000 and not more than $200,000 each year after the first two years from the date of said bonds into a sinking fund to be specially applied to the redemption and payment on or before the maturity of the bonds. The moneys so paid shall be deposited in a special account hereinafter more specifically referred to. The moneys in said account for sinking fund purposes shall be used to redeem bonds as follows: This Board may cause to be purchased in the open market at the then market price thereof—but not in any event to exceed par plus two per cent of the principal plus accrued interest—as many of the bonds as can be so acquired by the moneys in said account for sinking fund purposes from time to time in the discretion of this Board; and for this purpose the Board may use any additional funds that may be deposited in said account for sinking fund purposes. Or, in the discretion of 139 this Board, it may cause notice to be published in one or more daily papers of general circulation printed and published in the City of Indianapolis that it will cause at a time and place named therein, bonds to be purchased, and inviting offers for the purchase of said bonds at prices to be named in said offers by the holders thereof, in which event the Board may accept the lowest of such offers, not exceeding in any event a price equal to par plus two per cent thereof plus accrued interest, and the bonds mentioned in the offers so accepted may thereupon be purchased by this Board to the extent of moneys in said sinking fund. If in either case this Board shall be unable to purchase at a price not exceeding par plus two per cent plus accrued interest, bonds sufficient in number to permit the investment of the money available for sinking fund purposes within sixty days after the payment of any instalment of sinking fund moneys into said account or accounts, then the Board shall cause a drawing by lot to be held, to result in the selection of numbers of said bonds in a quantity sufficient at the price of par plus two per cent thereof plus accrued interest to absorb substantially all the available moneys in said sinking fund account, and the Board shall thereupon advertise the number upon said bonds so drawn in one daily newspaper of general circulation printed and published in the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, and in one daily newspaper of general circulation printed and published in the City of New York, New York, once a week for two successive weeks, and by such advertisement shall require said bonds so numbered to be presented for redemption at the place or places where interest upon said bonds may then be payable, on a day specified in said advertisement, such day being not less than thirty (30) days from the date of the first publication of said advertisement; and such advertisement shall also state that interest shall cease to accrue upon said day named therein for the redemption of said bonds. If any of the bonds so drawn shall be registered, a similar notice shall be sent by this Board to the registered holder thereof at his address registered with the City Controller. Interest upon the bonds so drawn shall cease accordingly on the day named in said notice and on or after said day said bonds, upon presentation and surrender thereof with all unmatured coupons, shall be paid at the price of par plus two per cent thereof plus accrued interest to said date. If any of the bonds so drawn shall not be presented and surrendered to the paying agency on the day so fixed therefor, the moneys remaining in the sinking fund account applicable to the redemption of such bonds shall thereafter be set aside and remain segregated in a special trust for the redemption of such bonds when the same shall be presented and surrendered. All bonds purchased in either such manner or so redeemed shall forthwith be cancelled and become void for every purpose; or

(3) Either of said alternatives, together with a provision permitting any bonds outstanding and unpaid from and after ten years from the date of their issuance to be called and paid by the City at any interest paying date at such price as may be agreed upon between the Board and the successful bidder.

The City agrees to fix, maintain and collect reasonable and just charges for gas service and faithfully to comply with all pertinent provisions of law, including the requirement of Chapter 190 of the Acts of 1933 of the General Assembly of Indiana, viz. that a reasonable and just charge shall be such as produces sufficient revenue to pay, among other things, interest upon bonds, provide a sinking fund for liquidation of bonds, maintenance costs, operating charges, adequate funds for working capital, repairs and upkeep.

A copy of the Resolution of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, dated May 7, 1935, authorizing such bond issue, may be examined by any interested person upon application to the undersigned.

Circular No. 2506. July 1, 1935.

Purpose of Issue.

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, on May 7, 1935, entitled "A resolution (No. 2-1935) for the issuance of Gas Plant Revenue Bonds," and in compliance with all applicable provisions of law including Chapter 77 of the Acts of 1929, Chapter 67 of the Acts of 1931 and Chapter 125 of the Acts of 1933, as amended by Chapter 311 of the Acts of 1935 of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, 142 these bonds are issued to provide funds that the City may exercise its franchise rights to acquire property owned by Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and/or in which it has an interest including monies required to be paid for the redemption or extinguishment of its capital stock and/or for the payment of certain of its obligations (including funded debt) and for the necessary expenses incurred in connection therewith, including the expenses of the City incident to obtaining such funds as well as for the purpose of making certain betterments, improvements, extensions and additions to such property.

Territory Served.

Upon consummation of this acquisition the City advises it will control a business supplying the entire domestic and commercial gas requirements of the City of Indianapolis and its suburbs. Indianapolis, the capital of the State of Indiana and the county seat of Marion County, is located in the central part of the State. It is an important manufacturing, commercial and financial center. According to the 1930 census the City had a population of 364,161 with an estimated population including the suburban area of more than 427,000. Seven railroads and numerous bus lines entering the city supply ample transportation.

History and Business of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

We are advised Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was incorporated under the laws of Indiana in May, 1906, and until 1913 supplied gas in part of the City. In that year the company leased for a period of 99 years the properties and business of the Indianapolis Gas Company, thereby gaining control of the entire gas business of the City of Indianapolis and its environs. By the terms of this lease, the lessee pays a rental consisting of (a) the interest on the Indianapolis Gas Company First Consolidated Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds due October 1, 1952, of which there were $6,881,000 principal amount outstanding at December 31, 1934, and the interest on such additional bonds as may be issued from time to time for refunding or extensions to the leased property; (b) an amount equivalent to 6% per annum on the $2,000,000 of capital stock of Indianapolis Gas Company (with a possible increase of $15,000 if the price of gas to the consumer does not exceed 45 cents per thousand cubic feet); (c) $300 annually for organization expense and (d) such amounts equal to the taxes levied against the property including Federal Income Tax. As of January 1, 1935, the company served through owned and leased property approximately 73,800 domestic, 866 commercial and 523 industrial consumers.

An appraisal made by an independent engineer found that as of January 1, 1935, the owned property of Citizens Gas Company consisted of a coke oven plant, known as Prospect Street Station, comprising three batteries of forty 14-ton Wilputte ovens with a total capacity of 11,000,000 cubic feet and two 8′ 6″ water gas sets having a total daily capacity of 1,800,000 cubic feet and 9,000,000 cubic feet of holder capacity. The distribution system consists of approximately 336 miles of cast iron and steel mains. The leased prop-143 erty, owned by Indianapolis Gas Company according to the same appraisal, consists of a coke oven plant of one battery of forty-one 15-ton Semet-Solvay coke ovens with a daily capacity of 3,500,000 cubic feet, also two 11′ 0″ and two 7′ 6″ water gas sets, with a total daily capacity of 6,000,000 cubic feet and holder capacity of 3,000,000 cubic feet. The distribution system consists of approximately 531 miles of cast iron and steel mains. Based on this appraisal which took into consideration an allowance of $700,000 for working capital for Citizens Gas Company, as well as present day average costs, the age of the equipment and the amount and kind of deferred maintenance, the following costs of reproduction new and depreciated physical values as of January 1, 1935, were estimated:

	Cost of Reproduction—New	Depreciated Physical Value
Citizens Gas Company	$17,607,310	$13,431,230
Indianapolis Gas Company	12,730,490	9,181,960
	$30,337,800	$22,613,190

At the present time we are advised the coke oven and water gas plants of the leased property are not used in operations but it is anticipated that the coke oven plant will be in operation by October 1, 1935. The by-products from the coke operations include coke, ammonia and coal tar, which in the past have been sold in the open market through various sales agencies. The coal requirements of Citizens Gas Company have been purchased principally from the Milburn By-Products Coal Company, Milburn, West Virginia, the entire capital stock of which is owned by Citizens Gas Company. Other coal purchases are made from other coal producers of the quality and quantity necessary for blending purposes. We are advised the capacity of the Milburn coal mine is greatly in excess of the Company's plant requirements. Income Statement Calender Years 1931-35*

The following comparative earning statement, based on municipal ownership and operation, of Citizens Gas Company was compiled from the independent engineer's report submitted us June 22, 1935:

Total Income	$5,049,486	$4,326,724	$4,148,698	$4,773,273	$5,103,650
Operating Expenses, Taxes, and Rentals	4,224,566	3,731,900	3,628,957	4,104,460	4,351,400
Balance	$ 824,920	$ 594,824	$ 519,741	$ 668,813	$ 752,250
Add: Estimated savings in taxes through municipal ownership and operation (see note)	$ 166,664	$ 142,516	$ 122,733	$ 113,811	$ 121,000
Balance available for bond service and depreciation	$ 988,584	$ 737,340	$ 642,474	$ 782,624	$ 873,250

The annual service charge on this issue is $360,000 1936-1937; $450,000 1938-1940; $500,000 1941-1967.

(Note)—The City states that through municipal ownership and operation of Citizens Gas Company there will be a savings of Federal Income and City taxes which in the years covered above would have approximated the amounts shown.

The Feasibility of Natural Gas.

The City has been considering the possibility of introducing natural gas into Indianapolis provided it can be purchased at a sufficiently attractive price. An independent survey by recognized engineers finds it would be entirely feasible for the City to serve mixed natural and manufactured gas to domestic and commercial consumers and straight natural gas to industrial consumers. The change from manufactured gas to natural or mixed gas operation would, in engineer's 144 opinion, necessitate a further investment of approximately $2,500,000 to extend the distribution facilities, but the belief is that such operation will materially improve the earning power of these properties. The sale of the present issue of $8,000,000 bonds, together with cash now on hand provides approximately $1,500,000 cash over and above the cost of acquisition of the property It is the engineer's estimate that for the first normal year after the introduction of natural gas, gross revenues should slightly exceed $5,000,000, net income before depreciation and bond service should approximate $990,000, while in the fifth year gross should approximate $10,600,000 and net income before depreciation and bond service should exceed $3,000,000.

* 1935—5 months actual, 7 months estimated.

Security.

These Gas Plant Revenue bonds constitute, in the opinion of counsel, valid and legally binding obligations of the City of Indianapolis, secured by a charge upon all of the revenues derived from the entire gas system owned and/or operated by the City of Indianapolis and principal and interest on the bonds are payable solely from such revenues.

Covenants of the City.

With respect to these bonds the City covenants:

That it will cause to be deposited in any one or more responsible banks or trust companies in the City of Indianapolis, in a special account under such conditions as that the monies cannot be withdrawn from such account or accounts, except for the payment of interest on and the principal of these bonds, on the fifteenth day of each month during the operation of said gas system by the City out of the revenues derived from the operation of said gas system a sum equal to one-twelfth of the annual amount due and payable for principal and interest on the next succeeding date of said bonds and the City agrees that there will be credited to this bond and interest fund, $360,000 annually 1936-1937; $450,000 annually 1938-1940 and $500,000 annually 1941-1967;

That it will fix, maintain and collect reasonable and just charges for gas service and faithfully to comply with all pertinent provisions of law including the requirement of Chapter 190 of the Acts of the 1933 General Assembly of the State of Indiana, viz., that a reasonable and just charge shall be such as produces sufficient revenue to pay, among other things, principal of and interest on these bonds, maintenance cost, operating charges, adequate funds for working capital, repairs and upkeep;

That upon acquisition of the property operated by the Citizens Gas Company, it will cause the same to be continually operated as a gas system in an efficient manner and at reasonable cost and maintained in good operating condition; and it will use all reasonable efforts to resist competition and maintain the exclusive right to serve gas in the City of Indianapolis and in Marion County, Indiana, and the towns therein;

That so long as any of these bonds are outstanding and unpaid the City shall maintain insurance on the insurable parts of said gas system of a kind and in an amount as would normally be carried by privately owned companies en-145 gaged in a similar business; which insurance shall be placed and maintained in responsible and qualified companies and the proceeds of such insurance shall be used in replacing, repairing or rehabilitating property destroyed or damaged, or in extensions, additions or improvements and if not so used shall be used in the purchase and retirement of outstanding bonds;

That so long as any of these bonds are outstanding and unpaid, not to sell, mortgage or dispose of said gas system or any substantial and useful part thereof unless the proceeds of such sale or disposition are used for the payment of the principal and interest of the then outstanding and unpaid bonds. The right to lease such utility property and gas system on terms and in a manner consistent with law, may be exercised provided the terms do not adversely affect the rights and interest of the holders of these bonds. The city prior to the execution of any such lease of any part of the gas system under the terms hereof, agrees to give notice if or when it intends to execute any such lease through publication in one newspaper, printed in the English language, of general circulation, in the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, in the City of Chicago, Illinois, and in the City of New York, New York, at least four weeks prior to the execution of such lease.

That so long as any of these bonds are outstanding and unpaid, it shall not issue additional bonds or other obligations payable out of the revenues of said gas system except for refunding said outstanding bonds or for the acquisition of revenue producing property, betterments, extensions and/or additions.

We Recommend These Bonds for Investment.

146 EXHIBIT C.

Resolution for Temporary Use of Property of The Indianapolis Gas Company Adopted September 9, 1935.

Whereas, The Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, is the owner of certain property used and useful in the distribution of gas in the City of Indianapolis and Marion County, Indiana, and which as such has been used by Citizen's Gas Company of Indianapolis under the terms of a certain lease bearing date of September 30, 1913; and

Whereas, the City of Indianapolis by this Board of Directors for Utilities has in the exercise of the discretion conferred upon it by law refused to adopt, assume, or take over said lease or to accept an assignment thereof or to operate said property thereunder; and

Whereas, various consumers of gas in Indianapolis and Marion County, Indiana, will suffer interruption of service commencing at the time of the acquisition by the City of Indianapolis of other property of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, unless property of said The Indianapolis Gas Company is temporarily used therefor; and

Whereas, solely to prevent such an interruption of service, and for no other purpose, the City of Indianapolis is willing to use the property of said The Indianapolis Gas Company to the extent necessary for such purpose, for a period of six months from the time of the acquisition by the City of other property of said Citizens Gas Company, the City during such period to make to and on behalf of said The Indianapolis Gas Company payments similar to those contemplated, for a like period of time, by said lease between said The Indianapolis Gas Company and said Citizens Gas Company; but the City not to be acting under said lease, or to be considered as acting under said lease, or as having adopted it in any respect, or as having recognized said lease as an obligation in any manner; and during such period the City is willing to negotiate terms for the continued user of such property of said The Indianapolis Gas Company; and

Whereas, the City by this Board has made known such desire to available officials of said The Indianapolis Gas Company, but the officials of said Company have as yet taken no action in the name or on behalf of said Company with respect to such user temporarily by the City; and

Whereas, immediate action by the City of Indianapolis by this Board is necessary to prevent interruption of service to all gas consumers in the City of Indianapolis and Marion County, Indiana;

Now Therefore Be It Resolved by the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, acting in the exercise of the discretion conferred upon them by law and in the name of said City:

1. That to the extent necessary to prevent interruption of service to the consumers and in the territory heretofore served by Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and solely for the purpose of preventing any such interruption, the City of Indianapolis in the operation of the property acquired by it used and useful in the manufacture and distribution of gas shall use property of The Indianapolis Gas Company, an 147 Indiana corporation, for a period of six months commencing September 9, 1935; for which user the City of Indianapolis by this Board of Directors for Utilities shall pay, out of funds available to the order of said Board, payments to or on behalf of said The Indianapolis Gas Company equivalent to those contemplated for a like period of time by the certain lease dated September 30, 1913, between said The Indianapolis Gas Company and said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis; but by so doing the City does not assume or adopt such lease or any assignment thereof nor does the City recognize such lease as an obligation binding upon the City or upon any property acquired by the City from said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and the City is not to be considered as acting under such lease or upon any agreements or covenants contained therein or pertaining thereto.

2. If said The Indianapolis Gas Company refuses to permit such temporary use of its property by the City, the City shall at once discontinue such temporary use and relinquish to said The Indianapolis Gas Company such possession as the City may have temporarily exercised over said property, to be thenceforward operated by said The Indianapolis Gas Company.

3. That said The Indianapolis Gas Company be forthwith requested on behalf of the City to take a position with respect to such temporary use of its property by the City, whether to consent or refuse consent thereto; and also to negotiate with the City for fair terms appropriate to use by the City of such property.

4. That a certified copy of this resolution be forthwith served upon said The Indianapolis Gas Company as evidence of the intent, desire, and attitude of the City upon these matters.

Resolution for Rejection of Assignment of Lease Between the Indianapolis Gas Co. and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, Adopted September 9, 1935.

Whereas, pursuant to rights and duties heretofore established, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, an Indiana corporation, has this day executed and tendered to the City of Indianapolis and its Board of Directors for Utilities, instruments of transfer of all of its property, including a deed of conveyance of real estate, assignments of lease interests, and assignments of personal property, subject to the legal obligations of said Company including the obligation of a certain lease bearing date of September 30, 1913, by and between The Indianapolis Gas Company an Indiana corporation, and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis recorded in Miscellaneous Record 78 at page 257 and following in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana; and

Whereas, said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has also this day executed and tendered to the City of Indianapolis and its Board of Directors for Utilities an instrument purporting specifically to assign said The Indianapolis Gas Company lease to said City, subject to the terms and conditions contained in said lease; and

Whereas, this Board deems said lease to be onerous
148 and disadvantageous to the City of Indianapolis, and in the discretion of this Board said lease should not be taken over, adopted, or assumed, but should be wholly rejected, its assignment not accepted, and said lease should not be recognized as one of the obligations, if such it is, of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to which any property of said Company is subjected when in the possession of the City of Indianapolis; and

Whereas, this Board in its discretion determines that the other property of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis tendered by it to the City of Indianapolis should be accepted upon condition that such property is not subject to any obligation to said The Indianapolis Gas Company;

Now therefore be it resolved by the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, in the exercise of the discretion conferred upon it by law, and on behalf of the City of Indianapolis:

1. That the City of Indianapolis by this Board accept the tendered assignments, transfers, and conveyances of all of the property of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, an Indiana corporation, excepting, however the certain lease executed by The Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, to said Citizens Gas Company, bearing date of September 30, 1913; and on assumption and condition that such acceptance in no way obligates the City of Indianapolis to said The Indianapolis Gas Company under said lease.

2. That the City of Indianapolis by this Board refuses to assume and be bound in any manner by the terms and provisions of said lease.

3. That the City of Indianapolis by this Board rejects and refuses to accept the assignment of said lease tendered by said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to the City.

4. That the City of Indianapolis by this Board refuses to recognize said lease as an obligation of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis which the City is bound to accept, or which in any respect whatsoever is one to which the property of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, when transferred to this City, is in any manner subject or which constitutes a charge upon such property.

5. That the following instrument be executed and served upon The Indianapolis Gas Company and recorded in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana;

Rejection of Assignment of Lease and Refusal to Assume, Take Over, or Be Bound Thereby.

The City of Indianapolis, Indiana, by its Board of Directors for Utilities of its Department of Utilities, hereby refuses to take over, adopt, or assume the certain lease bearing date of September 30, 1913, executed by The Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, to Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, an Indiana corporation, and recorded in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana, in Miscellaneous Record 78 at page 257 and following; rejects the assignment of said lease tendered to said City by said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis; and refuses to recognize said lease as an obligation of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis which this City is bound to accept, 149 or which in any respect whatsoever is one to which the property of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, when transferred to said City, is in any manner subject or which constitutes a charge thereon.

Gentlemen:

Your letters of July 23, August 31, and September 16, 1935, have been brought to the attention of the Board of Directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company. An earlier meeting of the Board was prevented by the absence of many of its members.

In acknowledging these letters, I am directed by the Board of Directors to say that the Board assumes the validity of the lease entered into by it with the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis on September 30, 1913, which was approved by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, and that all of its provisions continue to have binding force.

If the Department of Public Utilities of the City of Indianapolis desires to discuss with The Indianapolis Gas Company any of the provisions of that lease, or any questions relating thereto, The Indianapolis Gas Company will, of course, be glad to take part in such a discussion at a time and place mutually agreeable to the representatives of the Company and the Department of Utilities.

Pending the determination of the questions which you may desire to consider, The Indianapolis Gas Company, not desiring to disrupt or inconvenience the public service, will be glad to enter into a mutual stipulation with you, if you so desire, that compliance with the terms of the lease shall be without prejudice to the legal rights and claims either of the Department of Utilities or of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

Very truly yours,
The Indianapolis Gas Company,

Secretary.

EXHIBIT E.

March 2, 1936.

The Indianapolis Gas Company,
1004 Majestic Building,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Gentlemen:

The Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis will pay to The Indianapolis Gas Company on or before March 25th, 1936, a sum equal to the semi-annual instalment of interest due on the outstanding bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company, which interest is due March 30, 1936, in the estimated amount of $171,575, together with the regular charges of the Trustee for disbursing such sum of money and will also pay during the period of this agreement all State, County and Municipal taxes due on account of assessments on the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company covered by a lease between that Company and the Citizens Gas Company dated September 30, 1913.

The Department of Utilities will also pay the Federal income taxes of The Indianapolis Gas Company on account of any money paid by the Citizens Gas Company or the Department of Utilities to The Indianapolis Gas Company during the year 1935, and the instalment of Indiana Gross Income Tax due on or before April 15, 1936, and all insurance premiums on any property covered by said lease.

The Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis will also deposit in escrow with The Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis, Indiana, during the continuance of this agreement, a sum equal to the semi-annual instalments
151 of interest on the presently outstanding bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company and a sum equal to the dividends on the presently outstanding stock of said Company, said deposits to be made as and when the sums referred to shall become due in accordance with the terms of said lease, subject to the following conditions and agreements:

1st. That the amount so deposited shall be held by The Indiana National Bank at Indianapolis and shall be disbursed under the following conditions only:

(a) If a settlement of the presently existing controversy between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis as to the validity of said lease dated September 30, 1913, and its binding force upon and as against the City of Indianapolis and this Department of Utilities of said City, or against any of the property acquired by said City or said Department, from Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, is reached and an agreement of settlement is made, then in accordance with the agreement of the parties.

(b) In the event no settlement of such controversy is reached, then if it shall be finally determined in a litigated case that said lease of September 30, 1913, is a valid and binding obligation upon the City of Indianapolis and/or the Department of Utilities of said City or upon the property acquired by such City or Department thereof from Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the sum so deposited shall be delivered by the escrow to The Indianapolis Gas Company and shall be applied in the payment of the rent due under said lease.

(c) In the event of such litigation and a final determination that said lease of September 30, 1913, is not a valid and binding obligation on the City of Indianapolis or the Department of Utilities of said City or against any of the property of either there shall be first paid to The Indianapolis Gas Company out of said sum reasonable compensations for the use of the plant and property covered by said lease from July 1st, 1936, to the date of such final adjudication, such compensation to be fixed by agreement of the parties or a decree of Court, and then whatever remains shall be paid over by said escrow to the order of said Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis.

It is understood that the payments referred to, including the deposits made with the escrow, are made without prejudice to our position or rights and that we may continue to operate the plant and equipment covered by said lease of September 30, 1913, until the present controversy is adjusted or finally terminated by a decree of Court, without such operation or such payments or the execution of this agreement constituting an admission on our part that said lease of September 30, 1913, is valid or binding on the City of Indianapolis or said Department of Utilities of said City of Indianapolis, or any of its or their property.

It is further understood that your acceptance of this agreement and of such payment and your agreement that such sums may be deposited in escrow and that we may operate the plant referred to shall not prejudice your position or rights and that you are at full liberty to assert, notwithstanding this agreement and the payment made in pur-
152 suance thereof, that said lease is a valid and binding lease upon the City of Indianapolis and said Department of Utilities of said City or against any property of either in accordance with its terms.

Very truly yours,

The City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation, William J. Mooney, A. Dallas Hitz, Alfred M. Glossbrenner, Edward W. Harris and Charles S. Rauh, as Members of the Board of Trustees for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Henry L. Dithmer, Broadhurst Elsey, Fred W. Jungclaus, Roy Sahm, Donald J. Angus, Isaac E. Woodard and Russell J. Ryan, as Members of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, defendants in the above entitled cause, and by leave of Court first obtained, hereby amend their separate and several answer and counter-claim heretofore filed in this cause in the following particulars:

(1) By striking out Subdivision 19 of said answer and inserting a new subdivision 19 in the following words:

"19. With respect to Subdivision 19 of said complaint, these answering defendants deny that upon the execution and delivery of said lease of September 30, 1913, the same became subject to the deed of trust in which plaintiff is successor trustee and they deny that said lease became a part of the trust estate covered by said mortgage to the same extent as though it had been executed and delivered prior to the execution and delivery of said deed of trust, or to any extent.

These answering defendants admit that the covenant in said lease of September 30, 1913, requiring the payment of rent was made for the benefit of The Indianapolis Gas Company and for the indirect benefit of others, including bondholders of said Company so far as the same was applicable to the payment of interest on the mortgage bonds of the bondholders, but deny that such lease was valid for a period of 99 years or binding upon the City of Indianapolis as 156 Successor Trustee; and deny that the mortgage trustee is vested with a distinct and independent right to enforce the performance of the lessee's obligations and engagements under said lease in so far as the same directly affect any supposed rights of the holder of bonds, but on the contrary aver that The Indianapolis Gas Company, in the first instance, is the sole person with any legal right to enforce whatever obligations may exist under said lease of September 30, 1913, and that the plaintiff has no standing to seek to enforce the same until there has been a refusal on the part of The Indianapolis Gas Company so to do, which these answering defendants allege on information and belief has not occurred. They therefore allege that the plaintiff has no capacity to sue in this cause and that as hereinafter more particularly averred this suit is a collusive one and cannot be maintained by this plaintiff.

These answering defendants deny that said lease was valid when executed and further allege that the plaintiff or its predecessor trustee and the bondholders whom it alleges had by the terms of said lease of September 30, 1913, due notice and warning of the probable invalidity of said lease for any term longer than the period of the franchise contract heretofore referred to which expired on August 30, 1930, and such additional period as was reasonably necessary within which to complete the transfer of the trust assets to the City of Indianapolis as successor trustee, and allege that for the reasons hereinafter specifically set forth in subdivision 27 of this answer said lease, if valid, was not valid for a longer period.

Alternatively, these answering defendants allege that the mortgage of which plaintiff is successor trustee does not constitute a lien upon the lease of September 30, 1913, or upon any rentals which might be due thereunder, and that if plaintiff has any right to maintain an action to determine the validity of said lease such right arises solely out of the fact that said lease was made for the indirect benefit of The Indianapolis Gas Company's bondholders and stockholders; that in any such action The Indianapolis Gas Company is an indispensable party because of the validity or invalidity of said lease cannot be determined as against these answering defendants in an action to which it is not a party and in which the judgment or decree would not be binding on it; that The Indianapolis Gas Company has been made and is a party defendant to this cause but should be aligned in interest with the plaintiff, and that upon such alignment being made there will be one plaintiff who is a citizen and resident of the State of Indiana and all the defendants are citizens and residents of the State of Indiana. Accordingly no diversity of citizenship exists, and there being no other ground of Federal jurisdiction alleged in the bill of complaint, it should be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction of the subject matter.

These answering defendants, however, deny that said lease was ever valid or enforceable for any period of time after the transfer of said trust property to the City of Indianapolis as successor trustee and deny that the plaintiff has any right to bring any action to enforce the performance thereof or obtain a declaration of the validity of said lease."

157 2. By adding subdivision 2½ to the prayer of said answer in the following words:

"2½. That if the Court should hold that the plaintiff has a sufficient interest to enable it to obtain a declaratory judgment as to the validity of said lease of September 30, 1913, that it adjudge and decree that The Indianapolis Gas Company is an indispensable party to such an action; that thereupon The Indianapolis Gas Company be aligned as a party plaintiff and this cause dismissed for want of jurisdiction of the subject matter because one plaintiff and all defendants are citizens and residents of the State of Indiana and no federal jurisdiction exists on the ground of diversity of citizenship or otherwise."

PLAINTIFF'S ANSWER TO THE COUNTERCLAIM OF CERTAIN DEFENDANTS.

Now comes The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, Trustee, the plaintiff in the above entitled cause, and, leave of Court having first been duly obtained, makes the following answer to the counterclaim of defendants, the City of Indianapolis and others:

Plaintiff admits that it is a corporation and is a citizen and resident of the State of New York and that it is a successor trustee under a deed of trust executed on the first day of October, 1902, by the defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, to secure the payment of certain bonds now outstanding in the total principal amount of $6,881,000. Plaintiff denies that it is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of New York and alleges that in fact it is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the banking laws of the United States.

Plaintiff admits that on the 30th day of September, 1913, the defendants, The Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens

Gas Company of Indianapolis, entered into a written lease for a term of ninety-nine years, a copy of which, marked "Exhibit B", is made a part of the plaintiff's bill of complaint.

160 Plaintiff admits that at the time of the execution of said lease the physical assets and property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis were the subject of a public charitable trust, created pursuant to the terms and conditions of a certain franchise and articles of incorporation and by-laws of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the precise meaning and purpose of which is to be determined from the provisions thereof, for which purpose reference is made thereto; and plaintiff says that whether the trustee of said public charitable trust was the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis or its Board of Directors or the Board of Trustees created for the purpose of holding and voting all of said company's outstanding stock, if material to a determination of any of the issues presented in this cause, which plaintiff denies, is a question for the Court to decide, all of the pertinent facts relating thereto within plaintiff's knowledge being set forth in plaintiff's bill of complaint; and plaintiff admits that the trust property hereinabove referred to was, on or about September 9, 1935, transferred to the City of Indianapolis. As to the alleged controversy, and the particulars thereof, between the counterclaimants and defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, plaintiff has no independent or firsthand knowledge and therefore is unable to admit or deny the allegations with reference thereto.

Plaintiff admits that defendant, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, tendered to the counterclaimants an assignment of said lease, a copy of which, marked "Exhibit F", is made a part of plaintiff's bill of complaint, and that the counterclaimants purported to refuse to accept said assignment.

Plaintiff admits that as Trustee under the Deed of Trust securing the bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company 161 it asserts that said lease is valid and binding upon the counterclaimants, but denies that it has no legal right so to do.

Plaintiff denies that said lease of September 30, 1913, is not a valid or enforceable obligation against the counterclaimants or the property of said public charitable trust, from and after September 9, 1935.

Answering the allegations of the paragraph of defendants' said counterclaim marked "First", plaintiff denies each and every allegation in said paragraph contained.

Answering the allegations of the paragraph of defendants' counterclaim marked "Second", plaintiff admits that said lease contains provisions dealing with refinancing the outstanding bond issue of The Indianapolis Gas Company, with increases in annual rentals if gas is sold for less than certain prices stated therein, and dealing with the payment of the rent reserved therein, for the precise language of which provisions plaintiff refers to the lease itself, but plaintiff denies that any provision of said lease on these subjects is illegal or unenforceable. Plaintiff is not informed concerning the payments which have been made by the lessee for rent and taxes under the terms of said lease.

Answering the allegations of the paragraph of defendants' counterclaim marked "Third", plaintiff admits that at the time said lease was executed and continuously ever since, the City of Indianapolis was and has been a city of the first class. Respecting the provisions of the statutes of In-162 diana referred to in said paragraph "Third", plaintiff says that the relevant and applicable statutes speak for themselves, but plaintiff denies that the aforesaid lease was void when executed or is now void in any respect whatever, and denies that said lease could not be ratified. Plaintiff is without knowledge as to what appropriations have been made by the City of Indianapolis and as to what steps or actions may have been taken by the City of Indianapolis or by its Board of Public Works or its Common Council, and asks that strict proof be made of the allegations of said counterclaim on these subjects.

Answering the allegations of the paragraphs of defendants' said counterclaim marked "Fourth", "Fifth" and "Sixth", plaintiff denies each and every allegation in said paragraphs contained.

Plaintiff denies that the counterclaimants are entitled to any judgment against it declaring said lease of September 30, 1913, invalid or unenforceable against the counterclaimants or against the properties of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis taken over by the City of Indianapolis as successor trustee and denies each and every remaining allegation in defendant's counterclaim not specifically admitted or denied herein. For further answer plaintiff refers to and incorporates herein each and every allegation in its bill of complaint contained.

Wherefore, plaintiff prays that the counterclaim of defendants, the City of Indianapolis and others, be dismissed and that it have judgment against said defendants for its costs.

Comes now the defendant Indianapolis Gas Company, by its solicitors, and files reply to counter-claim of co-defendants, which reply is as follows:

164 In the District Court of the United States.
* * (Caption—1844) * *

SEPARATE AND SEVERAL REPLY OF THE INDIANAPOLIS GAS COMPANY TO COUNTERCLAIM OF CO-DEFENDANTS.

The Indianapolis Gas Company, a Corporation, defendant in the above entitled cause, for its separate and several reply to the counterclaim of defendants, the City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation, and others, filed herein, by way of such reply says:

It admits that The Chase National Bank of the City of New York is a corporation and is a citizen and resident of the State of New York and that it is a successor Trustee under a Deed of Trust executed by this counter-defendant securing bonds in the total principal amount of $6,881,000.

That the Indianapolis Gas Company and the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis entered into said written lease for ninety-nine years, a copy of which, marked "Exhibit B", is made a part of said counterclaim. It denies that at the date of execution of said lease the Citizens Gas Company of 165 Indianapolis was not the owner of the property it was then operating but alleges that it was only such property as should be held by that company at the expiration of its franchise as was then to be conveyed to the City of Indianapolis "subject to * * * (all) legal obligations against said company" which was impressed with a public charitable trust. And avers that said company held title thereto, with full power under the law to bind said property as Lessee of this counter-defendant's property by the execution of said lease, thereby obtaining the use and control of the property of this answering counter-defendant.

It denies that at said time the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was not the owner of the gas manufacturing and distributing plant and property it was then operating and denies that it was without power and authority to execute said lease binding it and the property it then owned and held for performance of said lease the full period of ninety-nine years, and denies that the binding force of such lease was limited to the date of August 30, 1930, or to any other period, except as provided and expressed in and by the provisions of said lease.

It denies that the transfer or attempted transfer by Citizens Gas Company of its property or any part thereof to the City of Indianapolis on September 9, 1935, or at any time operated to release Citizens Gas Company, or any of the property it so transferred, from any of the obligations previously imposed thereon by the terms of the lease dated September 30, 1913, but avers that each and all of the 166 provisions thereof are still binding upon each and all of the parties thereto, and upon the property of the Citizens Gas Company, and of the counter-claimants herein, who, this counter-defendant avers upon information and belief, did not pay to said Company any consideration for its said property, but accepted from it a wholly voluntary conveyance thereof, leaving the grantor penniless.

It admits that a controversy between it and counter-claimants as to whether or not said lease of September 30, 1913, is a valid and enforce obligation against these counter-claimants, and that this defendant, Indianapolis Gas Company, asserts and has asserted and it now avers that said lease is valid and binding as against and upon Citizens Gas Company and its assignee and all its property to counter-claimants, and also binding and enforceable against these counter-claimants. This defendant avers, they received, accepted and took over all the property and assets, duties and obligations of Citizens Gas Company without any consideration paid to or received by said company, and thereby left it wholly without property and assets and without any ability to perform its contract obligation, and they took possession of the leased property as part thereof and proceeded to operate the same without notice to or action by this counter-defendant, or any owner thereof or person interested therein except only said Lessee.

it does not know whether or not Citizens Gas Company tendered to counter-claimants any assignment of the lease marked "Exhibit F", nor what counter-claimant did 167 with reference thereto, nor for what reason the Citizens Gas Company is made a party defendant to the counterclaim, and asks strict proof of the allegations concerning same.

It admits that The Chase National Bank as Trustee under said Mortgage Deed of Trust securing bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company is asserting that the lease is valid and binding, but does not admit that it has no right to do so.

It denies that said lease of September 30, 1913, is not a valid or enforceable obligation against cross-complainants for any reason whatever and more particularly:

First. The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has express as well as implied authority, by law and valid ordinances, to execute said lease for 99 years with the approval of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, which approval was given, and said lease was and continues to be valid and binding upon said Company and upon its assignees; and by accepting the voluntary assignment of all the property and franchises of said Company and by the acts they have done pursuant thereto, counter-claimants have become and are bound by the terms of said lease, which is not and never was ultra vires, but is and at all times has been valid.

168 Second. The Indianapolis Gas Company admits that the 99-year lease in question, made part of plaintiff's bill of complaint marked Exhibit B, contains provisions on the subjects of (a) refinancing the present outstanding bond issue of the Indianapolis Gas Company, and (b) as to an increase in the amount of the annual rental upon a contingency therein stated, and (c) to make certain payments, including taxes, all as written in said lease. But it denies that those provisions are correctly recited in the counter claim and asks that the court will read said Exhibit B, which is by reference made part of this reply, to disclose what really are its provisions, and particularly denies that any such provisions, whether in themselves valid or not, vitiate or render invalid the said lease and its other provisions. And it avers that counter-claimants and their assignor, Citizens Gas Company, have had exclusive possession and control of the leased property for more than twenty-three years, towit, since September 30, 1913, and continuously have had and now have exclusive knowledge of how much money they paid out which is designated by them as "including payments for the benefit of the stockholders and bondholders of the Indianapolis Gas Company and taxes," and the only knowledge this counter-defendant has thereof is such as said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and they have given out; and counter-defendant disclaims knowledge of what such payments have averaged, and asks that counter-claimant make strict proof.

Third. Said counter-defendant admits the City of Indianapolis was and is a city of the first class, but expressly de-169 nies that on September 30th, 1913, there was any provision of law in force which made the execution of a lease of the property and franchises of the Indianapolis Gas Company or of any public utility whatever operating under an existing franchise to another public utility corporation also operating under a franchise, at all subject in any way or degree to the control or to the approval or to any action whatever on the part of the Board of Public Works or of the Common Council as provided by sections 85 and 254 of the Act of 1905, Chapter 129, page 219 (271, 396) "concerning municipal Corporations" (Burns Ind. Stat. Ann. 1933, sec. 48-1507 and 48-7302). And expressly denies that either of said sections of the statute (city charter) recited (in part) in the counter-claim is in any way pertinent or material to the issues joined in this action.

It is not informed as to what appropriations the City of Indianapolis may have made or may not have made prior to September 30, 1913, or at any other time and asks for strict proof of all and any pertinent facts in relation thereto.

It is informed, and therefore avers, that so far, if at all, as the sections of the statute above referred to or either of them otherwise would or might have limited the right and power of Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, both operating public utilities in the City of Indianapolis, to enter into the lease under consideration dated September 30, 1913 and marked Exhibit B, the Public Service Commission Act of March 4, 1913 (Ch. 76, pp. 167-214; Burns Ind. 1933, secs. 54-101 to 54-725) superseded and to that extent repealed them, and that said lease is and continuously has been a valid and binding contract.

170 Fourth. It denies that said lease of September 30, 1913, was or is onerous or burdensome upon any owner of an interest in the Citizens Gas Company or its property, or exceeded the power of the parties to make it.

(a) The annual rent reserve was and is only a fair return on the value of the leased property of this counter-defendant.

(b) No requirement as to refinancing the outstanding bond issue of the Indianapolis Gas Company was burdensome or unfair, and moreover, any invalidity of such provisions, if established, would not and could not affect the binding force of the lease before and up until refinancing by the sale of bonds below par should or might become necessary, and none of said bonds will mature until the year 1952.

(c) Counter-defendant is informed and believes and therefore avers that neither at the time the lease was executed nor at any time since has a fair price for gas produced from the leased plant and marketed by the lessor been, nor is it now produced and marketed at a cost as low as 45 cents per 1000 cubic feet, nor in fact nearly so low as that rate, and that the restriction upon reducing the price of gas below that figure was and is only a reasonable restriction to prevent the lessee from selling gas produced by the plant of a rival competitor below the cost of production and sale while holding possession of its property under a lease, and thereby reducing and 171 destroying the value of such property and then turning it back to the lessor worthless and without earning value. And such restriction is in no sense burdensome to the lessee or to its assignees, these cross-complainants.

Fifth. This is merely an assertion of legal conclusions, in reply to which the Indianapolis Gas Company says that said lease is neither burdensome nor onerous in its character, but was and is binding upon the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis in relation in which it acquired and has held and now holds the leased premises, and is binding upon the City of Indianapolis and all the counter-claimants as assignees and upon all and every part of the property, franchises and assets of said lessee company, leaving it nothing with which to meet its own obligations, and as having taken possession of the leased premises so turned over to them by the Lessee on September 9, 1935, and operated them as part of said leasee's gas plant for a long time, without any right and privilege so to do except as taking and holding the same under said lessee company; and that it has no right under the law of Indiana now to reject the same while continuing to hold all the property and franchises of its grantor the lessee.

Sixth. That no terms of any Public Charitable Trust were violated by the execution of said lease; that the lease does not require the corporate existence of any corporation to 172 continue for the entire term of the lease, whether of the trustee or the owner of any other relation. And on information and belief this counter-defendant avers that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was incorporated in 1905 for the term of 50 years, and that its term of existence has not expired; that under the law of Indiana in 1913 when this lease was made individuals or partners could lawfully own and operate a public utility franchise, and could and still can lawfully act as trustee of a Public Charitable Trust or any other kind.

That these counter-claimants are not entitled to any judgment whatever as against the Indianapolis Gas Company of Indianapolis, but that said lease is valid and binding and should be upheld, and denies each and every remaining allegation in defendants' counter-claim not specifically admitted or denied herein.

Wherefore said The Indianapolis Gas Company prays:

That the counter-claimants take nothing as against it, that said counter-claim be dismissed and that it have judgment against them for its costs, together with reasonable expenses of this defendant in the defense of this suit including reasonable attorney fees for its solicitors.

173 And afterwards towit at the November Term of said Court, on the 30th day of November, 1936, before the Honorable Robert C. Baltzell, Judge of said Court, the following further proceedings were had herein, towit: Filed Nov. 193

Comes now the defendant Citizens Gas Company, by its solicitors, and files separate answer and counter-claim, which is as follows:

174 IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.
* * (Caption—1844) * *

(*1) SEPARATE ANSWER AND THE COUNTERCLAIM OF THE DEFENDANT CITIZENS GAS COMPANY OF INDIANAPOLIS.

Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a defendant in the above entitled cause, for its separate answer to the plaintiff's bill of complaint, and by way of counterclaim, says:

(*2) This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 1 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

II.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 2 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

III.

This defendant admits the averments of Subdivision 3 of plaintiff's bill of complaint that this suit is brought by the plaintiff as Trustee under a deed of trust executed on the 1st day of October, 1902, by the defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company to secure the payment of the principal and interest of certain first mortgage bonds of the said The Indianapolis Gas Company; that the plaintiff seeks a declaratory judgment to determine and fix the rights of the plaintiff as Mortgagee and as Trustee as aforesaid, and to determine the rights of the plaintiff and the obligations of the several defendants herein under or growing out of a certain lease indenture, as described in said plaintiff's bill of complaint, executed by and between the defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company and this defendant on September 30th, 1930, which said lease indenture, and the property leased thereunder, is part and parcel of the property of the trust of which the said plaintiff is Trustee, and that the plaintiff seeks further relief by way of injunction to preserve and protect the said property and the corpus of its trust, to prevent loss, waste and damage to the same, and to prevent irreparable loss

(*3) and damage to the holders of said bonds; that there is a real and actual controversy as to the validity and as to the rights and obligations under the said lease.

This defendant has no knowledge as to whether this suit is brought by the plaintiff as Trustee for and on behalf of the holders and owners of said bonds and pursuant to the rights granted to the original Trustees and their successor or successors under said deed of trust, and at the specific instance and request of the holders and owners of $415,000.00 in principal amount of said bonds, and neither admits nor denies said averments, but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof.

That this defendant makes no answer to the averment in said subdivision that the plaintiff has no plain, complete or adequate remedy at law, and that adequate relief can only be administered in a court of equity, for the reason that such averment is a conclusion upon an issue of law involved in this suit.

IV.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 4 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

V.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 5 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

VI.

177 This defendant admits the averments contained in (*4) Subdivision 6 of plaintiff's bill of complaint except that this defendant denies that it has at all times continued to operate under the provisions of the certain franchise and contract granted and entered into on the 25th day of August, 1905, by and between the City of Indianapolis and three individual citizens, viz., Alfred E. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt.

This defendant avers that from the date of its organization, on the 23d day of May, 1906, it continued to operate under the terms of the said franchise until August 27th, 1921, at which time, pursuant to the laws of the State of Indiana, it filed its declaration of surrender of said franchise and accepted in lieu thereof an indeterminate permit, under which it continued to operate as a public utility until September 9th, 1935. That on September 9th, 1935, this defendant conveyed and transferred to the City of Indianapolis all of the property owned and held by it of every nature and description whatsoever, and since said date this defendant has not been engaged in any business of any nature whatsoever and has owned and held no property of any nature or description whatsoever except as specifically set forth in Subdivision XVI of this answer. Said conveyance and transfer was made by this defendant in the manner and form, and pursuant to the right, duty and obligation of this defendant so to do as specifically set forth in Subdivision IX of this answer.

VII.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 7 of plaintiff's bill of complaint except that this defendant makes no answer to any conclusion of law therein regarding the legal effect upon the issues involved in this suit of the facts averred therein.

178 (*5) VIII.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 8 of plaintiff's bill of complaint except that this defendant makes no answer to any conclusion of law therein regarding the legal effect upon the issues involved in this suit of the facts averred therein.

IX.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 9 of plaintiff's bill of complaint except that this defendant makes no answer to any conclusion of law therein regarding the legal effect upon the issues involved in this suit of the facts averred therein.

X.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 10 of plaintiff's bill of complaint except that this defendant has no knowledge as to whether these additional bonds were widely sold and distributed and were acquired and purchased in reliance that the same were secured by a valid and enforceable ninety-nine year lease to a responsible corporation, that said corporation, its successors and assigns, were legally obligated to pay the interest thereon as a part of the rental under said lease, and that the validity of said lease had been judicially and finally determined by the Public Service Commission of Indiana and by the courts of Indiana, and neither admits nor denies said averments, but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof 179 (*6) thereof.

XI.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 11 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

XII.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 12 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

XIII.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 13 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

XIV.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 14 of plaintiff's bill of complaint except that this defendant makes no answer to any conclusion of law therein regarding the legal effect upon the issues involved in this suit of the facts averred therein.

XV.

This defendant has no knowledge of the averments contained in Subdivision 15 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint, and neither admits nor denies said averments, but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof.

XVI.

This defendant denies the averments of Subdivision 16 of plaintiff's bill of complaint, but alleges that prior to September 9th, 1935, the City of Indianapolis deposited with The Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis, in a special
(*7) account to the credit of this defendant, the sums of $2,500,000 and $1,050,000 to be held on deposit by this defendant as trust funds to be used for the sole purpose of retiring, respectively, the outstanding common stock of this defendant at the par value thereof plus accumulated dividends thereon at the rate of 10% per annum, and retiring the outstanding preferred stock of this defendant at 105% of the par value thereof; that the City of Indianapolis, by and through the Board of Directors for Utilities of said City, by appropriate resolution, relinquished any and all interest which it may have had, if any, in the said funds, to the end that said funds might be held in trust solely and irrevocably for the benefit of the holders of such common and preferred stock entitled thereto; that this defendant by appropriate resolution adopted by this Board of Directors declared that such funds were to be held by this defendant solely and irrevocably for the sole benefit of the holders of the common and preferred stock of the Company entitled thereto, and that the trust created by the deposits, as aforesaid, should forever remain irrevocable.

That, as of November 1, 1936, all the outstanding common stock of this defendant had been retired as aforesaid except common stock of the total par value of $1475.00, and all of the outstanding preferred stock of this defendant had been retired as aforesaid. The funds remaining in said trust fund have at all times been sufficient to retire, pay off and discharge the amount due the holders of the certificates for such remaining common stock upon the proper presentation of the said certificates.

(*8) This defendant has no knowledge as to whether the City of Indianapolis paid, or provided for payment, direct to the holders of the outstanding bonds of this defendant the sum of $2,858,500 representing the full amount of such outstanding bonds, with full knowledge of the obligations of this defendant under the said ninety-nine year lease and without notice to the plaintiff, or the holders of bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company for whom plaintiff is Trustee, and neither admits nor denies said averments, but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof.

This defendant has no knowledge as to the averment that the City of Indianapolis had full knowledge that after the retirement of all of this defendant's capital stock, it would be without means for meeting or paying its said obligations and neither admits nor denies said averment but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof. In connection therewith this defendant alleges that upon the conveyance and transfer of all of its property to the City of Indianapolis, in the manner and form, and pursuant to the rights, duties and obligations of this defendant so to do, as specifically set forth in Subdivision XX of this answer, on September 9th, 1935, this defendant had no further duty or obligation under the said ninety-nine year lease. For the reasons specifically set forth in Subdivision XX of this answer, this defendant, upon the conveyance and transfer of its property to the City of Indianapolis as aforesaid, fully and completely discharged all obligations imposed

(*9) upon it by the said ninety-nine year lease or otherwise, and this defendant thereupon was entirely released and discharged from any and all future obligations or duties under the said ninety-nine year lease, and said ninety-nine year lease does not constitute a valid obligation of this defendant.

XVII.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 17 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

XVIII.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 18 of plaintiff's bill of complaint that the City of Indianapolis, through its Department of Utilities, accepted the assignment and transfer under the terms and conditions as set forth in Exhibit E and adopted a resolution purporting to reject the assignment of the lease from The Indianapolis Gas Company to this defendant, and that the City of Indianapolis on September 9th, 1935, took possession of all and singular the properties of this defendant, and took over the operation of the said gas system.

183

(*10) This defendant has no knowledge as to all the remaining averments contained in said subdivision and neither admits nor denies the same but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof.

XIX.

This defendant makes no answer to the averments in Subdivision 19 of plaintiff's bill of complaint for the reason that all of such averments are conclusions upon issues of law involved in this suit.

XX.

This defendant denies the averments of Subdivision 20 of plaintiff's bill of complaint that by virtue of the findings and orders of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, the final decree and judgment in the case of Fishback vs. Public Service Commission of Indiana, et al., the final decree and judgment in the case of Todd vs. Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, et al., and the final decree and judgment in the case of Williams vs. Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, et al., this defendant is estopped to deny that the said ninety-nine year lease, on the date of its execution, was and still is a valid obligation of this defendant. This defendant makes no answer to the averment that the defendants other than this defendant are estopped to deny that said ninety-nine year lease from the date of its execution was and still is a valid obligation of said other defendants, for the reason that such averment is a conclusion upon an issue of law involved in this suit which does not in any way affect this defendant or in which this defendant has any interest.

(*11) This defendant alleges that it was organized on the 23d day of May, 1906, under the general laws of the State of Indiana providing for the incorporation of manufacturing and mining companies, its purposes and obligations being fixed and controlled entirely by its articles of incorporation, its by-laws, and the certain franchise and contract granted and entered into on the 25th day of August, 1905, by and between the City of Indianapolis and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, copies of which instruments are made a part of plaintiff's bill of complaint, identified as Exhibit C, and are by reference made a part of this answer.

This defendant alleges that by virtue of such instruments this defendant became the Trustee of a public charitable trust for the benefit of the present and prospective gas consumers of the City of Indianapolis and all of the rights, property and assets then or thereafter acquired by this defendant were held by it as such Trustee, and for the purposes and upon the terms and conditions set forth in said instruments and no other. Said instruments provided, among other things, that when the outstanding preferred stock of this defendant shall have been retired and when the holders of the certificates representing the common stock of this defendant shall have received by dividends or otherwise upon such certificates an amount equal to the face value thereof together with interest thereon at the rate provided for, the said certificates shall all be deemed fully paid and cancelled, and it shall thereupon be the duty of the Trustees and Directors of this defendant to convey to the City of Indianapolis all the right, title

(*12) and interest of this defendant in all of its said property subject to all of the legal obligations of this defendant, to be owned and operated by the said City of Indianapolis, and that thereafter this defendant shall be wound up.

This defendant further alleges that from the date of its organization, as aforesaid, it continued to operate under the terms of the said franchise and contract until August 27th, 1921, at which time, pursuant to the laws of the State of Indiana, it filed its declaration of surrender of said franchise and accepted in lieu thereof an indeterminate permit, under which it continued to operate and hold the said property as a public utility until September 9th, 1935. This defendant avers that said indeterminate permit did not have the effect of modifying or rendering nugatory the terms of said franchise and contract insofar as they created and governed the public charitable trust as aforesaid, and the rights and obligations of this defendant as the Trustee thereof.

This defendant further alleges on information and belief that prior to the 30th day of September, 1913, and at all times subsequent thereto, this plaintiff, the defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company, and all of the holders of the said bonds either had actual knowledge of, or were bound in law by knowledge of, the terms and provisions of the said franchise and contract, the articles of incorporation of this defendant and its by-laws, and that this defendant at the end of the period of said franchise and contract, towit: on August 30th, 1930, and when the conditions fixed therein precedent to the conveyance and transfer had been fully compiled with, was under the (*13) duty and obligation to convey and transfer all of the said property to the City of Indianapolis, and to thereafter be wound up.

This defendant further alleges that prior to September 9th, 1935, all of the conditions fixed in the said franchise and contract, articles of incorporation and by-laws as precedent to the duty of this defendant to convey and transfer its said property as aforesaid had been fully and completely performed so that on said date nothing further remained to be performed or done by the City of Indianapolis to entitle it in law to have all of said property conveyed and transferred to it as aforesaid. Accordingly, on said date, this defendant, by its proper corporate officers, executed and delivered instruments of conveyance and transfer of all of its said property to the City of Indianapolis, in the manner and form and pursuant to its duty so to do as aforesaid.

This defendant avers that the said ninety-nine year lease is not a valid and legal obligation of this defendant, but that it was entirely and completely released and discharged from any such obligation at the time such conveyance and transfer was made to the City of Indianapolis, on September 9th, 1935, for each of the reasons following:

(1) Said ninety-nine year lease and the obligation of this defendant thereunder has at all times been subject to the condition implied by law that this defendant was under the duty to make the conveyance and transfer as aforesaid, retire and discharge all of its outstanding preferred and common stock and thereafter wind up its affairs.

(2) Said ninety-nine year lease and the obligation of this defendant thereunder has at all times been subject to the condition implied by law that upon the termination of said franchise period and the conveyance and transfer as aforesaid, this defendant should be entirely and completely released and discharged from any further obligation as lessee under said lease.

(3) This defendant conveyed and transferred all of its said property to the City of Indianapolis subject to all outstanding legal obligations of this defendant, including the legal obligation of this defendant under said lease, if any there be, and whether or not the City of Indianapolis or the property so conveyed and transferred is subject to the said lease for any period beyond September 9th, 1935, this defendant has fully and completely, so far as the plaintiff and the other defendants herein are concerned, carried out and performed the purpose of its organization and the duties and obligations to which it was subject as hereinbefore set forth.

(4) The Indianapolis Gas Company, and this plaintiff, are estopped to deny that this defendant has been entirely and completely released and discharged from any and all obligation under said lease as the result of the said conveyance and transfer, and that the said lease is not a valid obligation of this defendant at this time.

XXI.

This defendant denies the averments of Subdivision 20 of plaintiff's bill of complaint that by reason of the operations of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the acceptance by it and by the City of Indianapolis for more than twenty-one years of all of the benefits under (*15) said ninety-nine year lease, including the benefits of consolidated operation of the leased property, and by reason of the acts of the defendants in causing the Trustee under the aforesaid mortgage deed of trust to authenticate and deliver additional bonds to reimburse the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis for capital expenditures on account of extensions and betterments to the plant and system of The Indianapolis Gas Company theretofore made by it as lessee, and by reason of the other acts of the several defendants in causing said bonds to be sold and distributed as bonds secured by a valid ninety-nine year lease to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, its successors in trust and assigns, this defendant is estopped to deny that the said ninety-nine year lease is a valid obligation of this defendant. This defendant makes no answer to the averment that the defendants other than this defendant are estopped to deny that said ninety-nine year lease from the date of its execution was and still is a valid obligation of said other defendants, for the reason that such averment is a conclusion upon an issue of law involved in this suit which does not in any way affect this defendant or in which this defendant has any interest.

This defendant avers that for the reasons specifically set forth in Subdivision XX of this answer, the said ninety-nine year lease is not a valid and legal obligation of this defendant but that it was entirely and completely released and discharged from any such obligation at the time such conveyance and transfer was made to the City of Indianapolis, on September 9th, 1935.

This defendant makes no answer to the averments contained in Subdivision 22 of plaintiff's bill of complaint for the reason that such averments are conclusions upon issues of law involved in this suit which do not in any way affect this defendant or in which this defendant has any interest.

XXIII.

This defendant has no knowledge as to the averments contained in Subdivision 23 of plaintiff's bill of complaint, and neither admits nor denies said averments, but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof.

XXIV.

This defendant has no knowledge as to the averments contained in Subdivision 24 of plaintiff's bill of complaint, and neither admits nor denies said averments, but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof.

XXV.

This defendant has no knowledge as to the averments contained in Subdivision 25 of plaintiff's bill of complaint, and neither admits nor denies said averments, but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof.

This defendant, by way of counterclaim, complains of the plaintiff, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, as Trustee, The Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, the City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation, William J. Mooney, Sr., A. Dallas Hitz, Alfred M. Glossbrenner, Edward W. Harris, and Charles H. Rauh, as members of the Board of Trustees for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Henry L. Dithmer, Broadhurst Elsey, Fred W. Jungclaus, Roy Sahm, David J. Angus, Isaac E. Woodward, and Russell J. Ryan, as members of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, and by way of cross counterclaim alleges:

That the plaintiff, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of New York and is a citizen and resident of the State of New York; that it is a Successor-Trustee under a deed of trust executed on the 1st day of October, 1902, by the defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company to secure the payment of the principal and interest of certain bonds which are now outstanding in the hands of the public in the total principal amount of $6,881,000.

That this defendant was organized on the 23d day of May, 1906, under the general laws of the State of Indiana providing for the incorporation of manufacturing and mining companies, its purposes and obligations being fixed and controlled entirely by its articles of incorporation, its by-laws, and the certain franchise and contract granted and entered into on the 25th day of August, 1905 by and between the City of Indianapolis and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, copies of which instruments are made a part of plaintiff's bill of complaint, identified as Exhibit C, and are by reference made a part of this counterclaim.

That by virtue of such instruments this defendant became the Trustee of a public charitable trust for the benefit of the present and prospective gas consumers of the City of Indianapolis and all of the rights, property and assets then or thereafter acquired by this defendant were held by it as such Trustee, and for the purposes and upon the terms and conditions set forth in said instruments and no other. Said instruments provided, among other things, that when the outstanding preferred stock of this defendant shall have been retired and when the holders of the certificates representing the common stock of this defendant shall have received by dividends or otherwise upon such certificates an amount equal to the face value thereof together with interest thereon at the rate provided for, the said certificates shall all be deemed fully paid and cancelled, and it shall thereupon be the duty of the Trustees and Directors of this defendant to convey to the City of Indianapolis all the right, title and interest of this defendant in all of its said property subject to all of the legal obligations of this defendant, to be owned and operated by the said City of Indianapolis, and that thereafter this defendant shall be wound up.

That from the date of its organization, as aforesaid, it continued to operate under the terms of the said fran-
(*19) chise and contract until August 27th, 1921, at which time, pursuant to the laws of the State of Indiana, it filed its declaration of surrender of said franchise and accepted in lieu thereof an indeterminate permit, under which it continued to operate and hold the said property as a public utility until September 9th, 1935. This defendant avers that said indeterminate permit did not have the effect of modifying or rendering nugatory the terms of said franchise and contract insofar as they created and governed the public charitable trust as aforesaid, and the rights and obligations of this defendant as the Trustee thereof.

That on the 30th day of September, 1913, this defendant and the defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company entered into a written lease, a copy of which written lease, marked "Exhibit B", is made a part of the plaintiff's bill of complaint and by reference a part of this counterclaim.

That prior to the 30th day of September, 1913, and at all times subsequent thereto, this plaintiff, the defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company, and all of the holders of the said bonds either had actual knowledge of, or were bound in law by knowledge of, the terms and provisions of the said franchise and contract, the articles of incorporation of this defendant and its by-laws, and that this defendant at the end of the period of said franchise and contract, towit: on August 30th, 1930, and when the conditions fixed therein precedent to the conveyance and transfer had been fully complied with, was under the

That prior to September 9th, 1935, all of the conditions fixed in the said franchise and contract, articles of incorporation and by-laws as precedent to the duty of this defendant to convey and transfer its said property as aforesaid had been fully and completely performed so that on said date nothing further remained to be performed or done by the City of Indianapolis to entitle it in law to have all of said property conveyed and transferred to it as aforesaid. Accordingly, on said date, this defendant, by its proper corporate officers, executed and delivered instruments of conveyance and transfer of all of its said property to the City of Indianapolis, in the manner and form and pursuant to its duty so to do as aforesaid.

That there is a present existing controversy between this defendant and the plaintiff and the defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company as to whether the said ninety-nine year lease is still a valid and enforceable obligation against this defendant; that the defendants other than this defendant and The Indianapolis Gas Company have an interest in the determination of said controversy for the reason that they are asserting that the assignment of said lease, a copy of which is marked "Exhibit F" and made a part of plaintiff's complaint and by reference a part of this counterclaim, was not accepted by said defendants and that they had the legal right to accept the assignment of all of the remainder (*21) of the property of this defendant and to refuse to accept the assignment of said lease.

This defendant avers that the said ninety-nine year lease is not a valid and legal obligation of this defendant, but that it was entirely and completely released and discharged from any such obligation at the time such conveyance and transfer was made to the City of Indianapolis, on September 9th, 1935, for each of the reasons following:

(1) Said ninety-nine year lease and the obligation of this defendant thereunder has at all times been subject to the condition implied by law and this defendant was under the duty to make the conveyance and transfer as aforesaid, retire and discharge all of its outstanding preferred and common stock and thereafter wind up its affairs.

(2) Said ninety-nine year lease and the obligation of this defendant thereunder has at all times been subject to the condition implied by law that upon the termination of said franchise period and the conveyance and transfer as aforesaid, this defendant should be entirely and completely released and discharged from any further obligation as lessee under said lease.

(3) This defendant conveyed and transferred all of its said property to the City of Indianapolis subject to all outstanding legal obligations of this defendant, including the legal obligation of this defendant under said lease, if any there be, and whether or not the City of Indianapolis or the property so conveyed and transferred is subject to the said lease for any period beyond Sep-195 (*22) tember 9th, 1935, this defendant has fully and completely, so far as the plaintiff and the other defendants herein are concerned, carried out and performed the purpose of its organization and the duties and obligations to which it was subject as hereinbefore set forth.

(4) The Indianapolis Gas Company, and this plaintiff, are estopped to deny that this defendant has been entirely and completely released and discharged from any and all obligation under said lease as the result of the said conveyance and transfer, and that the said lease is not a valid obligation of this defendant at this time.

(5) This defendant fully and completely complied with all the terms and provisions of the said ninety-nine year lease up to and including September 9th, 1935, on which date this defendant, pursuant to its duty so to do as aforesaid, conveyed, transferred and assigned all of its said property, including its interest in and to the said ninety-nine year lease, to the City of Indianapolis, subject to all the legal obligations of this defendant, including the legal obligation under the said ninety-nine year lease, if any there be, and, whether or not the City of Indianapolis had the legal right to refuse to accept the assignment of said lease and to refuse to become bound by the obligations thereof, this defendant has fully and completely performed all of its obligations under the said ninety-nine year lease and is entirely and completely released from any obligation thereunder.

That this defendant is entitled to a judgment and declaration of this Court that the said ninety-nine year 196 (*23) lease is not a valid and binding obligation against this defendant, but that it was entirely and completely released and discharged from any such obligation at the time such conveyance, transfer and assignment was made to the City of Indianapolis, on September 9th, 1935.

This defendant further alleges that the defendants other than this defendant and The Indianapolis Gas company, are asserting that the City of Indianapolis not only has the right to reject the assignment of the said lease as aforesaid, but that the said City of Indianapolis had the legal right to accept the transfer of all the remainder of the property of this defendant subject to all outstanding legal obligations of this defendant except the legal obligation under the said lease, if any there be. This defendant avers that, for the reasons hereinbefore specifically set forth and by virtue of the acceptance of the transfer of such property, the City of Indianapolis has assumed each and all of the obligations of the said lease, if any there be, and that all of the said property so transferred to and accepted by the said City of Indianapolis is subject to the charge and obligation of the said lease, if any there be; and that this defendant is entitled to a judgment and declaration accordingly.

This defendant avers that it, its directors, officers and trustees, had complete power and authority to execute and enter into the said lease in the manner and form as aforesaid, and admits that the said lease was valid and binding upon this defendant and its property from the date of the execution thereof to the time (*24) this defendant conveyed, transferred and assigned all of its property to the City of Indianapolis as aforesaid. For the reasons and upon the facts as hereinbefore specifically set forth, the primary controversy in this proceeding, is whether or not the City of Indianapolis and the property conveyed and transferred to it as aforesaid, are subject to the provisions of the said lease for the remainer of the term thereof as a result of the conveyance, transfer and assignment as aforesaid. Whether or not the City of Indianapolis and such property are subject to the said lease, this defendant has fully and lawfully performed its duties as Trustee of the said public charitable trust and is under no further obligation to the plaintiff or other defendants herein. This defendant, therefore, has no interest in and assumes no position with reference to the primary controversy between the plaintiff herein, The Indianapolis Gas Company and the other defendants herein, as aforesaid.

Wherefore, this defendant and counterclaimant prays:

(1) That plaintiff's bill of complaint be dismissed for want of equity.

(2) That this Court adjudge and declare that the said ninety-nine year lease is not a valid or legal obligation of this defendant, and that this defendant was entirely and completely released and discharged from any present or future obligation or liability under the said lease upon the conveyance, transfer and assignment of all of its said property to the City of Indianapolis, on September 9th, 1935.

(*25) (3) That this Court adjudge and declared that by virtue of the transfer of this property to the City of Indianapolis as hereinbefore set forth, the said City of Indianapolis has assumed each and all of the obligations of said lease, if any there be, and that all of the property so transferred and accepted by the said City of Indianapolis is subject to the charge and obligation of the said lease, if any there be.

(4) For its costs in this action and all other proper relief agreeable to equity and good conscience.

II.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Paragraph 2 of said defendants' counterclaim.

III.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Paragraph 3 of said defendants' counterclaim.

IV.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Paragraph 4 of said defendants' counterclaim.

V.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Paragraph 5 of said defendants' counterclaim.

202 VI.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Paragraph 6 of said defendants' counterclaim.

VIII.

With respect to Paragraph 8 of said defendants' counterclaim, this defendant denies that said lease of September 30th, 1913, is not a valid or enforceable obligation against the said counterclaimants or the property of said public charitable trust from and after September 9th, 1935, to the extent and for the reasons following:

(1) The conveyance, transfer and assignment by this defendant of all of its property to the City of Indianapolis in the manner and form and pursuant to its right and duty so to do, as specifically set forth in this defendant's counterclaim in this action, the averments of which are by reference made a part of this reply, entirely and completely released and discharged this defendant from any present or future obligation or liability under the said lease as of the date of said conveyance, transfer and assignment.

if any there be, and the said counterclaimants accepted the conveyance and transfer of said property and immediately took possession thereof. This defendant avers that if it is subject to any present or future obligation or liability under the said lease, that as a result of the said conveyance, transfer and assignment, the said City of Indianapolis has assumed the said lease and is subject to any such obligation, and the said property is subject to any such obligation of the said lease.

(3) As a result of the conveyance, transfer and assignment of said property to the City of Indianapolis in the manner and form and pursuant to its right and duty so to do as aforesaid, which conveyance, transfer and assignment was accepted by the said City of Indianapolis, the said counterclaimants are estopped to deny that it has not assumed each and all of the obligations of said lease, if any there be, and that all of the property so transferred and accepted by the said City is subject to the charge and obligation of the said lease, if any there be.

IX.

With respect to Paragraph 9 of said defendants' counterclaim this defendant denies that the said lease of September 30th, 1913, is not a valid and binding obligation against the said counterclaimants and is invalid, void and unenforceable against said counterclaimants and against said trust property taken over by the City of Indianapolis, to the extent and for the reasons hereinbefore specifically set forth 204 in Subdivision VIII of this reply.

Wherefore, this defendant prays:

(1) That the said defendants' counterclaim be dismissed for want of equity.

(2) For its costs herein and all other proper relief agreeable to equity and good conscience.

SEPARATE REPLY OF CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS, ET AL., TO COUNTERCLAIM OF CITIZENS GAS COMPANY OF INDIANAPOLIS.

Defendants City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation, Willim J. Mooney, A. Dallas Hitz, Alfred M. Glossbrenner, Edward W. Harris and Charles S. Rauh, as members of the Board of Trustees for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Henry L. Dithmer, Brodehurst Elsey, Fred W. Jungclaus, Roy Sahm, Isaac I. Woodard, Donald J. Angus and Russell J. Ryan, as members of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, for their separate and several reply to the counterclaim of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, say:

1. They admit the averments of the first paragraph of said counterclaim, but aver that The Chase National Bank of the City of New York is a National Banking Association under the laws of the United States; and aver also, upon information and belief, that approximately $120,000 aggregate face value of said bonds are not in the hands of the public but are held by defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company.

2. They admit the averments of the second paragraph of said counterclaim.

3. They admit the averments of the third paragraph of said counterclaim and aver that the term of such trusteeship expired on or prior to September 9, 1935.

207 4. They admit the averments of the fourth paragraph of said counterclaim.

5. They admit the averments of the fifth paragraph of said counterclaim but they deny that said lease was ever valid and enforceable.

6. They admit the averments of the sixth paragraph of said counterclaim.

7. They admit the averments of the seventh paragraph of said counterclaim; but deny that there was any obligation on said defendant Citizens Gas Company to assign and transfer to the City of Indianapolis the certain ninety-nine year lease executed by defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company to defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, or in the part of the City of Indianapolis to accept it; and they aver that the assignment of said lease to the City of Indianapolis was expressly rejected and that it was not assumed by the City of Indianapolis and is not valid or enforceable against it.

8. They admit that there is a present existing controversy as to the force and effect of said lease, but they aver that said lease is wholly invalid and unenforceable as against defendant City of Indianapolis; and they assert that to the extent that defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis seeks a declaration of the validity of said lease, and to the further extent that it seeks a declaration that said lease, if valid, is binding against said City of Indianapolis, said defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis is an indispensable party aligned in interest with plaintiff and with defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company; and being so aligned, and an Indiana corporation, the diversity of citizenship necessary to sustain the jurisdiction of the court over this cause is destroyed.

9. They make no answer to the conclusions of law contained in the ninth paragraph of said counterclaim, they admit that defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis conveyed and transferred all of its property to the City of 208 Indianapolis subject to all outstanding legal obligations of that Company, but they aver that said lease was not and is not one of such obligations, and they aver that the tendered assignment of said lease was expressly rejected by the City of Indianapolis, that said lease was not assumed by the City, and is wholly invalid and unenforceable as against defendant City of Indianapolis; and they assert that to the extent that defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis seeks a declaration of the validity of said lease and to the further extent that it seeks a declaration that said lease, if valid, is binding against said City of Indianapolis, said defendant

Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis is an indispensable party aligned in interest with plaintiff and with defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company; and being so aligned, and an Indiana corporation, the diversity of citizenship necessary to sustain the jurisdiction of the court over this cause is destroyed. It is admitted that no liability now exists against defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis under or on account of said lease, up to and including September 9, 1935.

10. They make no answer to the conclusions of law that constitute the tenth paragraph of said counterclaim, but they aver that said lease is wholly invalid and unenforceable as against defendant City of Indianapolis; and they assert that to the extent that defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis seeks a declaration of the validity of said lease and to the further extent that it seeks a declaration that said lease, if valid, is binding against said City of Indianapolis, said defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis is an indispensable party aligned in interest with plaintiff and with defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company; and being so aligned, and an Indiana corporation, the diversity of citizenship necessary to sustain the jurisdiction of the court over this cause is destroyed.

209 11. They admit that they are asserting that the city of Indianapolis had the right to reject an assignment of said lease and to accept the property of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis free from any supposed obligation under said lease; but they aver that said lease is wholly invalid and unenforceable as against defendant City of Indianapolis; and they assert that to the extent that defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis seeks a declaration of the validity of said lease and to the further extent that it seeks a declaration that said lease, if valid, is binding against said City of Indianapolis, said defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis is an indispensable party aligned in interest with plaintiff and with defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company; and being so aligned, and an Indiana corporation, the diversity of citizenship necessary to sustain the jurisdiction of the court over this cause is destroyed.

12. They deny that defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, its directors, officers, and/or trustees, had any right at all to execute and enter into said lease, for the reasons set out in paragraph 27 of the answer of these defendants in this cause; and aver that said lease is wholly invalid and unenforceable as against defendant City of Indianapolis, and they assert that to the extent that defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis seeks a declaration of the validity of said lease, and to the further extent that it seeks a declaration that said lease, if valid, is binding against said City of Indianapolis, said defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis is an indispensable party aligned in interest with plaintiff and with defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company; and being so aligned, and an Indiana corporation, the diversity of citizenship necessary to sustain the jurisdiction of the court over this cause is destroyed.

210 Wherefore, said defendants pray that said counterclaim be dismissed with costs; and for all other proper relief.

PLAINTIFF'S ANSWER TO THE COUNTERCLAIM OF DEFENDANT, CITIZENS GAS COMPANY OF INDIANAPOLIS.

Now comes The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, Trustee, the plaintiff herein, and makes the following answer to the counterclaim of defendant, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis:

Answering the second paragraph on page 17 of said defendant's separate answer and counterclaim, plaintiff denies that it is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of New York, alleges that in fact it is a 213 Answering the paragraph commencing at the top of page 18, plaintiff admits that by virtue of said franchise, articles of incorporation and by-laws a public charitable trust was created for the benefit of present and prospective gas consumers of the City of Indianapolis, that all of the rights, property and assets then or thereafter acquired by defendant, Citizens Gas Company, were the subject of this public charitable trust, and that said instruments contained provisions substantially as set forth in the aforesaid paragraph. Plaintiff is not informed of the extent to which, or the time when, the holders of bonds for which it is trustee had actual knowledge, if any, of the terms and provisions of said franchise and contract, articles of incorporation and by-laws, but denies that any of the holders of said bonds may be charged with constructive knowledge thereof, and if actual knowledge of any of said terms and provisions is material, plaintiff asks that strict proof be made thereof.

Answering the first complete paragraph on page 20, plaintiff admits that on or about September 9, 1935, defendant, Citizens Gas Company, executed and delivered certain instruments of conveyance and transfer of all its property to the City of Indianapolis, but plaintiff is not informed whether all the conditions fixed by said defendant's franchise or by its articles of incorporation or by its by-laws as precedent to said defendant's obligation to convey its property to the City of Indianapolis had been fully and completely performed prior to the time of said conveyance and transfer and plaintiff asks strict proof thereof, if deemed material.

215 Plaintiff denies each and every allegation contained in the first complete paragraph on page 21.

Plaintiff denies each and every allegation contained in the paragraph on page 21 marked "(1)".

Answering the paragraph on page 21 marked "(3)", plaintiff admits that defendant, Citizens Gas Company, conveyed and transferred all its property to the City of Indianapolis, subject to all outstanding legal obligations of said defendant, including its legal obligations under said lease, but plaintiff denies that said defendant has completely carried out or has performed the purposes of its organization and denies that said defendant has fully and completely, so far as plaintiff is concerned, carried out or performed the duties and obligations to which it was and is subject.

Plaintiff denies each and every allegation contained in the paragraph on page 22 marked "(4)".

Answering the paragraph on page 22 marked "(5)", plaintiff admits that on or about September 9, 1935, defendant, Citizens Gas Company, conveyed all its property, including its interest in said lease, to the City of Indianapolis, subject to all the legal obligations of said defendant, including its obligations under said lease; but plaintiff is not informed whether said defendant fully and completely complied with all the terms and provisions of said lease up to and including September 9, 1935, and asks that strict proof be made thereof, and plaintiff denies that said defendant has fully and completely performed all of its obligations under said lease and denies that said defendant is released from any obligations thereunder.

216 Plaintiff denies each and every allegation contained in the paragraph commencing at the bottom of page 22.

Plaintiff admits all of the allegations contained in the first complete paragraph on page 23.

Answering the paragraph commencing at the bottom of page 23, plaintiff admits that defendant, Citizens Gas Company, its directors, officers, and trustees, had complete power and authority to execute and to enter into the said lease, and plaintiff admits that said lease was valid and binding upon said defendant and its property from the date of the execution thereof. Plaintiff denies that said lease ceased to be valid and binding upon said defendant when it conveyed its property to the City of Indianapolis, denies that said defendant has fully and lawfully performed its duties under the aforesaid public charitable trust, denies that said defendant is under no further obligation to the plaintiff, and denies that said defendant has no interest in the controversy between plaintiff and the other defendants herein.

217 And afterwards to wit at the November Term of said Court, on the 16th day of January, 1937, before the Honorable Robert C. Baltzell, Judge of said Court, the following further proceedings were had herein, to wit: Filed Jan. 1937

Comes now the defendant Indianapolis Gas Company, by its solicitors, and files answer to counter-claim of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, which answer is as follows:

218 In the District Court of the United States.
* * (Caption—1844) * *

DEFENDANT THE INDIANAPOLIS GAS COMPANY'S ANSWER TO THE COUNTER-CLAIM OF DEFENDANT CITIZENS GAS COMPANY OF INDIANAPOLIS.

Comes now The Indianapolis Gas Company, counter-defendant herein, and makes answer to the counter-claim of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, as follows:

Said counter-defendant admits that The Chase National Bank of the City of New York is a corporation and is a citizen and resident of the State of New York, and that it is a successor Trustee under a deed of trust executed on the first day of October, 1902, by the defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company to secure the payment of the principal and interest of certain bonds which are now outstanding in the hands of the public in the total principal amount of $6,881,000. It does not know under the laws of what jurisdiction the Chase National Bank of the City of New York is organized as a corporation and demands proof concerning the same.

219 Answering the rhetorical paragraph which commences with the 24th line of page 17 of said defendant's answer and counter-claim, this counter-defendant admits that the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was duly organized as therein alleged, that it adopted articles and by-laws and accepted a certain franchise and contract, copies of which instruments are filed with the plaintiff's bill of complaint as Exhibit "C" thereof, all as alleged in said counter-claim; but plaintiff does not know that its purposes and obligations were fixed and controlled entirely by said instruments, nor admit the same, but is advised that the averment thereof is a conclusion of law, and asks to be excused from answering the same.

Answering the rhetorical paragraph commencing at line 7 of page 18 of said counter-claim this counter-defendant admits that by virtue of said instruments the persons therein designated became the trustees of a Public Charitable Trust for the benefit of present and prospective gas consumers of the City of Indianapolis, and that subject to the provisions thereof all the rights, property and assets then or thereafter acquired by the counter-claimant were so held as such Trustee, subject to the payment of its legal obligations, and for the purposes and upon the terms and conditions set forth in said instruments. It does not know whether or not they were held "for the purposes and upon the conditions therein set forth and no other." And counter-claimant says it does not know as a matter of fact whether the Trustee of such Public Charitable Trust was the Citizens Gas Company itself, or its Board of Directors, or the Board of Trustees which held and voted its outstanding stock, but counter-defendant is advised that this is a question for the decision of the court from 220 a consideration of said instruments and the attending fact which involves questions of law, and asks that if it be material to the determination of any issue presented in this cause the court will determine the same and advise this counter-defendant.

This counter-defendant admits that the said instruments so identified as Exhibit C with the plaintiff's complaint and with the counter-claim contains provisions substantially as set forth in the aforesaid rhetorical paragraph, which expressly make any title conveyed to the City of Indianapolis, as Trustee or otherwise, subject to all legal obligations of the Citizens Gas Company.

Answering the rhetorical paragraph commencing in line 29, page 18 of said counter-claim, this counter-defendant admits that from or immediately after the date of its organization the defendant Citizens Gas Company began to operate under the terms of the aforesaid franchise and contract, and further admits that thereafter, on or about August 27, 1921, it filed a declaration of surrender of said franchise and accepted in lieu thereof an indeterminated permit, under which it continued to operate and hold the property. But as to the remaining allegations of said rhetorical paragraph this counter-defendant has no actual knowledge concerning the Citizens Gas Company ceasing to operate or hold said property, nor the exact date thereof, and is informed that the legal effect of such indeterminate permit is a matter of law for the determination of this court and asks that it be not required to answer the same.

221 This counter-claimant admits the allegations concerning the written lease, marked Exhibit B, contained in the rhetorical paragraph commencing at line 13 on page 19.

Answering the rhetorical paragraph which commences at line 19, page 19 of the Citizens Gas Company's counter-claim this counter-defendant is not informed as to what actual knowledge this counter-defendant or any of the holders of bonds secured by the mortgage on its property had concerning the term and provisions of said franchise and contract, articles of incorporation and by-laws of the defendant Citizens Gas Company or of their legal effect, and does not even know who were then holders of the bonds secured by the mortgage of The Indianapolis Gas Company referred to, but is informed that in the succeeding 22 years a large number if not all of such bondholders have died; and it is advised that whether or not this counter-defendant company and the holders of said bonds were bound in law to know such terms and conditions and legal effect is a question of law which counter-defendant asks to be excused from answering.

Answering the rhetorical paragraph commencing at line 4 of page 20 of said counter-claim, this counter-defendant admits that at sometime in 1935 officers of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis in its name and purporting to act on its behalf executed certain instruments which purported to convey and transfer all of its property to the City of Indianapolis, and that on or about September 9, 1935 the said City, through its Trustees and Directors for Utilities received and accepted possession of such property. But this counter-defendant is not fully informed and does not know how far all of the conditions fixed in said franchise and contract, articles of incorporation and by-laws aforesaid

222 had been or have been performed and whether such performance and conveyance were in the manner and form pursuant to its duty thereunder, and ask strict proof thereof, if deemed material.

This counter-defendant admits all the allegations contained in the rhetorical paragraph of said counter-claim commencing at line 17 on page 20 thereof.

This counter-defendant denies each and every allegation contained in the rhetorical paragraph commencing at line 3, page 21 of said counter-claim and avers that the said 99 year lease is a valid and legal obligation of counter-claimant Citizens Gas Company from which it has not been entirely and completely released.

Counter-defendant is informed and therefore alleges that the averments in the rhetorical paragraph commencing at line 10 on page 21 of the counter-claim, marked "(1)" states matters of law and not facts, and asks to be excused from answering the same; and it denies any and all facts therein stated.

This counter-defendant is likewise informed and therefor alleges that the rhetorical paragraph commencing at line 17 on page 21 of the counter-claim, marked "(2)", states matters of law and not fact and therefore asks to be excused from answering the same; and it denies each and all averments of fact, if any therein contained.

This counter-defendant answering the rhetorical paragraph commencing at line 24 on page 21 of the counter-claim marked "(3)", admits that said counter-claimant conveyed and transferred all its property to the City of Indian-223 apolis, subject to all legal obligations, including the legal obligation of said counter-claimant under said lease; but this counter-defendant denies that so far as it is concerned said counter-claimant has carried out or performed the purposes of its organization or the duties and obligations to which it was and still is subject.

This counter-defendant answering the rhetorical paragraph commencing at line 6 on page 22 of said counter-claim marked "(4)", denies that it is estopped to insist that said counter-claimant has not been entirely and completely released and discharged from any and all obligations under said lease or to insist that the said lease is a valid obligation of the counter-claimant at this time.

This counter-defendant, answering the rhetorical paragraph which commences at line 12 on page 22 of said counter-claim, marked "(5)", admits that heretofore in the year 1935 said counter-claimant conveyed all its property, including its interest in and to the said 99 year lease to the City of Indianapolis, subject to all legal obligations of said counter-claimant, including its legal obligation under the said 99-year lease. Counter-defendant denies that said counter-claimant fully and completely complied with all the terms and provisions of said 99-year lease up to the date of such conveyance, and denies that counter-claimant is entirely and completely released from any obligation thereunder.

Answering the rhetorical paragraph which commences at line 28 of page 22 of said counter-claim, this counter-defendant denies that the counter-claimant is entitled to a judgment determining that the 99-year lease is not a valid and bind-224 ing obligation against it or that it has been released and discharged from its obligation thereunder by its conveyance to the City of Indianapolis or otherwise.

This counter-defendant admits the allegations of the rhetorical paragraph commencing at line 6 on page 23 of the counter-claim to the effect that certain defendants contend that the City of Indianapolis had the legal right to accept the transfer of certain gas properties subject to outstanding legal obligations of counter-claimant except its legal obligation under said 99-year lease; but that in fact the City of Indianapolis has assumed each and all of the obligations of said lease, and holds all of the property so conveyed to and accepted by it subject to the charge and obligation of said 99-year lease.

Counter-defendant, answering the averments of the rhetorical paragraph which commences at line 25 on page 23 of said counter-claim, admits that the Citizens Gas Company, its Directors, Officers and Trustees, had complete power and authority to execute and to enter into the said 99-year lease aforesaid and admits that said lease was valid and binding upon said counter-claimant and its property from the date of the execution thereof.

Counter-defendant denies that the Citizens Gas Company, this counter-claimant, has fully performed its duties as Trustee of said Public Charitable Trust and denies that it is under no further obligation to this counter-defendant; and further denies that said counter-claimant is without interest in the controversy between the plaintiff herein and The Indian-225 apolis Gas Company and other defendants. This counter-defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, denies each and every remaining averment in the said counter-claim of said Citizens Gas Company not hereinabove specifically admitted.

Wherefore this counter-defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, prays that the counter-claim of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis be dismissed as to this counter-defendant and that it have judgment against said counter-claimant for its costs.

228 And afterwards towit at the April Term of said Court, on the 26th day of July, 1937, before the Honorable Robert C. Baltzell, Judge of said Court, the following further proceedings were had herein, towit: Entered Jul 26, 1937.

This day this cause came on to be heard on the ground separately pleaded in the 19th paragraph as amended of the Separate and Several Answer and Counter-claim of the defendants The City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation, William J. Mooney, Sr., A. Dallas Hitz, Alfred M. Glossbrenner, Edward W. Harris and Charles S. Rauh, as Members of the Board of Trustees for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Henry L. Dithmer, Broadhurst Elsey, Fred W. Jungclaus, Roy Sahm, David J. Angus, Isaac E. Woodard and Russell J. Ryan, as Members of the Board of Directors of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, that the Court has no jurisdiction of this action, and was argued by counsel, and the Court, being fully advised in the premises, finds:

(a) That defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company is an indispensable party to the relief sought by plaintiff in this cause.

(b) That, in the controversies presented by the Bill of Complaint herein, there is no collision between the interests of the plaintiff and the interests of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

(c) That the Indianapolis Gas Company should therefore be re-aligned with the plaintiff as a party plaintiff, for the purpose of testing the jurisdiction of this Court.

229 (d) That there is not complete diversity of citizenship between the plaintiff's as so re-aligned and the defendants and that this Court therefore has no jurisdiction of this cause.

It Is Therefore Ordered, Adjudged, and Decreed that the Bill of Complaint herein and the Counter-claim of the defendants herein above named be dismissed for want of jurisdiction, provided, however, that the plaintiff has leave to serve an amended Bill of Complaint in this cause within 30 days after the entry of this order to each of which findings and the order of the Court the plaintiff excepts, and its exceptions are hereby taken.

Entered Aug. 18, 1937.

The plaintiff, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, Trustee, by leave of court first obtained, hereby amends and supplements its bill of complaint filed in this cause in the following particulars:

(1) By inserting in paragraph 3, following the fifteenth line of page 3 of the bill of complaint, the following words:

"Plaintiff also seeks to preserve and protect said lease and the property leased thereunder, to prevent loss from waste and damage to the same, to preserve and protect its rights and the rights of the holders of bonds for which it is trustee, to recover the interest on said bonds as it becomes due from the lessees in accordance with the provisions of said lease, and to recover the unpaid interest, together with interest thereon, which is now due or may hereafter become due from the several defendants."

(2) By inserting in Paragraph 11 after the word "Indianapolis" in the second line on page 12 of the bill of complaint the following words:

"During said period said lessee from time to time duly paid installments of interest on the outstanding bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company by making payment directly to the Trustee of said bonds or to the bondholders themselves."

(3) By striking out all of paragraph 24, commencing at the thirty-fifth line of page 19 and ending at the twenty-second line of page 20 of the bill of complaint, and inserting in place thereof the following words:

"24. On or about March 2, 1936 the City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company entered into a written agreement which provides, among other things, that the City shall use and operate the gas properties of The Indianapolis Gas Company until such time as an agreement of settlement is reached between the City and The Indianapolis Gas Company or, in the event the said parties are unable to reach an agreement, until such time as the differences between them shall have been finally adjudicated in a litigated case. Said agreement further provides that, pending such agreement or adjudication, in lieu of paying the interest upon the outstanding bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company and the other obligations under the 99 year lease as provided therein, the City will deposit with The Indiana National Bank on the dates when the same shall be papable under the provisions of the lease a sum equal to such interest plus a sum equal to the accrued dividends upon the stock of The Indianapolis Gas Company, these sums to be held by said bank and paid to the parties to said agreement as follows:

(a) in the event the City and The Indianapolis Gas Company shall agree upon a settlement, then in accordance with the settlement agreement;

233 (b) in the event of a final adjudication in favor of the validity of the 99 year lease, then the entire fund shall go to The Indianapolis Gas Company; and

(c) in the event of a final adjudication against the validity of the 99 year lease, then that part of the fund which represents, as the parties may agree or as the Court may determine, the reasonable value of the use of the property shall be paid to The Indianapolis Gas Company and the balance shall be paid to the City.

No provision was made in said agreement for performance by either party, during its continuation, of any of the obligations of the mortgage of which plaintiff is trustee. No provision was made in said agreement for any payment, subsequent to March 30, 1936, to the plaintiff or to the bondholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company on account of interest upon the outstanding bonds, or on account of interest upon any defaulted payments upon such outstanding bonds, either during the life of said agreement or upon the expiration thereof. Plaintiff further alleges that said agreement of March 2, 1936, has never been modified or supplemented in any respect; that no settlement agreement as provided therein has ever been entered into between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis; that neither of said parties has even taken any steps to obtain a judicial determination of the validity of the lease of September 30, 1913; that The Indianapolis Gas Company has no assets or property of any substantial value other than the property covered by said mortgage and lease, and since the Citizens Gas Company has heretofore conveyed all of its property to the City of Indianapolis, the agreement of March 2, 1936 is tantamount to an agreement among the several defendants that no interest shall be paid upon the outstanding bonds by any of them unless and until the City and The Indianapolis Gas Company shall so agree; that as a direct result of said agreement of March 2, 1936, default was made in the payment of interest due upon the outstanding bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company on October 1, 1936, and default was made in the payment of interest due on April 1, 1937; that both the City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company have failed and refused to pay any sum whatever on account of such defaulted interest which now amounts to more than $350,000.00; that by reason of said defaults and the acts and things done by the several defendants as hereinbefore alleged, the market value of the outstanding bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company has steadily declined, and the value of said bonds and the value of the mortgaged property is imminently threatened with further depreciation and irreparable injury. Plaintiff further alleges that the mortgaged property has become so merged with the property formerly owned and held by the Citizens Gas Company that it is no longer practical or economical to separate the properties or to operate either of them as independent or competing properties; that the aforesaid agreement of March 2, 1936 was entered into by The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis with full knowledge of these facts and without knowledge, consent or approval and in violation of the rights of the plaintiff herein and of the bondholders for whom plaintiff is Trustee; that the purpose and intent of said agreement was to bring about a default in the payment of interest, to depreciate the value of the outstanding bonds, to place the income derived from the operation of the mortgaged property beyond the reach of the bondholders, and by these means to coerce the plaintiff and the bondholders for whom plaintiff is Trustee to surrender the rights secured to them under the mortgage and under the lease of September 30, 1913, and 234 thereby make possible a settlement agreement acceptable to the stockholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company and to the City of Indianapolis. A true copy of said agreement of March 2, 1936, is hereto attached, made a part hereof and marked Exhibit H."

(4) By striking out the period at the end of the 6th paragraph of the prayer at page 21 of the bill of complaint and inserting, as a part of said paragraph, the following words: "and that this Court by final judgment declare that the agreement of March 2, 1936 between the City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company is not binding upon the plaintiff, does not in any way alter or impair its rights and the rights of the bondholders whom it represents under and by virtue of said lease and the mortgage deed of trust and does not in any way affect the liabilities and obligations of the City and The Indianapolis Gas Company to the plaintiff and to the bondholders."

(5) By inserting between paragraphs 8 and 9 of the prayer on page 22 of the bill of complaint, the following:

8½ That this Court in its final decree:

(a) find that the fund theretofore deposited with The Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis under the agreement of March 2, 1936, or such portion thereof as represents the unpaid interest payable under the mortgage deed of trust, together with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the several dates upon which such interest payments accrued, is the property of and in equity belongs to the holders of the bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company, and

(b) order that the City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company pay out of such fund such expenses as this Court may allow to the plaintiff herein and join in delivering the balance of said fund or the aforesaid portion thereof to the plaintiff herein to be held and paid over to the holders of said bonds in accordance with their respective pro rata interest therein.

* * (Caption—1844) * *

SEPARATE ANSWER OF DEFENDANT THE INDIANAPOLIS GAS COMPANY.

The Indianapolis Gas Company, a defendant in the above entitled cause, for its separate answer to the plaintiff's supplemented and amended bill of complaint says:

1. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 1 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

242 2. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 2 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

3. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 3 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

4. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 4 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

5. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 5 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

6. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 6 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

7. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 7 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

8. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 8 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

9. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 9 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

10. Answering the tenth subdivision of the bill, this defendant admits that at the time of the execution of said ninety-nine year lease its first mortgage bonds in the principal amount of $4,833,000.00 had been and were issued and outstanding and that subsequent to the execution of said lease, and during the operation of its property thereunder by defendant, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, additional bonds in the principal amount of $2,048,000.00 [illegible] authenticated by the Trustee and delivered by this defendant to defendant, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, to reimburse said latter company for capital expenditures made upon this defendant's property. This defendant denies any knowledge or information sufficient to make answer to the allegation in this subdivision of the bill, that its bonds sold sub-243 sequent to the execution of said lease were sold in reliance upon the validity and effect of the said lease.

11. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 11 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

12. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 12 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

13. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 13 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

14. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 14 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

15. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 15 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

16. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 16 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

17. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 17 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

18. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 18 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

19. This defendant admits the averments contained in subdivision 19 of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

20. Answering subdivision twenty and twenty-one of the bill, this defendant denies that it has ever contended or admitted that the sid ninety-nine year lease was not and is not a valid and binding obligation upon itself, and defendant, The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis; or the City of Indianapolis as assignee and successor in trust to said last named company.

21. Answering subdivision twenty-two of the bill, this defendant says that it is not sufficiently informed concerning 244 what is alleged in said subdivision to make answer thereto, and asks that plaintiff make proof thereof.

22. Answering the twenty-third subdivision of the bill, this defendant admits the defendant, City of Indianapolis, through its department of utilities, has denied any liability and obligation as assignee and successor to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, under the terms and provisions of said ninety-nine year lease, and did so notify this defendant by letter. This defendant further admits that it undertook with defendant, City of Indianapolis through its Department of Utilities, negotiations looking to a settlement of the controversy concerning the use of its said property covered by said lease, but it denies that it at any time abandoned or waived or negotiated to abandon or waive any rights which at law or in equity belong to this plaintiff or the trust which it represents, or to affect them in any way unless with the full consent of plaintiff and the bondholders for whom it is trustee.

23. Answering the twenty-fourth subdivision of the bill, this defendant admits the averments therein set out that this defendant with the City of Indianapolis entered into a written agreement on March 2, 1936, a true copy of which said agreement is set out in said bill as Exhibit H; but it denies that in so doing it gave any consent to the withholding of payment of any interest on any bonds, or deprived or agreed to the deprivation of this plaintiff, or the holders of bonds for whom it is suing, of any valuable property right or security underlying said bonds. This defendant further says that said agreement, providing that no waiver of any rights by any 245 party thereto should result from such operation of the defendant's property, was entered into by it to prevent a failure and breakdown of public service in the furnishing and distribution of gas to the citizens and gas users of the City of Indianapolis, which in the then belief of this defendant appeared to be otherwise imminent and unavoidable. By the terms of said agreement all rights under and pursuant to the terms and provisions of said ninety-nine year lease, which properly belong to this plaintiff as Trustee under said Mortgage Deed of Trust, so far as could be done if said purpose to avert a break-down of said public service be accomplished, this defendant believes and therefor avers were expressly reserved and protected.

This defendant admits that said agreement of March 2, 1936 was entered into without the knowledge, consent and approval of the plaintiff, but it denies that the purpose and intent of said agreement was to bring about a default in the payment of interest on or to depreciate the value of the outstanding bonds or to coerce the plaintiff and the bondholders for whom it is Trustee to surrender any rights secured to them under the mortgage and under the lease of September 30, 1913.

24. Answering the twenty-fifth subdivision of the bill, this defendant denies that it is now negotiating with defendant, City of Indianapolis, for the use of its property by said City under any agreement, lease or arrangement which deprives or would deprive this plaintiff or the holders of this defendant's outstanding bonds of any rights or privileges which either at law or in equity properly inure to them by the 246 terms and provisions of said Mortgage Deed of Trust.

This defendant has at all times and does now, admit the obligation and liability of its entire property, both real and personal, to the performance of the terms and provisions of the said Mortgage Deed of Trust, and this obligation and liability it has never at any time denied or sought to evade by any agreement with any co-defendant in this cause, nor does it do so now.

25. This defendant denies each and every allegation in the bill not hereinabove admitted, controverted or specifically denied.

Wherefore This defendant denies that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief prayed for in the bill of complaint against this defendant, and prays that as to it the bill of complaint as supplemented and amended be dismissed with costs.

The Indianapolis Gas Company,
By Louis B. Ewbank,
Wm. R. Higgins,
Its Solicitors.

247 (Entry for September 10, 1937, continued.)

Come now the defendants City of Indianapolis, et al., by their solicitors, and file answer to amendment and supplement to plaintiff's bill of complaint, which answer is as follows:

Filed Sept. 10, 1937. 248 In the District Court of the United States.
* * (Caption—1844) * *

ANSWER OF CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS AND THE DIRECTORS AND TRUSTEES OF ITS UTILITY DISTRICT TO AMENDMENT AND SUPPLEMENT TO PLAINTIFF'S BILL OF COMPLAINT.

The City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation; William J. Mooney, A. Dallas Hitz, Alfred M. Glossbrenner, Edward W. Harris, and Charles S. Rauh, as members of the Board of Trustees for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis; Henry L. Dithmer, Brodehurst Elsey, Roy Sahm, Donald J. Angus, Isaac E. Woodard, Joseph H. McDuffee and Leroy J. Keach (the two latter being the successors in office of Fred W. Jungclaus and Russell J. Ryan) as members of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, for answer to the Amendment and Supplement to Plaintiff's Bill of Complaint herein, says:

1. They deny that plaintiff seeks to preserve and protect the lease and the property lease thereunder or to prevent loss from waste and damage to the same; and aver that moneys to become due under the said lease of mortgaged property are not subject to the lien of such mortgage until reduced to possession by the mortgage, and that plaintiff has no interest in the payments made under such lease.

249 2. They deny that the lessee paid instalments of interest on the outstanding bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company directly to the Trustee of said bonds.

3. They admit that on or about the 2nd day of March, 1936, the City of Indianapolis and the Indianapolis Gas Company entered into a certain written agreement, a correct copy of which agreement is set out as Exhibit E to the answer filed by these defendants to plaintiff's original bill of complaint, and a copy of which is also set out as Exhibit H to said complaint by way of said Amendment and Supplement. They deny the accuracy of plaintiff's paraphrase of said agreement; they deny that said agreement is tantamount to an agreement among the several defendants that no interest shall be paid upon the outstanding bonds by any of them unless and until the City and The Indianapolis Gas Company shall so agree; they deny that as a direct result of said agreement a default was made in the payment of interest due upon the outstanding bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company on October 1, 1936, or on April 1, 1937; they deny that the market value of the outstanding bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company has steadily declined due to the acts and things done by the several defendants as alleged in said bill of complaint, as amended and supplemented; and they deny that the value of said bonds and the value of the mortgaged property is imminently threatened with further depreciation and irreparable injury. They deny that the City of Indianapolis could not duplicate the properties owned by The Indianapolis Gas Company, and then operate the same separate from such properties. They deny the said agreement was entered into in violation of the rights of plaintiff and of the bondholders for whom plaintiff is Trustee. They deny that the purpose or intent of said agreement was to bring about a default in the payment of interest or to depreciate the value of 250 the outstanding bonds or to place the income derived from the operation of the mortgaged property beyond the reach of the bondholders or to coerce plaintiff and the bondholders for whom plaintiff is Trustee to surrender the rights secured to them under the mortgage and under the lease of September 30, 1913, or thereby to make possible a settlement agreement acceptable to the stockholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company and to the City of Indianapolis. These answering defendants aver that plaintiff and the bondholders whom it represents had full knowledge prior to the commencement of this action of the existence of said agreement, and contents thereof, and the payments made thereunder; that plaintiff and the bondholders whom it represents have by their conduct and acquiescence in said agreement and the operations thereunder induced the City of Indianapolis to continue to make such payments and to continue to operate the properties of The Indianapolis Gas Company and are now estopped to assert the invalidity of such agreement or of the acts of the parties thereunder. These answering defendants further aver that the lease referred to by plaintiff as a 99 year lease has no validity or effect as against these defendants for the reasons specifically stated in subdivision 27 of the answer of these defendants.

4. They deny that plaintiff is entitled to a final judgment declaring that said agreement of March 2, 1936, is not binding upon plaintiff, does not in any way alter or impair its rights or the rights of the bondholders whom it represents, and does not in any way affect the liabilities and obligations of the City and The Indianapolis Gas Company to plaintiff or the bondholders.

5. They deny that plaintiff is entitled to a final decree that the fund deposited with The Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis under said agreement of March 2, 1936, or 251 such portion thereof as represents unpaid interest, together with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the several dates upon which such interest payments accrued, is the property of or in equity belongs to holders of the bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company; and they deny that plaintiff is entitled to an order that the City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company pay out of such fund such expenses as this Court may allow to plaintiff here or any expenses or that the balance of such fund or any part of it be paid to plaintiff for any purpose.

6. They aver that The Indianapolis Gas Company, one of the defendants herein, is an indispensable party to this suit; that its interest is that the said lease between The Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis be declared valid and enforceable against the City of Indianapolis; that therefore The Indianapolis Gas Company should be aligned as a party plaintiff, and this suit dismissed for want of the requisite diversity of citizenship.

SEPARATE ANSWER OF CITIZENS GAS COMPANY OF INDIANAPOLIS TO AMENDMENT AND SUPPLEMENT TO PLAINTIFF'S BILL OF COMPLAINT.

Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a defendant in the above entitled cause, for separate answer to the amendment and supplement to the plaintiff's bill of complaint, says:

255 1. This defendant has no knowledge concerning the purpose or motive of the plaintiff set forth in the averments contained in Subdivision 1 of said amendment and supplement, and neither admits nor denies said averments, but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof.

2. This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 2 of said amendment and supplement.

3. This defendant has no knowledge of the averments contained in Subdivision 3 of the said amendment and supplement, and neither admits nor denies said averments, but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof.

Wherefore this defendant, having fully answered the said amendment and supplement to plaintiff's bill of complaint, prays that it may go hence without day.

Davis, Pantzer, Baltzell & Sparks,
Solicitors for said Defendant.

256 And afterwards towit at the November Term of said Court, on the 15th day of November, 1937, before the Honorable Robert C. Baltzell, Judge of said Court, the following further proceedings were had herein, towit: Entered Nov 15, 1937

This day this cause came on to be heard on the ground separately preaded in the 19th paragraph as amended of the Separate and Several Answer and Counter-claim of the defendants, The City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation, William J. Mooney, Sr., A. Dallas Hitz, Alfred M. Glossbrenner, Edward W. Harris and Charles S. Rauh, as Members, of the Board of Trustees for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Henry L. Dithmer, Broadhurst Elsey, Joseph H. McDuffee, Roy Sahm, David J. Angus, Isaac E. Woodard and Leroy J. Keach, as Members of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, that the Court has no jurisdiction of this action, (which ground is also pleaded in the 6th paragraph of the Answer of said defendants just enumerated to the Amendment and Supplement to Plaintiff's Bill of Complaint), and was argued by counsel, and the Court, being fully advised in the premises, finds:

(a) That defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company is an indispensable party to the relief sought by plaintiff in this cause.

(b) That, in the controversies presented by the Bill of Complaint herein, there is no collision between the interests of the plaintiff and the interests of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

(c) That The Indianapolis Gas Company should therefore be realigned with the plaintiff as a party plaintiff, for 257 the purpose of testing the jurisdiction of this Court.

(d) That there is not complete diversity of citizenship between the plaintiffs as so re-aligned and the defendants and that this Court therefore has no jurisdiction of this cause.

It is therefore ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the Bill of Complaint herein as Amended and Supplemented and the Counter-claim of the defendants herein-above named be dismissed for want of jurisdiction, to each of which findings and the order of the Court the plaintiff excepts, and its exceptions are hereby taken.

ed Nov. 27, 1937

258 And afterwards towit at the November Term of said Court on the 27th day of November, 1937 before the Honorable Robert C. Baltzell, Judge of said Court, the following further proceedings were had herein, towit:

Comes now the plaintiff by its solicitors and files petition for appeal, which petition is as follows:

ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS ON BEHALF OF PLAINTIFF.

Now comes The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, Trustee, the plaintiff in the above-entitled cause and the petitioner in the petition for appeal this day filed herein, by its solicitors, and respectfully represents that in the record and proceedings had in the above-entitled cause and 263 in the rendition of the order and final decree entered herein on the 15th day of November, 1937, there is manifest error for which said order and decree should be reversed.

As cause for reversal of said order and final decree and in connection with its petition for appeal herein, the plaintiff, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, Trustee, makes the following assignment of errors, to wit:

(1) The Court erred in its order entered herein on July 26, 1937, in sustaining the defense separately pleaded in subdivision 19, as amended, of the separate and several answer and counterclaim of defendants, the City of Indianapolis and the directors and trustees of its utility district, that this Court has no jurisdiction of this action.

(2) The Court erred, in its said order entered herein on July 26, 1937 sustaining the defense that this Court has no jurisdiction of this action, in ordering and decreeing that plaintiff's bill of complaint herein be dismissed for want of jurisdiction of this action.

(3) The Court erred, in its said order entered herein on July 26, 1937 sustaining the defense that this Court has no jurisdiction of this action, in holding that defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, is an indispensable party to the relief sought by plaintiff in its bill of complaint

(4) The Court erred, in its said order entered herein on July 26, 1937 sustaining the defense that this Court has no jurisdiction of this action, in holding that there is no collision between the interests of the plaintiff and the interests of 264 defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, in the controversies presented by plaintiff's bill of complaint.

(5) The Court erred, in its said order entered herein on July 26, 1937 sustaining the defense that this Court has no jurisdiction of this action, in holding that defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, should be realigned with the plaintiff as a party plaintiff for the purpose of testing the jurisdiction of this Court to hear and determine the controversies presented by plaintiff's bill of complaint.

(6) The Court erred, in its said order entered herein on July 26, 1937 sustaining the defense that this Court has no jurisdiction of this action, in holding that there is not complete diversity of citizenship between plaintiff and each and all of the defendants herein if properly realigned with respect to the issues presented by plaintiff's bill of complaint, and that this Court therefore has no jurisdiction to hear and determine the controversies presented by said bill of complaint.

(7) The Court erred, in its order and final decree entered herein on November 15, 1937, in sustaining the defense separately pleaded in subdivision 19, as amended, of the separate and several answer and counterclaim of defendants, the City of Indianapolis and the directors and trustees of its utility district, and also pleaded in paragraph 6 of the same defendants' answer to the amendment and supplement to the bill of complaint, that this Court has no jurisdiction of this action.

(8) The Court erred, in its said order and final decree entered herein on November 15, 1937, in ordering and decree-
265 ing that plaintiff's bill of complaint herein, as amended and supplemented, be dismissed for want of jurisdiction of this action.

(9) The Court erred, in its said order and final decree entered herein on November 15, 1937, in holding that defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, is an indispensable party to the relief sought by plaintiff in this cause in its bill of complaint, as amended and supplemented.

(10) The Court erred, in its said order and final decree entered herein on November 15, 1937, in holding that there is no collision between the interests of the plaintiff and the interests of defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, in the controversies presented by plaintiff's bill of complaint, as amended and supplemented.

(11) The Court erred, in its said order and final decree entered herein on November 15, 1937, in holding that defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, should be realigned with the plaintiff as a party plaintiff for the purpose of testing the jurisdiction of this Court to hear and determine the controversies presented by plaintiff's bill of complaint, as amended and supplemented.

(12) The Court erred, in its said order and final decree entered herein on November 15, 1937, in holding that there is not complete diversity of citizenship between plaintiff and each and all of the defendants herein if properly realigned with respect to the issues presented by plaintiff's bill of complaint, as amended and supplemented, and that this Court therefore has no jurisdiction to hear and determine the controversies presented by said bill of complaint, as amended and supplemented.

266 (13) The Court erred, in its said order and final decree entered herein on November 15, 1937, in entering judgment against plaintiff for the costs of this action.

Wherefore, plaintiff prays that said order and final decree entered herein on the 15th day of November, 1937, may be reversed, that this cause may be remanded to the District Court for trial and that plaintiff may be granted such other and further relief as the Court may deem just and proper.

Dated November 27, 1937.

285 IN THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS,

For the Seventh Circuit.

No. 6472. October Term 1937—January Session, 1938.

Chase National Bank of the City of New York, Trustee, Plaintiff-Appellant, vs. Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, et al., Defendants-Appellees.	Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Indiana, Indianapolis Division.

April 8, 1938.

Before Evans, Major and Treanor, Circuit Judges.

Major, Circuit Judge. Appellant is the trustee under a deed of trust executed by appellee, Indianapolis Gas Company, on October 1, 1902, to secure a total authorized issue of $7,500,000 of its first mortgage bonds due October 1, 1952, of which bonds aggregating $6,881,000 are outstanding. The deed of trust conveyed to the trustee all the properties of the Indianapolis Gas Company, including:

"* * * all corporate and other franchises, rights, easements, privileges and immunities, contracts and property, of whatever name or description, now belonging to or held, or which may hereafter be acquired or held by said Gas Company, together with the rents, issues, income, tolls and profits arising therefrom; * * *

"To Have and to Hold all and singular the above mentioned and described property, acquired, and to be hereafter acquired, * * * and the tolls, incomes, revenues, rents, issues and profits thereof, * * *."

On September 30, 1913, the Indianapolis Gas Company leased its property to appellee, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, for a term of 99 years, including in the lease all the mortgaged property. The lessee, among other things, agreed to perform all the obligations of the lessor under its mortgage, except its obligation to pay the principal of the bonds, which included, First, the interest on the lessor's bonded indebtedness, and second, the sum of $120,000 per year to be distributed by the lessee direct to the lessor's stockholders, as dividends upon their stock and the expenses of maintaining the lessor's corporate organization not to exceed $300 a year. The Indianapolis Gas Company withdrew from active business and the Citizens Gas Company assumed the active management of tis business and the mortgaged property. The Citizens Gas Company was a quasi public corporation whose purposes and objects were controlled by a franchise and contract entered into on August 25, 1905, between the city of Indianapolis and three individual citizens who assigned the franchise and contract to the Citizens Company. The franchise and articles of corporation of the latter company provide that all the capital stock of the Citizens Company should be held by trustees with complete and irrevocable power to hold and vote the stock as fully as if they were the owners thereof and to select the members of the Board of Directors; that upon the performance of certain named conditions, and after the expiration of 25 years, it was provided that the trustees and directors should convey to the city all the property of the Citizens Company, subject to the legal obligations of that company, to be held by the city for the use and benefit of its inhabitants.

In Todd v. Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, et al., 46 F. (2d) 855, this court held the property of the Citizens Gas to be a public charitable trust and that the property might be conveyed to the city in continuance of the trust, the city being the successor to said Citizens Company as trustee.

For a period of 22 years after the execution of the aforesaid lease, the mortgage property was operated by the Citizens Gas during which period it paid the interest on the bonds either direct to the trustee or to the bondholders themselves. During the same interval, Citizens Gas made extensive improvements on the mortgage property and procured the issuance of some $2,000,000 additional bonds under the deed of trust of October 1, 1902, to provide for the payment thereof. On two occasions the validity of the 286 lease was questioned and its binding effect upon the Citizens Company was sustained by the Supreme Court of Indiana. (Fishback v. Public Service Commission of Indiana, et al., 193 Ind. 282; Williams v. Citizens Gas Company, 206 Ind. 448).

On September 9, 1935, in pursuance of a prior demand by the city, the Citizens Company conveyed all its property to the City of Indianapolis, as successor trustee, and executed and delivered to the city an instrument of transfer and assignment. This assignment was made subject to all legal obligations of the Citizens Company including its obligations under the lease. The Citizens Company also tendered to the city an assignment of the lease which the city refused to adopt or recognize as binding upon it. The city took actual possession of the property covered by the lease as well as the mortgage and advised the Indianapolis Company that it was ready to negotiate a new lease, and negotiations were instituted which looked toward the modification or the cancellation of the same.

On March 2, 1936, the Indianapolis Company and the city entered into an agreement providing that until the controversy between them as to the binding effect of the lease upon the city had been either adjudicated or settled, the city would pay a sum equal to the interest on the bonds and the dividends on the stock of the Indianapolis Company to the Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis, and that when such controversy was settled or adjudicated, the sum so paid should be disbursed as follows:

"(a) If an agreement of settlement is made, the fund shall be disbursed in accordance with that agreement.

"(b) If it is determined in a litigated case that the lease is binding upon the City or the property acquired by it from the lessee, the entire fund shall be paid to The Indianapolis Gas Company.

"(c) If it is determined in a litigated case that the lease is not binding upon the City or the property acquired by it, reasonable compensation for the use of the mortgaged property (fixed by agreement or by the court) shall be paid to The Indianapolis Gas Company and the balance, if any, to the City."

Appellant, concerning such agreement, alleges:

"the purpose and intent of said agreement was to bring about a default in the payment of interest, to depreciate the value of the outstanding bonds, to place the income derived from the operation of the mortgaged property beyond the reach of the bondholders, and by these means to coerce the plaintiff and the bondholders for whom plaintiff is Trustee to surrender the rights secured to them under the mortgage and under the lease of September 30, 1913, and thereby make possible a settlement agreement acceptable to the stockholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company and to the City of Indianapolis."

It is claimed that the agreement of March 2, 1936, is tantamount to an agreement that no interest shall be paid upon the outstanding bonds by any of the defendants unless and until the city and the Indianapolis Company shall so agree, and that as a result of this agreement default was made in the interest payments due October 1, 1936, and April 1, 1937, aggregating more than $350,000.

Appellant's suit is brought for the purpose of protecting its interest, as Trustee, in the security for its bonds, substantially all of which is in the possession of the city, and its right to be paid the interest on such bonds. The court was asked to declare the lease binding upon the city, so that it would be bound to pay the interest on the bonds and to perform and observe all the covenants and agreements of the mortgagor contained in its deed of trust. It was also prayed that the lease be declared binding upon the Indianapolis Company; that it be restrained from interfering with the lease in any way and that past due interest be paid from the fund being accumulated in the Indiana National Bank.

In the court below, upon the request of the city for a separate determination of the question of that court's jurisdiction, it was decided that appellee, the Indianapolis Company, was an indispensable party to the suit and that it should be realigned as a party plaintiff, thus destroying the diversity of citizenship upon which Federal jurisdiction rested. Appellant's bill of complaint was thus dismissed. Federal jurisdiction of this suit is based solely upon diversity of citizenship, appellant being a citizen of New York and each of the appellees, citizens of Indiana.

The contested issues are:

First: Is the Indianapolis Gas Company an indispensable party to the relief sought by plaintiff in its Bill of Complaint as amended and supplemented?

Second: Should The Indianapolis Gas Company be 287 realigned with the plaintiff as a party plaintiff for the purpose of testing the jurisdiction of the Federal Court?

Third: Should the District Court have dismissed plaintiff's Bill as amended and supplemented for want of jurisdiction?

We conclude that the first contested issue must be answered in the affirmative. While it seems apparent that the essential question involved is whether the lease in question is enforcible against the city, and that both appellant and The Indianapolis Company are so contending, yet there are other important questions which give rise to controversies between appellant and the Indianapolis Company. There is one thing certain, however, and that is that if the Indianapolis Company be omitted as a party to this litigation, it would be free to relitigate in another court the question of the validity of the lease against the city, irrespective of a final decree in this litigation, which it seems to us would permit an intolerable situation and one "wholly inconsistent with equity and good conscience." To say that the Indianapolis Company is not an indispensable party is the equivalent of granting it permission, either during or subsequent to the present action, to institute suit against the city in the state court and virtually relitigate the same questions, so far as the city is concerned, as are here involved. There are some authorities which apparently sustain appellant's contention, but if so, we find ourselves in disagreement with the application of a theory which is calculated to prolong legal controversies, especially where all the parties are before the court. To view the matter otherwise is to encourage protracted litigation with the rights of innocent parties, such as the bondholders, undetermined for an indefinite time.

Appellant places great stress upon the case of Old Colony Trust Co. v. City of Omaha, 230 U. S. 100. The plaintiff in that case was the trustee of a mortgage executed by the Omaha Electric Light and Power Company. In a controversy with the city concerning the Electric Company's franchise, that Company (mortgagor) sought to enforce its franchise rights against the city, and the court decided in favor of the latter. Afterwards, a suit was brought by the trustee of the mortgage, which action it succeeded in maintaining. The city defended this second action, claiming that the first suit was res judicata, but the court held the trust company free to maintain its suit unembarrassed by the decree in the former case. So far as appears from the opinion, no question was raised in either suit as to who were indispensable parties, and in neither were all the parties before the court as here. We do not regard it as controlling.

That the Indianapolis Company is at least a proper party is recognized by appellant from the fact that it was named as a party to the suit. (Lee v. Lehigh Valley Coal Co., 267 U. S. 542.) In Mahon, et al. v. Guaranty Trust and Safe Deposit Co., 239 F. 266, this court gave consideration to the question as to whether a mortgagor is a necessary party in a suit brought by its mortgagee to enforce rights created by virtue of a contract between the mortgagor and third parties. On page 269 is found a citation of many cases in support of each contention. While the facts in that case are different from those here, we think what was said is pertinent. Thus said the court on page 270:

"That such company is an indispensable party is clearly shown when we consider the possible, and in fact probable, embarrassment which the courts will meet, if separate actions in respect to this contract can be maintained in different jurisdictions. If this case were to proceed to trial without the traction company and the court upheld the contract and enforced its terms against the defendant employes, its decision would not be binding upon the mortgagor in a subsequent action. If the traction company were not a party to the action it would have a perfect right to test out the same question in the state court. Such a situation should not be tolerated. The mere statement of the possibilities shows the absolute necessity of making the traction company a party to this action."

Another opinion by this court cited by appellant as supporting its contention is that of Equitable Trust Co. of New York v. Denney, et al., 24 F. (2d) 169. It is true, in this case the conclusion was reached that the mortgagor, under the situation presented, was not an indispensable party. It seems that we there relied strongly on the fact that a decree in favor of the mortgagee would likewise be favorable to the mortgagor, and that the latter could not be injured or affected by the decree sought. To what extent, if any, the mortgagor here would be benefited by a decree in favor of appellant is conjectural, but we are not dealing with the merits of the controversy, but upon the facts as contained in the bill of complaint. Whatever merit may be involved, there is a controversy 288 between appellant and the Indianapolis Gas Company which is calculated to affect the interest of the latter. We are convinced that the City of Indianapolis is entitled to have both the appellant and the Indianapolis Gas as parties to this litigation for the important reason that it should not be required to relitigate, in the instant forum, or any other, the matters which can be properly determined and forever settled in the present suit.

As to the second controverted issue, we conclude it must be answered in the negative. This answer, of course, is predicated upon the basis that there is a collision of interest between appellant and the Indianapolis Company. The argument of the city to the contrary rests entirely upon the premise that the only matter in controversy is whether or not the lease is enforcible against the city, and that in seeking to maintain the affirmative of that position, the Indianapolis Company is just as much interested as is appellant. Whether they are interested on equal terms is difficult for us to determine from the record. True, Indianapolis Company admits the validity of the lease and at least makes some pretense of claiming it is binding upon the city, but it is rather significant that no effort has been made, and so far as the record discloses, none contemplated, looking toward a favorable determination of its position. In its answer to appellant's bill, it admits most of the material allegations, but some it denies, and concludes by requesting that the bill be dismissed as to it. The city cites a number of cases in support of its contention that the Indianapolis Company must be realigned as a party plaintiff. (Lee v. Lehigh Valley Coal Company, supra; Dawson v. Columbia Trust Company, 197 U. S. 178; Niles-Bement-Pond Co. v. Iron Moulders Union, 254 U. S. 77; Mahon v. Guaranty Trust and Safe Deposit Company, supra.) A perusal of these authorities discloses that such realignment has been required when there is no actual controversy between plaintiff and defendant, or no bona fide prayer for relief against it. If it be conceded, however, that appellant and the Indianapolis Company occupy a similar position with respect to the validity and enforcement of the lease against the city, yet we think there are sufficient matters in controversy between them to prevent the latter from being realigned with appellant as plaintiff. The rule seems to be that before such realignment may be required, the parties must be in substantial accord upon all issues presented. (Boston Safe-Deposit & Trust Co. v. City of Racine, 97 Fed. 817.) It is not sufficient that they merely be in accord upon one issue or some of the issues. (Sutton v. English, 246 U. S. 199; Mahon v. Guaranty Trust and Safe Deposit Company, supra; Franz v. Franz, 15 Fed. (2d) 797.)

As was said by this court in Mahon v. Guaranty Trust and Safe Deposit Company, supra, page 269:

"One of the tests by which the court may determine whether a defendant should be aligned with the plaintiff is the prayer for relief. If no relief is sought against a defendant, such defendant should ordinarily be treated as a plaintiff. Dawson v. Columbia Avenue Trust Co., 197 U. S. 178, 180, 25 Sup. Ct. 420, 49 L. Ed. 713; Steele v. Culver, 211 U. S. 26, 29, 29 Sup. Ct. 9, 53 L. Ed. 74. Whether we examine the entire bill or merely the prayer for relief, we must reach the same conclusion, viz., that the traction company and the plaintiff are on the same side of this controversy. We fail to find any collision of interest between them. Both are interested in obtaining the same relief."

Appellant, among other things, is seeking to have the lease declared as part of the security for its bonds, while the Indianapolis Company is adverse to such a declaration; appellant requests that the city be ordered to pay the interest on the bonds direct to appellant, as the Citizens Company had done throughout the term of the lease, but the Indianapolis Company, by entering into an agreement with the city under date of March 2, 1936, seems to assert that the interest should be paid direct to it; appellant also requests that its expenses and attorney fees be paid out of the funds being accumulated in the Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis under the contract of March 2, 1936. Inasmuch as both appellant and Indianapolis Company have an interest in the accumulated funds, and the greater the amount of the recovery by the former, the less there will be for the latter, a controversy of some proportions is calculated to develop.

Appellant also seeks to enjoin the Indianapolis Company from interfering with the lease in any way and to have the lease declared binding upon that company as well as upon the city. While it is true appellant has not seen fit to press its request for such relief, yet it has prayed for the same and who can say, in view of the situation presented, that it may not be required so to do. We are of the opinion that the relation existing 289 between appellant and the Indianapolis Company is such that the latter should not be realigned with the appellant.

Having decided the second controverted issue in the negative, it necessarily follows that the third must be given a like answer.

The cause is reversed with directions to proceed in accordance with the views herein expressed.

290 Dissenting Opinion.

Treanor, Circuit Judge, Dissenting. I agree that the Indianapolis Gas Company is a necessary party to the full determination of the controversy; but I cannot agree that there is any "collision of interest" between the Indianapolis Gas Company and the plaintiff. In my opinion the only substantial, and the dominating question, presented in this suit is whether the lease is a valid and enforcible obligation against the City of Indianapolis. And as respects that question the interests of the plaintiff, as trustees of owners of bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company, and the Indianapolis Gas Company are identical. I find nothing in the agreement of March 2, 1936, between the city and the Indianapolis Gas Company to create an adversity of interest between the plaintiff and the Indianapolis Gas Company. The terms of that agreement provided for payments by the city pending a determination of the controversy between the city and the Indianapolis Gas Company as to the enforcibility of the lease against the city, and expressly provides against prejudice to the rights of the Indianapolis Gas Company respecting the lease; and in general had as its objective to safeguard against any interruption in the gas utility service and to insure the ultimate payment to the Indianapolis Gas Company of all amounts due under the lease in case the lease finally should be determined to be valid and enforcible against the city.

I think that the District Court's conclusion that the Indianapolis Gas Company was an indispensable party to the controversy but that it should be aligned in interest with the plaintiff was correct. Consequently, diversity of citizenship did not exist as a ground of jurisdiction. And in my opinion the District Court's order of dismissal for want of jurisdiction should be affirmed.

Baker, Hostetler & Patterson,

297 The plaintiff, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, Trustee, by leave of Court first had and obtained, files this its Second Amendment and Supplement to the bill of complaint heretofore filed herein. (For the convenience of Court and counsel the paragraphs herein are numbered beginning with Paragraph 26 to follow the last numbered paragraph of the original bill of complaint.)

26. On or about September 9, 1935, the Board of Trustees of the Citizens Gas Company and the Board of Directors of the Citizens Gas Company, each of said boards acting separately, authorized the conveyance, transfer, and assignment of all property of the Citizens Gas Company, including the leasehold estate created by the lease of September 30, 1913, (Exhibit B to the bill of complaint), to the City of Indianapolis, in order to carry out and execute the public charitable trust established and provided for by the Articles of Incorporation of said Citizens Gas Company and the Franchise Contract of August 25, 1905, between said City and the assignors of said company (which Franchise Contract and Articles of Incorporation are attached to the bill of complaint as Exhibit C). The Board of Trustees and the Board of Directors of said Citizens Gas Company each authorized such conveyance, transfer, and assignment to the City upon the express condition that the City of Indianapolis should execute and deliver to said Citizens Gas Company an Indemnity Agreement in the form set forth in the separate minutes of said Trustees and said Directors. In pursuance of this requirement the City of Indianapolis, acting by the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, executed and delivered to Citizens Gas Company on or about September 9, 1935, an Indemnity Agreement in the form required by the Board of Directors and by the Board of Trustees of said Citizens Gas Company. A true copy of said Indemnity Agreement is attached hereto, marked "Exhibit J," and made a part hereof.

27. Since the filing of this suit the City of Indianapolis has deposited with The Indiana National Bank the sum of $1,157,875 in pursuance of the agreement of March 2, 1936 (Exhibit H), which sum is now on deposit with said The Indiana National Bank. All of said fund has been derived from and is the proceeds of the operation of the property transferred, conveyed, and assigned by Citizens Gas Company to the City of Indianapolis, including the leased property, and said fund is therefore subject to the claims and liens asserted in this cause upon all property transferred to the City by the Citizens Gas Company 298 (including the leased property), and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom. Neither The Indianapolis Gas Company nor the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis nor the City of Indianapolis has paid any part of the semi-annual interest on the First Consolidated Mortgage Five Per Cent. Gold Bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company (hereinafter sometimes called the "Bonds") due on October 1, 1936, April 1, 1937, October 1, 1937, April 1, 1938, and October 1, 1938, in the sum of $172,025 due on each of said dates, and there is now overdue and unpaid as interest on said Bonds the sum of $860,125. The City of Indianapolis has, however, paid all the State, County, and Municipal taxes on the leased property becoming due after September 9, 1935, all the insurance premiums for insurance on the leased property becoming due since said date, all instalments of Federal income taxes of The Indianapolis Gas Company falling due between September 9, 1935, and December 31, 1936, on account of any money paid by the Citizens Gas Company or the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis to The Indianapolis Gas Company during the years 1934 and 1935, and has paid all instalments of the Indiana gross income tax of The Indianapolis Gas Company falling due after September 9, 1935, to and including the payment of said tax due on April 15, 1936, all in accordance with the terms and provisions of said lease (Exhibit B) by which the lessee agreed for itself and its assigns to pay said taxes and insurance premiums.

28. By reason of the facts that

(a) The Indianapolis Gas Company, the Citizens Gas Company, and the City of Indianapolis are in default in the payment of interest on the Bonds in an amount exceeding $860,000, as above set forth,

(b) neither The Indianapolis Gas Company nor Citizens Gas Company, nor both of them, have property sufficient to pay the interest in default on the Bonds, other than the property now in the possession and under the control of the City of Indianapolis,

(c) the Citizens Gas Company made certain agreements in the lease of September 30, 1913 (Exhibit B), for the benefit of the bondholders for whom and as a protection to the security of which plaintiff is Trustee, and

(d) the Citizens Gas Company on or about September 9, 1935, disabled itself from carrying out any of its agreements in said lease by transferring all its property to the City, the transfer of the property of the Citizens Gas Company and each and every part thereof to the City of Indianapolis on or about September 9, 1935, was fraudulent as to the plaintiff and the bondholders for whom it is Trustee, unless the City of Indianapolis became bound and all of the property conveyed, transferred, and assigned by Citizens

Gas Company to the City of Indianapolis remained bound for all obligations of the Citizens Gas Company under said lease of September 30, 1913 (Exhibit B). The City of Indianapolis received the transfer and conveyance of all the property of Citizens Gas Company on or about September 9, 1935, with full knowledge of the facts that Citizens Gas Company had obligated itself under the lease of September 30, 1913 (Exhibit B), to the plaintiff and the bondholders for whom plaintiff is Trustee, that the transfer and conveyance of the property of the Citizens Gas Com-
299 pany to the City would disable the Citizens Gas Company from performing its obligations under said lease, and that Citizens Gas Company was transferring and conveying all its property to the City and was retaining no property to enable it to perform its obligations under said lease. If the fact be (which plaintiff denies) that the lease of September 30, 1913 (Exhibit B), is not binding on the City of Indianapolis and all the property formerly owned by the Citizens Gas Company and now owned and operated by the City, then the transfer and conveyance of all the property of the Citizens Gas Company to the City was made by the Citizens Gas Company and received by the City with the intent to hinder, delay, and defraud the plaintiff and the bondholders for whom it is Trustee, as creditors of Citizens Gas Company. By reason of these facts plaintiff is entitled (in the event the lease of September 30, 1913 (Exhibit B), shall be held not binding on the City of Indianapolis and all the property formerly owned by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and now owned and operated by the City) to have the conveyance of all its property by Citizens Gas Company to the City of Indianapolis set aside and declared fraudulent as to it and the bondholders whom it represents and to have said property, all improvements and additions thereto, and all proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom, subjected to the judgments prayed for in this cause.

29. The Indianapolis Gas Company is the owner and holder of Bonds in the principal amount of $120,000, with all coupons maturing October 1, 1936, and thereafter attached. The City of Indianapolis is now the owner and holder of Bonds in the principal amount of $18,000, with all coupons maturing October 1, 1936, and thereafter attached. Said Bonds in the principal amount of $18,000 now held by the City of Indianapolis were transferred to it by the Citizens Gas Company on or about September 9, 1935, at the time when all other property of the Citizens Gas Company was conveyed, transferred, and assigned to the City. By reason of the facts hereinbefore set forth said Bonds in the amount of $120,000 held by The Indianapolis Gas Company and said Bonds in the amount of $18,000 held by the City of Indianapolis and any and all other Bonds now held or hereafter acquired by The Indianapolis Gas Company, the Citizens Gas Company, or the City of Indianapolis should not be allowed to participate in the distribution of any funds recovered herein until all other bondholders have been paid in full and all claims of the plaintiff have been paid, satisfied, and discharged.

30. Under the provisions of the lease of September 30, 1913 (Exhibit B), the lessee, Citizens Gas Company, agreed to accept the leased premises of the lessor (The Indianapolis Gas Company) as the same actually were at the date of said lease and to renew, repair, replace, and extend said plants and system so as to maintain and keep the demised premises in as good order, repair, and condition as the same were at the time of making said lease. In violation of said provisions of the lease, and of plaintiff's rights as Trustee under the Mortgage of the leased propperty, The Indianapolis Gas Company, the Citizens Gas Company, the City of Indianapolis, and the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City have refused and neglected to make or cause to be made the renewals, repairs, replacements, and extensions necessary to maintain and keep the leased premises in as good order, repair, and condition as the same were at the making of said lease and to keep the same in their then state of efficiency. By 300 reason of these facts the gas plants and the distribution system of the lessor, The Indianapolis Gas Company, have been greatly damaged in an amount unknown to this plaintiff, and The Indianapolis Gas Company, the Citizens Gas Company, the City of Indianapolis, and the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, and each of them, are liable to the plaintiff as Trustee under the Mortgage of the property covered by said lease for all losses, damages, costs, charges, and expenses resulting from the failure of said defendants to make or cause to be made the renewals, repairs, replacements, and extensions necessary to maintain and keep the leased premises in as good order, repair, and condition as the same were at the making of said lease and to keep the same in their then state of efficiency.

31. Under the provisions of said lease the lessee, Citizens Gas Company, was permitted to use as its own all coal, coke, oil, gas meters, pipe, fittings, tools, horses, wagons, automobiles, and all supplies and merchandise of any kind on hand belonging to the lessor at the time of making said lease, and said lessee agreed that at the termination of said lease it would deliver to the lessor usable and salable supplies and merchandise of a like value or pay to the lessor in money the difference between the value of the property so delivered to the lessor and the total value of the inventory at the time of making said lease. By agreement between The Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company the value of the inventory so turned over to the Citizens Gas Company at the time of making said lease was fixed at $112,950.43. In the event said lease of September 30, 1913 (Exhibit B), has terminated (which plaintiff denies) the Citizens Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis, and each of them, has been obligated to pay to The Indianapolis Gas Company the sum of $112,-950.43 since the termination of said lease, and they are, and each of them now is, obligated to pay said sum with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the date of the termination of said lease.

Wherefore, plaintiff prays (in addition to the prayers set out in the original bill of complaint as amended and supplemented by the Amendment and Supplement to Plaintiff's Bill of Complaint):

10. That this Court in its final decree enter judgment in favor of the plaintiff against defendants The Indianapolis Gas Company, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the City of Indianapolis, and the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, and each of them, in the amount of all unpaid interest on said Bonds, together with interest on such unpaid interest from the several dates upon which such interest payments shall have accrued, at the rate of six per cent. per annum, until paid, and for all losses, damages, costs, charges, and expenses resulting from the failure of defendants to make or cause to be made the renewals, repairs, replacements, and extensions necessary to maintain and keep the leased premises in as good order, repair, and condition as the same were at the making of said lease, and to keep the same in their then state of efficiency.

11. That (in the event said lease of September 30, 1913, (Exhibit B) has terminated, which plaintiff denies), this Court in its final decree enter judgment in favor of the plaintiff against defendants the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the City of Indianapolis, and the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, and each of them, in the sum of $112,950.43 with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the date of the termination of said lease, and further for all the rents, issues, and profits of said leased property held by the City for the period from September 9, 1935, to the date of judgment, including the sums deposited with The Indiana National Bank as aforesaid, or for the reasonable value of the use of said property, whichever amount may be greater.

12. That this Court in its final decree adjudge, determine and declare that defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company apply to the payment of any and all judgments entered against it in this cause all property, debts, choses in action, and equitable interests belonging to it, or held in trust for it, or in which it is in any way or manner beneficially interested, including (but not intending by the following enumeration to limit the generality of the foregoing description):

(a) Said Bonds held by The Indianapolis Gas Company in the principal amount of $120,000 and any and all other Bonds now held or hereafter acquired by said Company.

(b) Any and all rights of The Indianapolis Gas Company growing out of the lease of September 30, 1913 (Exhibit B), or out of the transfer by Citizens Gas Company to the City of Indianapolis of the leased property, or both, against either the Citizens Gas Company, or the City of Indianapolis, or the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, or any one or more of them; or against the property transferred and conveyed to the City by Citizens Gas Company, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents issues, and profits therefrom (including the sums deposited with The Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis pursuant to the agreement of March 2, 1936); or against both said property, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom, and any one or more of said defendants.

(c) Any and all rights of The Indianapolis Gas Company growing out of the transfer of all the property of Citizens Gas Company to the City of Indianapolis in fraud of the rights of The Indianapolis Gas Company under the lease of September 30, 1913 (Exhibit B), against either the Citizens Gas Company, or the City of Indianapolis, or the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, or any one or more of them; or against the property transferred and conveyed to the City by Citizens Gas Company, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom (including the sums so deposited with said The Indiana National Bank); or against both said property, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom, and any one or more of said defendants.

(d) Any and all rights of The Indianapolis Gas Company growing out of the Indemnity Agreement dated September 9, 1935 (Exhibit J), against either the Citizens Gas Company, or the City of Indianapolis, or the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, or any one or more of them; or against the property transferred and conveyed to the City by Citizens Gas Company, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom (including the sums so deposited with said The Indiana National Bank); or against both said property, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom, and any one or more of said defendants.

302 (e) Any and all rights of The Indianapolis Gas Company growing out of the use of the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company by said City from about September 9, 1935, until the date of judgment, against the City of Indianapolis, or the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, or any one or more of them; or against the property transferred and conveyed to the City by Citizens Gas Company, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom (including the sums so deposited with said The Indiana National Bank); or against both said property, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom, and any one or more of said defendants.

(f) Any and all rights of The Indianapolis Gas Company to the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits from the leased property since on or about September 9, 1935, including the sums so deposited with said The Indiana National Bank.

and further that this Court in its final decree adjudge, determine, and declare the amount of all claims which The Indianapolis Gas Company has against the Citizens Gas Company, the City of Indianapolis, or the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, or any one or more of them, and render judgment therefor, and that this Court adjudge, determine, and declare that all property of said The Indianapolis Gas Company, including all that above described and including the said judgments or the proceeds thereof, be sequestered and set aside for the following purposes: First, to pay, satisfy, and discharge any and all judgments entered against The Indianapolis Gas Company in this cause and, Second, to hold any surplus of the amount so sequestered (over and above the amounts necessary to satisfy any and all judgments against it entered herein) as additional security for the obligations of The Indianapolis Gas Company under the Mortgage (Exhibit A) or the Bonds secured thereby; and further that no distribution of any of said sequestered property be made to The Indianapolis Gas Company or its stockholders until all obligations of said The Indianapolis Gas Company under the Mortgage or the Bonds issued thereunder have been fully satisfied and discharged or full and adequate security has been furnished by said The Indianapolis Gas Company for the ultimate payment and discharge of all its obligations under said Mortgage.

13. That this Court in its final decree adjudge, determine and declare that defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis apply to the payment of any and all judgments entered against it in this cause all property, debts, choses in action, and equitable interests belonging to it, or held in trust for it, or in which it is in any way or manner beneficially interested, including (but not intending by the following enumeration to limit the generality of the foregoing description):

(a) All the property transferred, conveyed and assigned to the City of Indianapolis by said Citizens Gas Company on or about September 9, 1935 (including said Bonds in the principal amount of $18,000 so transferred), all the improvements and additions thereto, and all proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom, including the sums deposited with The Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis pursuant to the agreement of March 2, 1936.

(b) Any and all rights of the Citizens Gas Com-
303 pany growing out of the lease of September 30, 1913 (Exhibit B), and the transfer by Citizens Gas Company to the City of Indianapolis of the leased property, against either the City of Indianapolis, or the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, or any one or more of them; or against the property transferred and conveyed to the City by Citizens Gas Company, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom (including the sums so deposited with said The Indiana National Bank); or against both said property, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom, and any one or more of said defendants.

(c) Any and all rights of the Citizens Gas Company growing out of the Indemnity Agreement dated September 9, 1935 (Exhibit J), against either the City of Indianapolis, or the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, or any one or more of them; or against the property transferred and conveyed to the City by Citizens Gas Company, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom (including the sums so deposited with said The Indiana National Bank); or against both said property, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom, and any one or more of said defendants.

(d) Any and all rights of the Citizens Gas Company growing out of the use of the leased property by the City since on or about September 9, 1935, against either the City of Indianapolis, or the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, or any one or more of them; or against the property transferred and conveyed to the City by Citizens Gas Company, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom (including the sums so deposited with said The Indiana National Bank), or against both said property, the improvements and additions thereto, and the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits therefrom, and any one or more of said defendants.

(e) Any and all rights of Citizens Gas Company to the proceeds, rents, issues, and profits from the leased property since on or about September 9, 1935, including the sums so deposited with said The Indiana National Bank.

and further that this Court in its final decree adjudge, determine, and declare the amount of all claims which Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has against the City of Indianapolis or the Trustees and Directors for Utilities of said City, or any one or more of them, and render judgment therefor, and that this Court adjudge, determine, and declare that all property of said Citizens Gas Company, including all that above described and including the said judgments or the proceeds thereof, be sequestered and set aside for the following purposes: First, to pay, satisfy, and discharge any and all judgments entered against the Citizens Gas Company in this cause, and, Second, to hold any surplus of the amount so sequestered (over and above the amounts necessary to satisfy any and all judgments against it entered herein) as additional security for the obligations of Citizens Gas Company under the lease (Exhibit B).

14. That this Court in its final decree adjudge, determine and declare the order in which the defendants herein are liable for the amounts found due and the order in which the various assets of the defendants herein, 304 including the properties and assets hereinbefore specifically mentioned, shall be applied to the satisfaction of the judgments entered herein.

15. That pending final determination of this cause the defendants The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis be enjoined from selling, transferring, in any way disposing of, or in any way encumbering the Bonds held by them in the principal amount of $120,000 and $18,000, respectively.

16. That all such other and further relief as may be proper and equitable in the premises be awarded the plaintiff.

Whereas, said conveyance, transfer and assignment is being made pursuant to, and subject to all the restrictions, stipulations and agreements contained therein, the articles of incorporation of said Company, the franchise agreement entered into between said Company's assignors and the said City of Indianapolis under date of August 25th, 1905,

305 And afterwards, towit, at the November Term of said Court, on the 10th day of January, 1936, before the Honorable Robert C. Baltzell, Judge of said Court, the following further proceedings were had herein, towit:

Comes now the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by its solicitors, and files separate answer to second amendment and supplement to plaintiff's bill of complaint, which answer is as follows:

Filed Jan. 10, 1939. 307 IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

* * (Caption—1844) * *

SEPARATE ANSWER OF CITIZENS GAS COMPANY OF INDIANAPOLIS TO SECOND AMENDMENT AND SUPPLEMENT TO PLAINTIFF'S BILL OF COMPLAINT.

Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a defendant in the above entitled cause, for separate answer to the Second Amendment and Supplement to the Plaintiff's Bill of Complaint, says (the paragraphs herein are numbered to correspond with the paragraph numbers of the amendment and supplement):

XXVI.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 26 of said second amendment and supplement.

XXVII.

This defendant has no knowledge of the averments contained in Subdivision 27 of the said second amendment and supplement, and neither admits nor denies said averments but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof; except that this defendant admits that it has not paid any part of the semi-annual inter-308 est upon the bonds and due on the dates mentioned therein.

This defendant avers that it was and is under no obligation or legal liability to pay the said interest for the reasons and because of the facts specifically set forth in Subdivision XX of this defendant's answer to the original bill of complaint herein, and Subdivision XXVIII of this separate answer to the second amendment and supplement thereto.

XXVIII.

This defendant denies that the conveyance and transfer of all of its property to the City of Indianapolis on September 9, 1935, was fraudulent as to the plaintiff or any other person or persons, that the said conveyance and transfer was made by this defendant and received by the City of Indianapolis with an attempt to hinder, delay and defraud the plaintiff or any other person or persons whatsoever, and that the plaintiff herein is entitled to have said conveyance set aside and declared fraudulent, by reason of the following facts:

(a) Said conveyance was made in the manner and form, and pursuant to this defendant's legal duty and right so to do, as specifically set forth in Subdivision XX of this defendant's answer to the original bill of complaint herein; and,

(b) Whether or not the City of Indianapolis and the said property are bound and subject to the obligations of said lease from and after September 9, 1935, the said ninety-nine year lease is not a valid and legal obligation of this defendant, but that it was entirely and com-
309 pletely released and discharged from any such obligation at the time said conveyance was made to the City of Indianapolis, on September 9, 1935; and,

(c) At the time said conveyance was made, this defendant had completely performed and satisfied all of its obligations and liabilities under the said lease, and that it was not indebted to the Indianapolis Gas Company or the plaintiff or the bondholders for whom the plaintiff is Trustee in any manner; and,

(d) As specifically set forth in Subdivision XX of this defendant's answer to the original bill of complaint herein, this defendant, on and prior to September 9, 1935, was the trustee of a public charitable trust for the benefit of the present and prospective gas consumers of the City of Indianapolis, and all the rights, property and assets acquired and possessed by it, including the said lease, were possessed and owned by it as such trustee, and for the purposes set forth in the instrument creating said public charitable trust, and the conveyance of the said trust property, as aforesaid, was made to the City of Indianapolis as the successor-trustee of the said public charitable trust, and not otherwise. Accordingly, said conveyance, which was made subject to all legal obligations of this defendant, including the obligation of the said lease, if any there be, amounted in law to no more than a substitution of the City of Indianapolis for this defendant as the trustee of the said public charitable trust and the complete execution by this defendant
310 of its duties as the original trustee as aforesaid. By reason of the foregoing, this defendant was on September 9, 1935, entirely and completely released and discharged from any and all obligations under said lease.

XXIX.

This defendant has no knowledge of the averments contained in Subdivision 29 of said second amendment and supplement, and neither admits nor denies said averments, but requests that plaintiff be required to make strict proof thereof; except that defendant admits that at the time of the said conveyance, it transferred bonds in the principal amount of $18,000 to the City of Indianapolis.

XXX.

As to the averments of Subdivision 30 of said second amendment and supplement, this defendant admits that under the provisions of the said lease, it agreed to accept the leased premises of the lessor as the same actually were at the date of said lease, and to renew, replace and expand said plant and system so as to maintain and keep the said demised premises in as good order, repair and condition as the same was at the time of making said lease. This defendant denies the remaining averments of said subdivision.

XXXI.

This defendant admits the averments contained in Subdivision 31 of said second amendment and supplement, except that it denies that it is under any obligation to the Indianapolis Gas Company, this plaintiff or the bondholders for whom this plaintiff was Trustee, by reason of the facts specifically set forth in Subdivision XX and 311 Subdivision XXVIII of defendant's answer to the original bill of complaint and the amendments and supplements thereto.

Wherefore, this defendant, having fully answered the said second amendment and supplement to plaintiff's bill of complaint, prays that it may go hence without day.

312 (Entry for January 10, 1939, continued.)

Comes now the defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company by its solicitors, and files separate answer to the second amendment and supplement to plaintiff's bill of complaint, which is as follows:

313 IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES. Filed Jan. 1 1939.
• • (Caption—1844) • •

SEPARATE ANSWER OF THE INDIANAPOLIS GAS COMPANY TO THE SECOND AMENDMENT AND SUPPLEMENT TO PLAINTIFF'S BILL OF COMPLAINT.

The Indianapolis Gas Company, defendant herein, by way of its separate answer to the "Second Amendment and Supplement to Plaintiff's Bill of Complaint" filed December 23d, 1938 says:

26. For answer to Paragraph 26 thereof, The Indianapolis Gas Company admits upon information and belief that at or about the 9th day of September, 1935 the Board of Trustees of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the Board of Directors of that Company, each acting separately, took some action, the exact nature and form of which is to this defendant unknown, and pursuant thereto, under date of the 9th day of September, 1935 the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, by its Vice President, attested by its secretary, made the transfer and assignment of its property which is set out as Exhibit E with the Bill of Complaint; and also by its said officers signed and acknowledged and tendered to the City of Indianapolis the instrument denominated "Assignment of Lease" set out as Exhibit F with said Bill of Complaint; and that the leasehold therein referred to was the 314 estate created by the instrument set out as Exhibit D with said Bill of Complaint; and admits that in so doing the said Citizens Gas Company purported and intended to carry out and execute the public charitable trust established and provided for by its Articles of Incorporation and its Franchise Contract set out as Exhibit C with the Bill of Complaint. But as to the same having been or not having been authorized upon any express conditions, or as to what is stated in the minutes of proceedings of said Trustees or of said Directors, this defendant has no knowledge unless only by hearsay, and cannot admit or deny the same. And whether or not the city of Indianapolis, by its Board of Directors for Utilities executed and delivered to said Citizens Gas Company the instrument called an Indemnity Agreement attached to and filed with said Second Amendment and Supplement to Plaintiff's Bill of Complaint, marked "Exhibit J," and whether or not the same was done in pursuance of said requirement by the said Trustees and Directors of said Citizens Gas Company, this defendant does not know except by hearsay, and cannot either admit or deny the same.

27. For answer to Paragraph 27 thereof this defendant, The Indianapolis Gas Company, admits as true all of the independent facts therein stated. But as to the matters the alleged conclusion of fact concerning what the funds deposited in the Indiana National Bank was derived from, and the alleged conclusions of law as to what said fund is subject to, and whether all that has been done by the City of Indianapolis is in accordance with the provisions of the lease filed with the Bill of Complaint as "Exhibit B," this defendant is not sufficiently informed to answer positively and therefore does not admit nor deny.

28. For answer to Paragraph 28 thereof, this answering defendant admits that there is default in the 315 payment of interest on its bonds in an amount exceeding $860,000.00 and that it does not now possess sufficient property, other than that now operated by the said City to pay such defaulted interest. It neither denies nor admits the alleged conclusions resulting from the facts so averred and states that the same are conclusions of law now before this court for determination.

29. For answer to Paragraph 29, this answering defendant admits that it is the owner and holder of bonds in the principal amount of $120,000 with coupons maturing October 1, 1936 and thereafter attached, but it denies that by reason thereof said bonds should not be permitted to participate in the distribution of any funds recovered by this plaintiff for all bond holders until all other bond holders have been paid in full, together with all claims of this plaintiff. It further states that it does not know, except by hearsay, whether or not the City of Indianapolis is the owner and holder of any of its bonds nor whether or when any of said bonds, if at all, were transferred to the said City by the Citizens Gas Company, and therefore, neither admits nor denies said averments of ownership.

30. For answer to Paragraph 30, this answering defendant admits the provisions of the lease as alleged and as embodied in the same as filed with the Bill of Complaint and marked Exhibit "B," but says that it has not operated or been in possession of its said property since the same was taken over under and pursuant to said lease, since which time its said property has been continuously under the operation and control of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and of the City of Indianapolis through its Department of Utilities, and is now under the operation and control of said city. This defendant says that in executing said lease and transferring the operation and control of its property to the lessee thereunder, 316 it violated no right, duty or obligation to these plaintiffs or to the owners and holders of its bonds.

This defendant is not now informed as to how far and in what particulars the provisions of the lease relative to the maintenance and upkeep of said property have been violated, nor to what extent, if at all, any of its now mortgaged property has been damaged; but this defendant says that, if damage has accrued to its said property through failure of the said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis or the City of Indianapolis to maintain the same in accordance with the terms and provisions of said lease, all rights and claims arising from any such failure is vested alone in this answering defendant and not in the plaintiff as averred in the said bill of complaint.

31. For answer to paragraph 31 thereof, defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company admits that subdivision 11 of said lease set out as Exhibit B with the Bill of Complaint contained and contains provisions substantially as averred in the Second Amendment and Supplement to said complaint, and that it and subdivision 12 thereof provide for making an inventory and appraisement of the property of the lessor taken over by the lessee, and that pursuant to an inventory and appraisement so made it was agreed that the value of such items of supplies and merchandise owned by the lessor and at that time turned over to the lessee to use as its own under said provisions of the lease was $112,950.43. But it is informed that the matters of law as to the legal rights, obligations and liabilities of the parties hereunder upon the hypothetical state of facts suggested in said amendment would be for the court to decide, and therefore neither admits nor denies the same.

317 Wherefore, this defendant prays:

1. That the relief prayed for against this defendant in each and all of the said paragraphs of prayer of this second amendment and supplement to the Bill of Complaint be denied, and that plaintiff's bill of complaint be dismissed as to it.

2. That in the decree and judgment entered in this case it be allowed its costs in this action and all other proper relief agreeable to equity and good conscience.

Filed Jan. 11, 1939.

318 And afterwards, towit, at the November Term of said Court, on the 11th day of January, 1939, before the Honorable Robert C. Baltzell, Judge of said Court, the following further proceedings were had herein, towit:

Come now the defendants City of Indianapolis, et al., by their attorneys, and file separate answer to second amendment and supplement to plaintiff's bill of complaint, which answer is as follows:

319 IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

* * (Caption—1844) * *

SEPARATE ANSWER OF CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS ET AL. TO SECOND AMENDMENT AND SUPPLEMENT TO PLAINTIFF'S BILL OF COMPLAINT.

City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation, and the named members of its Board of Directors and of its Board of Trustees for Utilities (hereinafter for convenience sometimes referred to collectively as defendant City), for separate answer to the Second Amendment and Supplement to Plaintiff's Bill of Complaint, and referring to the numbered paragraphs thereof, say:

26. They admit the averments contained in Subdivision 26 thereof, but allege that defendant City did not accept the tendered transfer and assignment of the leasehold estate created by the lease of September 30, 1913; that said lease has never been binding and is not now binding upon defendant City or its property; and that the execution of the indemnifying agreement to Citizens Gas Company (Exhibit J to said Bill) in no sense was or is a recognition of liability under said lease, nor an acceptance of it; nor did or could the benefits of such agreement validly extend to said plaintiff, nor can plaintiff enforce the same, directly or indirectly.

320 27. They admit the deposit of $1,157,785 with The Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis in pursuance of the agreement dated March 2, 1936 (Exhibit H to the Bill); admit the payment of insurance premiums on property of The Indianapolis Gas Company and the payment of Indiana gross income taxes and Federal income taxes assessed against The Indianapolis Gas Company, all since September 9, 1935, and all under and by virtue of said agreement dated March 2, 1936, and not otherwise. They deny that such payments were made under or by reason of said lease of September 30, 1913. They deny that the sums so paid were paid from proceeds of the operation of the property covered by said lease exclusively. They admit that defendant City has not paid, and allege that defendant City is not under any circumstances liable for, all or any part of interest on bonds issued by The Indianapolis Gas Company; and leave plaintiff to its proof as to who, if anyone, has paid interest upon such bonds. They allege defendant City is not liable for payment of such interest for the reasons and by reason of facts heretofore pleaded by defendant.

28. They deny that defendant City is in default in the payment of interest on bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company and allege that for reasons and upon facts heretofore pleaded, defendant City is not and could not be liable for such interest by reason of such bonds or said lease. They deny that the transfer of i ~ property by Citizens Gas Company to said City on September 9, 1935, was fraudulent as to plaintiff or as to plaintiff's bondholders or to any person; and they deny that such transfer was made or received with intent to hinder, delay or defraud plaintiff or its bondholders or any person; and they deny that plaintiff is entitled to have such transfer set aside or declared fraudulent and deny that property so transferred may be subjected to judgments as 321 prayed. They deny that any obligations of said lease were or are enforceable or valid against defendant City; deny that any obligations of said lease were or are enforceable or valid since September 9, 1935; and deny that defendant City received said property with knowledge that such lease obligations were valid or enforceable against it or its property or against any one subsequent to September 9, 1935. They allege that the said transfer and conveyance were made pursuant to a legal duty imposed upon said Citizens Gas Company, and by virtue of a legal right vested in said City. They allege that said transfer and conveyance were made in the performance of a public charitable trust, whereby defendant City was substituted in possession as a successor trustee to defendant Citizens Gas Company; all consistently with the terms of such public charitable trust.

29. They admit defendant City is now the owner and holder, as a part of said public charitable trust, of bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company in the aggregate principal amount of $18,000, transferred to defendant City by Citizens Gas Company; and they deny that there are any reasons why such bonds should not participate in any distribution of funds payable by way of principal or interest on such bonds, equally and ratably with all other bondholders excepting only as to bonds issued and now held by said The Indianapolis Gas Company in the aggregate principal amount of $120,000; as to which defendant City is informed and believes and upon information and belief alleges the fact to be that such bonds are subject to extinguishment and should be cancelled and not allowed to participate equally and ratably with other bonds.

30. They deny that defendant City has refused or neglected or has ever been or is now under any obligation to make or cause to be made, renewals, repairs, 322 replacements, or extensions of property owned by The Indianapolis Gas Company and covered by said lease, excepting only to the extent if any that some obligation is imposed by said agreement of March 2, 1936. They deny that defendant City is liable to plaintiff as Trustee under a mortgage of property covered by said lease to any extent and for any sum, whether for losses, damages, costs, charges, or expenses, resulting from alleged failure of defendants or any of them to make or cause to be made any such renewals, repairs, replacements, or extensions. With respect to the obligations and performance or non-performance thereof imposed by said lease or by said mortgage, on The Indianapolis Gas Company or Citizens Gas Company, these defendants leave plaintiff to strict proof, as not having sufficient knowledge with respect thereto. They allege that no such claimed liability is assertable that has accrued more than ten years prior to the date of plaintiff's said Second Amendment and Supplement. They allege that any controversy with respect to claimed under-maintenance, viz., alleged failure to make or cause to be made renewals, repairs, replacements or extensions by reason of said lease, is a separable controversy to which The Indianapolis Gas Company is an indispensable party and is opposed in interest to defendant City; that as to this controversy, the parties should be realigned, and when realigned, there is no jurisdiction over such separable controversy because of lack of diversity of citizenship; jurisdiction being collusively invoked.

31. They deny any obligation under or by virtue of the said lease of September 30, 1913. They have no knowledge and leave plaintiff to strict proof of the facts alleged in said subdivision 31 of said Second Amendment and Supplement to its Bill of Complaint.

323 Wherefore, these defendants specifically deny that plaintiff is entitled to any and all of the relief prayed; and they renew the prayer of their counterclaim.

Edward H. Knight,
Corporation Counsel of Indianapolis.
M. B. Reddington,
City Attorney of Indianapolis.
W. H. Thompson,
Albert L. Rabb,
Solicitors for said Defendants.

324 And afterwards to wit at the November Term of said Court, on the 14th day of January, 1939, before the Honorable Robert C. Baltzell, Judge of said Court, the following further proceedings were had herein, to wit: Filed Jan. 14, 1939.

On oral application of plaintiff, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, Trustee, it is hereby given leave to withdraw its answer to the counterclaim of defendants, City of Indianapolis, et al., and to file its motion to strike immaterial matter from the answer and counterclaim of defendants, the City of Indianapolis, et al. Said motion is now filed and reads as follows:

325 In the District Court of the United States.

* * (Caption—1844) * *

MOTION TO STRIKE IMMATERIAL MATTER FROM THE ANSWER AND COUNTERCLAIM OF DEFENDANTS, THE CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS, ET AL.

Now comes the plaintiff, The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, Trustee, by its attorneys, and respectfully petitions the Court for leave to withdraw its answer to the counterclaim of defendants, the City of Indianapolis, the members of the Board of Trustees for Utilities of said City, and the members of the Board of Directors for Utilities of said City, and moves the Court for an order striking out the following portions of the separate and several answer and counterclaim of said defendants, making this motion separately as to each of said portions, on the ground that each and every such portion of said answer and counterclaim, whether such portions are taken separately or collectively, is immaterial to the determination of any issue in this cause:

1. That portion of the last grammatical paragraph of part 5 of said answer which reads:

"also contains many other conditions burdensome in character"

(which language appears in the 14th, 15th and 16th lines of page 8).

326 2. That portion of sub-paragraph "Second" of part 8 of said answer which reads:

"which lease contained onerous and burdensome conditions,"

(which language appears in the 31st and 32nd lines of page 15).

3. That portion of part 11 of said answer which reads:

"These answering defendants further aver that The Indianapolis Gas Company has during all of said time received the rentals due it under the terms of said lease; that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has paid all taxes in connection therewith and all other burdens imposed upon it by the terms of said lease, and that the payments so made to or in behalf of The Indianapolis Gas Company during the period from 1913 to 1935, inclusive, were as follows:"

4. The table of payments included in part 11 of said answer, which table appears on page 25 of said answer.

5. That portion of the last grammatical paragraph of part 11 of said answer which reads:

"deny that over the period of the lease any profits have been produced thereby and"

(which language appears in the 4th and 5th lines of page 26).

6. That portion of the last grammatical paragraph of part 11 of said answer which reads:

"On the contrary, these answering defendants aver:

"(a) That the payments made to The Indianapolis

Gas Company during the period of years above referred to, viz.: from 1913 to 1935 were largely in excess of the fair value of the use of said property during said time.

"(b) That during many of the years referred to Citizens Gas Company was operated at a loss and one of the factors contributing materially to the existence of such loss was the excessive rental and other considerations required to be paid to and on behalf of said The Indianapolis Gas Company under the terms of said lease.

"(c) That said lease is presently burdensome and not advantageous to said trust property, all as herein-327 after in subdivision 27 hereof more specifically alleged.

"(d) That the bondholders and stockholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company have benefited to an inequitable, unfair and unreasonable extent because of payments made to them or on their behalf under the terms of said lease."

(which language appears on page 26).

7. That portion of part 21 of said answer which reads:

"and that the benefits of The Indianapolis Gas Company largely exceeded the benefits to the City of Indianapolis;"

(which language appears in the 7th, 8th and 9th lines of page 51).

8. All of paragraph "Fourth", including sub-paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of said paragraph "Fourth," and all of paragraph "Fifth" of part 27 of said answer, (which paragraphs and subparagraphs appear on pages 61-62).

The answering defendants by leave of court first had and obtained file this their amendment and supplement to their answer and counterclaim heretofore filed in this cause. (This amendment will follow the averments of answering defendants subdivision numbered 9 on page 20 of their answer.)

These answering defendants aver that at no time has the City of Indianapolis through the Board of Public Works or otherwise formally, or in any other manner, accepted the lease by requiring extensions in the lines and mains of The Indianapolis Gas Company to be made, nor has said City through said Board of Public Works or otherwise ever in any manner recognized or ratified said lease by requiring extensions in lines and mains of The Indianapolis Gas Company to be made, although the answering defendants admit that the City of Indianapolis through the Board of Public Works thereof did require extensions 331 to be made in the lines and mains of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

332 (Further Entry for January 18, 1939.)

Entered Jan. 18, 1939.

This matter came on to be heard upon this day upon the question of the advisability of hearing and determining the issue presented as to whether or not the obligations contained in the lease between the Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, dated September 30, 1913, are binding upon and enforceable against the City of Indianapolis or any of the property acquired by it from Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis on September 9, 1935, or against the Indianapolis Gas Company or the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

And the Court being duly advised in the premises:

It is ordered that evidence shall be heard upon the issues as to whether the lease dated September 30, 1913, from the Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis is binding upon and enforceable against the City of Indianapolis, or any of the property acquired by it from the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, on September 9, 1935, or against the Indianapolis Gas Company or against Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and whether plaintiff is entitled to judgment for the rental under said lease or for the interest on the First Consolidated Mortgage Five Per Cent Gold Bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company which has accrued since April 1, 1936, against any of said defendants or said property, with the one exception that evidence shall not be heard therewith but shall be deferred on one certain reason assigned by the City of Indianapolis in its answer, for claimed unenforceability of such lease against it or its said property viz., that the City as successor trustee of a certain public charitable trust in property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis had the right as such successor trustee to refuse and reject an assignment of such lease on the 333 ground that such lease was burdensome and not advantageous to such trust; reserving the right to make such order or decree as may seem just and appropriate to the Court at any stage of this proceeding.

The trial of all other issues in this case is deferred until the further order of the Court with the right reserved to refer any of all issues to a Master.

It is further ordered that the assignment of this cause for trial upon the above stated issues for Monday, February 20, 1939, at 10:00 A. M. be, and the same is, hereby vacated and this cause is ordered reassigned for trial of such issues on Thursday, March 2, 1939, at 10:00 A. M.

Entered Mar. 2, 1939.

334 And afterwards towit at the November Term of said Court, on the 2nd day of March, 1939, before the Honorable Robert C. Baltzell, Judge of said Court, the following further proceedings were had herein, towit:

It appearing to the Court that Alfred M. Glossbrenner, who was made a defendant to plaintiff's bill of complaint as a member of the Board of Trustees for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis has died, that Thomas D. Sheerin has succeeded said Alfred M. Glossbrenner as such member of said Board of Trustees, that Joseph H. McDuffee, who was made a defendant in this cause as a member of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, is no longer a member of said Board of Directors, and that John E. Ohleyer has succeeded said Joseph H. McDuffee as such member of said Board of Directors;

It is ordered that said Thomas D. Sheerin, as a member of the Board of Trustees for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, and said John E. Ohleyer, as a member of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, be, and they hereby are made parties defendant in this suit and this suit shall proceed.

And now Thomas D. Sheerin and John E. Ohleyer through their solicitors, William H. Thompson and Albert L. Rabb, enter their appearance in this cause and adopt the pleadings heretofore filed in this cause by their respective predecessors in office as and for their own, with the same force and effect as though they had originally joined in filing the same.

526 And afterwards towit at the May Term of said Court, on the 30th day of October, 1939, before the Honorable Robert C. Baltzell, Judge of said Court, the following further proceedings were had herein, towit: Filed Oct. 30, 1939.

Comes now the plaintiff by its attorneys, and files official reporter's transcript of proceedings upon trial, which is as follows:

531 The Court: Call the case.

The Clerk: The Chase National Bank against Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and others.

The Court: Is the plaintiff ready?

Mr. Burns: Yes.

The Court: Is the defendant ready?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, your Honor, but before we commence the actual trial of this case, I have two motions to suppress subpoenas duces tecum that were issued, one on Tuesday at four o'clock and one on yesterday at three-twenty o'clock.

I would be glad to present that matter briefly to your Honor, if I may.

* * * * *

Mr. Burns: If the Court please, the Clerk called only the case of The Chase National Bank against Citizens Gas Company, No. 1844. It was our understanding that the Court made an order that both cases—that is, both 1844 and 1950—were to be tried at this time. Am I correct?

The Court: I understand that the evidence will be 532 heard which would be applied to both cases and, then, we would apply it to the case to which it belongs.

Mr. Burns: Yes.

The Court: There was no order of consolidation.

Mr. Burns: No, I think they were simply to be heard together.

Mr. Thompson: That is our understanding.

* * * * *

The plaintiffs, to maintain the issues on their behalf, offered and introduced the following evidence, to-wit:

533 Mr. Burns: If I may stand over here by the court reporter, it will help in identifying some of these exhibits.

The parties have, with much labor and some difference of opinion, though I guess perhaps no difference of opinion on the final results, agreed on a stipulation covering a substantial part of the facts in this case. The bills in the two cases are in a large measure identical, and the stipulation has been drawn so that Paragraph 1 of the stipulation is referable to the facts stated in Paragraphs 1 of the two bills and Paragraph 2 of the stipulation is referable to the facts stated in Paragraphs 2 of the two bills; and that scheme is followed down through the first seventeen paragraphs of the stipulation. Beyond the seventeenth paragraph of the bills, the allegations perhaps got to be more argumentative than matters of fact, so beginning with Paragraph 18 of the stipulation it does not follow in accordance with the paragraphs of the bills.

The Court: Suppose you have that identified as an exhibit, and shown read in evidence.

Mr. Burns: Yes. Since evidence is being intro-
534 duced here in both cases, in the Trustee's case, 1844, and in the Bondholders' case, 1950, may we have a general understanding that in the absence of some express statement to the contrary all of the evidence offered is being introduced in both cases, and as counsel for plaintiff in both cases we will refer to the evidence and the exhibits offered as the plaintiffs' evidence or the plaintiffs' exhibits, as the term being intended to include both the Trustee and the Bondholders.

The Court: There is no objection to that, as I understand. My recollection is that we stated we would make a finding in the Trustee case first. I do not know that the record shows that, but that is what I had in mind, that I would decide that case, and that would perhaps not necessitate deciding the question of whether or not the Bondholders had a right to bring a suit. That was my understanding of it.

Mr. Burns: Plaintiffs wish to have marked for identification three documents:

First, as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 1, a stipulation signed by counsel for all parties to these cases.

Second, as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 2, the printed record
535 in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, in the case of Newton Todd, appellant, against Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, et al., appellees, Cause No. 4394.

And, third, as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 3, the appellants' brief in the Supreme Court of Indiana in case No. 26,163, entitled Anna G. Williams, as etc., appellants, versus Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, et al., appellees.

The three exhibits mentioned are merely marked for identification at this time.

Mr. Thompson: Is your offer in respect of Exhibit No. 3 limited to the pleadings?

Mr. Burns: At the present time I am simply asking to have it marked for identification, and not offering any of the three exhibits.

(Plaintiffs' Exhibits 1, 2 and 3 were marked for identification by the reporter.)

Mr. Burns: Plaintiffs offer in evidence the following parts of the stipulation heretofore identified as Plaintiffs' Exhibit No. 1:

536 The five grammatical paragraphs which are introductory thereto.

Numbered sections 1 to 17, both inclusive, of said stipulation.

Numbered sections 19, 20 and 21 of said stipulation.

Numbered sections 23, 24 and 25 of said stipulation.

The Court: That omits 22?

Mr. Burns: That omits 22, and we are offering just a part of 18, which I will come to in a minute.

Also subparagraphs I, II, IX, X, XIII and XIV of numbered section 18 of said stipulation.

We are offering all of the paragraphs of the stipulation except Paragraph 22 and except parts of Paragraph 18.

The Court: That is, all of the stipulation with these exceptions, is that right?

Mr. Burns: Yes. There are only 25.

Mr. Thompson: I want to make an objection to the offer of Plaintiffs' Exhibit 1, your Honor, but I would like 537 to make it in connection with Exhibits 1, 2, and 3, if they are to be offered now.

Mr. Burns: I am going to offer a whole lot of things, and if it is agreeable to the court, I will finish the offer with regard to this stipulation, and then let Mr. Thompson make what objections he cares to, if that is agreeable to counsel and the court.

The Court: All right, go ahead.

Mr. Burns: Plaintiffs offer as evidence in both cases the following exhibits attached to the bill as amended and supplemented in the Trustee's case and identified in the stipulation:

EXHIBITS A TO F, both inclusive, and EXHIBITS H AND J.

Plaintiffs offer in evidence in both cases EXHIBITS A AND B attached to the City's answer in the Trustee's case and identified in the stipulation.

The Court: That is attached to—

Mr. Burns: (Interposing.) The City's answer in the Trustee's case. Perhaps I got that wrong. Exhibits A and B attached to the City's answer in the Trustee's case.

Plaintiffs offer EXHIBITS 5 TO 9, both inclusive, 538 20, 22, 23, 24, 47 TO 50, both inclusive, 55, 56, 86 AND 87, identified in the stipulation.

(The reporter marked for identification Plaintiffs' Exhibits 5 to 9, both inclusive, 20, 22, 23, 24, 47 to 50, both inclusive, 55, 56, 86 and 87, identified in the stipulation.)

Mr. Burns: I might say parenthetically, if the court please, that the last paragraph of the stipulation indicates a large number of the exhibit numbers were not used. We began with 1, and we found that we were taking out these exhibits and putting in others, so there are a large number of exhibit numbers not used, and those are enumerated in the last paragraph of the stipulation.

Plaintiffs offer the following exhibits identified in the stipulation, each of which is a pleading in the Fishback, Todd, or Williams case. Said exhibits are offered for the purpose of showing the questions raised and issues presented in those suits and the positions taken by the various parties in said suits, but said pleadings are not offered as any independent evidence of the facts stated in the several pleadings:

539 The exhibits so offered are as follows:

EXHIBITS 13 AND 14, being certain pleadings in the Fishback case.

EXHIBITS 30, 31, AND 32, being certain pleadings in the Todd case.

EXHIBITS 35 TO 40, both inclusive, being certain pleadings in the Williams case.

EXHIBITS 13, 14, 37, 39, AND 40, just referred to, have been separately typewritten and appear among the typewritten exhibits tendered with the stipulation.

EXHIBIT 30, the bill of complaint in the Todd case, appears on pages 2 to 72, both inclusive, of the printed record in the Todd case, previously identified as Exhibit 2.

Mr. Thompson: Are you offering that?

Mr. Burns: Yes.

The Court: Can you furnish Mr. Thompson a copy of what you have just handed to the court, showing these offers?

Mr. Burns: Yes. Exhibit 31, the answer of the City of Indianapolis and others in the Todd case, appears on pages 115 to 152, both inclusive, of said record in the 540 Todd case, (Exhibit 2) and Exhibit 32, an amended motion to strike out portions of answers, appears on pages 154 to 161, both inclusive, of said record in the Todd case (Exhibit 2).

Mr. Thompson: In the interest of time, this might be handed to the reporter.

Mr. Burns: I have handed it to him, but I have to have these exhibits marked as we go along.

Exhibit 35, the complaint in the Williams case, appears on pages 110 to 228, both inclusive, of the appellants' brief in said cause, previously identified as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 3.

Exhibit 36, the supplemental complaint in said Williams case, appears on pages 228 to 230, both inclusive, of said appellants' brief (Exhibit 3).

Exhibit 38, the demurrer of the Citizens Gas Company and others in said Williams case, appears on pages 232 to 235, both inclusive, of said appellants' brief (Exhibit 3).

The Court: Unless you are going to use this immediately, why couldn't the reporter take this and mark the exhibits during recess?

Mr. Burns: That will be satisfactory.

The Court: And you may look it over, Mr. Thompson, and if you have any objections to any part of it, that can be taken up later.

(The reporter marked for identification Plaintiffs' Exhibits 13, 14, 30, 31, 32, 35 to 40, both inclusive.)

541 Mr. Burns: I now offer EXHIBITS 13, 14, 30, 31, 32, AND 35 TO 40, inclusive, which I have just referred to, being the pleadings in those various causes. I mention that again so as to give Mr. Thompson a chance if he wants at this time to make an objection to those various pleadings,—or, would you prefer to wait?

Mr. Thompson: I would prefer to wait until you have made this complete offer, and then I will state my objections, if that is satisfactory to your Honor.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Burns: Plaintiffs also offer certain letters identified in the stipulation as EXHIBITS 58, 59, 66, 67, 75 AND 76, but said letters are offered only for the purpose of showing the positions taken by the various parties in writing said letters, and that said positions were called to the attention of the recipient of such letters, but not as being any independent evidence of the facts stated therein.

Copies of these Exhibits 58, 59, 66, 67, 75 and 76 have been prepared by Mr. Thompson's office, but they do not show the signatures on the letters, and I would like 542 some way to have them appear. That is, many of them were made from carbon copies of letters, and if we could have some arrangement to have those signatures filled in, so that we might know who had written the letters, it would make it complete. Could you do that, Mr. Rabb?

Mr. Rabb: I do not have custody of the Indianapolis Gas Company files.

Mr. Burns: I understood we were going to have complete exhibits here.

Mr. Rabb: We gave you our complete files and photo-stats. We do not have the originals. They were, in the main, in the Indianapolis Gas Company's custody.

Mr. Burns: I think the letters should be complete, and we will undertake to complete these six we are offering, but we will not endeavor to complete the others somebody else may offer, but will call a witness to prove whose the signatures were.

The Court: If any of the parties have the originals, I am certain they will furnish them.

Mr. Higgins: We will furnish the ones that were submitted to us.

Mr. Burns: I have here in my hand certified copies
543 from the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana, of the transfer and assignment of personal property identified as Exhibit E, attached to the bill, and already introduced in evidence in connection with the stipulation; the assignment of the 99-year lease, Exhibit F, attached to the bill, and already identified in connection with the stipulation; and the deed of the real estate, Exhibit 55, previously identified and offered in connection with the stipulation. It does not seem to me there is any necessity of offering these certified copies. They show—

The Court: (Interposing.) Have you offered the copies?

Mr. Burns: I have offered the copies, but I wanted to show the fact about the recording. I thought perhaps rather than calling the Recorder we could have a stipulation here. We were unable to stipulate on it between the parties when we tried to stipulate on it in advance. These certified copies show each of them recorded at 3:45 p. m., September 9, 1935. I am advised by the Recorder and by counsel learned in the law in this vicinity that that 544 means the time the documents were received for record by the Recorder. If it can be so stipulated, I think it will be unnecessary to offer these certified copies.

The Court: I think you can stipulate that.

Mr. Thompson: For the City of Indianapolis, we will agree the instruments to which Mr. Burns has just referred were presented to the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana for recordation at 3:45 p. m., on the 9th day of September, 1935.

The Court: And that they were recorded in certain volumes.

Mr. Thompson: And that they were thereafter properly recorded.

Mr. Burns: Is that agreeable to the Citizens Gas Company?

Mr. Sparks: Yes.

Mr. Burns: And the Indianapolis Gas Company?

Mr. Higgins: Yes.

Mr. Burns: It seems to me that saves encumbering the record with these certified copies.

Plaintiffs offer as Exhibit 88 a statement of the Secretary of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, 545 duly certified by the Secretary of State, showing that the Secretary of the Public Service Commission, after diligent search, has been unable to find the pleadings before the Public Service Commission referred to in sections 7 and 8 of the bill. In view of the loss of those original pleadings, plaintiffs offer Exhibit 13, the first paragraph of the complaint of Frank S. Fishback case, as independent evidence of the three following matters:

1. Petition of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and Indianapolis Gas Company before the Public Service Commission asking for an order authorizing the making of a lease between Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company.

2. The intervening petition of Frank S. Fishback before the Public Service Commission opposing the approval of the lease.

3. The petition of Frank S. Fishback before the Public Service Commission for rehearing.

Mr. Thompson: The defendant, City of Indianapolis, and the individual defendants who are members of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indian-546 apolis, object at this time to the offer of Exhibit No. 13 for the reason that there is no showing at all that the petition of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the Indianapolis Gas Company before the Public Service Commission, the intervening petition of Frank S. Fishback, and the alleged petition of Fishback for a rehearing, set out in the first paragraph of plaintiffs' complaint are correct, accurate and true copies of the pleadings that are actually filed before the Public Service Commission. Note, your Honor, these are offered as evidence of the things that were actually filed before the Public Service Commission.

Secondly, on the ground that these are hearsay as to the objecting defendants.

Third, on the ground they cannot be received as original evidence of the papers that were actually filed, without some proof that they are correct copies of such papers.

Mr. Burns: As I understand it, under the stipulation,

Exhibit 13 is here before the court with just as much effect as though we had subpoenaed the transcript from the Supreme Court of Indiana and proved Exhibit 13 from 547 the transcript. That is where we got the information, and what it was compared with.

The Court: I understand Mr. Thompson's position that he is not objecting to that, but the fact that the things stated in there constitute the things that were filed before the Public Service Commission,—which, of course, would be elementary.

Mr. Burns: The petition of Fishback in the Circuit Court, removed to the Superior Court, was verified, and was then certified by the Clerk of the Superior Court to the Supreme Court, and it is that on which we rely as our evidence.

The Court: You do not contend that would be evidence because it was filed before the Commission?

Mr. Burns: The petition purports to set forth in detail and quote exactly what those petitions are. There is a well settled exception to the hearsay rule that a declaration as to matters of great public interest is admissible where the original source of information is no longer available. I think this court knows from his previous contact with this situation that there wasn't anything in and about Indianapolis in 1913 about which there was so much public 548 interest as about this gas situation. It was a topic of constant discussion in the newspapers, and Fishback comes into the Circuit Court and files what purports to be a statement of what his pleadings were before the Public Service Commission. Now, we contend that that comes within the well accepted exception to the hearsay rule, that if the primary sources of evidence are unavailable, hearsay declarations are admissible to prove the fact which otherwise cannot be proved.

This question, I ought to say, is typical of several questions that are necessarily involved here, and they are inherent in the situation because the City of Indianapolis delayed twenty-two years before it raised any question whatever about the validity of the lease.

The Court: Let us not go into that. We are just trying a law suit, and I don't care to be harassed by things that are personal in this. I am interested in the facts and the law. They filed it within the required time. You don't have to file anything the next day; you can file it within limits. It was all right, and the Circuit Court of Appeals said so; so I don't see any point to that.

549 I am doubtful very much whether or not that document should be received as evidence of documents that were filed with the Public Service Commission. I will reserve my ruling on that, however, until I have an opportunity to examine it further. It would be evidence, of course, of what was in the petition filed by Fishback, but to say that would be evidence of the things that were in the statements, allegations that are in the pleadings or papers filed with the Public Service Commission, I am just doubtful if I could go that far, but I will reserve my ruling on that.

Mr. Burns: Plaintiffs also offer Paragraph 13 of the bill of complaint in the Todd case appearing upon pages 40 and 41 of Exhibit 2, and Paragraph 10 of the answer of the City of Indianapolis and others appearing on page 126 of Exhibit 2, to establish the admission made by the City of Indianapolis in its answer as to the circumstances under which Chapter 78 of the Indiana Laws of 1929 was prepared and passed. We are offering an allegation in the bill and an admission in the City's answer as an admission of the facts there stated.

Mr. Thomspon: To which evidence the City of Indianapolis and the Member of the Board of Directors for 550 Utilities object, because it is perfectly clear an averment in the bill of complaint in the Todd case or an admission contained in the answer of the City of Indianapolis are limited, so far as any legal questions are concerned, to that case. Here is an issue made between the City of Indianapolis and Newton Todd, the plaintiff, as to whether Newton Todd as representing the stockholders of the Citizens Gas Company is entitled to take this property over or whether a public charitable trust had been created by which title to that property was vested in the City of Indianapolis at the date of the creation of the trust, which was 1905. Certain averments are made in that bill of complaint, and certain answers in respect thereto by the City of Indianapolis. That is not offered now on the question of res adjudicata, but is offered as an independent admission in this case, and I think it is well settled any admission made by any party in a pleading in a case is limited to that case.

The Court: I do not know what the allegations are.

Mr. Burns: These allegations are allegations of fact that the law was prepared by counsel for the City of 551 Indianapolis who was acting for it in connection with this, that it was introduced in the Legislature at the request of the City of Indianapolis, that it was passed exactly as it was introduced.

The Court: Is that with reference to that special enabling statute?

Mr. Burns: Yes.

Mr. Thompson: I will add the objection, which Mr. Burns brings to my mind, that all of this could not make any difference whatever. If an act is passed the court is not to examine the circumstances and conditions under which it was passed; it is either a valid statute or it isn't. What possible difference could it make in the determination of this case whether the enabling act, Chapter 78 of the Laws of 1929 was passed by the General Assembly in the exact form it was prepared, or whether the Legislature made a change in it?

Mr. Burns: It certainly cannot make any difference in the law, but it is material in considering the intention of the City of Indianapolis. Within about a week or ten days after the law was passed, the City, by its Board of Works, exercised its option to take over the Citizens Gas, and 552 I think that is material and has a bearing on—

The Court: (Interposing.) I realize this goes back a long ways, and the evidence necessarily covers various ramifications, and I am going to be very liberal in my rulings as to the admission of evidence. I think the Court wants everything before it that will shed any light on the questions to be determined, and I would rather err on having a little more in the record than not having enough. I am making that as a general statement that will apply to all. I will not pass on that question now.

Mr. Burns: If the Court would like for us to do so, we can cite decisions of the Supreme Court and other courts, holding that admission by a party is admissible as to that same party in entirely independent litigation. It is a very well settled rule.

The Court: I would like to take up these exhibits all at the same time and go right down through them. I can't do it very well piecemeal. Perhaps we can get along better if we make all of these offers and then begin at the beginning and make your objections, and we can rule 553 on them as we go along, or take them under advisement, and I think that would be a little more practical.

Mr. Burns: Plaintiffs offer as Exhibit 89 the second, third, and fourth grammatical paragraphs from Section 18 of the answer of City of Indianapolis and others in the case of Cotter, et al, versus Citizens Gas Company, et al., being Case No. 1192 on the equity docket of this court, as evidence that the City of Indianapolis and the Board of Public Works in said case admitted, among other things, that the Citizens Gas Company leased all the plant and property of Indianapolis Gas Company for a period of 99 years with the full consent and approval of the City of Indianapolis.

The Court: I wonder if we might just let these stand on their offer at the present time, and unless it is necessary to have them passed upon, until we go ahead with the other evidence of the plaintiff, and take this all up at the conclusion of the evidence, if we can, unless some particular part of it would be necessary; and I would say we can pass on all of it before the defendant proceeds with its evidence.

554 Mr. Thompson: I have reduced my objections to print on the major portion of these. If the Court would rather, I will take it up later.

The Court: Yes, if there is no objection to that procedure.

Mr. Burns: I would like to say in regard to Exhibit 89, which I have just referred to, I asked Mr. Sogemeier to produce the original files of the Court in the Cotter case so if objection arises from the fact it is merely a copy, we would be glad to take it from the record.

The Court: No. We are not in the habit of having lawyers misrepresent anything in making copies.

Mr. Burns: I think I missed one in there in reading this offer.

Plaintiffs offer Paragraph 4 of the stipulation of facts in the Todd case appearing on pages 192 and 193 of Exhibit 2, as evidence that the parties to said cause, including the Citizens Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis, stipulated that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was then the owner of a 99-year lease created by the lease of September 30, 1913 here in question.

555 Mr. Thompson: I haven't been furnished copies of these last two.

The Court: Pages 4 and 5, you mean, Mr. Thompson?

Mr. Thompson: The last one, on page 5. You see, your Honor, he comes here with an offer of isolated portions of a stipulation of facts and three grammatical paragraphs from Section 18 of an answer. I think it is perfectly obvious I cannot tell from looking at these just what these are, and I don't know whether the context is given so it is understandable, and I won't until—

The Court: (Interposing.) We will give you an opportunity to examine them. I haven't seen a copy yet of the stipulation that was offered. Do you have that stipulation, Exhibit 1?

(Exhibit No. 1 was handed to the Court.)

(At this point the witnesses in the cause were sworn.)

Mr. Burns: I will call Mr. Vonnegut.

556 FRANKLIN VONNEGUT, a witness called on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Vonnegut, will you state your name?

A. Franklin Vonnegut.

Q. And your address?

A. 120 East Washington Street, for business.

Q. And your occupation?

A. President of the Vonnegut Hardware Company.

Q. Are you now a member of the Board of Directors of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. I am.

Q. During what time have you been a director of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. From the inception.

Q. That is, from about 1905 to the present time?

A. Correct.

Q. And have you been active in other respects? Have you been an officer of the Citizens Gas Company as well as a director?

A. I was the President for a number of years.

Q. Can you tell me during what years you were President?

A. I cannot.

Q. Have you held some other office than President?

A. Not in the Citizens Gas Company.

Q. Not in the Citizens Gas Company?

A. Director, only.

Q. Director and President?

557 A. Director and President.

Q. You don't recall during what years you were President?

A. I only know that I was requested not to ask for the office when I was not in harmony with Mr. J. D. Forrest, our manager.

Q. During what period of time was Mr. J. D. Forrest with the Citizens Gas Company?

A. All the time.
Q. Well, do you mean he came in 1905?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And stayed with the Citizens Gas Company until what time?
A. Until it was turned over to the City of Indianapolis.
Q. Well, now, wasn't there a time, shortly before the property was turned over to the City of Indianapolis, that the Citizens Gas Company had some other manager?
Mr. Burns: Mr. Kemp was his name?
A. I don't recall it.
A Voice: Mr. Kirk.
Mr. Thompson: Mr. Forrest retired and Mr. Kirk went in long before the time that the City took over the 558 property.
A. (Continued.) Oh, sure—Mr. Kirk. I knew that he was the manager, but I didn't catch the connection suddenly.
Q. You have a little difficulty with your hearing?
A. A little—a lot of it.
Q. Do you recall, now, when Mr. Kirk succeeded Mr. Forrest?
A. I didn't prepare myself to be a witness. I didn't look up anything and my memory isn't such that I can give any dates.
Q. During the time when Mr. Forrest was with the company, what was his title, the office that he held?
A. As I recall it, it was Secretary and General Manager.
Q. Did he have charge of the operation of the business of the Citizens Gas Company?
Mr. Thompson: To which question the Defendant City objects. The extent of Mr. Forrest's authority has to be established by the record, not by the oral statement of some witness.
Mr. Sparks: May the record show the same objection on the part of the Citizens Gas Company?
559 The Court: I think he can tell what he did, if that is what you want.
Mr. Burns: That is exactly what I want.
The Court: He could not express his opinion as to what his authority was.
Mr. Burns: No.
Will you read the question, please, Mr. Reporter?
(The Reporter read the preceding question as follows: "Did he have charge of the operation of the business of the Citizens Gas Company?")

A. He did.

The Court: I think the objection is sustained as to that.

Q. What did Mr. Forrest do in connection with the Citizens Gas Company?

A. He had no other connections that I know of. He devoted his entire time to the Citizens Gas Company and its business.

Q. And what did he do for the Citizens Gas Com-560 pany? What functions did he perform? What work did he do?

A. Just everything.

Q. Did he take care of the sale and marketing of securities of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. He did, indeed.

Q. And did he have the contacts with the bankers and brokers through whom those securities were sold?

A. Entirely.

Q. And would he report to the Board the result of those negotiations?

A. Yes, sir,

Q. And did the Board object or raise any question about his dealing with the bankers and brokers?

Mr. Thompson: I don't like to object, your Honor, but it seems to me that the scope of Mr. Forrest's authority must be shown by the By-Laws and the appropriate resolutions or minutes of the Citizens Gas Company.

The Court: I will let him answer the question. Go ahead. Overruled.

Read the question, please.

561 (The Reporter read the preceding question as follows: "And did the Board object or raise any question about his dealing with the bankers and brokers?")

A. I think the Board was generally in full accord with his actions and approved them.

The Court: As I understand, he was an employe of the Citizens Gas Company. Is that right?

The Witness: How is that?

The Court: He was an employe, was he, of the Citizens Gas Company?

The Witness: Yes, and he was so proficient in his work that there was very little difficulty—very little objection found to his proceedings—to his actions.

Mr. Burns: That is all.

The Court: Any questions?

Mr. Thompson: No, your Honor.

Witness excused.

562 ALFRED F. GAUDING, a witness called on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Will you state your name, your address and your occupation, Mr. Gauding?

A. Alfred F. Gauding; 120 East Market Street; Vice President of The Union Trust Company.

Q. Do you have under your general supervision and control the files of The Union Trust Company of Indianapolis?

A. Yes, we do have.

Q. Did you state what office you hold at the Union Trust?

A. Vice President.

Q. Did you come here in pursuance of a subpoena to produce some documents?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Have you produced from the files of The Union Trust Company the circular requested by the subpoena?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. May I see it? (The witness handed to counsel the 563 document subsequently marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 90).

Calling your attention to a document marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 90, have you produced that from the files of the Bond Department of The Union Trust Company?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And was that a circular that was used by The Union Trust Company in the sale of the Citizens Gas stock?

Mr. Thompson: May I see it, please? (Counsel for plaintiffs handed to counsel for defendants Plaintiffs' Exhibit No. 90.)

Do I understand that your Honor has indicated that we are to reserve all objections to all offers?

The Court: No, just the ones that were in this.

Mr. Thompson: I see. As I understand, the question at this point, now, is whether this was a circular that was used in the sale of Citizens Gas Company stock.

I want to object to the question—I think perhaps it may be in the way of a preliminary question—on the general ground that the Citizens Gas Company was the initial trustee of the public charitable trust; that no statement 564 made by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis—this statement, by the way, purports to be made when? 1913?

The Witness: June 1st, 1919.

Mr Thompson: 1919. (continued)—could operate and create an estoppel against the City of Indianapolis or be evidence which would result in the enforcement against the City of Indianapolis of this Indianapolis Gas Company lease.

It seems to me, your Honor, that this is going vary far afield.

The Court: I will let him answer the question he is asked. That is a preliminary question, I think.

Mr. Thompson: It is, I think.

Mr. Burns: Will you read the question to the witness?

(The Reporter read the preceding question as follows: "And was that a circular that was used by The Union Trust Company in the sale of the Citizens Gas Stock?")

A. It was a circular in our files, but whether or 565 not it was used, I would not definitely say.

Q. You don't know that?

A. No, I don't know that.

Q. Have you been with The Union Trust Company since 1919?

A. Yes, I have, but not in the Bond Department.

Q. Not in the Bond Department. Were you also subpoenaed to bring the original letter from Mr. Forrest to The Union Trust Company, which is quoted on Pages 2 and 3 of the circular, Exhibit 90?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make a search for that letter?

A. We did.

Q. Could you find it?

A. We were unable to find it.

Mr. Burns: You were unable to find it. I think that is all.

The Court: That is all.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. Of course, you were unable to find the original of what purports to be a letter from Mr. Forrest, in 566 your files?

A. That is right.

Q. And you have no knowledge of your own whatever that this letter, which is set out on Pages 2 and 3 of the Plaintiffs' Exhibit 90, is, in fact, a copy, or correct copy, of the actual letter that Mr. Forrest wrote?

A. I could not say definitely as to that.
Witness Excused.

GAVIN L. PAYNE, a witness called on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Will you state your name, your address and your occupation, Mr. Payne?

A. Payne — P-a-y-n-e — Gavin L. Payne; investment banking business; Insurance Building, Indianapolis.

Q. Insurance Building, Indianapolis?

A. Indianapolis, yes, sir.

567 Q. How long have you been engaged in the investment banking business?

A. Well, I have been engaged under the name "Gavin L. Payne & Company" for thirty-two years, about—thirty-two or thirty-three years.

Q. And before that were you engaged in the investment banking business with someone else?

A. I was President of the Security Trust Company.

Q. Of Indianapolis?

A. Of Indianapolis.

Q. Mr. Payne, did you from time to time have something to do with the marketing of the securities of the Citizens Gas Company, both bonds and stock?

A. Yes, we were active in it.

Q. And during what period of time were you active in that?

A. Well, on the Citizens Gas Company, we were active in it from the beginning.

Q. Practically from the beginning down to the time when it was taken over by the City?

A. Up to the time it was taken over by the City.

Q. With whom did you deal in connection with 568 the security with the Citizens Gas Company?

A. With the Citizens Gas Company, chiefly—well, with the Citizens Gas Company on the issues put out by the Citizens Gas Company.

Q. Who represented the Citizens Gas Company in your dealings with it?

A. Well, Mr. Forrest, the General Manager and Secretary, and, then, we dealt also with the Board of Directors.

Q. In connection with your dealing in the issues of the Citizens Gas Company, did you receive from it the reports which it issued from time to time to its stockholders?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you some of those reports with you?

A. I have.

Q. Calling your attention, Mr. Payne, to the four documents, which are marked Plaintiffs' Exhibits 91, 92, 93 and 94, are these original copies of the reports of the Citizens Gas Company to its stockholders, which were received by you from the Citizens Gas Company on or about their date?

A. Yes, sir, those were originals.

569 Mr. Burns: We offer those in evidence. (Plaintiffs' Exhibits Nos. 91, 92, 93 and 94.)

Mr. Thompson: May I have them? (Counsel for Plaintiffs handed to counsel for Defendants Plaintiffs' Exhibits Nos. 91, 92, 93 and 94.)

The City of Indianapolis and the individual defendants, who are members of its Board of Directors and its Board of Trustees for Utilities, object to the introduction in evidence of each of these Exhibits 91, 92, 93 and 94, for each of the following reasons.

I am going to state my objection, if I may, very carefully, your Honor, so that when similar papers arise, I may refer back to this objection.

First: The Citizens Gas Company was the initial trustee of a public charitable trust and had no power or authority to accept a lease on property which did not form a part of the trust res and bind the City of Indianapolis as successor trustee to the terms of said lease. Having no authority to bind the City by express contract, the Citizens Gas Company could not, by any act or admission of any of its officers or agents or by the issuance of any report, create any estoppel against 570 the City of Indianapolis in respect of such lease.

Second: A City cannot be estopped expressly and it follows that it cannot be estopped impliedly or in a quasi manner.

Third: As to the City of Indianapolis, this evidence is purely hearsay, as these reports were not prepared by any officer or agent of the City of Indianapolis, but it already clearly appears in this case that these reports were prepared by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, which had no power or authority to speak for or bind the City.

Fourth: There is no showing that the person who made this statement had any power or authority to act for or on behalf of the City of Indianapolis, and I might add that there is no showing that these reports were used by the authority even of the Citizens Gas Company.

Fifth: In no event could any such admission have any probative effect unless there is a showing that some present holder of the bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company relied upon such a statement.

571 Sixth: There is no showing that the lease of September 30, 1913, between Indianapolis Gas Company and the Citizens Gas Company, is binding or enforcible against the City, no showing that the City was a party to the lease, an assignee of the lease or obligated to accept an assignment thereof, or that the City ever recognized the binding effect of such lease upon it and, under such circumstances, a contract for a period of seventy-five years in the future against a municipal corporation cannot be created by estoppel.

Seventh: Under the Indiana statute, no lease of the character here involved can be valid unless approved by the Common Council and the Board of Public Works of the City, and no such lease is valid if for a term of more than twenty-five years. Any lease, made in violation of the provisions of the statute, is void and cannot be ratified. No such contract can be foisted on the City by estoppel.

Mr. Burns: I would like to say just this.

The Court: That was all?

572 Mr. Thompson: That was all, your Honor.

The Court: May I see the exhibits, please? Counsel for defendants handed to the Court Plaintiffs' Exhibits Nos. 91, 92, 93 and 94.)

Let me ask Mr. Payne: Did you purchase some of the bonds yourself, or stock?

The Witness: Beg pardon?

The Court: I say, did you purchase some of the stock yourself, or some bonds?

The Witness: I purchased a great deal of stock as it was offered by the company—

The Court: After you received—

The Witness: (continued.) —from the beginning; also as it was offered at auction.

The Court: After you received these statements that are offered in evidence?

The Witness: Well, yes. We handled it so generally during that period that I—

The Court: I am going to overrule the objection, and permit the exhibits to be admitted and read in evidence for whatever they may be worth.

This is purely on the theory that the City of In-573 dianapolis, as successor trustee, would not be bound, of course, under the law, but, as the same time, I think I would be justified in permitting the admission of these documents in evidence for consideration in determining that question.

Mr. Thompson: I should like to add these two objections, your Honor: that so far as the stock or bonds of the Citizens Gas Company are concerned, even if the witness or other people relied upon these circulars in purchasing such stock and bonds, they have already been paid off and, therefore, evidence of that character, including these circulars, could have no probative weight.

My next statement is that, if these circulars have any effect at all, it is because a claim will be asserted by the plaintiff that they are an admission of a legal proposition; that is, of validity and enforcibility of this ninety-nine year lease against the City of Indianapolis, and the admission of a legal proposition can never create an estoppel.

The Court: Let the record show that these additional specifications of the objection are made before the ruling of the Court.

574 The said documents, so offered, respectively marked for identification PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBITS NOS. 91, 92, 93 AND 94, were admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Burns: I would like to make this comment, if I may, because I think it is applicable to a great deal of the evidence that is here and is particularly applicable to the objections which Mr. Thompson has made.

The City of Indianapolis accepted the conveyance of this property, subject to all of the obligations of the Citizens Gas Company, so that the question is, or at least, one of the very important questions is, what were the obligations of the Citizens Gas Company? Now, in determining what the obligations of the Citizens Gas Company are which the City has assumed or, in effect has assumed, at least, in that the property is in the hands of the City, it is competent to consider every admission that the Citizens Gas made that bears on the problem.

The Court: Well, I have admitted them in evidence.

575 Mr. Burns: Yes. I thought it perhaps would be helpful if I just stated our position on that matter.

The Court: Any other questions?

Q. Mr. Payne, subsequent to the receipt of these reports in 1913 and 1914, did you buy from the Citizens Gas Company stock and bonds, at various times, of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. I bought stock and bonds and also—my recollection is that we bought Indianapolis Gas bonds. I think it is stated in one of those circulars that the company had sold quite a block of bonds.

Mr. Thompson: Your Honor, without repeating my objection, may it be understood that the City is objecting not only to these questions and these exhibits, but to all testimony along this line, without the necessity of repeating?

The Court: Yes, you may have your objection.

They have been read in evidence.

Q. Mr. Payne, was there, during the period from 1915 to 1935, in one or in one or two well accepted manuals, a source of information upon which bankers and 576 brokers and business men and the investing public relied in making investments?

A. Well, the Poor's Manual, I think, was the one—Moody's came a little later, but Poor's originally.

Q. After a while the two ran along concurrently and then Poor's and Moody's were consolidated? Is that the fact?

A. Well, I don't recall as to the—Poor's was the first manual and, then, Mr. Moody started in the business, a few years after Poor, in competition and a good many people took both manuals and accepted either one of them.

Q. Now, calling your atention to a book, which I will mark Exhibit 95 for identification, I will ask you if that is Poor's Manual of Public Utilities for 1915,—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. (continued.) —which you have had in your office since about that time?

A. Yes, sir, 1915.

Q. And calling your attention to a book, marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 96 for identification, is that Poor's Manual for Public Utilities for the year 1922?

A. Yes.

577 Q. And calling your attention to a book marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 97, is that Poor's Public Utility Manual for the year 1935?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which you have had in your office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Calling your attention to a book marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 98 for identification, is that a copy of Moody's Manual for 1923?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which you have had since about that time?

A. Well, I don't recall that that was ours.

Q. You can identify it as Moody's Manual?

A. As Moody's Manual, yes.

Q. Are those manuals, Moody's Manual and Poor's Manual, generally relied upon by the investing public in the making of investments and buying of securities?

A. They are relied on by the dealers and investment bankers and also, to a more limited extent, probably, by the purchaser of securities.

Q. From your experience in the field of investment banking and particularly in the field of public utility 578 securities, do you know how those manuals are made up?

Mr. Thompson: If this question, your Honor, calls for —if that is an attempt to prove, now, in a back-handed sort of way, that, because there is certain information set forth in Moody's Manual, the Citizens Gas Company was responsible for it, I object to it because that has got to be approved affirmatively.

The Court: The objection is sustained as to how it was made up.

Mr. Burns: Note an exception.

The Court: I wonder if we could adjourn at this time. Were you about through with this witness?

Mr. Burns: I was about through, your Honor.

The Court: Let's finish with the witness, then.

Offer to Prove.

Mr. Burns: We offer to prove by the witness that the practice in making up these manuals is for the publishers of the manuals to send questionnaires to the various companies to receive that information from the companies and that the information, contained in the 579 manuals, is made up from the information received from the various companies upon which the reports are made.

The Court: Any other questions?

Mr. Burns: You may inquire.

Mr. Thompson: I have no cross-examination.

The Court: That is all.

Witness Excused.

Mr. Thompson: Now, your Honor, before adjournment, I want to move to strike out the testimony of Mr. Payne for the reasons assigned in the objections to the exhibits and the additional reason that no showing has been made and no offer has been made that any present owner of the bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company purchased them from Mr. Payne or relied upon any circulars or any of the other information to which he has testified, and that that is a condition precedent to this testimony being admissible.

The Court: The motion is overruled. Let us adjourn, Mr. Marshal, until two o'clock.

Whereupon, the trial was adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

580 Indianapolis, Indiana,
Thursday, March 2, 1939,
Two o'Clock P. M.

The Court met pursuant to adjournment and the trial was resumed as follows:

Mr. Thompson: If your Honor please: Mr. Burns, you have offered Paragraph 4 of the Stipulation of Facts in the Todd case, appearing on Pages 192 and 193 of Exhibit 2. I want to know whether all of the parties will agree that that is taken from the Stipulation of Facts, the opening sentence of which reads as follows: "The parties hereto agree that for the purpose of the trial and final hearing of this case, the following facts, in addition to those admitted in the answer, are true."

Mr. Burns: I will admit it.

Mr. Thompson: Will other counsel make the same admission?

Mr. Ewbank: Yes.

(No dissenting expression.)

Mr. Thompson: You have also offered in evidence as Exhibit 89 the second and third and fourth gram-581 matical paragraphs from Section 18 of the Answer of the City of Indianapolis and others in the case of Cotter and others versus The Citizens Gas Company, being Cause 1192 in the Equity Docket of this Court. Will you admit that the Answer, from which the expressions referred to are taken, is signed in the following manner, and not otherwise: John W. Holtzman; Oren S. Hack; Edward H. Knight; Smiley N. Chambers; Pickens, Gause, Gilliom & Pickens, Attorneys for said Answering Defendants. John W. Holtzman, Fred C. Gause, of Counsel. And that the Answer is not verified by anyone.

Mr. Burns: We will admit that.

Mr. Thompson: And will the other counsel admit it?

Mr. Ewbank: On your statement that it is so, yes.

(No dissenting expression.)

Mr. Thompson: May the record show those admissions, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

582 PAUL E. CROSIER, a witness called on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Crosier, will you state your name, your age and your occupation?

A. Paul E. Crosier; fifty-three years old; I am in the recreational business.

Q. Where do you live?

A. 421 Poplar Road, of this city.

Q. Were you at one time connected with the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis?

A. I was.

Q. During what period of time?

A. For eighteen years.

Q. Beginning when?

A. 1918.

Q. Until—

A. January 6, 1936.

Q. Well, during the last three or four months of 583 your connection, you were with the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Now, what offices or positions did you hold with the Citizens Gas Company?

A. Assistant Superintendent of the Prospect Plant, Assistant General Manager.

Q. Were you for a while General Manager?

A. Acting General Manager.

Q. That was after Mr.—

A. Mr. Kirk—

Q. (Continued.) —after Mr. Kirk died?

A. That is right.

Q. And you were Acting General Manager at the time the City took over the Citizens Gas property?

A. Yes, that time I was changed to Acting Assistant General Manager.

Q. And you were Acting Assistant General Manager from September 9th, 1935 to January 6th, 1936?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, in the various capacities in which you served the Citizens Gas Company, did you become familiar 584 with the plant and facilities of the Citizens Gas Company and The Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. Yes.

Q. The plant of The Indianapolis Gas Company was made up of three units, was it not—the distribution system, the Langsdale Plant and the Pratt Avenue part of the property were the distribution system?

A. The Langsdale Plant, of the Plant Department, handled about sixty-five per cent of the mains of Indianapolis, that is right.

Q. Was that percentage, that sixty-five per cent—

A. Approximately.

Q. (Continued.) —constant during the time you were with the company?

A. Yes, sir, it was held constant.

Q. Now, were those two plants of The Indianapolis Gas Company and the Citizens Gas Company operated as a single unit, together?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. The gas from the Langsdale Plant might be used in supplying the Citizens Gas customers?

A. It was.

585 Q. And the gas from the Prospect Plant—

A. Yes, the mains were interconnected.

Q. And the mains of the Indianapolis Gas would be necessary to be used in order to go to some of the Citizens Gas distribution system?

A. That is right.

Q. And the mains of the Citizens Gas Company would be necessary to be used in order to get to some of the Indianapolis Gas distribution facilities, is that correct?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. The operation of those two properties together had certain financial advantages, because it saved a duplication of facilities, I suppose.

Mr. Thompson: Defendant objects to that, your Honor.

The Court: I did not know that there was any question but that they did use the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company. I don't know the purpose of this. Isn't that true?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, sir.

The Court: The Citizens Gas Company used In-586 dianapolis Gas Company equipment and mains, and if we are not going into the question of the value of maintenance in this case—

Mr. Burns: The City, as a matter of fact, took possession of the plant of The Indianapolis Gas Company after September 9th, 1935, and we could not get a stipulation out of them on that subject. That is the reason I am going into it.

Mr. Thompson: I am sorry. I don't like to interrupt. We never made denial of that.

The Court: Do you admit it now?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, sir, we do. Of course, the whole point is, we did it pursuant to certain agreements.

The Court: That seems to be the bone of contention.

Q. After the City took over the property, on September 9, 1935, did the City continue to operate the two plants, of the Indianapolis Gas and the Citizens Gas, as a unit?

A. As far as I know, up to January 6th, when I was retired, that is right.

587 Q. And during that part of the time and for some time before January 9, 1935—I should say some time before September 9, 1935, the Citizens Gas Company and the City did not use the coke ovens of the Langsdale Plant of the Indianapolis Gas?

A. As I remember, they were shut down in 1931, on account of economical conditions.

Q. And were not opened up after that?

A. That is right.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. Are you familiar with the records that were kept by the Citizens Gas Company, and the records that were kept by the Department of Utilities, in respect to the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. No, I am not.

Q. Don't know anything about them?

A. Didn't come under my jurisdiction at all.

Q. Were you familiar with the agreements that were made between the City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company?

588 A. No, sir.

Q. In respect to the use of the property?

A. No, sir.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. After the City took over the property in September, 1935, it did operate the water gas plant out there at the Langsdale Plant, didn't it?

A. As far as I know, up to January 6, 1936.

Q. You did know about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it did operate it, then?

A. Yes, sir.

Witness excused.

CHESTER A. JEWETT, a witness called on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Jewett, will you state your name, your age 589 and your address and present occupation?

A. Chester A Jewett; fifty-three; Broadview Farm, Shelbyville, Indiana.

Q. Were you for some time connected with the Union Trust Company of Indianapolis?

A. I was.

Q. During what period of time?

A. From October 2nd, 1916 to March 1st, 1920, I was Manager of the Bond Department.

Q. And had you had experience in the security business and the sales and purchases of securities prior to that time?

A. Yes, sir, from 1912.

Q. And here in Indianapolis?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With what company were you connected during that time?

A. I was with Miller & Company for about two and one-half years of that time; and Manager of the Bond Department of the American Mortgage Guarantee Company prior to my going with the Union Trust Company.

Q. And did you say you left the Union Trust Company in 1920?

590 A. Yes, sir, March 1st.

Q. Where did you go after that?

A. I went in partnership with Otto F. Haueisen, under the firm name of Haueisen & Jewett.

Q. How long were you associated with him?

A. We were associated together one year, at which time I bought his interest and then operated as Jewett & Company.

Q. Until what time?

A. Until 1933.

Q. And during all that period, from 1912 to 1933, you were engaged in the business of investment banking here in the city of Indianapolis?

A. Yes.

Q. During the period that you were with the Union Trust Company and during the period after that did you have anything to do with the marketing of either the stock or the bonds of the Citizens Gas Company, or bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Which ones of these did you have to do with in the way of marketing?

591 A. Well, we marketed, as members of a syndicate, with Gavin L. Payne as syndicate manager, I would say in probably 1916, late in the year 1916, a quarter of a million dollars of the voting trust certificates. We sold by syndicate, in which every member of the Indianapolis Stock Exchange participated.

Q. That was the voting trust certificates of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. Yes, sir, and we were—the Union Trust Company Bond Department participated in that offering, and then in 1918—in 1919, the Union Trust Company underwrote the major portion—all but a few scattered shares—of five hundred thousand dollars worth of Citizens Gas certificates, completing the capitalization of two million, which was under my supervision at the Union Trust.

Q. Calling your attention to an exhibit which previously had been identified as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 90, I will ask you whether that is the circular which was used in connection with the marketing of the common stock of the Citizens Gas Company in 1919.

A. It is, yes.

592 Q. What did you have to do with the preparation of that circular?

A. I prepared the circular.

Q. I call your attention to the letter appearing upon pages 2 and 3 of that circular. Did you, at the time that circular was prepared, have the original letter from Mr. Forrest in your possession?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is the letter as set forth in that circular, on pages 2 and 3, from Mr. Forrest to the Union Trust Company, a correct copy of the original letter?

A. Well, I would have to have the original letter and check it word for word; but I would say it is substantially the same, because I remember very vividly using that letter as the basis of our circular, and it was copied as nearly as we could check it at the time, letter for letter, as to the ones received from Mr. Forrest. Of course, it is always customary and has been in investment banking to receive such letters, which are the basis of representations, under which we purchase the stock and under which we sell. As nearly as I could say, it is my memory through 593 the years, I would say this was a true and exact copy of the letter of Mr. J. D. Forrest, prepared in connection with our purchase of the stock.

Q. Your regular practice was to compare the circular with the letter as received?

A. Oh, yes. Yes, indeed.

Q. Who was Mr. J. D. Forrest?

A. Mr. J. D. Forrest was Secretary and General Manager of the Citizens Gas Company.

Q. And did you deal with him in connection with the purchase of securities from the Citizens Gas Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you deal with anybody else at the Citizens Gas Company in connection with the purchase of securities?

A. Well, of course, this direct purchase of the issue, of which this circular is an offering, was purchased by the Union Trust Company at public auction, at the office of the Citizens Gas Company, and that sale, of course, was being conducted under the direct supervision of Mr. Forrest. I suppose some of his assistants were there.

594 Q. In dealing with the other security issues of the Citizens Gas Company, with whom did you deal?

A. Well, anyone dealing with the Citizens Gas Company, particularly on the financial end of it, always dealt with Mr. Forrest. The other officers, that is, the President and Vice Presiden' and even the Treasurer, I think were not active.

Q. Mr. Forrest actually operated the company?

A. Yes, Mr. Forrest conducted all the relations with the Union Trust Company, both as to the deposit of money or the borrowing of money, or any other relations that we had with him.

Q. Now, I call your attention to Exhibit 12 attached to the depositions of Chester M. Clark and Joseph Edward Baker, taken in New York. I will ask you if you had anything to do with the purchase or sale of the securities covered by the circular there shown as Exhibit 12.

A. Yes, we participated in the distribution—the local distribution of a million five hundred thousand Citizens Gas Company general mortgage sinking fund 7s, issued May 1st, 1918.

595 Q. Which are shown by circular, Exhibit 12?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From whom did you buy those bonds?

A. Those bonds were underwritten by a syndicate headed by Blodgett & Company, Boston.

Q. And did you buy those bonds from that syndicate?

A. We were offered participation by Blodgett & Company, after the purchase of the securities, and I imagine our department distributed around six hundred thousand of the million five hundred thousand issued.

Q. In the purchase of those bonds, did you rely upon the circular, Exhibit 12, that has just been shown you?

Mr. Thompson: A preliminary question.

Mr. Jewett, all of these bonds that you talk about—the Citizens Gas seven per cent bonds—were retired by the Citizens Gas Company long ago?

The Witness: Oh, they were retired long before the City was interested. They had a definite maturity, Mr. Thompson. I think they were retired—well, they were retired beginning May 1st, 1920, '21, '22 and '23, and there never was any default on them, and they were all 596 retired or called by 1923—this particular issue, yes.

Mr. Thompson: If the Court please, the defendant, City of Indianapolis, objects to this evidence in connection with this bond issue which was retired long prior to the transfer to the City. Any representation made in connection with it by the Citizens Gas Company could not have any possible binding effect upon the City of Indianapolis, and could not have been relied upon by the present bondholders of the Indianapolis Gas Company.

Mr. Burns: As I said this morning, the City of Indianapolis accepted the property conveyed to it subject to all obligations of the Citizens Gas Company. In considering what the obligations of Citizens Gas Company are, it is material to consider in evidence which were contemplated against the Citizens Gas Company, to establish those obligations. This is clearly an admission in this circular of the existence of the ninety-nine year lease, and the constant publication of that fact is clearly admissible against the City of Indianapolis.

597 The Court: I have admitted those documents—I admitted them this morning for the purpose of throwing any light, if there is any light at all, upon the activity of the former trustee. Now, it is a question of law whether the trustee had any such right. I think I am going to admit this on that theory, that it will get the facts before us; what was done. That is not an obligation that was assumed by the City in any sense at all, but it only goes to show the manner in which the former trustee transacted the business. Whether that sheds any light upon the question of whether that trustee had any right to do that is to be determined. I am frank to say that, in my opinion, any admission made by the former trustee would not bind the City of Indianapolis, as trustee, if there was no legal right to make such warranty or such representations.

Mr. Thompson: I want to make an additional objection here. First, the admission sought to be proved would be an admission to the legal effect of the lease. Now, this is a very important factor; there was no right in the 598 Citizens Gas Company to execute any mortgage whatever. Any mortgage that was executed was an absolute violation of the underwriting trust instrument, and, therefore, any admission made by the Citizens Gas Company in connection with the execution of a mortgage certainly could not bind us.

The Court: I understand your contention on that. Go ahead.

Mr. Burns: Plaintiff offers in evidence Exhibit 90 and Exhibit 12 attached to the deposition before referred to.

Mr. Thompson: The City objects to Exhibit 90 for the same reasons given on obections to Exhibits 91, 92, 93 and 94; and we object to the exhibit attached to the deposition unless the deposition itself is offered.

Mr. Burns: It will be, in time.

The Court: I will withhold the ruling on the deposition exhibit (Exhibit 12), and overrule the objection on the other (Exhibit 90).

The said document, so offered, marked for identification PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT NO. 90, was admitted and read in evidence.

599 The Court: You were in the employ of the Union Trust Company during the years '16 to '20?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Any other employment?

The Witness: No other employment except in connection with war financing, of course, where I was loaned to the Government.

Mr. Burns: What office did you hold with the Union Trust Company?

The Witness: Manager of the Bond Department.

The Court: You were not connected with the State Auditor's office?

The Witness: Oh, no, I never was connected with the State Auditor's office. That was my brother Russell.

Q. Did you go to Boston in connection with the purchase of these Citizens Gas Bonds from Blodgett & Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. While you were there whom did you consult about those bonds?

A. Mr. Blodgett, senior partner of Blodgett & Company.

Q. And did you have occasion, while you were there with Mr. Blodgett, to consult any standard works of 600 reference in regard to securities and security issues, particularly with respect to the financial statements of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. We did, yes.

Q. And do you recall what work you consulted?

Mr. Thompson: I hate, your Honor, to be in the position of constantly objecting. Whether this witness consulted some standard statistical work is far afield.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Burns: An exception.

Offer to Prove.

Mr. Burns: We offer to prove that the witness and Mr. Blodgett consulted Moody's Manual for Investors in connection with this Citizens Gas issue, and relied upon it in determining what they would do in connection with the purchase of the issue.

The Witness: Well, I should like to correct that just a little bit. This issue which we were immediately distributing, there was no reference made to it in Moody's Manual at that time.

601 Q. But you had Moody's Manual for reference for information about the status of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. On just the financial standing. Of course, now, the special reason that came up was because, after this general mortgage financing, it made the financial structure of the Citizens Gas too top-heavy and there was some objection, and it was at that time—that suggestion was made by the eastern bankers that something be done locally to complete the capitalization of the company to two million dollars from a million five hundred thousand, so that the senior securities would be a little bit—be balanced with the junior securities. Of course, that was done just as reasonably as it could be done, which finally culminated in our underwriting the five hundred thousand dollars worth of the common stock the next year, and that is the reason we consulted Moody's Manual, I suppose, as Poor's would offer the information, but it was more available there, to see the relative position and balance between senior and junior securities.

602 Q. And is Moody's Manual customarily relied upon by brokers and bankers and the investing public generally in the purchase of securities and in securing information about securities?

A. Yes, I would say so.

Q. Is it considered a standard work of reference on that subject?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that true of Poor's Manual?

A. Yes. We used to take both, but those are not the only works on statistics that are relied on. There is Fitch's Bond Manual and the Standard Statistics.

Q. But during the years from 1915 to 1935, would it be accurate to say that Moody's Manual and Poor's Manual were the outstanding works of reference on that subject?

A. Well, I would say they were two of four. I don't think any better than Fitch's; in some respects I don't like it as well as Standard Statistics; but they are all reliable.

Mr. Burns: Rather than offer these volumes, I have had prepared photostatic copies of the pages of the 603 volumes, not only of these volumes, but other volumes of Moody's Manual, and we could present those volumes here if the Court wishes us to do so.

Covering the years 1915 and 1922 and 1935, I offer Poor's Manual; and covering the years 1923 to 1935, inclusive, I offer Moody's Manual; and I should like to have these marked as exhibits, and offer them in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: What are the exhibit numbers, please;

Mr. Burns: I will have them marked.

The Court: That was all with this witness?

Mr. Burns: I should like to keep him until I get this identified, and ask him a question or two, if that is all right.

The Court: I understand you identified the books.

Mr. Burns: I have identified the books. I think I shall give these exhibits a corresponding number.

The Court: As I say, we will not need the witness if it is in the book. The book shows what is true about it.

Mr. Burns: As I say, I have not brought all the books here, and unless there is some objection, upon 604 that ground, I won't bring all of them here.

I ask to have an excerpt from Poor's Manual of 1915 marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 95-a, which corresponds with the number of the book previously marked. (Excerpt so marked by the Reporter.)

I ask to have an excerpt from Poor's Manual of 1922 marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 96-a, which corresponds with the number given to the volume itself. (Excerpt so marked by the Reporter.)

An excerpt from Poor's Manual of 1935 will be marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 97-a; and an excerpt from Moody's Manual of 1923, as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 98-a. (Excerpts so marked by the Reporter.)

I also offer and ask to have marked as Plaintiffs' Exhibits 99 to 110, inclusive, excerpts from Moody's Manual with respect to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, covering the years 1924 to 1935, both inclusive.

Mr. Thompson: The City objects to the introduction in evidence of Exhibit 90 and Exhibits 95-a to 98-a, inclusive, and Exhibits 99 to 110, inclusive, for the reasons stated in the City's objections to Exhibits 605 91 to 94, inclusive, and, in respect of Exhibits 95 to 110, both inclusive, for the additional reason that no proof whatever that the statements, appearing in Poor's or Moody's Manuals, were even authorized by the Citizens Gas Company.

The Court: I assume that was the purpose of this subpoena duces tecum: to bring in the correspondence to see whether or not it was authorized.

In view of the fact that these are standard works, I think they are competent. That is the usual rule, is it not, relative to statistics that are of national standing?

Mr. Thompson: Well, of course, your Honor, I assume that these exhibits which are offered have no other purpose than that of creating some estoppel against the City of Indianapolis in connection with this lease.

Now, my first position—I do not need to elaborate it—is that the acts of the Citizens Gas Company would not be binding on the City, but, here, you have not only the question of what the statistics are, but whether 606 this lease is an enforcible obligation. When counsel offers statistical reports on the issue of the obligation of this lease on the City of Indianapolis, without any proof whatever that any statement in that connection was ever authorized by the initial trustee, it seems to me to be going far afield.

The Court: Are you going to be able to introduce any evidence on that question?

Mr. Burns: Well, of course, that was one of the purposes of our issuing the subpoena.

The Court: Well, I think you waited a long time to issue a subpoena calling for such information, just two days before the trial, where it was known, or should have been known, months ago, because the case has been assigned three times for trial, that that information was necessary. I cannot sustain your position with reference to the subpoena at all, on that question, because, if the rules mean anything on reasonableness, I would think that would certainly come within the rules.

I will withhold my ruling on these exhibits that have just been offered.

607 My present thought is that, on the showing of the kind of works that these are, they would be admissible, but I am not going to pass on it at this time.

If these were Government publications,—I have in mind some cases we have had here, that Mr. Thompson has been in,—I think there would be no doubt that they would be competent.

Wouldn't you think that the same rule would apply to a private publication of this kind, or not? I think we have had several cases where the Agricultural Department reports have been read in evidence.

Mr. Burns: I call the Court's attention to the fact that when a substantially identical report so far as the matters here in issue was made over a period of twenty years, it is practically inconceivable that they did not come to the attention of the officers and directors of the Citizens Gas Company.

The Court: Well, that, of course, within itself would not be sufficient. It would not show whether they had objected to the publisher or not, or whether they paid any attention to it or not.

608 I am taking the view that these are standard publications and are reputable and entitled to some consideration.

Did you want to ask this witness any further questions?

Mr. Burns: I take it that there is no objection made to these on the ground that we have not produced the original subject matter?

Mr. Thompson: Why, no, Mr. Burns, I make no objection of that kind.

The Court: Do you want to ask this witness any more questions?

Mr. Burns: I think not.

The Court: Any questions, Mr. Thompson?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, I have just a question or two, your Honor.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. Mr. Jewett, you have already stated that the mortgage bonds which were sold to the Trust Department of the Union Trust Company were redeemed and retired by the Citizens Gas Company long prior to the trans-609 fer of its property to the City?

A. You mean sold through the Trust Department or Bond Department?

Q. Through the Bond Department, if I said "Trust Department".

A. Yes.

Q. Now, also, you know that the stock, which you have talked about, the Citizens Gas Company common stock, was paid and retired at the time of the transfer of the property of the Citizens Gas Company to the City of Indianapolis?

A. I understood that was part of the consummation of the deal, yes.

Q. Now, in this circular, which is identified as Exhibit No. 90, which includes the letter of Mr. Forrest, appears this statement: "On October 1st, 1913, with the approval of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, this company took over, under a ninety-nine year lease, all of the operating property of the Indianapolis Gas Company," and so and so and so.

Before this circular, which is identified as Exhibit
610 90, was issued, did you examine the lease between the Citizens Gas Company and The Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. Do you mean did I, personally?

Q. Yes.

A. No, not I, personally.

Q. Or ever have an examination made?

A. No, not I, personally. The Union Trust Company was in continual knowledge of the affairs of the Citizens Gas Company and The Indianapolis Gas Company throughout the years.

Q. Did you ever learn, before the circulars were issued, that the lease of September 30, 1913, between the Citizens Gas Company and The Indianapolis Gas Company, contained a provision that if, because of the length of the term of the lease, it should be finally held invalid by a court of competent jurisdiction, that the lease should, nevertheless, be valid for the longest term for which the parties could lawfully contract?

A. I have heard that question raised, yes.

Q. So that when this circular was issued and when this statement was made over the signature of The Union

Trust Company that there was a ninety-nine year 611 lease, you knew of the provision to which I have just referred?

A. Well, I couldn't—I just have a hazy knowledge of it. I neve saw the lease—the instrument of the lease—at all.

Q. But you had heard of that provision?

A. No more than I had seen any of the actual—the charter or the franchise under which the Citizens Gas trust had been created. I suppose Mr. Hornbrook, our attorney, did.

Q. Of course, you knew the question of whether this lease was valid for ninety-nine years, or not, was not a question of fact but a question of law?

A. Probably, yes. As a matter of fact, I didn't—I was not in position to take all of the responsibility that attached to the purchase by The Union Trust Company of these large—

Q. I didn't mean to question that, Mr. Jewett.

A. I see.

Q. Now, just one other question. These manuals to which you have referred, the Poor's and Moody's Manuals, are not official or governmental publications in 612 any way?

A. Oh, no.

Q. They are published by private corporations which are engaged in the publication for profit?

A. Well, that is true. That is like any organization, or we have many of them that furnish information such as Dun & Bradstreet, for instances, which is a private corporation, and yet business men rely on it.

Q. Oh, yes, I understand.

A. Rely on the information.

Q. The only point I am asking about, Mr. Jewett, is whether these are private or governmental publications.

A. They are private.

Q. Private?

A. They are private. I imagine the Government uses them, though, in evaluation. I know bank examiners use them in the evaluation of securities that are held by banks. I know Moody's ratings are regarded by bank examiners as reflecting whether or not a bank can properly and prudently purchase certain securities.

Mr. Thompson: The only point I am asking about is whether they are private or public.

613 The Court: All right, Mr. Jewett.
Mr. Thompson: That is all.
Witness excused.

WILLIAM J. YULE, a witness called on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Will you state your name, your address and your occupation, Mr. Yule?
A. William J. Yule. So you want my business address?
Q. Yes.
A. 1004 Majestic Building; and age?
Q. Occupation?
A. Occupation, Secretary of The Indianapolis Gas Company.
Q. How long have you been connected with The Indianapolis Gas Company?
A. Well, continuously since 1915.
Q. And during all of that time have you been Secretary of the company?
614 A. Yes, sir.
Q. As Secretary, do you have charge of the records and files of the company?
A. I do.
Q. And you keep the minute books of the company?
A. I do.
Q. And have during all of that time?
A. I do.
Q. Now, during the year 1936, at the time when the last coupon was paid upon the bonds of The Indianapolis Gas Company, did you make up as nearly a complete list as you could of the bondholders who had sent in their coupons?
A. As the Government revenue reports came in with the coupons, I listed those. We could gather the information from them.
Q. And were you able to make a complete list?
A. Oh, no.
Q. It appears, here, in the stipulation that coupons for the April 1st, 1936 date, in the amount of seven hundred and seventy-five dollars, have not been paid. Do you know who the bondholders are or the names or 615 addresses of the bondholders who have not—

A. I wouldn't have any idea at all.

The Court: These are bearer bonds, are they?

The Witness: Bearer bonds, yes, sir.

Q. Under their terms, they may be registered as to principal, I think, with the Trustee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you don't know how many of them may be registered with the Trustee as to principal?

A. I don't have any knowledge of any being registered.

Q. I see. Did you bring with you the file of correspondence between yourself and the Chase National Bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Calling your attention, Mr. Yule,—

The Court: Are these the interrogatories that were ordered to be answered?

Mr. Burns: Yes, these are the interrogatories that were answered by The Indianapolis Gas Company.

The Court: That is, the interrogatories propounded by the defendants?

616 Mr. Burns: The City.

The Court: Well, do you want to introduce the interrogatories and answers?

Mr. Burns: I want to introduce just some of the letters that are attached. I thought it would save time to introduce these rather than to have him dig them out of his files.

Q. Calling your attention to two exhibits, both of them marked Exhibit 11, to the answers of The Indianapolis Gas Company to the interrogatories propounded by the City: Did you receive the letter dated July 19 from the Chase National Bank,—

A. I did.

Q. (Continued)—on or about its date, and was there enclosed therewith a letter from Scudder, Stevens & Clark, dated July 17, also shown as Exhibit 11 attached to your answers?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Ewbank: What year?

Mr. Burns: 1935.

The Witness: 1935.

617 Q. And showing you a paper marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 111-C, I will ask you if that is a copy of the letter that you wrote to Scudder, Stevens & Clark and the copy which you sent to the Chase National Bank?

A. It is.

Mr. Burns: We offer the three letters just referred to as Plaintiffs' Exhibits 111-A, 111-B and 111-C.

Mr. Thompson: The City objects to these exhibits. They are entirely hearsay and exparte as to the City of Indianapolis.

The important part of this, your Honor, is a letter signed by The Indianapolis Gas Company, in which it takes the position that the City of Indianapolis, while it has not a legal title, has an equitable title to the property of the Citizens Gas Company and so forth and so on.

Now, certainly, the Indianapolis Gas Company cannot create an obligation against the City of Indianapolis by writing some letter to—

The Court: Is this on the issue of collusion?

Mr. Burns: No, it is stated in the answer of the City that the trustee and the bondholders were guilty 618 of laches in not taking some action, before September 9th, to except to this transfer of the property. The fact is that the Trustee did not even know that the city was taking any such attitude as it took in repudiating its obligation until sometime after September 9th. This is offered to show that the Trustee wrote and inquired of the Indianapolis Gas as to what the fact was, and was assured by Indianapolis Gas that the City was going to take over the property.

The Court: Let me see the letter. You can go ahead with any other question you have.

Mr. Burns: In connection with my next questio was going to use those same interrogatories.

The Court: Well, I can't pass on that because I d know what is in the letters. Go ahead with your question. I can pass on those later.

Who are Scudder, Stevens & Clark?

Mr. Burns: Well, I understand that they are a firm of investment advisers, so-called, and that they were inquiring about these Indianapolis Gas bonds of the 619 Trustee and whether the City was going to take over the lease, and that inquiry was forwarded by the Trustee to the Indianapolis Gas, in Indianapolis, and Indianapolis Gas wrote back, "Until the City has a legal title, it could not legally assume the lease, and we are advised that this should follow as a matter of course, when the other property is transferred."

Now, this was August 17, 1935.

The Court: I am certain that the letters would not be competent as to the truthfulness or be binding upon the City of Indianapolis as to any statements made in them, unless—

Mr. Burns: I don't contend that they are.

The Court: (Continued.) —excepting they would only be competent, if competent at all. to show that there was some inquiry being made and some action taken.

Mr. Burns: That is the only purpose for which they are offered.

The Court: To answer the position of the City on the question of laches?

Mr. Burns: Yes, that is the only purpose for 620 which they are offered.

The Court: But, of course, they couldn't bind the City upon the statements contained in them.

Mr. Burns: There is no question in my mind that they are not competent for that purpose.

The Court: I do not know what the substance of the letters is, but I can see no reason why the letters should not be competent just the same as on the question of collusion. They would only meet that issue by showing what the parties, charged with collusion, did between and among themselves. Now, why wouldn't that same thing be true with reference to the charge of laches, to show what the parties did?

Mr. Burns: That is what I was trying to do.

The Court: Wouldn't that be true, Mr. Thompson? Wouldn't they be permitted to show what they did, to meet that issue? The statements in the letters, of course, would not be binding.

Mr. Thompson: No, but here is this situation: this does not affect the relation between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the Chase National Bank, as Trustee.
621 I am not sure whether a copy of this letter went to Chase, but assuming that it did, this was a letter which Chase had asked the Indianapolis Gas Company to write to someone else.

The Court: Well, as I say, I have not seen the letters and I don't know what they are about, excepting as the statements were made. You may proceed in your regular way.

Q. A copy of this letter to Scudder, Stevens & Clark, Plaintiffs' Exhibit 111-C, was sent to The Chase National Bank, was it not?

A. It was.

The Court: You may go right ahead with your inquiry, Mr. Burns.

Q. Calling your attention to two other letters, attached to your answers to the interrogatories, Mr. Yule, as Exhibit 12, a letter of September 6th from Paul C. Beardslee and the enclosure from Russell Berg & Company to The Chase National Bank, were those received on or about their date?

A. They were.

622 Q. And did you answer the letter of Russell Berg & Company?

A. I did not.

Q. And made no reply to the Chase Bank?

A. No reply at all.

Mr. Burns: We offer those two letters in evidence as Plaintiffs' Exhibits 112 and 112-A.

Mr. Thompson: The same objection, your Honor.

The Court: I want an opportunity, as I say, to examine those.

Mr. Thompson: Note the same objection, Mr. Reporter.

Q. Did you, on or about September 19th, receive from Mr. Beardslee a letter, a copy of which is attached to your answers as Exhibit 13?

A. The letter was received at my office, yes.

Q. And did you answer that letter?

A. I did not. It is not addressed to me.

Q. But it was received at the office of The Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. It was received at the office of The Indianapolis Gas Company, yes, sir.

623 Q. And so far as you know, The Indianapolis Gas Company never answered it?

A. Not to my knowledge, no.

Mr. Burns: We offer the letter in evidence as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 113.

Mr. Thompson: The same objection, if the Court please.

Your Honor's attention is directed to the fact that this letter is addressed to Mr. William G. Irwin, and there is no proof here as to whether he answered it or not.

The Court: Well, there is no proof.

Did you say it was received at your office?

The Witness: It was received at the office, yes.

Mr. Burns: It is addressed to William G. Irwin,

President, Indianapolis Gas Company, Indianapolis, Indiana, and we will offer additional proof that no answer was received to it.

Q. Did you, about October 1st, 1935, receive the telegram from The Chase National Bank, marked Exhibit 14 and attached to your answers?

624 A. I did.

Q. And did you answer that telegram?

A. Let me get the original telegram. There is a note on it. (Procuring original telegram.)

I have a note on the corner of this telegram, dated 10-1-1935, "A. V. B. phoned Abbott."

Is that a Chase man?

Q. I haven't the slightest idea.

A. I think he phoned The Chase National Bank and phoned Abbott.

Q. Was that about the payment of the interest that was due October 1st?

A. Correct.

Q. But so far as you know, no answer was sent to the inquiry contained in the letter of September 19th, Exhibit 113, which is referred to in the telegram?

Mr. Thompson: I object to this. How can this witness know what Mr. Brown said over the telephone to Mr. Abbott of The Chase National Bank?

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Burns: All I asked was whether, so far as he knew, any answer was sent.

625 The Court: I think he said a moment ago, didn't you, that it had not been answered?

The Witness: I said the letter had not been answered.

The Court: That is right.

Mr. Burns: But I asked him whether the telegram had been answered and asked him whether--

The Court: Well, he said there was a note there that Mr. A. V. B.—I suppose that is Mr. Arthur V. Brown.

The Witness: Mr. Brown.

The Court: But, of course, that doesn't mean anything because we don't know what he is talking about.

Mr. Burns: Well, he said it was his understanding that he talked about the payment of the interest, and what I asked him was whether, so far as he knew, any answer was sent to the inquiry contained in the letter of September 19th.

The Court: Well, the objection is sustained. There has to be a line drawn some place. I have been, and I am going to be, pretty liberal all the way through 626 in the admission of evidence, but there has to be a line some place.

Q. I call your attention to a letter of October 3rd from Mr. Beardslee to you, attached to your interrogatories—your answers to interrogatories—as Exhibit 15. Did you receive this letter on or about its date?

A. I did.

Q. Did you answer it?

A. It was not answered immediately, I know. I was trying to think—

Q. As a matter of fact, calling your attention to the next letter of November 7th,—

A. That is right.

Q. (continued.) —it was not answered until November 7, 1935, was it?

A. That is right.

Mr. Burns: I will ask to have the letter of November 7th, which is Exhibit 16 to the answers to the interrogatories, marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 116. (The letter was marked as requested.)

627 Now, we offer in evidence PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBITS 111-A, 111-B AND 111-C, and PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBITS 112 TO 116, inclusive.

Mr. Thompson: These have already been offered.

The Court: Those are the letters where I stated I didn't know what they were.

Mr. Burns: It may have been my error in offering them twice. Mr. Rabb tells me that the ruling was reserved on some of them.

Mr. Thompson: We have no objection to 114, 115 and 116.

The Court: Let them be read.

The said documents, so offered, respectively marked for identification PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBITS NOS. 114, 115 AND 116, were admitted and read in evidence.

The Court: That just leaves the other three? Mr. Rabb, is that right?

Mr. Rabb: 111, 112 and 113.

Mr. Burns: And there are three parts to 111.

The Court: That is right.

628 Mr. Rabb: There are three parts to 111.

Q. Did you, on or about December 2nd, 1935, receive a letter from Mr. Beardslee, identified as Exhibit 17 to your answers to the interrogatories?

A. I did.

Q. And did you, on February 26th, receive another letter from Mr. Beardslee, identified as Exhibit 18 to your answers?

A. I did.

Q. Between the letter of December 2nd and February 26th, did you send any answer to the inquiries made by Mr. Beardslee?

A. I don't recall that I did.

629 Mr. Burns: We offer the letters of December 2, 1935 and February 26, 1936 as Plaintiffs' Exhibits 117 and 118 respectively.

(The said documents, so offered, respectively, marked for identification PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 117 and PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 118, were admitted and read in evidence.)

Q. Calling your attention to Exhibit 19 attached to your answers did you write Mr. Beardslee to that effect, or the Chase National Bank, on March 2nd?

A. I did.

Q. And that was the first reply you had made to the letters of December 2, 1935 and February 26, 1936?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Burns: We offer in evidence the letter of March 2, 1936 as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 119.

The Court: Is there any objection?

Mr. Thompson: No, your Honor.

The Court: Let the exhibit be read in evidence.

630 (The said document, so offered, marked for identification "PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 119", was admitted and read in evidence.)

Mr. Burns: Mr. Taylor has called my attention to the fact that there is apparently a rule of practice here with which I am not familiar, that these written exhibits must not only be offered but must be read in evidence. I take it that does not mean I have to actually read them.

The Court: No, the offer is made, and if there is any objection we rule on that, and if it is overruled they may be considered read.

Mr. Burns: They are considered read in evidence?

The Court: Yes, the ones as to which ruling has not been reserved.

Q. The letter of November 7, 1935, Mr. Yule, which you wrote to Mr. Beardslee in response to the previous requests which have here been introduced in evidence, was the first information you had sent the Chase Bank as to the position taken by City of Indianapolis in regard to the lease, was it not?

631 Mr. Thompson: Is the question directed to what the witness sent or the Indianapolis Gas Company sent?

Mr. Burns: Directed first to what the witness sent.

The Court: You mean as Secretary of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

Mr. Burns: I was going to come later to as far as he knew, having custody of the Indianapolis Gas Company's records, and, as far as he knew, anyone else that had custody of the Indianapolis Gas Company records.

Mr. Thompson: The only reason for sending any notice to the Chase National Bank would be that they did not know about it. It appears affirmatively from Exhibit 13 to the interrogatories that the Chase National Bank knew as early as September 19, 1935 that the City had refused to take over this leased property. What counsel is attempting to do is to say this is the first notice you sent out. It appears affirmatively here that as early as September 19, 1935

632 the Chase National Bank knew about this.

The Court: I think this only is to meet the question of whether or not they used due diligence to show what was done by the Chase National Bank as Trustee, and I think that is competent, not statements made in a letter to show what steps were taken.

Mr. Burns: That is the only purpose for which it is offered.

The Court: Go ahead and answer the question. I think the question should be as an official. I don't think in his personal capacity.

Mr. Burns: I don't think in his personal capacity he had any duty to do it, but I would like to show whether he did it or did not do it as Secretary.

(The question was read by the reporter as follows: "The letter of November 7, 1935, Mr. Yule, which you wrote to Mr. Beardslee in response to previous requests which have here been introduced in evidence, was the first information you had sent the Chase Bank as to the position taken 633 by the City of Indianapolis in regard to the lease, was it not?")

The Witness: It was.

Q. That is the first information you sent to the bank either individually or in your capacity as Secretary?

A. As Secretary. I wouldn't send it individually.

Q. So far as the records of the Indianapolis Gas Company disclose, that was the first information that anybody connected with the Indianapolis Gas Company had sent the Trustee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you as Secretary of the Indianapolis Gas Company send the Trustee or any Bondholders any information about the proposed agreement of March 2, 1936 between the Indianapolis Gas and the City?

A. No, sir.

Q. So far as the records of the Indianapolis Gas Company disclose, did anybody connected with the Indianapolis Gas Company send the Trustee or any of the Bondholders such information?

A. Not to my knowledge.

634 Q. Did you as Secretary of the Indianapolis Gas Company write to the Trustee or to any Bondholders advising any of them of the negotiations and arrangements about making extensions to the Indianapolis Gas property?

A. No, sir.

Q. So far as you know, did anybody connected with the Indianapolis Gas Company send any such information to the Trustee or Bondholders?

A. I don't krow of any.

Q. As Secretary of the Company you have charge of the books and records of the Company?

A. I have.

Q. And you are familiar with what property the Indianapolis Gas Company has?

A. In a general way.

Q. You know it is the property that it leased to the Citizens Gas Company, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Aside from the property leased to the Citizens Gas Company, the Indianapolis Gas Company has no property except its office furniture and fixtures, its record books, and the $120,000.00 of Indianapolis Gas bonds. That 635 is true, is it not?

A. Yes, that is true.

Q. The office furniture and fixtures are the office furniture and fixtures you have had there the last 25 years in two little rooms up in the Majestic Building?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were carried on your books at how much?

A. Something over a thousand dollars.

Q. That was the cost value twenty-five years ago?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you venture an opinion as to what they are worth today?

A. Not very much.

Q. Something under a thousand dollars?

A. Under $500.00, surely.

Q. The record books of the Indianapolis Gas are kept in that office?

A. Yes.

Q. Are those of any value except as records?

A. No.

Q. It appears in the stipulation that the $120,000.00 of bonds owned by the Indianapolis Gas were all pledged at the Indiana National Bank.

636 A. They are.

Q. For an indebtedness of about $28,000.00

A. Something like that, yes.

(At this point a short recess was taken.)

After recess.

Questions by Mr. Burns: (Resuming.)

Q. Mr. Yule, did you on or about September 30, 1935 receive a check for $171,575.00 from the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility?

A. I did.

Q. The Citizens Gas and Coke Utility, as I understand it, is the name in which the Utility district does business?

A. I so understand, yes.

Q. What did you do with the $171,575.00?

A. I deposited it in the Indiana National Bank.

Q. Did you arrange to send part of that to the Chase Bank to pay the coupons?

A. They immediately telegraphed $168,575.00 to the Chase National Bank, Trustee, to pay the coupons.

Q. The $3,000.00 you kept out was the $3,000.00

637 covering the coupons held by the—

A. (Interposing.) The one hundred and twenty coupons from the bonds we held in our treasury.

Q. That the Indianapolis Gas held in its treasury?

A. Yes.

Q. It will appear subsequently, if it does not now, that the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility sent in to the Trustee the eighteen coupons that it had on its bonds on October 1, 1935, and again on April 1, 1936. Did the Indianapolis Gas Company pay any money to the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility for those coupons?

A. No, they paid no money for those.

Q. Thse coupons were not paid?

A. We simply take the coupons and cancel them.

Mr. Thompson: What was the date of that check?

The Witness: The date of the check—I don't know what the date of the check was. I have it on my books September 30th. It was really deposited in the bank on the 1st, before the bank opened.

Mr. Thompson: 1935?

638 The Witness: Yes.

Q. Did you also on September 30, 1935 receive from the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility a check for $4,780.80 to cover the quarterly income tax payment that was due on or about that time?

A. It was due on the 15th of September. I received it on the 30th of September.

Q. You had previously borrowed money to take care of that tax payment?

A. Yes.

Q. You received the money from the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility on the 30th of September?

A. That is right.

Q. Then on October 14, 1935 did you receive from the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility a check for $1,772.46 to cover Indiana Gross Income Taxes?

A. I did.

Q. That check was used for that purpose, to pay the Indiana Gross Income Taxes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On November 2, 1935, or at about that time, did you receive a check from the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility 639 for $47,761.70 to cover a half year's taxes on the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. I did.

Q. What did you do with that check?

A. I endorsed the check to the Union Trust Company who in turn I think endorsed it to the County Treasurer.

Q. You did not put that through your bank account?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you on September 13, 1935 receive a check for $4,780.79 from the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility?

A. I did.

Q. To pay the Federal Income Tax instalment that was due December 15, 1935?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

642 Mr. Burns: I will say this, in the form of a stipula-
643 lation, and try to avoid any conclusions:

It may be stipulated that on December 31, 1935 the Indianapolis Gas Company received from the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility a check for $60,000.00, which it, in turn, used in paying a dividend of 3 per cent to its stockholders.

Mr. Thompson: Why don't you take a list of these payments and put them in, and if Mr. Hill furnished them to you—here is a complete list.

Mr. Burns: I have the list, but I want the stipulation to show, or have Mr. Yule testify, what the Indianapolis Gas used them for.

The Court: I think that is fair. That, of course, could not bind the City or anyone else as to what the Indianapolis Gas Company did with the money.

Mr. Thompson: So long as it is understood by agreeing to this stipulation I am not consenting that the payment was made in recognition of this lease, I have no objection.

644 Mr. Burns: I think that is perfectly all right. We want it clearly understood that we are not agreeing it was not so made.

The Court: That is where your differences are. If we could agree on that we might not have any law suit. Now, can you go ahead with your stipulation?

Mr. Thompson: As long as it is not construed as an admission we had paid the money for that purpose.

The Court: It will not be so construed.

Mr. Burns: It is further stipulated on January 10, 1936 the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to the Indianapolis Gas $300.00, which was used by Indianapolis Gas as corporate maintenance fee.

It is further stipulated on January 16, 1936 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to Indianapolis Gas $277.10, which Indianapolis Gas used to pay the mortgage Trustee's fees and expenses.

It is further stipulated on January 25, 1936 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to Indianapolis Gas $1,140.66, 645 which Indianapolis Gas used to pay the Indiana Gross Income Tax.

It is further stipulated on March 13, 1936 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to Indianapolis Gas, $4,782.36, which Indianapolis Gas used to pay the current quarterly instalment of Federal Income Tax.

It is further stipulated on March 25, 1936 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to Indianapolis Gas $171,575.00, of which Indianapolis Gas kept $3,000.00 itself, covering its own one hundred and twenty coupons and remitted by its own check to Chase National Bank, Trustee, $168,575.00.

It is further stipulated on April 9, 1936 the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to Indianapolis Gas $421.44, which the Indianapolis Gas in turn used to pay the mortgage Trustee's fee.

It is further stipulated on April 14, 1936 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to Indianapolis Gas, $1,778.25, which Indianapolis Gas in turn used to pay the Indiana Gross Income Tax quarterly instalment.

646 It is further stipulated on June 12, 1936 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to Indianapolis Gas, $4,782.36, which sum Indianapolis Gas in turn used to pay the current quarterly instalment of Federal Income Tax.

It is further stipulated on June 12, 1936 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to Indianapolis Gas, $15.00 which the Indianapolis Gas in turn used to pay the $15.00 Federal Taxes withheld on foreign-held bonds.

It is further stipulated on September 15, 1936 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid $4,782.36 to Indianapolis Gas, which Indianapolis Gas in turn used to pay the Federal Income Tax quarterly instalment.

It is further stipulated on December 14, 1936 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to Indianapolis Gas the sum of $4,782.36, which sum Indianapolis Gas in turn used to pay the current quarterly instalment Federal Income Tax.

Questions by Mr. Burns (Resuming).

647 Q. Now, Mr. Yule, in connection with these various payments that were made by Citizens Gas and Coke Utility to Indianapolis Gas, did you send to the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility bills showing the amount due for these various items as they came due from time to time?

A. I usually sent them statements.

Q. In response to those bills you would get back the check from the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility for the amount of the bill?

A. That was customary, yes.

Mr. Burns: I could also cover, although Mr. Hill and not Mr. Yule would have this information,—some other payments which were not made through Mr. Yule.

The Court: If there is no dispute about it—

Mr. Burns: (Interposing.) There is no dispute. I have been over them with Mr. Hill.

The Court: You might read them right into the record at this time.

Mr. Burns: On or about October 30, 1935 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to the Chase National Bank 648 the sum of $421.44, and the check was forwarded in a letter to the Chase National Bank, copy of which is identified as Plaintiff's Exhibit 120, and the invoice No. 33656, referred to in said letter, is identified as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 120-A.

The Court: Any objection?

Mr. Thompson: No.

Mr. Burns: I will read this letter. This is November 1, 1935, to the Chase National Bank and signed Citizens Gas and Coke Utility.

"We enclose herewith Indiana National Bank draft No. 90195 in amount $421.44 drawn to your order. This remittance is in payment of your invoice No. 33656 covering commission for paying Indianapolis Gas Company's Bond Coupons due October 1, 1935, in like amount.

"For your convenience we attach stub of your invoice. We trust same will be found correct."

Mr. Burns: The invoice attached reads: "Com-
649 mission for paying coupons due October 1, 1935 detached from Indianapolis Gas Company 5% First Consolidated Mortgage Bonds."

We offer in evidence Plaintiffs' Exhibits 120 and 120-A.

(The said documents, so offered, respectively marked for identification "PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBITS 120-AND 120-A", were admitted and read in evidence.)

Mr. Burns: It may further be stipulated that on May 4, 1936 the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to the Union Trust Company of Indianapolis, $51,361.54 in payment of the taxes on the Indianapolis Gas property.

Mr. Thompson: Which I suggest you phrase as you did the other,—which the Union Trust Company used in payment.

Mr. Burns: This was paid in taxes, and you have got the receipted bills,—as agent to receive the tax payments.

The Court: Do you have a receipt for that?

Mr. Burns: Mr. Hill has.

The Court: As I understand, the Union Trust Company was a place you would go and pay your taxes instead of going to the Treasurer's office?

650 Mr. Burns: That is right.

Mr. Thompson: Undoubtedly this money was used for paying taxes. The agreement provided for payment of certain sums of money, all under an understanding.

The Court: There would be no objection then to that stipulation?

Mr. Thompson: May I have it read?

(The reporter read as follows: "It may be further stipulated that on May 4, 1936 the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to the Union Trust Company of Indianapolis, $51,361.54 in payment of the taxes on the Indianapolis Gas property.")

Mr. Thompson: As long as it is understood on our part it was paid pursuant to the terms of an express written agreement, I have no objection to it.

Mr. Burns: We don't agree it was paid pursuant to an express written agreement.

The Court: I understand the position of each of you fully, but it was paid, as I understand, and the Union Trust Company turned over to the Utility Company 651 this receipt for the taxes.

Mr. Burns: That is the fact, is it, Mr. Hill?

Mr. Hill: The check was given to the Union Trust Company, and they took the money at the Union Trust and returned to us the receipted tax bills.

Mr. Burns: Covering the Indianapolis Gas property?

Mr. Hill: Yes.

The Court: All right. I think that is a fair statement.

Mr. Burns: It may be further stipulated on November 2, 1936 the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to the Union Trust Company for the County Treasurer $51,361.20 in payment of the state, county and city taxes of the Indianapolis Gas Company; that on May 3, 1937 the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to the Union Trust Company for the County Treasurer, $55,002.94 in payment of the state, county and city taxes of the Indianapolis Gas Company.

The Court: Let me ask, just for my own information, when was the agreement entered into between the Utility or City and the Indianapolis Gas Company 652 whereby these payments were made and other money placed in escrow in the bank?

Mr. Thompson: The first was dated September 30, 1935 and the second March 2, 1936.

The Court: Your position is it was agreed between the City and Indianapolis Gas Company that this Utility District would pay the taxes and deposit certain amounts?

Mr. Thompson: That is right, and I propose to prove in addition, your Honor, that the Chase National Bank accepted money that was paid under these agreements with full knowledge of the agreements.

Mr. Burns: It is further stipulated on November 1, 1937 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to the Union Trust Company for the County Treasurer $55,002.91 in payment of the state, county and city taxes of the Indianapolis Gas Company; that on May 2, 1938 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to the Union Trust Company for the County Treasurer $59,083.24, in payment of the state, county and city taxes of the Indianapolis Gas Company; that on November 7, 1938 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid 653 to the Union Trust Company for the County Treasurer $59,083.20 in payment of the state, county and city taxes of the Indianapolis Gas Company; it is further stipulated that on February 20, 1937 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to various insurance companies for fire and tornado insurance upon the Langsdale Plant of the Indianapolis Gas Company the sum of $11,770.55; that on August 5. 1936 Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid to a fire insurance company the sum of $575.40 for fire insurance policy that covered the Prospect and Pratt Avenue Plants jointly; and that on February 20, 1937 the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid a deposit premium to an insurance company in the sum of $22,500.00 covering the Prospect Plant of the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility and the Pratt Plant of the Indianapolis Gas Company.

Questions by Mr. Burns (Resuming).

Q. Mr. Yule, when the $168,575.00 was telegraphed to the Chase National Bank on October 1, 1935 did you at that time give the Chase National Bank any information as to the source from which that money was derived?

A. I did not.

654 Q. When the $168,575.00 was sent to the Chase National Bank on March 25th or 26th, 1936 did you give the Chase National Bank any information as to the source from which that money was derived?

A. I think not.

Q. Or that it was sent to the Chase Bank subject to any conditions or any qualifications?

A. No.

Q. Have you the letter in which you transmitted the payment of $168,575.00 to the Chase Bank?

Mr. Thompson: It seems to me it is perfectly obvious there are representatives of the Chase National Bank here. Mr. Yule just knows a part of this story from the standpoint of the Indianapolis Gas Company.

Mr. Burns: Mr. Beardslee is going to be on the stand.

The Court: All right.

Q. I call your attention to a letter dated March 26, 1936. Is this the letter in which you sent the $168,- 655 5 5.00 to the Chase National Bank?

A. It is.

Mr. Burns: We offer this in evidence as Plaintiffs' Exhibit No. 121.

The Court: Any objection?

Mr. Thompson: No.

(The said document, so offered, marked for identification "PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 121", was admitted and read in evidence.)

Q. Have you a record here, Mr. Yule, of the additions and extensions made to the Indianapolis Gas property since September 9, 1935 by the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility as reported to you by the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility?

A. I have.

Q. Will you produce that record, please?

A. Do you want the record or a summary of it? The record is on the desk there wrapped in that package.

Q. Is this it?

A. Yes.

656 Mr. Thompson: I am perfectly willing the summary may be used.

Mr. Burns: I won't open the material if it is agreeable to use the summary.

The Witness: There is the summary of the figures.

Q. Have you another copy of this?

A. I haven't another copy here, but that is all right. I have another copy of it.

Q. Calling your attention to a paper marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 122, is this a summary prepared by you from the reports submitted to you by the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility of the additions and improvements made to the Indianapolis Gas property since September 9, 1935 to December 31, 1938?

A. It is.

Q. That shows that in the period from September 9, 1935 to December 31, 1938 the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility has expended $95,336.47 in additions and extensions to the Indianapolis Gas property. Is that correct?

A. It does.

Q. And it is subdivided between the Pratt Street Plant, the mains, services, and meters first installation, as 657 shown on this exhibit?

A. It is.

The Court: Is there any objection to the exhibit? I think it will speak for itself.

Mr. Burns: We offer in evidence Plaintiffs' Exhibit 122.

The Court: It may be read in evidence.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification "PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 122", was admitted and read in evidence.

Q. Mr. Yule, did you bring with you the minute book of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. I did.

Q. Rather than refer you to that, I would like to identify it at this time, so as to save recalling Mr. Yule—it appears maybe a little out of order—the minutes of the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Indianapolis Gas Company of May 12, 1936, and ask to have this photostatic copy marked "Plaintiffs' Exhibit 123-A", "B", and "C".

658 Calling your attention particularly, Mr. Yule, to a copy of a letter from Baker, Hostetler, Sidlo & Patterson, appearing on the second page of these minutes, dated May 4, 1936, did you receive that letter on or about its date? When I say "you" I mean the Indianapolis Gas Company.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you, following the meeting of May 12, write to Baker, Hostetler, Sidlo & Patterson as shown by the copy of your letter set forth on the third page of these minutes?

A. I did.

Mr. Burns: I take it there will be no objection, because he has here the original letters if anybody cares to see them. I won't offer this at this time, because it is perhaps more properly rebuttal evidence.

The Court: That goes to the question in the answer?

Mr. Burns: The collusion, I think.

The Court: Let the record show these exhibits are 659 identified at this time, and there will be no objection because the original letters—

Mr. Thompson: (Interposing.) I intend to offer them, if he doesn't.

Mr. Burns: That is all, Mr. Yule.

Cross-Examination by William H. Thompson, Esq.

Q. Mr. Yule, the letter of May 4, 1936 from the firm of Baker, Hostetler, Sidlo & Patterson to the Indianapolis Gas Company was sent to you by mail?

A. Are you talking about me or the Indianapolis Gas Company?

Q. I am talking about the Indianapolis Gas Company. Did you receive it through the mail?

A. I didn't receive it.

Q. Who did receive it?

A. I don't know.

Q. Who presented it at the meeting?

A. I don't recall.

Mr. Burns: I simply identified this as out of order.

660 I think it is not proper cross-examination at this time.

I identified this simply to avoid the trouble of calling Mr. Yule back. I don't care particularly, except I think it is out of order at this time.

Mr. Thompson: If he identifies the letter I surely have a right to know how it came. Here is a letter addressed to the Indianapolis Gas Company, Indianapolis, Indiana. Is that right?

The Witness: That is right.

Q. It did not come by mail to the office of the Indianapolis Gas Company, did it?

A. I think not.

Q. Who brought it to the meeting? Mr. Higgins?

A. I don't know.

Q. The letter that you wrote under date of May 12th to the Baker firm, did you mail that or was it given to someone?

A. I mailed that letter. I wrote the letter and mailed it.

Q. Had someone prepared the letter for you to write?

A. Well, it was approved in the meeting of the Board of Directors.

Q. I am trying to find out whether you yourself

661 drafted the letter or whether it was drafted by some other person.

Mr. Higgins: The Indianapolis Gas Company. The minutes show the letter was sent on the order of the motion of the Board of Directors. Now, what officer composed the letter I think is utterly immaterial. The letter was sent by the company at the direction of the directors.

The Court: I understand you are not bound solely by just what is in the record where a charge is made as in this case. You can show under what circumstances and who prepared the letters, and all those things, to show whether there was any collusion or not.

Mr. Ewbank: My recollection would be that I prepared the letter.

Mr. Thompson: If you admit that I am willing to let it stand as the witness's answer.

Mr. Ewbank: Part of it, at least. I remember some pencil notations on the copies of it.

662 Q. Have you the originals of those two letters in your possession there?

A. Yes, I have them right here.

The Court: That was the same day the meeting was?

Mr. Ewbank: Yes, following the meeting. I think the preparation was at the meeting.

Mr. Higgins: There was a full Board present.

Q. You have nothing in connection with these letters, any preliminary drafts of these letters other than the two you have handed me, which were the final drafts?

A. I think not.

Q. Are you sure about it?

A. I suppose there must have been.

Q. I say, do you have them?

A. No.

Q. You—when I say "you" I am talking now about the Indianapolis Gas Company—received a letter from the firm of Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson as attorneys for Department of Utilities on the 24th day of July, 1935, 663 advising the Indianapolis Gas Company that the City of Indianapolis would upon the transfer of the Citizens Gas property to the City of Indianapolis refuse to recognize the validity of the Indianapolis Gas lease?

Mr. Burns: I object.

The Court: Sustained. I think that is part of the defense. As I understand, these minutes were just identified for the purpose of using them perhaps later, so the witness would not have to be recalled.

Mr. Thompson: I was going to these payments now. What I want to show by this witness—and I will produce letters here to show—that he knew continuously from the 23rd day of July, 1935 that the City of Indianapolis was denying any obligation on the lease.

The Court: I think that is competent. I didn't know what you had in mind.

Mr. Burns: Show the objection to his reading things into the letter that we do not think are there.

664 The Court: The Court may have to read it itself.

Q. Did you receive this letter on July 23, 1935 from Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson?

A. I did not.

The Court: He means the company.

The Witness: I did not; the secretary did not.

Q. Have you ever seen the letter of July 23, 1935?

A. I have ilt here.

Q. Will you produce it?

A. Yes.

The Court: When they speak about "you" they mean the company of which you are secretary.

Q. I call your attention now, Mr. Yule, to an instrument identified as Defendant City's Exhibit A, and ask you when that reached the files of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. I think it was produced at this meeting of the Board of Directors some time in September, at the first meeting of the Board of Directors.

665 Q. Who produced it?

A. I don't know.

Q. I will ask you if it is a fact, Mr. Yule, that the first checks, being two in number, which were received by the Indianapolis Gas Company from the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, which were actually cashed by the Indianapolis Gas Company were those which were received in a letter dated September 30, 1935?

A. That is the checks that we cashed, the $171,575.00 and—

Q. (Interposing.) The first checks that the Indianapolis Gas Company ever received from the Department of Utilities which it actually cashed?

A. That is correct.

Q. I call your attention now to Exhibit 64 to the stipulation, and ask you whether that is the letter in which the checks were enclosed, or a photostatic copy of it, I mean?

A. Yes, I think so.

Mr. Thompson: As a part of the cross-examination of this witness, we offer this letter.

Mr. Burns: We object to it as wholly irrelevant 666 and immaterial as between the City and the Trustee or the Bondholders, that no arrangement made between the mortgagor and City could in any way prejudice the rights of the Trustee or Bondholders.

The Court: Read the letter and let us see what it says.

(The said document, Exhibit 64 to the stipulation, was read by Mr. Thompson.)

The Court: Objection overruled.

Mr. Burns: May we have an exception?

The Court: Yes. I really don't think you need to ask for it now under the rules. You may have the exception.

Questions by Mr. Thompson (Resuming).

Q. I call your attention now to Exhibit 65 to the stipulation in this case, and ask you whether that is a photostatic copy of a letter you wrote on the same day in reply to the letter identified as Exhibit 64?

A. It is.

667 Mr. Thompson: The defendant offers as part of the cross examination this letter, which is as follows:—

Mr. Burns: (Interposing.) May it be understood we have a continuing objection to this correspondence, on the grounds already stated?

The Court: Yes. As I understand, this is offered to show on what grounds these payments were made.

Mr. Thompson: Yes.

(Exhibit 65 to the stipulation was read by Mr. Thompson.)

Mr. Thompson: Now, in this connection also, your Honor, I offer City's Exhibit A, which is the letter from Thompson, Rabb and Stevenson to the Indianapolis Gas Company under date of July 3, 1935.

Mr. Burns: That has already been put in evidence by the plaintiff as Exhibit 58. It was offered and received this morning.

668 The Court: There is no necessity of having any duplications.

Mr. Thompson: There is an unsigned copy in evidence, as I understand.

669 Q. Are you familiar with an instrument, which I have and hand you?

The Court: I think, Mr. Thompson, that the last exhibit should not be read if the other is an exact copy of it and it had been received. There is no necessity of duplicating the record.

Mr. Thompson: Beg pardon?

The Court: I see no necessity for duplication in the record.

Mr. Thompson: No, I don't want to do that. May it stand this way: If, on checking, this letter is already in, this offer may be withdrawn, and, if not in, it may stand?

The Court: That is right.

Q. I hand you, Mr. Yule, the minute book of the Board of Directors for the Utilities of the City of Indianapolis and call your attention to four pages of this minute book, containing an agreement dated March 2nd, 1936, and ask you whether the signature of The Indianapolis Gas Company, by William G. Irwin, is the signature of the 670 President of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

A. It is.

Q. And whether you signed that as its Secretary and affixed the seal?

A. I did.

Q. And whether you also furnished to the City of Indianapolis a certificate that the Board of Directors had approved the execution of this contract?

A. I did.

Q. I mean the Board of Directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson: The City now offers in evidence, as a part of the cross examination of this witness, Pages 358, 359, 360 and 361, and also 362 of this record.

Mr. Burns: The plaintiff objects to this contract of March, 1936 on the ground that no agreement between the City and the Indianapolis Gas can in any way affect the rights of the Trustee and bondholders, and call your attention to the fact that this is one of the exhibits 671 shown in the stipulation and that apparently they are just duplicating a lot of stuff in the stipulation by putting material in in this way. We didn't offer it, but it is attached to the stipulation.

The Court: It hasn't been offered?

Mr. Burns: No.

The Court: I think this would be competent to show the position taken by the City from the start, but what effect it will have on the legal outcome, I am not prepared to say, of course. But I would not duplicate any of these exhibits.

Mr. Thompson: It is not in the stipulation.

Mr. Burns: You mean the March 2nd agreement?

Mr. Thompson: No. The March 2nd agreement was originally contained in the stipulation, but it was taken out.

Mr. Burns: I beg your pardon. It is my mistake. It was an exhibit to your answers.

Mr. Thompson: Your Honor, the offered item, here not only contains—so counsel will be advised and your Honor, too,—not only contains the agreement of March 2nd, 672 but Page 361 is a certificate entitled, "Resolution of the Board of Directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company, approving the contract," and Page 362 is a resolution of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, ratifying the contract.

The Court: That is the contract under which these deposits were being made and the payments of taxes—

Mr. Thompson: Yes.

The Court: (Continued)—have been made?

Mr. Thompson: That is right.

The Court: Let the record show that the exhibit is read in evidence.

The said Pages Nos. 358, 359, 360, 361 and 362 of said Minute Book, so offered, were marked CITY'S EXHIBIT B and were admitted and read in evidence.

Q. Now, Mr. Yule, when were either Judge Ewbank or Mr. Higgins first employed as attorneys for The Indianapolis Gas Company in connection with the controversy affecting this ninety-nine year lease?

A. I don't know.

673 Q. Well, it was prior to the time when any of these payments were made, wasn't it?

A. Well, I presume the record was the meeting where this was first considered at the first Board meeting, wasn't it?

Q. Well, do you know the date?

A. Well, I can look it up. It is probably about the latter part of September, 1935.

Q. All right. Now, that will be close enough for me. Now, Mr. Newton D. Baker was employed as special counsel for The Indianapolis Gas Company on the 28th day of September, 1935? Is that correct?

A. That is so recorded in the minutes.

Q. Yes. Well, that is right, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Arthur V. Brown, of whose name some mention has been made, was the Treasurer of The Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you received the telegram dated October 1st, 1935, from The Chase National Bank in connection with the interest on The Indianapolis Gas Company bonds, you took that telegram to Mr. Arthur V. Brown at The 674 Indiana National Bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was received on October 1st, '35, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Brown then had a long distance telephone conversation with whom?

A. I only know that I have a note on the corner of the telegram that it was Abbott.

Q. Was Mr. Abbott at that time an officer of The Chase National Bank?

Mr. Burns: I object unless he knows.

Q. (Continued.) Well, if you know.

A. I don't know, no.

Mr. Thompson: Well, will it be admitted that he was an officer of The Chase National Bank?

Mr. Burns: It will be admitted that there was no such officer in The Chase National Bank, if that is a fact.

Q. Mr. Arthur V. Brown is the President of The Indiana National Bank and The Union Trust Company 675 of this city?

A. I so understand, yes.

Q. He resides in Indianapolis?

A. He does.

Q. Is he in Indianapolis at this time?

The Court: He was, at noon. I saw him.

Q. So far as you know?

A. I don't know. I haven't seen him today.

Q. Now, this correspondence, to which your attention has been directed: you said that you, personally, or as Secretary of the company, had not given any notice to The Chase National Bank, prior to this first payment on September 30, 1935, of the fact that the City of Indianapolis had denied liability under this lease? Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew from an examination of Exhibit 13 to the answers of The Indianapolis Gas Company to these interrogatories, that The Chase National Bank knew, as early as September 19, 1935, that the City was claiming that this lease was invalid?

676 Mr. Burns: I object. That asks for a conclusion.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: What is the question now?

Mr. Thompson: Read it.

(The Reporter read the preceding question as follows: "You knew from an examination of Exhibit 13 to the answers of The Indianapolis Gas Company to these interrogatories, that The Chase National Bank knew, as early as September 19, 1935, that the City was claiming that this lease was invalid?")

A. I had seen this letter, yes.

Q. Well, it is true, in there, that The Chase National Bank calls attention to the fact that the City is attempting to abrogate the lease?

A. Yes.

Mr. Burns: I object to characterizing the letter by saying something that isn't said there.

The Court: Is the letter in evidence?

Mr. Burns: Yes, it is in evidence.

677 Mr. Thompson: I will put it in evidence.

Mr. Burns: I will put it in evidence.

The Court: It may have been one of those that were not admitted. I don't know.

Q. Now, after this controversy arose—that is, after the transfer of this property—you don't mean to say to the Court that you conducted all of the negotiations or correspondence or dealings that were had between The Indianapolis Gas Company and The Chase National Bank, that you, on behalf of The Indianapolis Gas Company, were the only person engaged in dealing with The Chase National Bank?

A. As far as I had knowledge. I didn't know anything about it.

Q. Don't you know that Mr. Brown was in touch with The Chase National Bank?

A. I don't know it, no. I can assume it, I suppose.

Q. Didn't you yourself write a letter to an officer of The Chase National Bank, arranging a conference in New York, which was to be attended by Mr. Brown and Mr. Higgins? You may read it, now. That is Exhibit 19 to your answers. It is addressed to The Chase 678 National Bank, Trust Department, and attention of Mr. P. C. Beardslee, Assistant Trust Officer. "Referring to your letter of February 26th in respect to any recent developments in the negotiation between this company and the City, affecting our lease, we wish to say that the company expects to have a representative in New York early next week, who will advise you fully regarding this matter. Signed, "Indianapolis Gas Company, By William J. Yule, Secretary".

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was that representative that is referred to in this letter?

A. I don't know.

Q. When you wrote this letter, you didn't know who would go to that meeting?

A. No, I don't think I did.

Q. Why, didn't you know that both Mr. Arthur V. Brown and Mr. William Higgins intended to, and did, attend this meeting that was being arranged to take place in New York on March 11th?

A. I didn't know anything about any meeting on 679 March 11th, though.

Q. What does this letter mean, then? I would like to have you explain it to the Court. You may look at it (handing letter to witness).

A. Well, it means just what it says. Mr. Brown told me to write the letter, and that is all I know.

Q. Well, that comes to the point, then, that, so far as your correspondence with The Chase National Bank and your knowledge of this situation were concerned, you merely did what you were told to do?

A. Well, I did whatever the Board of Directors directed me to do, yes.

Q. That is right?

A. Yes.

Q. But you did not have any independent control over any negotiations with The Chase National Bank, or the dealings with it?

A. No, no.

Q. No. And the matters of that kind were handled either by the attorneys for The Indianapolis Gas Company or by Mr. Brown or by Mr. Irvin?

A. So far as I know, yes.

680 Q. And you had no discretion which you were permitted to exercise in the premises?

A. I expect not.

Q. Now, were you asked by either Mr. Brown or any other person to furnish a copy to him of the agreement of March 2nd, which has been introduced in evidence here, between the City of Indianapolis, its Department of Utilities, and The Indianapolis Gas Company, to take with him to this meeting in New York with the representatives of The Chase National Bank?

A. I don't recall anything like that.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Brown or Mr. Higgins had copies of that agreement?

A. I do not.

Q. Now, the City of Indianapolis paid to The Indianapolis Gas Company the sum of $171,575 on March 25, 1936? Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you took out, for The Indianapolis Gas Company,—the check was made payable to The Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. It was.

681 Q. You took out three thousand dollars?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which you used to pay the semi-annual installment of interest on one hundred and twenty thousand dollars worth of bonds held by The Indianapolis Gas Company in its treasury?

A. I didn't pay it, no. It wasn't necessary to pay it.

Q. Well, you took it out, anyway?

A. I just didn't pay that much interest on the bonds. They were treasury coupons.

Q. I see, and you forwarded the balance to The Chase National Bank?

A. That is right.

Q. That balance consisting of $168,575?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, was a part of that to pay the fee of The Chase National Bank for distributing the interest on the bonds?

A. No.

Q. Was that forwarded to them at some later time, the fee for distributing that amount?

A. We received a check from the Citizens Gas &
682 Coke Utility for that amount and forwarded it to The Chase National Bank for services in disbursing the coupon interest.

Q. Yes, and you did not attend the meeting of March 11, 1936, in New York City?

A. I did not.

Q. And you have no knowledge as to what occurred there?

A. I do not, no.

Q. And you have no personal knowledge as to whether The Chase National Bank accepted this sum of $168,575 under the terms of the agreement of March 2nd, 1936?

A. I do not, no.
Mr. Thompson: That is all.
The Court: That is all.
Mr. Burns: Just a minute, Mr. Yule.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. You said that Judge Ewbank, or Judge Ewbank said that he prepared this letter of May 12, 1936, or helped in drafting it at the Directors' meeting?
A. Judge Ewbank was a Director.
Q. Of The Indianapolis Gas Company?
683 A. He was.
Q. And a regular attendant at the meetings?
A. Yes.
Q. And Mr. Higgins also was a Director?
A. He was also.
The Court: Is that all?
Mr. Higgins: I have one question, your Honor.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Higgins.

Q. As to the note on the telegram, Mr. Yule, that you have already testified about, had you any knowledge of what that signified except what you have since learned?
A. Well, may I make a statement as to what that means?
Q. Yes.
A. We received a check, the day before, and we wrote that letter, acknowledging it, and said that, "If that is the understanding, we will use it tomorrow morning," and then I went to the bank, before the bank opened, on the morning of the 1st, and deposited that money and the bank wired it to New York and, then, at eleven 684 o'clock, when I got back to the office, I found this telegram to Mr. Irwin, and I delivered it right to Mr. Brown and he put in a long distance call to The Chase National Bank. I had a note that he was talking to a man named Abbott. I may have been mistaken, if there is no such officer there.
Q. The note was made by you, was it?
A. I made the note on the corner of the telegram. That is the only recollection I have of what I wrote there. That was about eleven o'clock in the morning of the 1st.
Q. After the money—

A. After the money had been telegraphed before nine o'clock in the morning.

Mr. Higgins: That is all.

The Court: That is all.

Witness excused.

The Court: I think we had better adjourn at this time. I think you should take the stipulation and the exhibits that have been offered.

685 Would it be satisfactory to meet at nine-thirty in the morning instead of ten?

Mr. Thompson: That is satisfactory to us, your Honor.

Mr. Burns: It would be a little more convenient for me if it be ten o'clock. The reason is that some people are coming from out of town, in the morning, and I don't know just what time they will get here.

The Court: As you know, I only allotted two days for this trial.

Mr. Burns: Yes. Well, I am very anxious to get through with it.

The Court: Perhaps a half hour would permit us to finish tomorrow. If that isn't satisfactory, we can make it ten.

Mr. Burns: I can be here at nine-thirty.

Mr. Ewbank: Nine-thirty, then?

The Court: Will that be satisfactory to the rest of you? (No audible response.)

Adjourn court until nine-thirty in the morning, Mr. Marshal.

Whereupon, the trial was adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, March 3, 1939, at nine-thirty o'clock A. M.

687

Indianapolis, Indiana,
Friday, March 3, 1939.
Nine-thirty O'clock A. M.

The court met pursuant to adjournment, and the trial was resumed as follows:

Mr. Burns: I would like to recall Mr. Yule for the purpose of correcting a date on one of the exhibits.

WILLIAM J. YULE, a witness on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being recalled, testified as follows:

Redirect Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Yule, calling your attention to Plaintiffs' Exhibit 122, statement of the additions and betterments made by the City to the Indianapolis Gas system, as reported by the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility, from September 9 to June 30, 1938. That figure should correctly be December 31, 1938, should it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Burns: Would it be all right for Mr. Yule 688 to change it?

Mr. Thompson: Certainly.

Mr. Burns: Mr. Yule has now changed the date of June 30, 1938 to December 31, 1938, and we offer the exhibit as changed.

The said document, changed as aforesaid, so offered, was admitted and read in evidence.

Q. Mr. Yule, just before adjournment, Mr. Higgins had asked you about the telephone conversation which Mr. Brown had with somebody in New York. Did you take that telegram to Mr. Brown's office?

A. I did.

Q. The telegram of October—

The Court: He went over that yesterday and said that he made the note on the telegram.

Q. Yes, and did you stand there while Mr. Brown telephoned?

A. I did.

Q. Could you hear Mr. Brown's end of the conversation?

689 A. I did.

Q. Tell us, if you will, what that conversation was.

Mr. Thompson: To which the defendant City objects.

The Court: Objection sustained. Mr. Brown is available, and this witness doesn't know whom he talked to, but only what he heard.

Q. Was anything said by Mr. Brown about the correspondence which accompanied the check that The Indianapolis Gas Company had received from the City?

Mr. Thompson: To which question the defendant City objects.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Burns: Note an exception.

The Court: There is no reason why you can't have the witness here. He is within three blocks.

Mr. Burns: I am perfectly willing to have him here.

The Court: That is the way to prove it.

Mr. Burns: This witness heard the conversation.

The Court: He doesn't know whom he talked to or 690 anything about it except what he heard. That, of course, is hearsay. You can have Mr. Brown here, if you want to, and have him testify.

Is that all with this witness?

Mr. Burns: That is all.

Witness excused.

Mr. Higgins: I will have Mr. Brown here any time you say.

GEORGE HILL, a witness called on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. What is your name, your age, your address and your occupation, Mr. Hill?

A. George Hill; Room 200 Majestic Building; sixty-one; Auditor of Citizens Gas & Coke Utility.

Q. How long have you been Auditor of the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility?

A. Since December 10, 1929.

691 Q. Well, you were Auditor of the Citizens Gas Company until September 9, 1935?

A. That is right.

Q. And since then you have been Auditor of the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility? Is that correct?

A. Except during the time in which I was acting Auditor.

Q. Yes. Before you became Auditor of the Citizens Gas Company, were you employed there with the company?

A. I was.

Q. And in what capacity?

A. Assistant Auditor.

Q. Assistant Auditor, and during what time were you Assistant Auditor?

A. Well, I began work with the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis on July 2nd, 1917 and, about one year after that, I became Assistant Auditor.

Q. And from about 1919, when you became Assistant Auditor, were you Assistant Auditor until 1929?

A. That is right.

Q. And then you were Auditor from then until September 9, 1935?

A. That is right.

692 Q. And then, beginning September 9, 1935, you were Acting Auditor of the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when did you become Auditor of the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility?

A. Well, I don't remember that date. It was about a year later.

Q. About a year later. As Auditor of the Citizens Gas Company, did you have charge of the books and records, the accounting books of the company?

A. I did.

Q. And the people who kept the books and accounts of the company were under your general direction and supervision?

A. They were.

Q. Did you from time to time, as Auditor of the company, have charge of the preparation of material to be sent to Poor's Manual or Moody's Manual?

A. That was usually done—that was usually sent by the Secretary.

Q. That was usually sent by the Secretary?

A. Yes, sir.

693 Q. That was by Mr. Forrest when he was there?

A. Or his secretary.

Q. Or his secretary, but did you have charge of the preparation of the accounting data for that purpose?

A. Part of it.

Q. Part of it. Would you prepare those statements annually and send them?

A. I don't remember as to those particular companies—how many we reported to. I know there were some.

Q. You know there were some. Would those companies send back the proof of what they were going to print?

Mr. Thompson: I object to this because this witness says that he didn't have charge of it.

The Court: Well, if he saw it and knows something personally about it.

The Witness: No, so far as I know—

Q. You didn't see the proof?

A. No.

Q. But you did have charge of preparing the accounting data that went into those reports?

A. Yes.

694 Q. And that accounting data, which you prepared, was then given to Mr. Forrest or his assistant and forwarded by him to any of these companies?

Mr. Thompson: Just a moment. I want to ask a question for the purpose of making an objection.

What you did do was to furnish certain accounting data to Mr. Forrest? Is that it?

The Witness: That is right.

Mr. Thompson: And you have no knowledge as to what he did with it?

The Witness: No, sir.

Q. But you do know it was prepared for the purpose of sending to these information services?

A. I know that we had a form with certain statistical companies' names on it.

Q. And those forms you filled out, showing the names of the directors and the earnings and so forth?

A. No, I didn't. No, I didn't fill that part of it out.

Q. You filled out just the accounting data to be sent in? Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

695 Q. And the rest of the information, you don't know who filled it out on the reports?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility made similar reports to any of these services?

A. Any of them? I am not prepared to answer on that.

Q. You don't know?

A. No.

Q. You have not had anything to do with preparing any information, during the last three years and a half, for any such—

A. For some, but I don't remember the names of the statistical companies.

Q. You know that the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility has sent such information in to some of these statistical services, but you don't know which ones?

A. I don't know whether they were sent or not. I prepared the same figures and turned them over to someone else.

Q. And to whom did you turn them over?

A. Mr. Seiter or Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Seiter or Mr. Burns, but, after that, you 696 don't know what happened to them?

A. That is right.

Q. Mr. Seiter and Mr. Burns, neither of them were with the Citizens Gas Company, were they?

A. No, sir.

Q. They have come with the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility since the City took over the property?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were here yesterday and heard Mr. Yule's testimony about the addition and improvements that had been made by the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility to The Indianapolis Gas Company properties since September 9, 1935?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were subpoenaed to bring the figures showing the maintenance, the expenditures for maintenance, of the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility on the Indianapolis Gas property. I am not interested particularly in the exact figures, but it is a fact, is it not, Mr. Hill, that during the period from September 9, 1935 to the present time the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility has spent varying amounts for the maintenance of the distribution system of The Indianapolis Gas Company?

697 A. They have.

Q. It has or whatever—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And has also spent varying amounts for the maintenance of the Pratt Street Station? Is that what you call it?

A. That is right.

Q. The Pratt Street Station is also Indianapolis Gas property?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And has also spent various amounts for maintenance of the Langsdale property of The Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, at the present time, the only part of the Langsdale property that has been in use is the large storage tank and the compressor rooms and the steam boilers for using the compressor rooms? Isn't that true?

A. I think so.

Q. So that very little, during the period from 1935, has been spent on the maintenance of the other equipment at Langsdale?

698 A. That is right.

Q. The answer was "Yes"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your work as Auditor of the Citizens Gas Company, did you from time to time prepare accounting material to be furnished to Blodgett & Company or The Union Trust Company or anyone else or Gavin L. Payne & Company or any other broker or banker who was engaged in marketing securities of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. I did not, after I became Auditor.

Q. You did before you became Auditor?

A. No, sir.

Q. You say you did not?

A. I did not.

Q. You did not, after you became Auditor?

A. No, nor before.

Q. Or before?

A. That is right.

Q. You didn't do it at any time while you were at the Citizens Gas Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Beg pardon?

699 A. No, sir.

Q. Was any such work done under your direction as Auditor?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who did that work at the Citizens Gas Company?

A. I don't remember of any Blodgett reports being made.

Q. You don't remember of any accounting data being assembled for that purpose,—

A. For Blodgett?

Q. (continued)—while you were at the Citizens Gas Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Your subpoena called for you to bring in the annual report of the Citizens Gas Company for the year ending December 31, 1913. Did you find that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. May I see it? (The witness handed document to counsel.)

Calling your attention, Mr. Hill, to this paper that you have brought in, is that the annual report of the Citizens

Gas Company for the year ending December 31, 1913, which you have taken from the old files of the Citizens Gas Company?

700 A. It is so stated on this report, and it was taken from the files of the Citizens Gas Company.

Mr. Burns: May it be stipulated that this is a duplicate original of the report used by Mr. Gavin L. Payne, which has already been introduced in evidence as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 93?

Mr. Thompson: I know nothing about it, Mr. Burns.

Mr. Burns: We will ask to have it marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 124. I hesitate to mark this because it is an exact duplicate of what we offered yesterday, but Mr. Thompson says he will not stipulate that it is a duplicate.

Mr. Thompson: I don't know anything about it, Mr. Burns.

Mr. Burns: Well, it is right here.

The Court: Where is the other one? Haven't you the original that was put in yesterday? Why don't you use that to examine this witness instead of this one?

Q. Calling your attention, Mr. Hill, to Plaintiffs' Exhibit 93, that was offered in evidence yesterday in 701 connection with the testimony of Mr. Payne, is that an exact copy, a duplicate original, of the report which you have produced here from the files of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. It is so marked and it has the same date and looks as though it were printed from the same plate.

Mr. Thompson: Your Honor will recall I made no objection to this other exhibit on the ground that it was not shown to have been an original.

Mr. Burns: Will you now stipulate that it is?

Mr. Thompson: I see no purpose in making a stipulation in connection with an offering of it, your Honor.

The Court: Why don't you withdraw the other exhibit and insert the original, if you want to?

Mr. Burns: Well, one isn't any more an original than the other. The one that was produced from Mr. Payne's files was one which he had received as the person who was floating the securities, but, in order to save time, I will offer Plaintiffs' Exhibit 124.

Mr. Thompson: I make the same objection to this, your Honor.

702 The Court: That is the other exhibit?

Mr. Burns: That is the copy that Mr. Hill has produced.

The Court: I am not sure whether I ruled on the other one or not.

Mr. Burns: I think there was no objection made to it except that it was not binding on the City.

Mr. Thompson: I make the same objection to this.

The Court: Was the other one read in evidence or was the ruling reserved?

Mr. Thompson: I think it was reserved, your Honor, but I am not sure.

Official Reporter: Exhibit 93 was admitted.

The Court: Let this be read in evidence. The ruling was reserved with respect to several of them.

Mr. Burns: Yes.

The Court: I didn't remember about this.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT NO. 124, was admitted and read in evidence.

703 Mr. Burns That is all.

The Court: That is all.

Witness excused.

PAUL C. BEARDSLEE, a witness called on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Beardslee, will you state your name, your age, your occupation and your address, please?

A. My name is Paul C. Beardslee; age, forty-eight; business address, 11 Broad Street.

Q. New York City?

A. New York City. Occupation, banking.

Q. What is your official connection with The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, the plaintiff in one of the two cases here on hearing?

A. I am Assistant Trust Officer of The Chase National Bank.

Q. And how long have you held that office?

704 A. Since 1931.

Q. And before 1931, had you held similar offices in other banks in New York?

A. That is true, in the Trust Departments.

Q. In the Trust Department?

A. Corporate Trust Departments.

Q. Have you been in general charge of the work of The Chase National Bank, as Trustee of the Mortgage dated October 1, 1902 from The Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. I have, subject to approval of an executive vice president on matters of policy.

Q. And I suppose, also, the management committee or the board of directors?

A. And the management committee of the Trust Department.

Q. Over what period have you had charge of this trust relating to the mortgage of 1902?

A. It goes back at least to 1934.

Q. Do all matters in connection with that trust come to your attention, other than mere routine matters, in the ordinary course of the operation of the Chase Bank?

A. Yes, other than routine matters.

Q. So that if any information comes into the bank, 705 either in the form of a letter or a telegram or any other way, in the ordinary course of business, it comes to your attention?

A. It would reach my desk, yes.

Q. The stipulation which has been offered here in evidence shows that of the coupons dated April 1st, 1936 $775 principal amount have not been cashed. Do you know or have you any means of finding out who the owners of those coupons are?

A. No, those coupons are payable to bearer.

Q. When the coupons were paid on the last coupon paying date, on April 1st, 1936, did you then make up as complete a list as you could of the corporate holders of the bonds of the Indianapolis Gas?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. And did you also secure a list from the Indianapolis Gas, made up from the ownership certificates showing the individual holders of those bonds?

A. Presumably it came from that list. I don't know because I don't know where they compiled it from.

Q. But they supplied you a list?

A. They supplied us with a list.

706 Q. Now, in the ordinary course of your operation at the bank, when the coupons are cashed for an individual, they come in with an ownership certificate and those—please answer out loud so the Reporter will get your answer.

A. That is true.

Q. And those ownership certificates are sent right to the company issuing the bonds? Is that true?

A. Along with the canceled coupons, in most cases.

Q. Yes.

A. That is the ordinary course.

Q. But as a result of the list which you secured from the Indianapolis Gas and the list of the corporate holders which you secured yourselves in New York, do you have a complete list of the bondholders covering those sixty-eight hundred and eighty-one bonds?

A. No.

Q. The bonds, as I understand it, are all in the denomination of one thousand dollars each?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you ever have any intimation, prior to September 9, 1935, that the City of Indianapolis was either 707 denying the validity of the lease of September 30, 1913 or the enforcibility of that lease against it or against its properties that it had received from the Citizens Gas Company?

A. No.

Q. If any such information had come to the Chase Bank, would that information, in the ordinary course of business, have come to your attention?

A. It would have reached my desk.

Q. Now, calling your attention to Plaintiffs' Exhibit 111-A and 111-B, identified yesterday by Mr. Yule, did you write Mr. Yule, about July 19th, 1935, enclosing a copy of a letter from Scudder, Stevens & Clark, as shown by those two exhibits?

A. I did.

Q. Did you, on or about August 18th or 19th, receive from The Indianapolis Gas Company a copy of a letter to Scudder, Stevens & Clark, which has been identified as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 111-C?

A. We did. The Trustee did.

Mr. Burns: We offer in evidence Plaintiffs' Exhibits 111-A, B and C.

708 The Court: I think the offer has already been made.

Mr. Burns: I thought perhaps we ought to offer them after this further identification.

The Court: One time is enough, and the ruling was reserved, as I remember, on those. 14, 15 and 16 were admitted. One offer is enough.

Q. Calling your attention to Plaintiffs' Exhibits 112 and 112-A, did you, on or about September 6th, send to Mr. Yule the letter, 112, enclosing a copy of the letter from Russell Berg & Company, dated September 4th, as shown by these two exhibits?

A. I did.

Q. Did you receive any response from The Indianapolis Gas Company or from Mr. Yule to that letter of September 6th?

A. No.

Q. Or did you receive any copy of any letter sent by Mr. Yule or anybody representing The Indianapolis Gas Company to Russell Berg & Company?

A. No.

709 Q. Did you write to Mr. Irwin, President of The Indianapolis Gas Company, on September 19th, as shown by Plaintiffs' Exhibit 113?

A. I did.

Q. And when did you first receive any response to that letter of September 19th from the Indianapolis Gas—when did you receive any response from The Indianapolis Gas Company to that letter of September 19th?

A. On or about November 7th.

Q. You received a letter dated November 7th, Exhibit 116? Is that true?

A. That is true.

Q. Probably a day or two after its date?

A. Along about that time.

Q. Had you, in the meantime, between September 19th and November 7th, received any response or word from anyone connected with The Indianapolis Gas Company to your letter of September 19th?

A. No.

Q. Did you on October 1st, 1935 telegraph The Indianapolis Gas Company, as shown by Plaintiffs' Exhibit 114?

A. That is correct.

710 Q. And did you then, later, on October 3rd, write Mr. Yule, as shown by Plaintiffs' Exhibit 115?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, calling your attention particularly, Mr. Beardslee, to the last line of the first paragraph of the letter of October 3rd, Exhibit 115, in which you say, "We also wired him on September 1st with respect thereto," was that date, September 1st, a typographical error?

A. It was. It should have been October 1st.

Q. Intended to refer—

A. To the telegram of October 1st.

Q. Exhibit 114?

A. That is correct.

The Court: Just correct that in pencil.

Q. After you received the letter of November 7, 1935, from The Indianapolis Gas Company, did you write the Gas Company or Mr. Yule on December 2nd, as shown by Exhibit 117?

A. I did.

Q. And did you receive a reply to that letter—

A. No, sir.

Q. (Continued.) —from anybody connected with 711 The Indianapolis Gas Company or from Mr. Yule or from the company itself?

Q. Did you again write to The Indianapolis Gas Company on February 26th, 1936, as shown by Plaintiffs' Exhibit 118?

A. I did.

Q. And did you, in response to that letter, receive a letter from The Indianapolis Gas Company, Plaintiffs' Exhibit 119?

A. I did.

Q. Now, Mr. Beardslee, Plaintiffs' Exhibit 119 from Mr. Yule says, "Referring to your letter of February 26th in respect to any recent developments in the negotiations between this company and the City affecting our lease, we wish to say that the company expects to have a representative in New York early next week, who will advise you fully regarding this."

Was there then some correspondence between you and The Indianapolis Gas Company saying that you would be glad to see them, or something of that sort?

A. Yes, sir.

712 Q. And in pursuance of that correspondence, did Mr. Higgins and Mr. Brown, representing the Indianapolis Gas Company, come to New York on March 11th?

A. They did.

Q. And come into the office of the Chase Bank to give the information that you had requested?

A. That is correct.

The Court: That is in '36, isn't it?

Mr. Burns: That is March 11, 1936.

The Witness: That is March 11, 1936.

Q. What occurred at that meeting of March 11, 1936? What information did Mr. Brown and Mr. Higgins give you?

A. Well, at this meeting on March 11th, which was attended by Mr. Higgins and Mr. Brown, of the Indianapolis Gas, Mr. Rowe of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, Mr. Kugler of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, Mr. Stearns of Estabrook & Company, investment bankers, I was also present, representing the Trustee, and counsel for the Trustee.

Q. That was Mr. Cole?

A. That was Mr. Cole.

713 Q. Of Milbank, Tweed & Hope?

A. Of Milbank, Tweed & Hope. Mr. Higgins and Mr. Brown told us of the situation, the position that the City had taken with respect to the lease and also with respect to the—and told us of the March 2nd, 1936 agreement.

Q. Did they at that time give you or show you a copy of the March 2nd agreement?

A. I didn't see it.

Q. They didn't give you one there at that meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, what occurred after that?

A. Then a discussion was had as to the best method of protecting the interests and rights of the bondholders. Foreclosure was discussed.

Q. As a possible method of protecting—

A. A possible method of protecting the rights and finally I was asked, on behalf of the Trustee, as to what the Trustee's reaction would be if it were asked to bring a bill--bring a suit, to determine the validity of the lease, against the City.

The Court: I didn't understand that. You were 714 asked what?

The Witness: What the reaction of the Trustee would be to bringing a suit, to determine the validity of the lease, against the City.

The Court: Who asked you that?

The Witness: Well, this is a conversation that happened three years ago and at a round table discussion and I wouldn't—

The Court: That might be very important in this litigation.

The Witness: I couldn't say definitely.

The Court: Well, what is your best judgment?

The Witness: That might have come from either Mr. Brown or Mr. Higgins. I couldn't say definitely. It is three years ago.

Q. You don't remember whether it came from Mr. Brown or from Mr. Higgins or Mr. Rowe or Mr. Kugler or Mr. Stearns?

A. I don't know.

Q. But you do know that it developed during the conversation?

A. That was one of those things that developed, 715 but who originally started it I couldn't say definitely.

Q. Was there some further discussion as to the advisability of a foreclosure and did Mr. Brown or Mr. Higgins have anything to say as to the desirability of foreclosure proceedings?

A. Yes, there was a further discussion of foreclosure and Mr. Brown or Mr. Higgins pointed out that foreclosure would delay the proceedings and possibly cause a lot of additional expense.

Q. Mr. Brown and Mr. Higgins indicated that they didn't want the Trustee to bring foreclosure proceedings?

A. That is true.

Q. And what was the position of the bondholders in regard to that?

A. Well, the bondholders, as I recall it, were leaning toward foreclosure.

Q. And you, representing the Trustee, or Trustee's counsel, expressed what opinion?

A. Well, I told them, in response to that question, as to what the reaction of the Trustee would be. I told those present that was something on which I could not bind the bank, and it would have to be submitted to the man-716 agement committee of the Trust Department.

Q. Well,—go ahead.

A. But I did intimate that if it was my own choice—my own opinion, that if we were requested to do so, to bring this suit by a substantial amount of the holders of the bonds, and if we were indemnified by the bondholders, that we might do so.

The Court: Which suit do you have reference to, the foreclosure?

The Witness: No, I am speaking now of determining the validity of the lease against the City.

The Court: Declaratory judgment case?

The Witness: That is what you call it, I guess.

Q. Was the possibility of a declaratory judgment suit, as such, discussed at that meeting, do you know?

A. Yes, I think it was.

Q. You know what a declaratory judgment suit is as distinguished from an ordinary suit?

A. I am not a lawyer, but I have an idea; but nothing definite was decided at that meeting, because the bondholders seemed to be rather reluctant to put up in-717 demnity.

Q. They expressed themselves as not wanting to put up the indemnity, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

The Court: The bondholders finally put up indemnity for this Chase National Bank suit?

The Witness: No, sir.

Q. Did you have a later meeting—have you told everything that you can recall at present about the meeting of March 11th?

A. I think that is all.

Q. In any case, no definite decision was reached at that meeting about what action the Trustee would take?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the bondholders did not directly commit themselves as to whether they would or would not give indemnity?

A. That is true.

* * * * * *

723 Q. Did you, sometime after April 13, 1936, receive letters from the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, dated April 16th, 1936, marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 125, and from the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, dated April 17th, 1936, marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 126, copies of which I show you—125 and 126?

724 A. We did receive the original of which this is a photostat sometime about April 18th or 19th, 1936.

* * * * * * *

727 Mr. Burns: Exhibits 125 and 126, any objection to them?

Mr. Thompson: None whatever.

The said documents, so offered, respectively marked for identification PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBITS NOS. 125 and 126, were admitted and read in evidence.

* * * * * *

730 Q. Mr. Beardslee, when was the first time you received any information as to the agreement of March 2, 1936 having been made between the City of Indianapolis and the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. At the conference on March 11, 1936.

Q. Had you, prior to that time, known anything about any such agreement?

A. We had not.

Q. Or anything about the exchange of correspondence between the City and The Indianapolis Gas Company, 731 of September 30, 1935?

A. No.

Mr. Thompson: I should think the witness would look at the letter he received under date of November 7, 1935 before he lets that answer stand.

(The Reporter read the preceding record as follows: Question: "Had you, prior to that time, known anything about any such agreement?" Answer: "We had not." Question: "Or anything about the exchange of correspondence between the City and The Indianapolis Gas Company, of September 30, 1935?" Answer: "No.")

732 A. Well, that doesn't refer to the March 2nd agreement.

Q. Calling your attention to the third paragraph of that letter of November 7, 1936, Mr. Beardslee, it does refer to the fact that the Company through its Board of Directors entered into a stipulation with the City of Indianapolis providing that the Board of Utilities will continue the operation of the property of this Company for a period of six months pending negotiations, and it will pay a monthly rental for such period equal to the amount of the rental under the lease?

A. That is true.

Q. So you knew that fact, that that agreement had been made?

A. For the six months period.

Q. You did not know or have any copies of the correspondence exchanged on September 30th?

A. No.

Q. And this letter of November 7th was the first information that you had of the terms under which the City and the Indianapolis Gas were allowing the property to be operated?

A. Yes, that is true.

Q. If any information as to the City's position
733 on the lease had come to the attention of the officers or employes of the Chase Bank, would that in the ordinary course of business come to your attention?

A. It would have reached my desk.

Q. When did it first come to your attention that the City of Indianapolis and the Indianapolis Gas Company had entered into any arrangement by which the City of Indianapolis would make additions and extensions to the Indianapolis Gas property pending settlement of the dispute about this lease?

A. I never heard of that.

Q. You heard of—

A. (Interposing.) Until you asked me the question yesterday.

Q. Were you consulted, or the Chase Bank consulted, in any way before that agreement was made?

A. No.

Q. If any one at the Chase Bank had been advised or consulted about that, would that have come to your attention in the ordinary course of business?

A. That would have come to my attention.

734 Q. When the Chase Bank received notice on October 1, 1935 that the Indiana National Bank had credited $168,575.00 to it for the purpose of payment of Indianapolis Gas coupons did you have any information as to the source from which that money had come?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. Or the circumstances under which it was paid?

A. No, sir.

• • • • • •

740 Q. Mr. Beardslee, did you on or about October 21, 1935 receive a letter from the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility, copy of which I show you, marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 131?

A. We did.

Q. Were there enclosed with that letter eighteen coupons maturing October 1, 1935 of the Indianapolis Gas bonds?

A. There were.

741 Q. Did you on or about May 1, 1936 receive a letter from the Indianapolis Gas Company marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 132?

A. We did.

Q. Were there enclosed with the letter from the Indianapolis Gas Company one hundred and thirty-eight coupons due April 1, 1936?

A. There were.

Q. Was any money paid by the Chase Bank to the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility for the eighteen coupons received on October 21, 1935 or for the one hundred and thirty-eight coupons received in the letter of May 1, 1936?

A. Not by the Chase Bank.

Mr. Burns: I offer the two letters in evidence, Plaintiffs' Exhibits 131 and 132.

The said documents, so offered, respectively marked for identification PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBITS 131 and 132, were admitted and read in evidence.

Q. Did you have any information prior to March 2, 1936, Mr. Beardslee, that there were any negotiations between the City and Indianapolis Gas Company looking towards the making of the agreement of March 2, 1936?

A. No, sir.

742 Q. As a matter of fact, the first information you got about that at all was at the meeting of March 11, 1936?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Burns: That is all.

Mr. Thompson: Your Honor, may we have a recess for a few moments?

The Court: Yes, I will take about a ten-minute recess.

After Recess.

Mr. Burns: If the Court please, Mr. Brown is here, and I think we can dispose of him in about one minute, if counsel will agree we may use him at this time.

Mr. Thompson: That is perfectly all right.

The Court: Proceed.

The Court. Proceed.

743 ARTHUR V. BROWN, called as a witness by Plaintiffs, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Your name is Arthur V. Brown?

A. Correct.

Q. You are President of the Indiana National Bank?

A. Yes.

Q. And President of the Union Trust Company of Indianapolis?

A. Yes.

Q. And Vice President and Treasurer of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. That is right.

Q. And also associated with many other corporations in and around Indianapolis?

A. Yes, some of them.

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Brown, a telephone conversation of October 1, 1935 which you had in regard to some Indianapolis Gas matters with somebody in New York?

A. I do not, because I have a great many long distance calls every day. I don't remember.

744 Q. You don't recall anything about that conversation?

A. No.

Q. Who you talked with?

A. No.

Q. Or what was said during the conversation, or anything about it?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you recall whether you had any conversation with somebody in New York at the Chase Bank about the fact that the Indiana National Bank had wired $168,575.00 to the Chase National Bank to pay the Indiana Gas coupons?

A. I don't recall.

Q. You do not remember anything about that?

A. No.

Cross-Examination by W. H. Thompson, Esq.

Q. Mr. Brown, you were present at the meeting of March 11, 1936 at the office of the Chase National Bank in the city of New York?

Mr. Burns: I object. It seems to me this is not cross-examination.

745 The Court: I do not know what it will lead to. Go ahead. We won't have to call Mr. Brown back then.

Mr. Burns: May we understand this is part of the defense's testimony?

The Court: Proceed.

Q. I will ask you, Mr. Brown, if in that conference which has been testified to in some particulars by Mr. Beardslee, you did not tell Mr. Beardslee and Mr. Cole, the attorney for the Chase National Bank, that the City of Indianapolis had executed an agreement dated March 2, 1936 with the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. I don't recall, no.

Q. Didn't you tell them the payment was to be made under the terms of the agreement of $171,000.00 on the 25th day of March, 1936?

A. I don't know. I may. I can't remember.

Q. Do you remember that that was discussed at that meeting, Mr. Brown?

A. What?

Q. Don't you remember the question of the payment which was to be made by the City to the Indianapolis 746 Gas Company was discussed at that meeting of March 11th?

A. I don't remember. I can't remember the facts.

Q. Do you remember anything that occurred at that meeting?

A. No.

Mr. Thompson: That is all.

The Court: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

747 PAUL C. BEARDSLEE, a witness on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being recalled, testified as follows:

Cross-Examination by W. H. Thompson, Esq.

* * * * * *

760 Q. At the meeting of March 11, 1936 Mr. Higgins or Mr. Brown or both of them told you, as you have already stated, that the City of Indianapolis had entered into an agreement with the Indianapolis Gas Company dated March 2, 1936?

A. Yes, they did tell us about that.

Q. And they told you that under the terms of that agreement the City of Indianapolis was to pay $171,575.00 to the Indianapolis Gas Company, plus the Trustee's charges for disbursing the interest on the bonds, and that that payment was to be made on or before March 25, 1936?

A. I don't recall that at all.

Q. Didn't you discuss at that meeting, Mr. Beardslee, the question of whether the Indianapolis Gas Company ought to accept that money, and whether you, as Trustee, ought to accept it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was it ever discussed later?

A. No, never was discussed as to whether we should accept it.

761 Q. They told you certain payments were to be made by the City under that agreement?

A. They told us generally of the terms of the agreement.

Q. Then you knew before there had been some delay or trouble about these interest payments being made by the City of Indianapolis because you had sent a wire on October 1st?

A. You say "before". When do you mean?

Q. I mean before this agreement of March 2nd was executed.

A. Sure. If the funds were not in our hands a few days before the interest payment it is our practice to send out a wire.

Q. You had been told of the agreement of the City. Did you make any investigation or any inquiry then or later as to the sources of the money which you received in a letter from the Indianapolis Gas Company on March 28, 1936?

A. No, we didn't make any further inquiry. The check came.

Q. You knew it had been paid by the City under the terms of some sort of an agreement?

A. I didn't know what the agreement was.

Q. Didn't you have any curiosity about that agreement?

762 A. Those funds were paid to us merely as agents of a company.

The Court: As agent of what company?

The Witness: Of the Indianapolis Gas Company.

Mr. Burns: Not as Trustee of the mortgage.

Q. Not as Trustee of the mortgage?

A. No, I think it was merely an agency arrangement, the payment of those coupon funds.

Q. In other words you say, the coupons being payable at the office of the Chase National Bank when the Indianapolis Gas Company forwarded this money here, you were simply acting as an agent? You did not try to close your eyes to this transaction, did you, Mr. Beardslee?

A. We did not close our eyes, no.

Q. Did not the Chase National Bank, laying aside its banking connections now, but as Trustee under the mortgage, have a vital interest in knowing what was going on in this picture?

A. Yes, I would say that we did have an interest.

Q. When was the first time you knew the City had denied the validity of this lease?

763 A. I think it was November—the first time we really knew it was about November, 1935.

Q. You had written a letter in September in which it was stated someone had directed your attention to the fact the City had abrogated the lease?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you investigate that?

A. We asked the City to send us a copy of their reply.

Q. Do you read the Wall Street Journal?

A. No.

Q. Do you pay any attention to the market prices of the bonds under the mortgages of which your Company is Trustee?

A. No, sir.

Q. Does anyone in the Chase Bank have any more intimate or direct contact with this matter than you?

A. Not that I know of. We don't follow the prices of bonds.

Q. Don't you follow the general financial news of the country to know what is going on?

A. I read the daily newspapers, the New York papers. I never read the Wall Street Journal.

Q. You knew late in September, 1935 someone had 764 advised you that the City had denied the validity of this lease. The language used in the letter that you wrote is "abrogated the lease."

A. Didn't I say it was newspaper reports?

Q. Had you seen newspaper reports before then?

A. Yes, I think I had seen a newspaper report, but it was nothing constructive about a newspaper report—I mean you couldn't—if we get an inkling from a newspaper report, naturally we would verify it with our principal, and that is the reason that letter of September, I think 19th, 1935, was written.

Q. Your first position as Trustee for this mortgage was you would not bring this suit unless you were indemnified?

A. That is correct.

Q. And then later when you submitted the question to the Baker firm as to whether the expenses of maintaining this litigation would be a charge ahead of the mortgage debt on the mortgaged property, you agreed to bring the suit without indemnification. Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you were not indemnified by anyone?

A. That is true.

765 Q. Who has paid the costs of this litigation, if you know?

A. Well, I guess that Chase Bank has paid the costs so far.

Q. Do you know whether that is true or not?

A. I know we have paid some costs of this litigation.

Mr. Burns: The Citizens Gas and Coke Utility paid a substantial amount of it.

Mr. Thompson: Yes, we gave a check for $450.00 for costs on appeal, if that is what you refer to.

The Court: That was after the reversal?

Mr. Thompson: That was after the reversal, and I might say we were not allowed much more than a day's time in which to do it.

Q. The insurance companies were present at this meeting of March 11th, were they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Rowe, representing the Massachusetts Mutual?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Kugler, representing the New England Mutual?

A. That is correct.

766 Q. Did they say anything about your taking the sum of $171,575.00 from the Indianapolis Gas Company that was to be paid under this agreement of March 2nd?

A. Not to my knowlege.

Q. Did they make any objection to it?

A. I don't have any recollection of that question being discussed, even.

Q. Did you make any objection—

A. (Interposing) No.

Q. (Continuing) —at that time to the Indianapolis Gas Company going ahead and performing that agreement?

A. The agreement was already made at that time.

Q. I know, but it had not been executed yet, had it?

A. Wait a minute.

Q. It had not been performed or carried out?

A. Yes.

Q. The writing had been executed, but you did not make any objection to the City of Indianapolis or to the Indianapolis Gas Company about the City proceeding with paying money under the terms of that agreement? Never have you made any?

A. No. We were just protecting the rights of our Bondholders.

767 Q. You saw nothing inimical to your Bondholders in taking that money?

A. No, I think it belonged to the Bondholders.

Q. You saw nothing inimical to the rights of the Bondholders in making deposits in escrow—

Mr. Burns: I object to the question, as a matter of opinion.

Q. You saw nothing inimical to the interests of the Bondholders in the City paying this money into escrow so if the Trustee won the suit the Bondholders would get the money?

A. No, I don't see anything wrong with that.

Q. You thought that was a good thing for the Bondholders?

A. I didn't say that.

Q. But you saw nothing wrong in it?

A. Saw nothing wrong in it.

Q. You were very much interested as to whether these payments were being regularly and promptly made by the City of Indianapolis?

A. After we heard of its execution, yes.

Q. And wrote each time a payment was due,—you 768 wrote either to the Indianapolis Gas Company or to the Indiana National Bank inquiring whether in fact the payment had been made?

A. That is true.

Q. You never expressed any dissent to the City?

A. Only by bringing the bill of complaint.

Q. Of course. Aside from that?

A. That is all.

The Court: When was this complaint filed?

The Witness: In June, 1936.

Mr. Thompson: June 6, 1936.

Q. You never learned extensions had been made by the City of Indianapolis to the distributing system of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. I never knew anything about that until I testified yesterday, I think it was.

Q. Are you also the registrar of this bond issue as well as the Trustee?

A. Yes, I think we are.

Q. You never asked to certify any bonds on account of the additions and betterments so made?

769 A. Within the last year or so, do you mean?

Q. I am talking about those made by the City of Indianapolis at any time.

A. We have never certified any bonds on improvements made by the City I know of.

Q. You know, of course, those additions were made in pursuance of letters exchanged between the Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis?

A. I have learned of it.

Q. You see nothing inimical to the Bondholders in the City having added $95,000.00 to this property, do you?

Mr. Burns: I object to the question. It merely calls for an opinion.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Thompson: That is all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Beardslee, Mr. Thompson called your attention to interrogatory No. 2 which was propounded to you, which reads: "At whose request did you bring this action?

Please answer fully the names of each person or cor-
770 poration who requested this action be commenced, whether Bondholders of the Indianapolis Gas Company or others." At whose request did you bring this action?

A. The Bondholders.

Q. The New England Mutual?

A. And the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company.

Q. And those were the people at whose request you brought the action?

A. Yes.

Q. When Mr. Higgins asked you whether you would bring the action, what did you tell him?

A. We told him that if the Bondholders asked us to do it, we would. That was the final answer.

Q. Would you have brought the action at the request of the Indianapolis Gas Company if the Bondholders had not requested you to bring it?

A. Certainly not.

Q. You have stated that Mr. Higgins, when he came to New York on the 10th of April, did not bring with him any bill of complaint which was referred to in his previous letter of April 4th, is that right?

A. That is true.

771 Q. Did you ever see any bill of complaint or draft of bill of complaint or any provisions for a bill of complaint prepared by Mr. Higgins?

A. No, I never saw such a document.

Q. Mr. Thompson asked you whether the Trustee has certified any additional bonds for additions and betterments made by the City during the period since September 9, 1935, and you said it had not. Is that true?

A. That is true.

Q. As a matter of fact, the Trustee has not certified and additional bonds for additions and betterments since 1932, has it?

A. Somewhere along there; I do not know the exact time.

780 The Court: Do you have much more evidence?

Mr. Burns: Very little.

In connection with the Exhibits 58, 59, 67 and 76, which were introduced yesterday, they were not signed copies and it has been agreed by counsel that the signatures may be supplied.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Burns: I take it the Court doesn't care to have these depositions read?

The Court: No, not at this time.

Mr. Burns: We offer in evidence the direct examination and the exhibits identified in connection therewith, in the deposition of Robert E. Simond, which has been previously filed in this case, and ask to have the—

The Court: Was he one of the parties?

Mr. Burns: No, he is the manager of the Municipal Bond Department of Halsey Stuart & Company.

(Continued.) —and ask to have this marked—does your Honor wish to have the deposition marked with an exhibit number?

The Court: I think it had better be marked, per-781 haps. Do you have several depositions?

Mr. Burns: There is just one here.

Mr. Thompson: Your Honor, we have filed a motion to suppress this deposition as well as the depositions taken in New York. I assume that your Honor will dispose of the questions arising on this motion to suppress—

The Court: That is right.

Mr. Thompson: (Continued.) —at some later time?

The Court: Yes, and you may show the offer at this time to read the entire deposition, or is this the cross-examination?

Mr. Thompson: He only offered the direct.

The Court: You are not asking that the cross-examination be read?

Mr. Thompson: I will when it comes to my turn.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Burns: We offer the direct examination and the exhibits attached thereto in Mr. Simond's deposition as PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 133.

We offer in evidence, as PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 134, the direct examination and the exhibits attached there-782 to in the depositions of Chester M. Clark and Joseph Edwards Baker, taken in New York.

We offer as PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 135 the brief of the City of Indianapolis and certain other defendants, in the Supreme Court of Indiana, in the case of Allen G. Williams against Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, et al.

Mr. Thompson: To which the defendant City objects on the ground that no admission which is signed by a lawyer can bind his client in litigation other than that in which the admission is made, and no statements in this brief can foist a lease on the City of Indianapolis.

The Court: What is the purpose?

Mr. Burns: Well, if the Court please, this is generally in connection with the other evidence that is introduced by the stipulation in the Williams case, to show what issues were presented and decided by the Court in that case.

The Court: Well, haven't you offered the pleadings in the case?

Mr. Burns: Yes.

783 The Court: Well, they would show the Court what the issues were, would they not? I doubt whether a brief of a lawyer, representing a party, is competent.

Mr. Burns: Well, it seems to me it is clearly competent.

The Court: I will take that up later on when we come to pass on all of these exhibits that you have offered.

Mr. Burns: Well, now, if the Court please, in connection with the rulings that have been reserved on the admission of various exhibits offered by the plaintiff, may we have the understanding that, to the extent that any of those exhibits are excluded, they may appear in the record as offers to prove?

The Court: I want to do this either at the conclusion of the plaintiffs' case or all of the entire case; then take up each exhibit and see which ones are read and the ones that are not, and take the objections up and pass upon them at that time. It might be well to do that at the conclusion of all of the evidence unless there is some-784 thing that would come up in the plaintiffs' case which would raise a question. That is, we can begin at the first of these exhibits that are offered, and I will pass on them all at once.

Mr. Burns: It has been called to my attention that we failed yesterday to offer the minutes of The Indianapolis Gas Company of May 12, 1936, Exhibits 123-A, 123-B and 123-C, and we now offer those minutes.

The Court: Those are the minutes that have the copies of the letters?

Mr. Burns: Yes.

The Court: Is there any objection?

Mr. Thompson: None whatever.

The Court: Let them be read.

The said pages of minutes, so offered, respectively marked for identification PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBITS NOS. 123-A, 123-B AND 123-C, were admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Burns: I would like to call Mr. Yule back.

The Court: Come around, Mr. Yule.

785 WILLIAM J. YULE, a witness on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being recalled, testified as follows:

Mr. Burns: Now, without encumbering the record, I want to ask Mr. Yule again about the telephone conversation of which he overheard Mr. Brown's end of the conversation, here. As I understand it, that has been brought out with some idea of charging the Chase Bank with knowledge and it seems to me Mr. Yule can testify as to what he heard as limiting what possible knowledge could have come to the Chase Bank through that conversation.

Now, I think, as your Honor said, it is clearly hearsay that Mr. Brown was talking to the Chase Bank because Mr. Yule doesn't know that and if—

The Court: There is no evidence as to whom he was talking. Did he talk to Mr. Beardslee?

Mr. Burns: Oh, no, no, no. Mr. Yule said, I think in response to Mr. Higgins' question, that he called up somebody at the Chase Bank.

The Court: I don't think it would be competent. Mr. Brown was on the stand and he remembered nothing about it.

786 Mr. Burns: I thought, if it is relied upon as giving any knowledge to the Chase Bank, it seems to me—

The Court: Well, of course, it would not be notice unless there is some evidence of what took place. There is no evidence of that at all.

Mr. Burns: That is all, Mr. Yule.

Witness excused.

The Court: If the defendant offers any evidence as to that conversation, then perhaps, in rebuttal, it might be competent to call this witness to show what he heard, but in the absence of it, I would say that the mere fact that a telephone conversation took place and no evidence of what the contents of the conversation—

Offer to Prove.

Mr. Burns: Well, we offer to prove by Mr. Yule that the only information which Mr. Brown conveyed over the phone was that a check had been wired or money 787 had been wired by The Indiana National Bank to the Chase Bank to pay the coupons, and he waited on the phone to see whether the Chase Bank had received the check, and that there was no conversation, and nothing that Mr. Brown said, that related either to the dispute between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City about the lease or to the circumstances under which the money had been paid to the Indianapolis Gas.

The Court: That is your offer?

Mr. Burns: That is our offer.

The plaintiff rests both cases.

And the plaintiffs here rested.

790 Indianapolis, Indiana,
Friday, March 3, 1939,
One-thirty O'clock P. M.

The Court met pursuant to adjournment and the trial of the cause was resumed as follows:

Whereupon, the defendants, City of Indianapolis and the individual defendants who are members of the Board of Trustees and Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, to maintain the issues on their behalf, offered and introduced the following evidence, to-wit:

Mr. Thompson: Is it your Honor's desire that before we proceed with the introduction of the testimony on behalf of the City that I should state my objections to these exhibits?

791 The Court: I should rather take them up separately, and then make a separate objection, or groups, and I will pass on them then.

Mr. Thompson: You would rather do that at the conclusion of the case?

The Court: I think I would rather, if there is no objection. If it becomes necessary to pass upon any one before the conclusion of it, why, we will take it up.

WILLIAM J. YULE, a witness being recalled on behalf of the City of Indianapolis and certain individual defendants, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. You have testified before in this case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are Secretary of The Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you an instrument which has been identified as City's Exhibit No. 9, rejection of an assignment of lease, and I will ask you to state to the Court whether that instrument, or a copy of it, was served 792 on The Indianapolis Gas Company on September 9, 1935.

A. Well, I think so.

Q. It was handed to you personally, was it not, by Mr. Rabb?

A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson: That is all.

The Defendants, City of Indianapolis and the individual defendants who are members of the Board of Trustees and Directors of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, offer in evidence an instrument identified as City's Exhibit No. 1, which is a certificate by John M. Layton, Clerk of the City of Indianapolis, authenticated by the Judge of the Circuit Court.

The Court: Is that the exhibit you just had?

Mr. Thompson: No, your Honor.

Mr. Burns: What is the exhibit number?

Mr. Thompson: No. 1.

The Court: Any objection?

Mr. Burns: Yes, we object to it. It is wholly irrelevant and immaterial and not binding in any way on 793 the Trustee or the bondholders.

The Court: What is the substance of the certificate?

(Mr. Thompson here read City's Exhibit No. 1.)

Mr. Burns: I object on the further ground that the certificate contains many conclusions as to the effect of supposed legislation and so forth, and is not a certificate of fact.

Mr. Higgins: The Indianapolis Gas Company also objects to the admission of this evidence on the same grounds as already stated.

The Court: Objection overruled.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 1, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants offer in evidence Exhibit No. 2, which is a similar certificate by Martin H. Walpole, Executive Secretary and Clerk of the Department of Public Works of the City of Indianapolis, and showing that no such action has been taken by the Board of Public Works.

794 The Court: The same objection?

Mr. Burns: The same objection.

The Court: Show the same ruling and read in evidence.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 2, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants offer in evidence City's Exhibit No. 3, which is a certificate from Charles S. Rauh, Secretary of the Board of Trustees, to the same effect.

(Mr. Thompson here read City's Exhibit No. 3.)

The Court: These statements as to the sale of bonds or securities were made before the taking of the property owner. Are there exhibits in evidence of any action of the City?

Mr. Thompson: There is a deposition that has not been read to your Honor.

The Court: That was after?

Mr. Thompson: That was after the sale of the Utility District bonds, before the resale of them and before 795 the City had taken the property.

The Court: I see. Let that be read in evidence, with the same objection.

Mr. Elam: We object further that the evidence already admitted shows the certificate is not true. The evidence before your Honor shows that the Department did authorize the sale of revenue bonds and that the City did authorize advertisements, and those advertisements constituted the representations.

The man is merely certifying to his conclusion as to what the written instruments mean that are before the Court, and for the Court to interpret, and it is not for the Secretary to say what the instruments mean.

The Court: All right, let it be read.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 3, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants offer in evidence City's Exhibit 4, which is a similar signed certificate from Roy Sahm, Secretary of the Board of Directors for 796 the Utilities Department.

The Court: The same objection and ruling. Let the record show that both The Indianapolis Gas Company and the plaintiffs make the same objection.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 4, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants offer in evidence City's Exhibit No. 6-A, which is a copy of the interrogatories propounded by the defendant, City of Indianapolis, and the individual defendants, to the plaintiff.

The Court: And the answers?

Mr. Thompson: The interrogatories only.

The Court: Any objection to these?

Mr. Higgins: Interrogatories of what?

Mr. Thompson: Interrogatories of the plaintiff in No. 1844.

The Court: Were these the interrogatories to which the objection was overruled just a few weeks ago?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, your Honor.

797 The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 6-A, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: Now, I am going to offer 6-B, the answers. The same defendants offer as City's Exhibit No. 6-B all of the answers to the interrogatories identified as Exhibit 6-A, which have not already been introduced in evidence by the plaintiffs. I say that, your Honor, because certain of these letters have already gone in.

The Court: I am not certain. The ruling has been withheld on some of them; for instance, 12.

Mr. Burns: They substantially amount to a duplication between the letters shown in the answers to interrogatories propounded to the plaintiff and the answers on those propounded to the Indianapolis Gas; but there are some letters—

The Court: I say there should be no duplication. Let 6-A and 6-B be read in evidence.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT 6-B, was admitted and read in evidence.

798 Mr. Thompson: Now, as 5-A, the same defendants offer in evidence the interrogatories propounded to The Indianapolis Gas Company and also Exhibit 5-B, the answers of The Indianapolis Gas Company to the interrogatories, except I do not offer any portion of the answers which have already been offered in evidence.

The Court: Any objection?

Mr. Higgins: Not at all.

The Court: Let them be read.

The said documents, so offered, respectively marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBITS 5-A and 5-B, were admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants now offer in evidence the minutes of a special meeting of the Board of Directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company held at Indianapolis, Indiana, on September 26, 1935, identified as City's Exhibit 7-A.

The Court: Any objection, Mr. Higgins?

799 Mr. Higgins: May I see that just a second?

Mr. Thompson: I have a copy of this I am offering that I can give Mr. Burns.

Mr. Burns: We have no objection to these minutes to show the action was taken by the Board of Directors for the Utilities, but we do object to them as being any evidence of the facts recited therein.

Mr. Thompson: This is The Indianapolis Gas Company.

Mr. Burns: It doesn't make any difference.

Mr. Higgins: Objected to as legal conclusions therein set out.

The Court: Of course, I think it is competent, as I stated yesterday, I believe it was, with reference to this contract, upon the theory that the defendant was paying under this contract and under the lease. That is competent for that purpose. Just the effect, I don't know, but I think it is only fair to show why the City is making those payments.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 7-A, was admitted and read in evidence.

800 Mr. Thompson: The same defendants offer in evidence City's Exhibit 7-B, being a photostatic copy of the minutes of an adjourned meeting of the Board of Directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company held in Indianapolis, Indiana on September 30, 1935.

The Court: Any objection?

Mr. Higgins: No objection.

The Court: Let that be read.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 7-B, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants offer in evidence—

Mr. Burns: I make the same objection, that we object to the minutes insofar as they are offered to prove any facts recited in them. I make no objection as to what action took place at the directors' meeting of the company.

Mr. Higgins: We understand that they are being admitted on that phase.

Mr. Thompson: I am offering it generally for 801 whatever it proves.

Mr. Burns: Do I understand the Court overruled my objection?

The Court: I have not passed on this one.

Mr. Burns: That is incompetent to prove the facts recited.

The Court: I am admitting it for whatever it is worth. As I say, the action by The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City certainly is evidence tending to show why the City made those payments. Before this, as I understand the record, the City had already served notice that it would not be bound by the lease; then, of course, this evidence will show—be competent to show why.

Mr. Burns: What I have in mind is this: in almost all resolutions there are a lot of whereas clauses which set forth a lot of reasonings why the action is taken, and this recitation seems to me clearly is not competent evidence of the facts stated in there.

The Court: I am not prepared to say on that.

Mr. Burns: We want to have our objection to each of these exhibits insofar as they are offered, for that 802 purpose.

The Court: Let the record show the objection overruled.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants offer in evidence, as City's Exhibit 7-C, a photostatic copy of the minutes of the special meeting of the Board of Directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company held in Indianapolis, Indiana on November 6, 1935.

The Court: What are the contents of those?

Mr. Thompson: They contain a number of things. They contain correspondence between the City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company, and also the minutes which contain the authorization for the employment of the Baker firm, the exchange of correspondence between the Baker firm and The Indianapolis Gas Company. I am not sure, it may be that letter has already been introduced by Mr. Burns. If it has, I shall not offer it now.

The Court: Any objection?

Mr. Burns: We make the same objection.

The said document, so offered, marked for identifi-
803 cation CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 7-C, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants offer in evidence the City's Exhibit 7-D, a photostatic copy of the minutes of a called meeting of the Board of Directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company, held in Indianapolis, Indiana on March 4, 1936.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 7-D, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants offer in evidence, as City's Exhibit 7-E, a photostatic copy of the minutes of a called meeting of the Board of Directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company, held in Indianapolis, Indiana on April 3, 1936.

And the next one is 7-F, which is minutes of a meeting of the Board of Directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company of May 12, '36, but I am not offering that because an offer of the same minutes has already been made by Mr. Burns.

The Court: What are those exhibits?

Mr. Burns: 123-A, B and C.

804 The Court: If the record does not show those exhibits are read in evidence, let it be shown at this time, 123-A, B and C.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 7-E, was admitted in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants now offer in evidence City Exhibit 7-G, the minutes of a called meeting of the Board of Directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company held on June 3rd, 1936.

The Court: Any objections?

Mr. Higgins: Show all those same—

Mr. Thompson: Yes.

Mr. Burns: We object to that on the same ground; and I should like to state this general objection to all these exhibits, and that is that any action taken by The Indianapolis Gas Company or by the City of Indianapolis could in no way affect or prejudice the rights of the bondholders and Trustee. This is the same question we raised before, and we want all these minutes of The Indianapolis Gas Company to be received subject to that same objection.

The Court: The last may be read in evidence.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT 7-G, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants now offer in evidence an instrument identified as City's Exhibit No. 8, which is a general ordinance of the City of Indianapolis, being No. 82, for the year 1935, and the substance of which is a ratification by the City of Indianapolis, through its Common Council, of the action taken by the Board of Directors for the Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, in taking over the property of the Citizens Gas Company, and in rejecting the assignment of The Indianapolis Gas Company lease.

Mr. Burns: We object to that as not binding on the Trustee or the bondholders; could not affect the obligations of the City after the City had accepted the property subject to all obligations of the Citizens Gas Company.

Mr. Higgins: And The Indianapolis Gas Company also objects.

Mr. Ewbank: What is the date of this ordinance?

Mr. Thompson: October 21, 1935.

Mr. Burns: The same objection.

Mr. Higgins: The same objection. It cannot affect the rights of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

The Court: Objection overruled.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification

CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 8, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants now offer in evidence an instrument identified as City's Exhibit No. 9, which is a rejection of the assignment of the lease and refusal to assume, executed on the 9th day of September, 1935, signed by the Board of Directors of the Utilities for the City of Indianapolis, by H. L. Dithmer, its President.

The Court: The same objection?

Mr. Burns: The same objection. Any resolution of rejection could not possibly affect the bondholders or Trustee.

807 The Court: Of course, that is true if it is a valid lease, but I think it is competent to show what action was taken, so the Court will have all before it. Objection overruled.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 9, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants now offer in evidence an instrument identified as City's Exhibit 10, which is twelve sheets, being photostatic copies of the record of the Utility District of the City of Indianapolis, showing entries made in connection with payments and the amounts, quarterly, of the bond interest and stock interest, Federal taxes and other items.

The Court: Is that the same that was offered yesterday?

Mr. Burns: We object to this as a purely self-serving declaration; simply entries made in the Utility District records, showing how it charged the items that have been paid to The Indianapolis Gas Company, or put in 808 escrow, being purely a self-serving declaration.

The Court: Are those the same amounts stipulated yesterday that were paid?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Burns: These include all charges for all money that has been put in escrow?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, but they begin here, December 31, '35, an amount equal to the stock interest. The purpose of this, your Honor, is to show the kind of entries made in our books at the time those payments were made.

The Court: Has it been stipulated—I have not read the stipulation at all—the amount that has been placed in escrow and the times that it was placed, and the amount there at this time? Is that in your stipulation?

Mr. Burns: The stipulation covers what has been paid to escrow. This is simply a self-serving declaration showing what they put on their books.

The Court: I am not exactly certain that is competent. It simply goes to confirm the position of the City that it acted in accordance with its understanding of the agreement made back in September, 1935. I think that would be all the purpose it would serve.

Mr. Thompson: That is the purpose of our offering it. We show we did enter into certain agreements between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis in respect to certain payments to be made for the use and occupancy of this property. Now it is our claim that all of these payments were made in accordance with the agreement; and we are offering to show the entries that were made on our books currently, which show our interpretation of that agreement; and it seems to me—

The Court: Any objection on the part of The Indianapolis Gas Company?

Mr. Higgins: Purely as a self-serving declaration, whatever they put on their books. It is already stipulated when they paid the amounts.

The Court: The contracts are in evidence?

Mr. Higgins: They are all in evidence.

The Court: This is in the nature of a self-serving declaration, yet it might go to further carry out the position of the City as to how it understood the agreement. I don't think it will hurt anyone. Let it go in for that purpose and that only.

The said documents, so offered, collectively marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 10, were admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants offer in evidence an instrument identified as City's Exhibit No. 11, which is a transcript of the Department of Public Utilities of Indianapolis, Indiana in connection with the issuance and sale of eight million dollars of Utility District revenue bonds. These contain the resolutions authorizing them, the advertising and the entire transaction.

The Court: That was made at the time of taking over the property or just prior thereto?

Mr. Thompson: Prior to it, your Honor. The bids were opened on May 28 and the bid was awarded to Halsey Stuart Company and Otis Company on the 29th of May, and the property was not taken over until September 9th following.

811 The Court: That was for the purpose of raising money to take the property over?

Mr. Thompson: That is right.

Mr. Ewbank: I didn't get what that was.

Mr. Thompson: It is a transcript of all the proceedings had by the City of Indianapolis, through its Department of Utilities, in connection with offering for sale and the sale of the eight million dollars of Indianapolis Utility District revenue bonds.

The Court: Any objection?

Mr. Burns: I should like to have the record show, in connection with this exhibit, we do not object to it except as it may be offered as evidence of—independent evidence of facts recited therein; but we should like to have the record show that this is an exact copy of Exhibit 6, which was identified but not offered, in connection with the deposition of Mr. Simond, in Chicago; and Mr. Thompson agreed there to save the trouble—all counsel for defendants agreed there, to save the trouble of making a copy to attach to the deposition, that we would produce it here.

May I see it?

812 Mr. Thompson: Certainly.

Mr. Burns: And that it could be—

The Court: It is not necessary to be read in connection with the deposition.

Mr. Burns: It is agreeable to have it show this is an accurate copy of the same document?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, sir.

The Court: Let the exhibit be read.

Mr. Burns: Mr. Rabb says it is a duplicate original.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 11, was admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants now offer in evidence, as City's Exhibit No. 12, Pages 178 to 236, both inclusive, of the minute book of the Board of Directors for the Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, in which there is set forth the minutes of a meeting of that Board on September 9, 1935, the day when the City took over the property of the Citizens Gas Company.

The Court: Have you had opportunity to examine it?

813 Mr. Burns: I have had opportunity, generally, to go through those minute books at various times. We object to it, first, insofar as it is offered as any evidence of the facts recited therein.

The Court: I think you can have that objection to all of these, as far as the Court is concerned. Of course, we have to determine what the legal effect is.

Mr. Burns: We would also object insofar as it is offered to establish the so-called rejection of the lease. We believe the evidence shows the lease was accepted and the property was accepted.

Mr. Higgins: We have not had opportunity to examine it. May we have that right?

The Court: I will reserve the ruling on this last exhibit, and he can examine it.

Mr. Thompson: The same defendants offer in evidence a letter dated September 10, 1935, identified as City's Exhibit No. 13, from the firm of Smith, Hornbrook, Remster & Smith to Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson, acknowledging the physical delivery of the resolution for the 814 rejection of the assignment of the lease.

The Court: Any objection?

Mr. Burns: Only the same objection we have to the whole proceeding, so far as this rejection is incompetent. We have no particular objection to this exhibit. Perhaps it would save time if we objected to this whole line of evidence, so far as it relates to the rejection of the lease, rather than make an objection to every separate document.

(CITY'S EXHIBIT NO. 13 admitted and read.)

STIPULATION.

Mr. Thompson: Will it be agreed that, at the time Exhibit No. 13 was written on September 10, 1935, Mr. Henry H. Hornbrook was a member of the firm of Smith, Remster, Hornbrook & Smith, which signed this letter, and that at that time he was attorney for the Citizens Gas Company and a member of its Board of Directors and of the Executive Committee?

Mr. Burns: We will so agree.

The Court: Let the record show that that is stipulated.

Mr. Thompson: Your Honor, there has been of-815 fered in evidence here, as Plaintiffs' Exhibit No. 1, certain portions of a stipulation, signed by counsel for all of the parties to this cause.

The defendants, City of Indianapolis and the individual defendants who are members of its Board of Directors and Board of Trustees for Utilities, now offer in evidence all the remaining portions of the stipulation, identified as Exhibit No. 1, which were not offered by the plaintiffs, and all of the exhibits, attached to that stipulation, which have not already been offered.

The Court: I would like to take that up at the time we take up the offers of the plaintiff, so that we can go through the stipulation and see what they are.

Mr. Burns: And take up the objections which we wish to make at that time?

The Court: That is right, and the objections which I understand Mr. Thompson wishes to make to the offer of some of the exhibits that were offered by the plaintiffs.

Mr. Thompson: Will you be sworn, Mr. Higgins?

816 WILLIAM R. HIGGINS, a witness called on behalf of the Defendant, City of Indianapolis, the individual defendants who are members of the Board of Trustees for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, and the individual defendants who are members of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. Who is the Chairman of the Board and who is the Secretary?

Q. Have you given a substantial portion of your time and attention to the work of the Board of Directors and are you familiar with the action taken by it in the several matters involving the transfer to the City of Indianapolis of the property formerly owned by the Citizens Gas Company?

A. Yes, sir.

826 Q. I have shown you, before you came into the court room, Mr. Elsey, an instrument identified as Exhibit "B", attached to the City's answer and counterclaim in this case, which is a circular issued by Otis & Company—no, Halsey Stuart & Company in connection with the resale of Utility District Bonds. You are familiar with that circular?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would tell the Court whether or not the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities had anything whatever to do with the issuance or circulation of that circular.

A. No.

Mr. Burns: I object to that. It calls for a conclusion, very obviously.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. You say you had nothing to do with it?

A. No, sir.

Q. What instructions, if any, did you give to your attorneys in connection with the resale of bonds purchased by the City from Otis & Company and Halsey Stuart & Company?

827 A. We had no interest in the resale of the bonds.

Q. What is the fact as to whether you had a conversation in my office—

Mr. Thompson: Withdraw the question.

Q. These Utility District bonds were offered for sale May 28, 1935? Is that correct?

A. That is my recollection, yes.

Q. And the joint bid of Otis & Company and Halsey Stuart & Company was accepted on the next day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know Mr. R. E. Simond, President of Halsey Stuart & Company?

A. I met him once.

Q. Yes, and you also met Mr. Cyrus Eaton of Otis & Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you meet those two gentlemen in my office after the Utility District advertised the sale of its revenue bonds and before the bond offering was made with these two houses?

A. Yes, sir.

828 Q. Was I also present at that meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would state what, if anything, was said at that meeting in connection with the request, by these two bond houses, that the Utility District approve a circular which they proposed to issue.

A. We said that we would not approve it.

Q. Well, did they ask you to approve it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said—

The Court: I understand they were present at this conference.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. And you said that the Utility District would not approve it and would not have anything to do with the resale of the revenue bonds?

A. That is what we told them.

Q. Did I say anything in that conversation in connection with the statutory authority of the City in that matter?

A. Will you ask that question again?

829 Q. I want to know whether, in that conversation, where you and Mr. Simond and Mr. Eaton were present in my office, I said anything as to whether the City of Indianapolis had any statutory right to approve this circular for the resale of the bonds.

A. You said it did not have.

The Court: As I understand, this circular was prepared by Halsey Stuart?

Mr. Thompson: That is right.

Mr. Burns: The deposition shows, if the Court please, that it was prepared by Halsey Stuart and approved by Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson and marked "Approved" by Mr. Rabb.

Mr. Thompson: I will tell you what it shows.

The Court: Well, I can go into it.

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Simond admits, in his deposition, on cross examination, the conversation that I have just related to Mr. Elsey, and admits that he forwarded this to our firm as attorneys and did not even address us as attorneys for the Utility District because I had told him that the City of Indianapolis would not approve the bond circular.

830 Now, that is what the deposition shows.

The Court: Does it have an approval of Mr. Rabb on it?

Mr. Thompson: There is written, in pencil, on a bond circular, the word "Approved, T. R. S."

The Court: "T. R. S."?

Mr. Thompson: "T. R. & S."—Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson—an abbreviation.

Mr. Burns: "By A. L. Rabb"?

Mr. Thompson: I think that is probably correct. I said that the initials were the initials of our firm.

Q. Did the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, at any time, formally or informally, authorize any representation or statement to be made by anyone in your behalf or that of the City in connection with the resale of such revenue bonds by Otis & Company or Halsey Stuart & Company?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Burns: I object, if the Court please. If the 831 inquiry is being made as to statements that were made by the Utility District, in connection with the offering of these bonds, to Otis & Company and Halsey Stuart & Company, certainly they were entitled to rely on those statements in marketing the bonds, statements that had been made to them, and, when they so made these statements,—the Utility District made these statements to the purchasers, without doubt, about the property and so forth that they were describing as a basis for the issuance of these bonds—they were necessarily making representations to those purchasers that those purchasers were authorized to use in the resale of the same bonds.

The Court: Well, there are so many exhibits that I don't know—

Mr. Burns: I appreciate that, but this question obviously calls for the witness's conclusion. It is about a large mass of material rather than any statement of fact, at all.

The Court: I think he may answer the question and it can be considered along with all the other evidence. Go ahead.

832 Q. In connection with the resale of the Utility Revenue Bonds by Otis & Company and Halsey Stuart, I want to ask you specifically whether the Board made, or authorized anyone in its behalf to make, either formally or informally—I am speaking now of the authorization—anyone of the following representations to any person:

First: That upon the acquisition of the Citizens Gas Company property, the City of Indianapolis would control the gas business in Indianapolis, supplying the entire domestic and commercial gas requirements of the City of Indianapolis and its suburbs;

Second: That the Citizens Gas Company held a lease for ninety-nine years, covering the property and business of The Indianapolis Gas Company, thereby giving it control of the entire gas business of the City of Indianapolis and vicinity;

Third: That the property, covered by said lease from The Indianapolis Gas Company, had a depreciated physical value of $9,181,960 and a reproduction value of $12,734,090 as against which the capital value of said company's outstanding first consolidated mortgage five per cent gold bonds was $6,881,000 and the capital 833 value of its outstanding stock was $2,000,000;

Fourth: That, upon the acquisition of the entire property operated by the Citizens Gas Company, the City of Indianapolis would cause the same to be continuously operated as a gas system in an efficient manner and at a reasonable cost and would use all reasonable efforts to resist competition and maintain the exclusive right to serve gas in the City of Indianapolis and in Marion County and in the towns therein?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did your Board—

Mr. Burns: I would like to make the same objection to that question.

The Court: All right. Same ruling.

Q. Did your board cause an appraisal to be made by an independent engineer, as of January 1, 1935, of the cost of reproduction new and the depreciated value of the property of the Citizens Gas and Indianapolis Gas, all as referred to in the circular issued by Otis & Company and Halsey Stuart & Company?

A. No, sir.

834 Mr. Burns: Same objection.

The Court: Do you have that circular? I haven't seen it.

Mr. Thompson: I can give it to your Honor.

Mr. Burns: I can give you a copy (handing copy to the Court).

Q. Do you remember, Mr. Elsey, that two opinions were given in respect of the Utility District bonds that were sold by the Utility District?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of those was given by the firm of Matson, Ross, McCord & Clifford?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And whom did that firm represent?
A. It represented Otis & Company.
Q. And another was given by our firm?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is that correct?
A. Yes, sir.
835 The Court: By whom?
Mr. Thompson: By our firm.
Q. Representing the Utility District?
A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

837 Q. Mr. Elsey, will you state to the Court whether, at any time, the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis
838 authorized your counsel, Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson, in connection with the sale of Utility Revenue Bonds, the sale of which you have referred to, to give any opinion on the non-taxability of the income of those bonds for Federal income tax purposes?

Mr. Burns: I object, if the Court please. It asks, obviously, for a conclusion of law as to what authority was given.

The Court: Overruled.

A. We felt—

The Court: Just answer the question.

A. No, we never authorized it.

Q. Mr. Elsey, was your attention and that of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis directed to a mortgage, which had been executed by the Citizens Gas Company on July 1, 1912, under which there were outstanding, on September 9, 1935, $2,745,000 par value of first mortgage bonds, issued by the Citizens Gas Company?

A. Yes, sir.

839 Q. Was the attention of your Board also directed to the provisions of Subdivision 22(i) of the franchise contract between the City of Indianapolis and Alfred F. Potts, et al., subsequently assigned to the Citizens Gas Company, which reads as follows:

"If the plant and system of mains of said company shall not have became the property of said city by the cancellation of the certificate of subscribers and conveyance of such property to such city by the Board of Directors and Trustees of said Company on or before the expiration of the aforesaid period of said franchise, then said city by and through its Board of Public Works, upon the expiration of said franchise period shall have the right to pay any balance remaining due said certificate holders and the plant and property of said company shall be conveyed to said city as above provided to be owned and operated or owned and leased by it; or at the option of said city the Board of Directors of the corporate successor of the second parties shall, as heretofore provided, upon the conclusion of said franchise period, mortgage its plant and with the proceeds thereof or with 840 the mortgage notes issued in proper amounts pay off and discharge the amount due certificate holders and thereupon convey said plant to said city subject to such obligation and other legal obligations against said company."

I am asking you whether the Board's attention was directed to that.

A. It was.

Q. And did you seek the advice of your counsel as to whether the mortgage, executed by the Citizens Gas Company on July 1, 1912, to which I have referred, on which there were outstanding these bonds, was a valid mortgage or otherwise?

A. You said it was not—

Q. Yes.

A. (Continued)—but the holders of the mortgage had an equitable interest in the property.

Q. An equitable lien on the property?

A. An equitable lien because the money had been used for the benefit of the Citizens Gas Company.

Q. Now, the Board of Directors furnished the money—they issued the advertisement that is contained in 841 this stipulation? You have seen that advertisement about taking up these bonds?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I want you to tell the Court whether the Board of Directors, in making the payment of these bonds or, rather, in paying the amount of the bonds, acted in pursuance of the advice of your counsel and whether, without that advice, you would have made that payment?

A. We acted on our counsel's advice.

Q. Well, without that advice, would you have made that payment?

A. We would not have done it.

Q. As a practical matter, did the existence of this mortgage prevent the Citizens Gas Company from executing a mortgage upon its property to secure the money with which to pay off the precedent charges provided for in the franchise contract?

A. Our Board deemed it so.

Q. Yes. Now, following the receipt of this advice, to which I have just referred or you have just referred to, did the Board of Directors adopt a resolution, Exhibit 842 48 to the Stipulation in this case, and publish two notices, Exhibits 49 and 50 to the stipulation? I showed you those in my office.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state to the Court whether the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities of the City, at any time, recognized this mortgage as a valid obligation.

Mr. Burns: Oh, I object.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Thompson: Will you give me the Stipulation, please, Mr. Rabb? (Procuring Stipulation from Mr. Rabb.)

Q. I want to call your attention next, Mr. Elsey, to Subdivision 16 (a):

"The City caused the sum of $2,500,000 to be paid on or about July 1, 1935 for the retirement of all the Citizens Gas common stock, in full satisfaction of the common stockholders' interest in the property and assets of said company. Said $2,500,000 included $2,000,000 as the par value of said common stock and $500,000 as dividends 843 on said common stock at the rate of 10% per annum from January 1, 1933 to June 30, 1935. The City also caused the sum of $1,050,000 to be paid on or about September 1, 1935, for the redemption of all the Citizens Gas preferred stock, in full satisfaction of the preferred stockholders' interest in the property and assets of said company. Said $1,050,000 included $1,000,000 as the par value of said preferred stock and $50,000 as the premium of 5% on the redemption thereof required by the terms of said preferred stock. Citizens Gas paid all the dividends on said preferred stock up to the time of said redemption. All of said common stock was retired and all of said preferred stock was redeemed."

Now, I ask you, Mr. Elsey, whether, before the payments were made by the City of Indianapolis in accordance with the statements contained in Subdivision 16(a) of this Stipulation, your Board sought an opinion from your counsel as to whether your Board was legally bound to make those payments.

A. They did.

Mr. Burns: I object to that as wholly immaterial to any issue in this case.

844 The Court: Overruled. It goes to the fact of why those payments were made.

A. They did.

• • • • • •

848 Q. You had taken advice from us?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that advice oral or in writing?

A. I think it was oral.

Q. But what was the nature? What was the charagted of that advice? What was told you?

A. Well, we were to take over the property and we couldn't secure moneys to carry on the program without we discharge the obligations as provided for in the original covenant.

Q. Weren't you advised, in addition, Mr. Elsey, that it had been decided, in the Todd case, that, before the City of Indianapolis could take this property over, it had to discharge the precedent obligations to its stockholders?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The stockholders of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. Yes, sir.

849 Q. Evidence has been introduced in this case of certain payments made or authorized to be made by the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis to or on behalf of The Indianapolis Gas Company subsequent to September 9, 1935, and, in this connection, I ask you whether you are familiar with a resolution for the temporary use of property of The Indianapolis Gas Company, adopted September 9, 1935, by the Board of Directors for Utilities, which has been introduced in evidence here, and also certain correspondence exchanged between The Indianapolis Gas Company and your attorneys in connection with the payments so made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You may state whether the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities would have authorized any such payments to be made except for the adoption of such resolution and the exchange of such correspondence?

A. They would not.

Q. Has the Board of Directors ever made—and 850 by that I mean the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis—ever made or authorized to be made, any payments on account of interest or dividends or for any other purpose under the terms of said lease of September 30, 1913?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has the Board of Directors for Utilities of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis ever recognized in any way, formally or informally, the validity of said lease of September 30, 1913, between the Citizens Gas Company and The Indianapolis Gas Company or its enforcibility against the City of Indianapolis?

Mr. Burns: I object.

A. No, sir.

Mr. Burns: It calls for a conclusion.

The Court: Let the answer go out. Objection sustained.

Q. Before the transfer to the City, as Successor
851 Trustee, did the Board give any instructions to its attorneys in connection with said lease of September 30, 1913?

First, I ask you whether you gave any instructions.

A. Yes.

Q. What instructions did you give?

Mr. Burns: I object to that as not binding on the Bondholders or the Trustee.

The Court: Overruled, if that is the only objection.

A. We gave as our reason that we were not bound by the lease.

Q. Well, did you give any instructions to your attorneys, Mr. Elsey, as to what they were to do in connection with the lease?

A. They were to notify The Indianapolis Gas Company.

Q. Of a rejection of the lease?

A. Yes.

The Court: Was that in any minutes of any kind or just orally?

The Witness: I think it was written into the 852 record.

Q. The record of September 9, 1935, shows the authorization of the rejection, but I am about to call your attention to a letter that is attached to the Stipulation, with which you are familiar, no doubt, Mr. Elsey, dated July 23, 1935, addressed to the President of The Indianapolis Gas Company and signed by Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson. You remember that letter?

A. Yes, I remember that letter.

Q. In which it was stated that the City felt that it was not bound by the lease?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Was that passed in a resolution?

Mr. Thompson: No, it is not copied into the resolution, your Honor.

Did I say July 23rd? It is July 23rd.

Q. Do you know of any controversy between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City as to the validity of the lease of September 30, 1913, prior to July 23, 1935?

A. No, sir.

853 Mr. Thompson: Now, Mr. Burns, there are certain averments in the bills in this case about attempts to negotiate between the City of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company. As I understand it, you have offered no evidence in support of those averments.

Mr. Burns: I have some correspondence that has been offered, supporting those averments.

Q. Did you attend meetings, which were held in Indianapolis, at which representatives of the stockholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company were present?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many of those meetings did you attend, Mr. Elsey?

A. I can't say. There were several of them.

Q. Who was present at those meetings?

A. Well, Mr. Brown was present at one of them—

Q. Mr. Arthur V. Brown?

A. (Continued)—and Mr. Higgins was there, and Mr.—we had one man from Halsey Stuart, I believe, at one time. There have been a good many meetings and I can't remember.

854 Q. Did I attend those meetings?

A. Yes, sir. We also had Mr. Stearns there, representing Estarbrook & Company.

The Court: When were those meetings?

The Witness: I can't give you the dates of them, Judge.

Q. Some of them were in 1935, weren't they, Mr. Elsey?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were all of them prior to the time when the complaint was filed in the Trustee's case, here, which was on June 6, 1936?

A. I think most of the meetings were, yes.

Q. Now, I want you to tell the Court whether any statement was made at such meetings as to on what terms and conditions the City of Indianapolis would consider negotiations with The Indianapolis Gas Company.

A. Well,—

Q. First, was any statement of that kind made?

A. Yes. We refused to negotiate unless the bondholders and the stockholders were both fully represented.

Q. And was that stated in everyone of those meetings?

855 A. Yes, sir.

The Court: You mean the bondholders?

Mr. Thompson: Of The Indianapolis Gas Company?

The Witness: Of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

Q. That was definitely stated, and stated by me, personally, in the meeting, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That, under no circumstances, would the City of Indianapolis consider any negotiation unless it was participated in by both the bondholders and stockholders of The Indianapolis Gas Company? Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

856 The Court: Is that all?

Mr. Thompson: That is all.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Elsey, the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis did authorize the representation in connection with the sale of the bonds that the payment of the principal and interest on the bonds is secured by and a charge upon all the revenue from and the operation of all of the gas system owned and/or operated by the City of Indianapolis, did they not?

A. Would you read that again to me?

Q. (The last question was read by the reporter.)

A. Well, I would say we restricted that to the revenue of the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility.

Q. You would say you did not make the representation that was just read to you, is that right?

A. I think not.

Q. You think not?

A. I think not. That seems to be out of line with the—

Q. (Interposing.) This paper which I am calling 857 your attention to, City's Exhibit No. 11, has been offered by Mr. Thompson to show the proceedings by the Board of Directors for Utilities for the Utility District in connection with the issuance of the revenue bonds, and I will ask you to read the language in the middle of page 29 of this transcript, beginning the first four paragraphs. Read it out loud, if you will.

A. (Reading): "The payment of the principal and interest of this and all other bonds of this issue is secured by, and a charge upon, all the revenue from and the operation of all of the gas system owned and/or operated by the City of Indianapolis."

Q. So that the answer to the question I asked you is that you did authorize that representation?

A. Is this in the circular?

Q. That is in the bond itself which the Board of Directors for Utilities authorized the issuance of, and that is in the resolution of the Board of Directors for Utilities authorizing the bond.

A. If this is in the bond then we must have authorized it, but if it is in the circular and not in the bond I would say we had nothing to do with it.

858 Q. Then, as a matter of fact, if it is in the bond, several of the statements you made as to the authority you gave in connection with the sale of these bonds were not accurate, were they?

A. I wouldn't say that.

Q. You would not say that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did the Board of Directors for Utilities in connection with the sale of these revenue bonds authorize the representation that the City agreed to take all necessary or desirable steps promptly to acquire said property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and also agrees when it has obtained possession of the property operated by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis it will cause the same to be continually operated as a gas system in an efficient manner and at reasonable cost and to maintain in good operating condition, and it will use all reasonable efforts to resist competition and to maintain exclusive right to serve gas in the city of Indianapolis and in Marion County and in the towns therein.

Mr. Thompson: From what are you reading, Mr.
859 Burns?

Mr. Burns: I think I am entitled to an answer to the question.

Mr. Thompson: I think Mr. Elsey is entitled to know what Mr. Burns is reading from.

The Court: I think he is entitled to an answer.

A. Will you read that question?

(The last preceding question was read by the reporter.)

A. That would be a matter of record. I can't recollect that language.

Q. You have testified in answer to a great many questions here by Mr. Thompson as to what the Board did or did not authorize, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, you cannot recall what the Board did or did not authorize?

A. I remember the answer to the particular questions Mr. Thompson asked.

Q. That is, Mr. Thompson phrased the answer and 860 you said "Yes" because—

A. (Interposing.) I knew in that case what it was about.

Q. You knew in that case what it was about?

A. Yes.

Q. You do not know whether the Board made this representation or not?

A. I cannot recall.

Q. You did know, did you not, Mr. Elsey, at the time you were considering taking over the property of the Citizens Gas Company that the Citizens Gas Company was operating not only its own property but the Indianapolis Gas property, did you not?

A. Yes, sir, I knew that.

Q. That was a matter that was discussed among the Board of Directors for Utilities frequently?

A. That was discussed often.

Q. So there was not any doubt in the minds of the Board of Directors for Utilities that the property operated by the Citizens Gas Company included both the Citizens Gas Company property and the Indianapolis Gas Company property, was there?

A. We were operating the Indianapolis Gas Com-861 pany under a lease.

Q. I am talking about what was operated by the Citizens Gas Company.

(The last preceding question was read by the reporter as follows: "So there was not any doubt in the minds of the Board of Directors for Utilities that the property operated by the Citizens Gas Company included both the Citizens Gas Company property and the Indianapolis Gas Company property, was there?")

A. We were operating—

Q. (Interposing.) I am talking about what the Citizens Gas Company was operating; not about what the Citizens Gas and Coke Utility was operating.

A. The Citizens Gas Company was operating the Indianapolis Gas Company at the time under a lease.

Q. You knew that was a fact?

A. Yes.

Q. That was a matter that was frequently discussed in the Board?

A. Yes, sir.

862 Q. And you don't remember whether the Board of Directors for Utilities authorized the representation that the City agrees that when it has obtained possession of the property operated by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis it will cause the same to be continually operated as a gas system in an efficient manner and at reasonable cost and maintain it in good operating condition?

A. We knew that was a provision in the lease.

Q. I am asking you whether you authorized that representation in connection with the bonds which you were selling.

A. I cannot remember that detail.

Q. You cannot remember?

A. Not that detail about it.

Q. You do not know whether you authorized that or not?

A. No, I can't remember the details of the bond.

Q. You, of course, knew when the bonds were sold that the form of the bond would have to conform to the form that was fixed by your resolution, did you not?

A. I am not the attorney; I couldn't say that.

Q. No, but didn't you know that the resolution which the Board of Directors was passing set forth the form of the bond which was to be sold to the public?

863 A. I should think it ought to.

Q. Were you at that time Vice Chairman of the Board?

A. No, I was the Treasurer.

Q. You were Treasurer?

A. Yes.

Q. But you did hear the resolution read, and went over it and knew what the terms of it were?

A. I may have at that time, yes. I didn't attend all the meetings, but I usually did.

Q. Did the Board of Directors for Utilities authorize the representation in connection with the sale of these bonds that they were offered for the purpose of providing funds for taking over property owned by Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and/or in which it has an interest?

A. My recollection is that the bonds were sold to obtain money to pay off the obligations of the Citizens Gas Company, that is, the stock, which amounted to $2,000,000.00 and the accrued dividend of five hundred thousand, one million dollars of bonds—preferred stock—and fifty thousand dollars premium and two million seven hundred odd thousand of the debt that was owed on account of 864 the other Citizens Gas Company bonds.

Q. I am sorry. Perhaps I didn't make my question clear. I stumbled over it. I will read it to you again, ask it again. Did not the Board of Directors for Utilities authorize the representation in connection with the sale of these bonds that the bonds were issued for the purpose of providing funds to take over property owned by Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and/or in which it has an interest. I am asking you if you did not authorize that representation in connection with the sale of these bonds?

A. I can only remember the figures.

Q. You cannot remember whether you authorized that representation or not?

A. No, it would be impossible for me to remember all those things. I can remember the figures and the specific obligations that were to be taken over and discharged.

Q. You did know in 1935 that the Citizens Gas Company had a lease on the Indianapolis Gas property and was operating it, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And that the Citizens Gas Company had that 865 sort of an interest in the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

Mr. Thompson: I object to the question because that is a legal conclusion, as to whether that constituted an interest or not.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I knew that that lease existed.

Q. You knew that lease existed and that the Citizens Gas Company had the lease from the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you not consider that the Citizens Gas Company had an interest in that property?

A. The Board took the position that the interest ended with the take-over.

Q. I am asking you whether in May, 1935 you considered that the Citizens Gas Company had an interest in the property owned by Indianapolis Gas which Indianapolis Gas had leased to the Citizens Gas Company?

A. No.

Q. You don't think the Citizens Gas Company had any interest in property which it was holding under lease?

866 A. On advice of our counsel we considered that interest had terminated on the take-over—terminated with the take-over.

Q. You thought they had an interest down to the time of the take-over?

A. Down to the time of the take-over.

Q. On September 9th. So you thought Citizens Gas Company did have an interest in May, 1935?

A. We had an interest, with a doubtful—

Q. (Interposing.) What do you mean by that? Were you a stockholder of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. The Citizens Gas Company had the lease, and we deemed the lease illegal.

Q. Were you interested in any way in the Citizens Gas Company?

A. I was not

Q. Were you, Mr. Elsey?

A. No, sir.

Q. As a director?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or officer?

A. No.

Q. Or stockholder?

867 A. No.

Q. Either common or preferred stock?

A. No.

Q. Or a Bondholder?

A. No.

Q. Then when you referred to "we"—

A. (Interposing.) I was thinking of—

Q. (Interposing.) The Citizens Gas and Coke Utility?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, going back to the question I asked before, in May, 1935 the Citizens Gas Company did have an interest in the Indianapolis Company property, did they not?

Mr. Thompson: I object to the inquiry being pursued further.

The Court: Sustained. Of course, it is a legal question, as I understand, after it was held to be a trust. That is the question we have to determine.

Mr. Burns: Mr. Elsey has gotten up here, and answered a lot of leading questions Mr. Thompson has asked him, simply by saying "yes" in answering them, as to what authority was given. The fact is the authority 868 that was given was to say that the bonds were sold for the purpose of providing funds for taking over all of the property owned by the Citizens Gas Company or property in which the Citizens Gas Company had an interest.

The Court: Go ahead with your next question.

Q. You knew, did you not, in 1935, Mr. Elsey, that the distribution system operated by the Citizens Gas Company included both the distribution system of the Indianapolis Gas Company and the distribution system of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. Well, I knew that the Citizens Gas Company managed the distribution systems of both companies.

Q. And that, as a matter of fact, practically all of the gas was manufactured at the Citizens Gas Company plant and distributed through the mains of both companies?

A. I didn't know that as prior to 1935, because my connection was rather limited, my association with the management was rather limited up to that time.

Q. When did you become familiar with the facts?

A. In 1935.

Q. When in 1935?

869 A. We began to know about it in, you might say the early part of the year.

Q. In the early part of the year 1935?

A. Yes.

Q. When you began to know about it in the early part of the year 1935 did you learn that the Citizens Gas Company was operating not only its own plant but the plant of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. I knew they were being operated, but I didn't know to what extent the Indianapolis Gas Company was being operated or the Citizens Gas Company was being operated.

Q. Did you know what proportion of the mains in the City of Indianapolis were owned by the Indianapolis Gas Company and what proportion by the Citizens Gas Company?

A. No. That was a matter of detail that would come up occasionally, but I can't tell you that exactly.

Q. You did know that a substantial part of the mains operated by the Citizens Gas Company used to supply the customers were the mains of the Indianapolis Gas Company, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. You did not know whether it was forty, or fifty, or sixty per cent?

870 A. Not exactly.

Q. But you knew it was a very substantial part of the total of the number of mains?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew the Citizens Gas Company was distributing gas to the customers in the city of Indianapolis through both its own mains and the Indianapolis Gas Company mains?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So the Citizens Gas Company was operating the property of both Indianapolis Gas and Citizens Gas Company?

A. Yes.

Q. The answer was "yes"?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you lived in the city of Indianapolis, Mr. Elsey?

A. Thirty-nine years.

Q. Calling your attention to Plaintiffs' Exhibit 104, attached to the deposition of R. E. Simond did you see this advertisement published by Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company in the three Indianapolis papers on or about July 1, 1935?

A. Well, I may have seen it—I am sure I saw 871 it in one paper. I wouldn't say I saw it in all three.

Q. You are quite certain you did see it in one of the three papers?

A. Yes. I recall seeing that statement. Whether it was in the Indianapolis paper or New York Times or Chicago Tribune, I couldn't tell you.

Q. You do recall seeing this advertisement by Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company, Plaintiffs' Exhibit 104, published in some paper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you also see on or about the 1st of July, 1935, the circular issued by Halsey Stuart & Company in connection with the sale of these bonds, Plaintiffs' Exhibit 102 to the Simond deposition?

A. Yes, I saw that statement.

Q. You saw that circular on or about the first of July, 1935?

A. I can't remember the date. I saw it when it was issued.

Q. At about the time it was issued?

A. Yes.

Q. So if it was issued July 1st, that was about the time you saw it?

A. Yes.

872 Mr. Burns: That is all.

The Court: That is all.

(Witness Excused.)

(At this point the Court took a recess.)

873 After Recess.

FREDERICK E. MATSON, a witness called on behalf of the defendant City, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. You may state your name to the Court?

A. Frederick E. Matson.

Q. You reside in Indianapolis?

A. I do.

Q. You are a member of the bar of this Court?

A. I am.

Q. What is the name of your firm, Mr. Matson?

A. Matson, Ross, McCord & Clifford.

Q. Were you employed as attorneys for Otis & Company and Halsey Stuart & Company in connection with the acquisition by those two companies, or in connection with the making of a bid by those two companies for the bonds of the Utility District which were offered for sale on May 28, 1935?

A. We were.

874 Q. Did you continue to represent those two companies after the bonds were purchased and until the same were resold by them?

A. Yes, Mr. Thompson. Our employment was a little broader than merely giving an opinion on the bonds. It required us to examine the proceedings thoroughly up to the issuing of the bonds and also to follow the proceedings through to see that the transfers were made, because these, being revenue bonds, naturally the security depended upon the proper obtaining of the property, and for that reason we followed clear through.

Q. I call your attention now to an instrument identified as Defendant City's Exhibit 1 to the deposition of R. E. Simond, which was taken in Chicago on the 21st day of February, 1939. You know Mr. Simond, do you?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Vice President of Halsey Stuart & Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you yourself give the opinion of which this instrument that you have in your hand is a photostatic copy?

Mr. Burns: I object. It does not purport to be an opinion.

875 The Court: Go ahead. I don't know what it is.

Mr. Thompson: It is a memorandum.

A. Yes, I prepared this.

Q. After it was prepared did you mail it to Halsey Stuart & Company?

A. I mailed a copy of it to Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company, and I think to your firm.

Q. On what date was that done?

A. That was done August 7, 1935.

Mr. Thompson: That is all.

The Court: Any questions.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Matson, Mr. Simond testified in Chicago that in connection with the sale of these bonds your firm approved a circular issued by Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company. Do you recall—

A. (Interposing.) I think we looked over that circular.

Q. And approved it for—

A. (Interposing.) Yes, so far as it was in our province to approve a circular of that sort. It was 876 merely a question of whether we found any objectionable statements in it.

Q. Did you notice in that circular that it contained a statement of the cost of reproduction new and the depreciated physical value of the Indianapolis Gas Company property?

A. Well, I don't recall the terms of the circulars. We look over a good many of those. It may have done so.

Q. If in that circular a statement was made as to the cost reproduction new of the Citizens Gas Company and the depreciated physical value of the Citizens Gas Company property and also of the Indianapolis Gas Company property, would not the natural impression of anybody getting that circular be that the City was taking over both of those properties?

Mr. Thompson: I object. He asks for the natural impression of someone getting the circular.

The Court: I think the circular would have to speak for itself on that.

Q. Did you approve this statement in the circu-
877 lar, Mr. Matson: "These bonds constitute in the opinion of counsel valid and binding obligations of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana in accordance with the terms and provisions thereof, secured by a charge upon all of the income and revenue of all the gas utility system now or hereafter owned and or operated by said city and payable solely and exclusively out of such income and revenue"?

A. May I see that, if you please, Mr. Burns?

Q. It is the second paragraph on the first page.

A. I think that is either quoted exactly or paraphrased from our opinion.

Q. And quoted or paraphrased from the language of the bond itself, was it not?

A. I believe so.

Q. Did you have before you when you were passing on this bond issue the transcript of the proceedings which has been introduced in evidence as City Defendant's Exhibit No. 11?

A. Yes, sir, I think we prepared the text of this transcript.

Q. And were you familiar with the fact that that transcript, and particularly the resolution of the Board of Directors for Utilities, authorizing the sale of 878 these bonds, included the representation that the bonds were issued for the purpose of providing funds to take over the property owned by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and/or in which it has an interest?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew in May, 1935, that the Citizens Gas Company was operating under a lease from the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. I knew that, yes, sir.

Q. And that part of the property which it operated and part of the mains through which it distributed gas through the city of Indianapolis was the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. Yes, I knew that.

Q. And when you approved the circular in July, 1935, about July 1, 1935 you knew that the bond also would provide that it was secured by a charge upon all of the revenue from the operation of all the gas utility system now or hereafter owned and or operated by the City of Indianapolis?

A. I knew that, yes, sir.

Q. And that the city covenanted in connection with the offer for sale of these bonds as follows: "The 879 City agrees to take all necessary or desirable steps promptly to acquire said property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and also agrees that when it has obtained possession of the property operated by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis it will cause the same to be continually operated as a gas system in an efficient manner and at a reasonable cost, and maintain in good operating condition, and will use all reasonable efforts to resist competition and maintain exclusive right to serve gas in the city of Indianapolis and Marion County, Indiana."

A. Is that in the circular? It is not in the bond form, is it?

Q. No, it is in the resolution of the Board of Directors for Utilities—

A. (Interposing.) Whatever is in that transcript I knew of and was familiar with at the time.

Q. Of course, you might not be able to remember that now. You, of course, knew in order to maintain the exclusive right to serve gas in the city of Indianapolis it would be necessary for the Citizens Gas Company to use the mains of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

880 A. I wouldn't go that far here on the stand, sir; that is a legal question.

Q. You knew a large part of the gas was distributed through the mains of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. Yes, I knew that.

Q. And perhaps fifty per cent or more of the mains through which the gas was distributed were the Indianapolis Gas Company's mains?

A. Yes, I knew that.

Q. And that you necessarily also knew that if the City gave up that part of the property that it would not have the exclusive right to serve gas throughout the city of Indianapolis?

A. Well, I suppose that if it entirely disconnected itself from that property, it would not, for the time being, have the exclusive right.

Q. And if it rejected the lease and did not take the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company and turned the property back to the Indianapolis Gas Company that then it would not have been exclusively serving all of the city of Indianapolis?

A. Mr. Burns, when the City took over—

881 Q. (Interposing.) I would like to have you answer the question, if you will, please, Mr. Matson.

A. I don't care to answer that question, because I think it involves a legal inference.

Mr. Burns: Will you read the question to the witness, please.

(The reporter read the question as follows: "And if it rejected the lease and did not take the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company and turned the property back to the Indianapolis Gas Company that then it would not have been exclusively serving all of the city of Indianapolis?")

Mr. Thompson: I object to the question, your Honor, on the ground that it calls for the legal conclusion and opinion of this witness, and further it is perfectly apparent if the lease had been rejected, the city, by condemning this property, could have readily continued in the exclusive service of gas in this county.

The Court: I think that is a question that is a 882 question that is hardly fair to ask the witness to answer.

Mr. Burns: We will take an exception.

Q. Mr. Matson, in connection with the circular of Halsey Stuart & Company, Plaintiffs' Exhibit 102 to the deposition of R. E. Simond, which you said that you approved for Halsey Stuart & Company, I call your attention to the language reading as follows: "In that year" —meaning 1913—"the Company leased for a period of 99 years the properties and business of the Indianapolis Gas Company, thereby gaining control of the entire gas business of the City of Indianapolis and its environs." Was that language on the circular when you approved it?

A. I presume it was, yes, sir.

Q. And further, "By the terms of this lease, the lessee pays a rental consisting of (a) the interest on the first consolidated mortgage five per cent bonds due October 1, 1952, of which there were $6,181,000.00 outstanding at the end of 1934, and the interest on such additional bonds as may be issued from time to time for refunding or extensions to the leased property." That language was also there?

883 A. Yes, that is a description of the terms of the lease.

Q. And one of the descriptions of the terms of the lease was it was a lease for 99 years, was it not?

A. That is correct.

Q. Of course, Mr. Matson, I don't have to ask you but the fact is that when you approved this circular you thought it was a proper circular and an exact representation of what Halsey Stuart & Company were offering, or you would not have approved it?

A. I didn't consider there were any misstatements in there.

Q. Mr. Matson, when you gave your opinion in connection with the approval of this bond issue, did that include a certificate that you did not know of any litigation, pending litigation or contemplated litigation involving this property?

A. Well, I think the transcript itself contains such a certificate.

Q. You think the transcript contains such a certificate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you point it out in the transcript?

A. Here is the certificate, dated June 27th—that is the date the bonds were taken up—signed by the 884 Mayor, City Clerk and City Controller.

"We further certify that no litigation of any kind is now pending or threatened in either state or federal courts seeking to restrain or enjoin, or in any manner questioning the authority or proceedings for, the issuance, sale, execution and delivery of the aforesaid bonds, or in any manner questioning the validity thereof, or the right, authority, or power of said City of Indianapolis to acquire, own and operate or lease to others to operate, the gas plant and property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis referred to in the above mentioned resolution and in said bonds; that neither the corporate existence of said city nor the title of its present officers to their respective offices is being contested, and that no proceeding or authority for the issuance, sale, execution and delivery of said bonds has been rescinded, revoked, or repealed."

I wrote that certificate myself, and had it signed.

Q. When you wrote that certificate, Mr. Matson, did you know that the City was contemplating rejecting the 885 lease of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. No, I didn't. I don't think I knew what, if any opinion, they had with reference to the 99-year lease.

Q. When you approved the circular of Halsey Stuart & Company you did not know that?

A. I hardly think so. I gave that opinion based upon my knowledge of the entire situation, which was very complete, and I certainly did not know of there being any litigation threatened.

Mr. Burns: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

886 H. S. PAYSON ROWE, a witness called on behalf of the defendant City, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. State your name.

A. H. S. Payson Rowe.

Q. Where do you live?

A. Long Meadow, Massachusetts.

Q. What official connection, if any, do you have with the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company?

A. I am manager of the Bond Department of that company.

Q. How long have you been manager of its Bond Department?

A. Four and a half years.

Q. Before that time were you connected with the company in any capacity?

A. No, I was not.

Q. Did you attend a meeting at the office of the Chase National Bank in the City of New York on the 11th day of March, 1936?

A. I did.

887 Q. You heard Mr. Beardsley's testimony this morning, did you?

A Yes.

Q. And the people whom he stated were present were at that meeting?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. Your company is the owner of how many bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. Two hundred and sixty-five thousand.

Q. Were you advised at that meeting—

The Court: (Interposing.) Two hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars worth of bonds?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. Were you advised at that meeting of March 11, 1936 that the City of Indianapolis had entered into an agreement with the Indianapolis Gas Company in connection with the payment of certain sums of money to the Indianapolis Gas Company and in escrow to the Indiana National Bank?

A. I don't recall. I think that I remember that there was a statement made that the April 1st interest would be paid, and that pending further discussion of the matter 888 that future interest payments would be placed in escrow with the Indiana National Bank.

Q. After you had been advised of that fact your company received from the Chase National Bank of New York an interest coupon—the money for an interest coupon on your bonds, which would be two and one-half per cent of $265,000.00?

A. That would be the April 1, 1936 coupon. I believe so.

• • • • • •

896 Cross-Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. You said at the meeting of March 11, 1936 at the Chase Bank you were advised by Mr. Higgins or Mr. Brown or somebody at the meeting that the April 1st coupon would be paid, but that after that the coupons would 897 not be paid. Is that correct? After that the money would be put in escrow?

A. As I remember it, that was so.

Q. Was anything said, as far as you can recall, at that meeting as to the terms or any qualifications or conditions being attached to the April 1st coupons?

A. There were no conditions.

Q. That is, none you were advised of at that meeting?

A. None I knew of. I think we merely transmitted the coupon in the usual way and got our money.

Q. When did you first learn the City of Indianapolis was disputing its liability under this lease?

Mr. Thompson: I object to that question, "disputing its liability under the lease".

The Court: Go ahead and answer the question.

A. I don't know the exact date. It was either the latter part of 1935 or first part of 1936. We keep very close track of the news items. I assume it was when a news item was first published of the matter.

Mr. Burns: That is all.

898 Redirect Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. You keep close track of the market quotations on the bonds your company owns?

A. Yes, we do.

Q. There was a big drop in the price of these bonds immediately after the transfer of this property to the City, was there not?

A. Without looking it up, I don't remember at the moment. I think there was some market fluctuation.

Q. Was not your attention called to this matter that after the City's denial under this lease, in September, 1935, because of the publicity incident to the transfer, there was a drop in the price of the bonds in the market?

A. I don't remember what month it was; I know it was in the latter part of 1935 sometime.

(Witness excused.)

914 Indianapolis, Indiana,
Saturday, March 4, 1939,
Nine o'clock A. M.

The Court met pursuant to adjournment and the trial was resumed as follows:

* * * * * *

968 WILLIAM J. YULE, being recalled as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, City of Indianapolis, and the individual defendants, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. You are the same Mr. Yule who testified before in this case?

A. Yes.

Q. I asked you, when you were on the stand before, whether there had been served on you, as Secretary of The Indianapolis Gas Company, on September 9, 1935, a rejection by the City of Indianapolis of an assignment of the ninety-nine year lease, and you said that there had. I also want to ask you whether there was also served upon you at that time a certified copy of the City's resolution for a rejection of the lease and a certified copy of the City's resolution for the temporary use and occupancy of the Indianapolis Gas property.

The Court: What date was that?

Mr. Thompson: September 9, 1935.

969 Mr. Burns: I would like to have a general objection to this line of questioning on the ground that it cannot affect either the rights of the Trustee or the bondholders.

The Court: Let the record show the objection overruled.

A. These papers were delivered to me late in the afternoon of September 9, 1935.

Q. When you say "these papers", the papers that I referred to? I say, when you say "these papers," you mean the papers that I have just referred to?

A. The papers that you have copies of here. I have just looked them over. I have them here and they were delivered to me on that afternoon.

Q. That won't get it in the record, Mr. Yule. I am asking you whether the papers that I inquired about were delivered to you on that day.

A. They were delivered to me on that day, yes, sir.

Mr. Thompson: That is all.

Witness excused.

970 WILLIAM G. SPARKS, a witness called on behalf of the Defendant, City of Indianapolis, and the individual defendants, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. You may state your name.
A. William G. Sparks.
Q. You are a practising attorney and a member of the Bar of this Court?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is the name of your firm now, Mr. Sparks?
A. Davis, Pantzer, Baltzell & Sparks.
Q. Were you formerly connected with the firm of Smith, Remster, Hornbrook & Smith?
A. I was.
Q. Was that true during the entire months of August and September of 1935?
A. That is right.
Q. Mr. Henry H. Hornbrook was the senior member of the firm at that time?
971 A. That is right.
Q. And he is now dead?
A. That is right.
Q. Your firm was the attorney, at that time and for many years prior thereto, for the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis?
A. That is right.
Q. Did you have any connection or transactions in connection with the transfer from the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis of the plant and property owned by it to the Utility District of the City of Indianapolis?
A. I did.
Q. Were you ever advised, prior to September 9, 1935, as to the attitude of the City as to whether it would accept an assignment of a certain lease between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the Citizens Gas Company, dated September 30, 1913?
Mr. Burns: I object to that, your Honor.
The Court: You may have the same objection.
A. I was.
Q. How long before September 9, 1935 were you
972 advised of that fact?
A. I was advised of it about August 27th, 1935.
Q. Do you know of your own knowledge as to whether

Mr. Hornbrook had known of the attitude of the City prior to that time?

A. I do.

Q. For how long a period of time?

A. All I can say is that he knew it for at least a month or maybe longer. I don't know how long.

Q. Was it because of the City's statement that it would not take an assignment of the lease referred to that that assignment was drawn in a separate instrument?

Mr. Burns: I object.

A. That may have been one of the reasons. I don't recall any conversation about that—

Mr. Burns: Will your Honor rule on the objection?

The Court: He says he doesn't know.

A. (Continued.) —or studying it.

Q. That was a matter that Mr. Hornbrook had attended to with Mr. Rabb? Is that correct?

973 A. I can't remember definitely about that. I don't know. My files don't show it.

Mr. Thompson: That is all.

The Court: Any questions, Mr. Burns?

Cross-Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. You say, Mr. Sparks, that you learned, on August 27th, for the first time, that the City was going to reject the lease?

A. That is right.

Q. That was the first time that you knew anything about that?

A. Yes, that was the first time I had been called upon to do anything in connection with the transfer.

Q. So that any information you have about what Mr. Hornbrook knew prior to August 27th is something that you learned from him or that he told you, but you have no personal knowledge otherwise?

A. Yes, that is right. He told me, by letter that I received the 27th, that the City was going to attempt to reject the lease.

974 Mr. Burns: We ask to have the answer stricken out in his original examination about what Mr. Hornbrook knew, as obviously hearsay.

The Court: Let that go out.

Q. The Citizens Gas Company, as shown by the stipulation, conveyed its property or, at least, the instruments of conveyance which were made out described all of the property that the Citizens Gas Company had immediately prior to the delivery of those instruments? Isn't that correct?

A. That was our intent.

Q. And that is what the stipulation shows?

A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson: If the stipulation shows it—

Mr. Burns: I am just leading up to the next question.

Q. And you have represented the Citizens Gas Company continuously since then?

A. We have represented the Board of Directors of the Citizens Gas Company. The Trustees, when the Board had some function to perform, had separate counsel.

975 Q. And the Citizens Gas Company as such has not been in business since that transfer?

A. Not so far as I know.

Q. Or received any property?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. And, in this case, in accordance with the indemnity agreements attached to the bills as Exhibit J in each case, your compensation and expenses are being paid by the City or the Utility District in accordance with the indemnity agreement?

A. They have not been paid. We have never submitted a statement to our client, for any services or disbursements, since that transfer.

Q. But you have an understanding that the Utility District or the City will pay them?

A. Based on that indemnity agreement and the fact that the City did honor our statement, made to our client immediately after the transfer, for services up to that date, but after the transfer—

Q. And have you had any conversations with Mr. Thompson that the City would take care of your fees and expenses in connection with this litigation?

976 A. Whether with Mr. Thompson, or not, I don't know. I think Mr. Rabb—I don't know whether in those words, but I think, on one or two occasions, he has indicated to me, by words, that the City did recognize its obligations to assume any obligations of the Citizens Gas Company in connection with this litigation.

Q. Including your fees and expenses?

A. That is right. I don't know whether we discussed it definitely. That is my understanding and I think that is his. That has never been a very important point for us. We would have gone through, regardless, because of our long association with the Board of Directors of the Gas Company.

Q. On the 9th of September, 1935, you went with Mr. Rastenburg to the office of Thompson & Rabb and took the four instruments of conveyance, which have been identified in the stipulation?

A. That is right.

Q. At the time you took them there—they had not been recorded, had they?

A. No.

Q. (Continued.) —and left them there, did Mr.
977 Rastenburg deliver them there to Mr. Dithmer, the President of the Board of Directors for Utilities?

A. He handed them either to Mr. Rabb or to Mr. Dithmer. I don't recall which.

Q. And the Board was there in session at that time?

A. A group of men was there which, I was informed, was the Board. I couldn't say they were.

Q. Do you know Mr. Henry Dithmer?

A. I know him by sight.

Q. And was he there?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Rabb was there?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Mr. Thompson there?

A. No.

Q. And the four papers were all handed over together? They were all four numbered in some way?

Mr. Thompson: I object to the question as to them being numbered in some way because the evidence shows just what was done.

The Court: He may state what was done.

978 Q. You may state what was done.

A. They were all four handed either to Mr. Rabb or to Mr. Dithmer or somebody there representing the City.

Q. And then you and Mr. Rastenburg left?

A. No, I stayed for a few minutes until they had a meeting. I think Mr. Rastenburg did, too.

Q. And you waited while the Board of Directors for Utilities had a meeting?

A. That is right.

Q. And about what time of the day was that?

A. I think it was around one o'clock, but I am not certain. I know it was supposed to be in the morning, but we were late in getting there. It was around noon, as I recall, but I cannot be certain.

Q. Did you take any of those four papers away with you when you left, the four instruments of conveyance that you brought?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. And you have never received any of them back?

A. No.

Q. And as far as you know, the Citizens Gas Company has never received any of them back?

979 A. Not so far as I know.

Q. And did Mr. Rastenburg come away with you?

A. I think so.

Q. And he did not bring any of the four instruments of conveyance away with him when he left?

A. No.

Q. The answer was "No"?

A. "No". That is right.

The Court: That is all.

Mr. Thompson: I have a question, if I may, your Honor.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. At this meeting that Mr. Burns has inquired about, there was delivered to you a rejection of the ninety-nine year lease, signed by Mr. Dithmer as President of the Board of Directors, for the Board of Directors for Utilities?

A. Yes.

Q. And a certified copy of the resolution that had been adopted by the Board, rejecting the lease?

A. Yes.

980 Q. And a certified copy of the resolution of the Board for the temporary use and occupancy of the property?

A. I think the latter, yes.

Q. You knew, when you went to the office of Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson, that the City was going to deliver the rejection to you when you turned over physically this assignment of the lease?

A. That is right.

Mr. Thompson: That is all.

Recross Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. When you say that you received the rejection, Mr. Sparks, of the lease, you mean you received an instrument which was entitled, "Rejection of Lease"?

A. That is what I mean.

The Court: That is all.

Mr. Thompson: That is all.

Witness excused.

981 Mr. Thompson: Your Honor, in connection with the deposition of R. E. Simond, taken in Chicago, and the depositions of J. E. Baker and Chester M. Clark, taken in New York, we have filed a motion to suppress these depositions. If that motion should be overruled, I want to offer the remaining portions of those depositions, which Mr. Burns did not offer in evidence.

The Court: That is, the cross-examination?

Mr. Thompson: And the reexamination and recross, and also, particularly in connection with Mr. Simond's deposition, City's Exhibits 1 to 5, both inclusive.

The Court: Attached to the deposition?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, sir.

Mr. Burns: I might say that, by stipulation shown in each of these depositions, when a deposition was taken, it was agreed by all counsel that it could be used in both cases, and the Trustee and the bondholders objected to the cross-examination or, at least, to the exhibits offered in connection with the cross-examination on the various grounds shown in the deposition, itself, and also on the ground that the correspondence between Thompson &
982 Rabb and Halsey Stuart and the opinion of Mr. Matson are self-serving declarations, not binding in any way.

The Court: You mean the opinion as to the invalidity?

Mr. Burns: No, that is a memorandum that was written sometime in August, 1935, that Mr. Matson testified to yesterday. It seems to me that can have no possible relevancy to any issue in this case. It was not said to be an opinion. It was just labeled, "Memorandum," not signed by anybody and not delivered to anybody who was a party in this case. It was delivered to Halsey Stuart & Company.

The Court: I think I saw a photostatic copy of it yesterday. I don't know whether it was offered or not.

Mr. Burns: No, it was not offered.

We also object to the other exhibits, as well as that opinion or memorandum, on the ground that they are mere self-serving declarations and not such as can bind either the bondholders or the Trustee.

The Court: All right. I will take this question up.

983 Mr. Thompson: If the motion to suppress the deposition of R. E. Simond should be overruled, we offer in evidence a carbon copy of a letter from Thompson & Rabb to Halsey Stuart & Company under date of January 4, 1937.

The Court: This deposition had to do with the action taken by Halsey Stuart & Company?

Mr. Thompson: On the resale circulars, and I point out to your Honor, in connection with that motion to suppress, that the stipulation in this case shows that the named plaintiffs in 1950 all bought their bonds before the transfer was made to the City and that there is no evidence in this case that any present bondholder of The Indianapolis Gas Company bought his bonds in reliance on the bond circular or knew anything about it. The plaintiff, up to this time, has absolutely failed to make one element of estoppel or make any proof in connection with one element of an estoppel.

The Court: All right. I will go into that question.

Do you have any other evidence?

984 Mr. Burns: I would like to object to the City's Exhibits 28 A and B, a letter dated January 4, 1937 from Thompson & Rabb to Halsey Stuart & Company on the ground that it is merely a self-serving declaration. This was in 1937, a year and a half after the bonds were sold.

Mr. Thompson: Your Honor, the reason I am offering this is that it shows what I think Mr. Simond has testified to in part: that these circulars were sent us as a matter of courtesy.

Now, Mr. Burns has attempted to prove some estoppel against the City of Indianapolis because of certain letters that were exchanged, and here again we say in this letter —it was another circular that had been sent to us—"We appreciate that the draft of circular has been submitted to us merely as a matter of courtesy on your part."

Mr. Burns: That is your letter of January, 1937. We call the Court's attention to the fact that this letter that is now offered was not even written until after this suit was filed and after the bill was based on the conten-985 tions that we were making as to the effect of the representations that had been made in the sale of the bonds.

The Court: Does the record show that these letters, identified by Mr. Higgins, have been read in evidence? If it doesn't, I understood that there was no objection to them, and they may be read in evidence.

The said letters, so offered, respectively marked for identification CITY'S EXHIBITS NOS. 13-B TO 27, both inclusive, were admitted and read in evidence.

Mr. Elam: May we have the record show that all of the exhibits that have been admitted have been read in evidence?

The Court: Yes, all that have been admitted, but there are some that I am withholding the ruling upon.

Do you have any rebuttal?

Mr. Thompson: That is all. The defendant rests.

And the Defendant, City of Indianapolis, and the Individual Defendants Here Rested.

986 The Court: Do you any rebuttal? Would you like a few minutes recess?

Mr. Burns: If we may, your Honor.

(Pursuant to a brief recess, the trial was resumed as follows:)

Whereupon the Plaintiffs, Further to Maintain the Issues on Their Behalf, Offered and Introduced the Following Evidance in Rebuttal, to-wit:

PAUL C. BEARDSLEE, being recalled as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiffs, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Beardslee, you have testified before in this case?

A. I have.

Q. Did the Chase Bank or you, representing the Chase Bank, either request or suggest to the bondholders, 987 Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, New England Mutual Life Insurance Company or Savings Bank of Baltimore, plaintiffs in case No. 1950, that that case should be filed?

A. We did not.

Q. Did the Chase Bank agree or have any understanding whatsoever that it would either share any or pay any part of the fees or expenses in connection with the bringing of that suit?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Has it ever paid any part of the fees or expenses in connection with the bringing of that suit?

A. It has not.
Mr. Burns: That is all.
The Court: That is all.
Q. Oh, there was one other question.
Mr. Thompson has offered in evidence here—the City has offered in evidence here this morning various correspondence between Mr. Bennis of our office and Mr. Higgins and Judge Ewbanks. Did you receive copies of that cor-988 respondence between Mr. Higgins and Mr. Bemis, or know anything about it?
A. No, sir.
Mr. Burns: That is all.
The Court: That is all.
Mr. Thompson: That is all.
Witness excused.

VICTOR C. SEITER, a witness called on behalf of the Plaintiffs, being first duly sworn, testified in Rebuttal as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Will you state your full name, your address, your age and your occupation?
A. Victor C. Seiter; age, thirty-six; residence, 47 South Pennsylvania; Assistant Secretary, Citizens Gas & Coke Utility.
Q. How long have you been connected with the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility?
A. May 1, 1936.
989 Q. And what have been your duties as Assistant Secretary?
A. The usual duties pertaining to such an office and also the keeping of the ledger and the journal for the Utility District.
Q. I call your attention to City's Exhibit 10, introduced, or offered in evidence yesterday, consisting of twelve sheets. Those are photostatic copies, are they not, of twelve sheets taken from the Utility District general ledger of the City of Indianapolis—Utility District City of Indianapolis General Ledger?
A. They are photostatic copies of seven sheets. Part of them reflect the entries made on the reverse side of the same sheets.
Q. And when the entry shows the reverse side, that is shown by the account appear[illegible]ows on the reverse side of the sheet, "No. 2," is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, are these sheets in this ledger, which have been identified as Exhibit 10, what you call original entries; that is, is this the original, first entry that is made, or is it 990 transferred from some other account?

A. No, those are books of final entry.

Q. Where is the original entry made?

A. The original entry is made on the books of the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility.

Q. Well, are the entries made on the books of the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility even though the payment is not made—that is, when you are simply accruing the liability?

A. No, that entry is made on the books of the Utility District.

Q. So, then, the only place the various entries that are made of accruing liabilities are on—in this ledger, pages of which have been identified as Exhibit 10, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Burns: Of course, the Court will excuse me. I am not a very good bookkeeper.

The Court: That applies to a good many of us, I guess.

Q. Now, calling your attention to the first two pages
991 of Defendants' Exhibit 10, Account No. 621, Pages 1 and 2 of Sheet No. 1 and Sheet No. 2, that indicates that you accrued amounts from September 9th, 1935 to the end of the year of $37,333.33 on the ledger, making amount due I. G. Company for the use of property, accruing amount equal to stock interest, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that also show that that amount was paid, that $37,333, or is that shown on a separate account?

A. Yes, I could state that this amount—that this statement reflects the amount of $37,333.33 was paid, not necessarily in a separate check, but it represents the amount paid for the period from September 9, 1935.

Q. To the end of the year?

A. To the end of the year, yes.

Q. And the fact that it has been paid is reflected by the evidence that $37,333.33 is not carried over in the other year, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And beginning with the 1st of January, 1936, 992 this shows an accrual each month of $10,000 and the accrual at the end of 1936 of $120,000, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1937 it shows the accrual of an additional amount of $10,000 a month, and a combined accrual, in 1937, of $240,000?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And similarly, by the end of 1938, it shows a total accrual of $360,000?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And since then you have simply accrued the January —or you had not,—when these photostats were taken you had not accrued any amount for the month of January, 1939, had you?

A. No, sir.

Q. But as shown by the ledger, you have since accrued the amount of $10,000 for the month of January, 1939, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. These photostats were taken about ten days ago?

A. I should say so, ten days, two weeks ago.

993 Q. Sometime along about the middle or latter part of February?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, without going over these ledger sheets in detail, in general the same scheme has been followed in accruing those liabilities under account No. 622, which is the account for bond interest?

Mr. Thompson: I object to the form of the question. He asks the witness to say that there is a liability, which is a legal question; and then he says it is accrued for bond interest, when it appears upon the face of this account, "equal to the bond interest".

The Court: Of course, those are law questions the Court is going to have to determine. Notice your phraseology of the question so as not to call for any objection. Go ahead. Answer the question.

A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson: I think the witness answered the question. Did your Honor overrule the objection?

The Court: Yes, I told him to go ahead and 994 answer.

Q. And similarly, on account 623, the same scheme has been followed generally as to what has accrued as amounts due I. G. Co. for the use of property, accruing the amount equal to state and local taxes?

A. In that case the payment was actually made, in accordance with the agreement that had been heretofore discussed.

Q. That is, as far as real estate taxes are concerned, they have been currently paid—I mean all of the taxes have been currently paid, to substantially a larger accruing amount, is that correct?

A. Yes.

The Court: These other accounts have been deposited in The Indiana National Bank?

The Witness: The amounts equal to the bond interest and the stock interest have been in escrow.

Q. Now, Mr. Seiter, when did you start to make those entries that are shown in City's Exhibit 10?

A. Is this the Exhibit 10 (indicating)?

Q. Yes.

995 A. These entries were made in the early part of 1936, probably in the month of January.

Q. Then that time is before you came to the Utility District?

A. They were made while I was in the employ of Howard W. Painter, who was retained by the Board of Directors.

Q. For Utilities?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And while you were engaged by Howard Painter you opened up this ledger, from which Exhibit 10 has been taken, for the Utility District?

A. Yes, sir, under his instructions.

Q. And the entries have been made ever since that time in your hand?

A. Either in my hand or under my direction.

Mr. Burns: That is all.

The Court: That is all.

Witness excused.

Mr. Burns: The plaintiff in the Trustee's case and the plaintiffs in the bondholders case now rest as to the 996 branch of the case which is now being tried. Of course, there are other issues which are to be reserved for later trial.

And the plaintiffs here rested in rebuttal.

* * * * * *

The Court: I am wondering if it would not be 999 the proper time now to begin with the stipulation and go through those various exhibits that were offered, and the ruling withheld. You have the stipulation, so I might have a copy of it? As I recall, there are certain parts of the stipulation that were not offered, and there was objection made to the introduction of certain exhibits attached to the stipulation. Might I have the stipulation?

• • • • • •

1001 Mr. Thompson: I have identified as City's Exhibit No. 29 printed objections, which go to Subdivisions 7 (a), (b), (c), (d), (e) and (f); Subdivisions 9 (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i) and (j); Subdivisions 13 (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), (j) and (k);—

The Court: All right. What are the objections?

Mr. Thompson: (Continuing.) Subdivisions 14 (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i) and (j); Subdivision 15 (c); Subdivisions 21 (a) and (b) to the Stipulation and to an Indemnity Agreement—that is, the indemnifying agreement. May I, instead of reading these objections, hand these to the Reporter as though the objections were stated orally in open court?

The Court: Any objection to it?

Mr. Burns: I suggest you might save a place in the record to attach it as an exhibit instead of copying it in the record, if agreeable.

Mr. Thompson: It is City's Exhibit 29.

1002 The said document, so offered, marked for identification City's Exhibit No. 29, was admitted and read in evidence.

The Court: Does that Exhibit 29 contain all of the objections that you have to any part of the stipulation?

Mr. Thompson: I think so. I can tell you in just a moment.

The Court: If it does, it perhaps would be well for the Court to go over that exhibit and pass on it at a later date, rather than to undertake to do it at this time.

Mr. Thompson: I think it will be for the convenience of the Court and counsel both, if I may offer in evidence —not offering in evidence but as part of this record, as City's Exhibit 30, the typewritten statement that Mr. Burns made in connection with his offer, because in making the objections, he can more readily refer to that statement, if it is identified as an exhibit.

Mr. Burns: I think the Reporter copied it in the record exactly as it is here.

1003 The Court: I have a copy of that—five pages?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, sir.

Mr. Burns: I have not any objection.

Mr. Thompson: I offer this as Exhibit 30, for the convenience of the Court and counsel, with the stipulation that if it has already been copied in the record, it will not be recopied.

The Court: All right.

The said document, so offered, marked for identification City's Exhibit No. 30, was admitted and read in evidence.

The Court: May I ask Mr. Burns if you want to file something in reply to this?

Mr. Burns: If the Court please, Mr. Thompson filed a long brief two or three weeks ago, dealing with those questions, while the Court was in Florida, and we filed a brief opposing it, so the questions are rather fully briefed.

The Court: May I get those so I can have them together?

Mr. Thompson: We are engaged now, your Honor,
1004 in the preparation of a reply brief, which will be in your Honor's hands in a few days.

The Court: This brief (indicating), filed on January 23rd by the City, and the Citizens Gas Company, on the 1st, and then on February 24th,—those are the briefs.

Mr. Thompson: I can now advise the Court that all objections to any matter appearing in the stipulation itself have been included in the printed objections contained in City's Exhibit 29, but there are two other offers made by Mr. Burns to which I desire to make special objections.

The City of Indianapolis and the other named defendants whom we represent object to the offer of Paragraph 4 of the Stipulation of Facts in the Todd case, appearing on Pages 192 and 193 of Exhibit 2; that is the stipulation that was signed in the Todd case by counsel.

It is preceded by a statement that the stipulation—that the facts are agreed to be true, for the final hearing and disposition of that case; and it seems to me clear 1005 that you cannot take a statement made in a stipulation of facts, which is limited to that case, and signed by the attorneys for the party, and offer it as an admission—successfully offer it as an admission in another case.

The Court: If they stipulated matter as being a fact, I don't know what the law would be with reference to that being in another case, but it would hardly be a fact in one case and not in another. As far as actually going in another, it might apply in an altogether different nature in one case than the other; but as far as being a statement of a fact, the Court accepts the stipulation, of course, as a fact. Now, if it is a fact, what would the law be with reference to admitting it in another case—as a fact in another case? It would be certainly a fact.

Mr. Thompson: We will be glad to furnish your Honor authorities on that.

And the other objection I have is to Exhibit 89, which is the second, third and fourth grammatical paragraphs from Section 18 of the Answer of the City of Indianapolis in the case of Cotter versus the Citizens Gas Com-1006 pany—No. 1192, In Equity.

The Court: Is that the case in this court that was left pending the outcome of the Todd case?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, sir, that is right.

Mr. Burns: Heard together and decided by the Court of Appeals together.

Mr. Thompson: Now, I object for two reasons to this: The first objection that I have is because the answer in the Cotter case is not pleaded as res adjudicata here; but it is claimed to have an effect as an admission against the City of Indianapolis.

Now, in that case the answer was signed by the attorneys for the City of Indianapolis. It was not signed by the City, and it was not verified.

I will be able to furnish your Honor cases that it is well established that an admission contained in an answer does not bind the person making it in another case unless it has been signed by the person, personally. Some of the cases hold, sworn to by him, and has not been only signed by the lawyer, unless it affirmatively appear that the lawyer could not have obtained the information 1007 from any other source than his client.

The Court: You may furnish authorities.

Mr. Thompson: Yes, I will be glad to.

I also object to both of these—to both Exhibit 89 and to Paragraph 4 of the Stipulation of Facts in the Todd case because they are partial offers, really selections of certain paragraphs of the answer and certain paragraphs of the stipulation, and the context does not fairly appear.

Mr. Burns: If the Court please, if that is true, we are perfectly willing to offer the entire document; but we did not because we did not want to encumber the record. We are perfectly willing to have counsel offer what other parts he wants, or the entire document. We think it is entirely a fair excerpt and fairly sets forth what the admission was in both cases.

I think the authorities are very clear and have a number of cases from the Supreme Court that an admission made by a party in one case is admissible against that party in another different litigation.

The Court: Suppose we fix a time for the filing of authorities and briefs upon these questions. I should 1008 like to have opportunity to study on that—the number of the exhibits and where the ruling has been reserved; and then give your authorities so we can take this up several days following. Then I can connect it up. Can you do that within the next five days?

Mr. Thompson: Be glad to.

The Court: That is 4, is it, Mr. Rabb?

Mr. Rabb: Yes, sir.

Mr. Thompson: I will not be here, but Mr. Rabb in my absence—

The Court: I want to fix a time—Mr. Burns file something by the 15th?

Mr. Burns: In reply, by the 15th, I shall be glad to.

Mr. Thompson: I am not sure the record shows—I think it does, your Honor—that an objection was made to an exhibit which was the brief in the Supreme Court of Indiana filed by the City in the Williams case.

Mr. Burns: You objected. There is no doubt on that. I think the Court reserved his ruling.

1009 The Court: I recollect that I made some comment on that.

Mr. Rabb: Exhibit 3—the appellant's brief.

Mr. Thompson: I want to object to any part—

Mr. Burns: Oh,—

Mr. Thompson: I make no objection insofar as it sets out the pleadings in the Williams case.

Mr. Burns: We simply had it identified—that was the method of showing those pleadings. We don't offer anything except the pleadings out of that.

Mr. Thompson: As to that we want the same objection, to that offer, as we had to the stipulation, on the ground that the Williams case is not res adjudicata of any question involved in this case.

The Court: Present all those questions at the same time.

Now, as I recall, Mr. Thompson, you made an offer to introduce other parts of the stipulation than were offered by—and is there some objection to that?

Mr. Burns: Yes, sir.

The Court: What were those parts of the stipulation?

1010 Mr. Burns: The parts of the stipulation which we did not offer are certain paragraphs of Section 18 of the stipulation—Section 18 of the stipulation identifies some twenty-three or four different documents, almost all of them letters, between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis.

The Court: Is that upon the theory that the plaintiff would not be bound?

Mr. Burns: That is going to be the basis of our objection. We offered certain of those letters and the paragraphs of the stipulation which identified them—the top of Page 2 would show what I gave the Reporter, namely, Sub-paragraphs, 1, 2, 9, 10, 13 and 14 of numbered Section 18 of the Stipulation; and we offered the six exhibits which were identified in those paragraphs of the Stipulation.

The Court: Those paragraphs contain certain letters?

Mr. Burns: Those paragraphs identify the letter and then the letter was attached as an exhibit, and we offered the paragraph so identifying the letter and the 1011 letter referred to in that paragraph of the stipulation.

The Court: Mr. Thompson has offered the remainder?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, sir.

Mr. Burns: He has offered the remainder of that paragraph. And we object to the remainder of that paragraph, and to each of the documents identified therein, and, perhaps, for clarity, I should refer to the numbers of the paragraphs and the numbers of the exhibits to which we are objecting.

We are objecting to numbered paragraphs and, Mr. Reporter, parenthetically, those are Roman numerals—

The Court: On Page 29?

Mr. Burns: We object to numbered paragraphs III, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, XI, XII and XV to XXIII, both inclusive, and to the exhibits identified therein. The exhibits so identified are Nos. 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 68, 69, 70, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84 and 85.

The plaintiffs object to these paragraphs of the stipulation and each of the exhibits identified therein, as just described, because they are letters exchanged between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the Utility District, or between The Indianapolis Gas Company and 1012 counsel for the Utility District, Thompson, Rabb &

Stevenson, or between counsel for the two parties; and none of those letters is binding on the Trustee or bondholders or can affect, in any way, the rights of the bondholders, since no action between The Indianapolis Gas Company and the City could prejudice or affect the bondholders' rights or the Trustee's rights.

We also object to one or two resolutions which are included among—perhaps I had better refer to that exhibit. It is Exhibit No. 70, identified in Paragraph XII of Section 18. We object to that especially on the ground that the resolution of the Board of Directors for Utilities is merely a self-serving declaration and cannot be used to prejudice the rights of the bondholders or Trustee. We also object to all of the exhibits previously enumerated and identified in Section 18 of the stipulation on the ground that they cannot be received as evidence of the facts recited therein, being merely a hearsay statement of the facts stated in such letters or documents.

1013 The Court: Well, would you not think it would be fair to have all of this before the Court, in view of the fact that Subdivisions 1 and 2 had letters from attorneys for the Utility District of the Gas Company, or some officer, that were introduced by the plaintiff? I think we should have the entire picture here. I don't know what they contain. I do notice that Sub-paragraphs 1 and 2, which were introduced by the plaintiff, refer to letters which passed between counsel and the Department of Utilities of the Gas Company and The Indianapolis Gas Company. Now, these offers, so far as the letters are concerned, appear to be the same.

Mr. Burns: I think the same general character, without any doubt, but I think the rule is this: if I sue Mr. Elam, he can bring in and offer against me, in that lawsuit, letters I had written, because they are admissions; but I cannot bring in letters that I have myself written and offer them against Mr. Elam, because those are merely self-serving declarations. Similarly, I can bring in letters Mr. Elam has written, because they are admissions by him, but Mr. Elam cannot offer, on his own 1014 behalf, letters he has written because they are only his self-serving declarations.

The Court: Don't you think this would be competent for the purpose of showing the attitude of the Utilities Department in paying this money in, and that is the purpose of them, as I understand.

Mr. Thompson: That is right.

Mr. Burns: If that was important, I think it might be competent, but I think no arrangement or attitude on the part of the Utility can make any difference, since they took the property and operated it.

The Court: I feel like I can pass on this objection at this time, simply to show as to whether or not there is estoppel here, by acting under the lease, and show why—I think that would be my ruling on that.

Mr. Burns: May we have an exception?

The Court: The objection advanced to the various subdivisions of Section 18 of the stipulation, made by the plaintiff, will be overruled and exception given; and as far as that section is concerned, it may be read in evidence.

1015 The said SECTION 18 of the Stipulation, so offered, was admitted and read in evidence.

The Court: Are there objections now to any other parts, Mr. Burns, that have been offered by Mr. Thompson, that were not offered by the plaintiff?

Mr. Burns: Well, I have made objections from time to time, during the course of Mr. Thompson's testimony.

The Court: I am referring now to the stipulation.

Mr. Burns: No, that concludes our objections to any—just a moment.

The Court: May I make myself clear, I am referring to certain parts of the stipulation, not offered by the plaintiff, and that Mr. Thompson offered.

Mr. Burns: No, I don't object to any other parts of the stipulation.

The Court: May the record show at this time that Exhibit 1, which is the stipulation, is read in evidence, with the exception of the objections which have been reserved to certain parts of it. I think there was some reservation as to certain parts.

1016 Mr. Thompson: Yes, your Honor.

The said Stipulation, so offered, marked for identification PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT NO. 1, was admitted and read in evidence, with the qualification as stated by the Court.

ROBERT E. SIMOND, a witness called on behalf of plaintiffs, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Simond, will you state your full name, your age, and your occupation?

A. Robert E. Simond. My age, 49; vice-president Halsey Stuart, in charge of municipal buying in the Chicago office.

Q. When you say "in charge of municipal buying," you mean in charge of the buying of Municipal bond issues and so forth?

A. That is correct.

Q. How long have you been connected with Halsey Stuart & Company?

A. Twenty-five years.

Q. Twenty-five years. And during that time what various offices have you held with Halsey Stuart & Company?

A. Assistant cashier, 1916; then in the Municipal Department from 1916 to the present date.

Q. And you have been head of the Municipal Department during all that time?

A. For about ten years.

Q. For the last ten years you have been head of the Municipal Department?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you have charge of both the purchase and the sale of municipal securities?

A. Well pretty much so.

Q. That is the whole Municipal Bond Departments are under your charge?

A. Yes, under our jurisdiction.

Q. So that you have charge both of the purchase of the securities and the marketing of them after Halsey Stuart & Company has purchased them?

A. Well, fixing the terms of marketing and so forth.

Q. The actual Sales Department is under somebody else?

A. Under the sales heads.

Q. Under the sales heads. Is Halsey Stuart & Company an Illinois corporation?

A. An Illinois corporation.

Q. And you are, you say, vice-president of the company?

A. That is right.

Q. Are you also a director?

A. No, sir.

Q. How many offices has Halsey Stuart & Company throughout the country?

A. I would say two offices, and representatives in Boston, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Detroit, and Milwaukee. They have office space in Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, and St. Louis, and then representatives, at least one or more, without office space to my knowledge, in Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati—

Q. Indianapolis?

A. No, sir.

Q. No office or representative located in Indianapolis?

A. The gentleman who covers Indiana occasionally, he travels out of Champaign, Illinois.

Q. And his territory includes Indianapolis?

A. That is right.

Q. What is his name? Is it Mr. W. R. Cosby?

A. W. R. Cosby.

Q. And he comes to Indianapolis from time to time and visits bond buyers and also banks or other people interested in the purchase of securities?

A. Yes. How often he goes there I can't answer. His sales manager could answer that. I don't know now often he goes there.

Q. You said you had two offices. Those are the offices in Chicago and New York?

A. In Chicago and New York.

Q. And in the other cities you mentioned—

A. We have an office in Philadelphia, Detroit and St. Louis.

Q. You have offices in Philadelphia and Detroit?

A. Yes, where we have office space.

Q. And those offices are the headquarters of your sales representatives in those territories?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you also have an office in Cleveland, Ohio?

A. Yes—not an office; we have a sales representative.

Q. Does he have office headquarters there?

A. I don't think so, no. He travels out of his home.

Q. That is, he lives in Cleveland?

A. He lives in Cleveland.

Q. He covers the territory in and around Cleveland in the sale of securities?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you attend this deposition in response to a subpoena?

A. That is right, yes, sir.

Q. Have you the subpoena with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. May I see it?

A. This is one of the copies (handing document to counsel).

Q. Well, you received a subpoena in each of these cases, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. And the paper you have just handed me is a copy of the subpoena which you received in one of these cases?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Burns: I will ask the notary to mark it as P X 101. I think so as to save confusion with the exhibits already marked in connection with the stipulation, I will start with 101 and work from there.

(Said document was marked as requested P X 101.)

Mr. Burns: Q. In May or June, 1935, Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company bid for and bought eight million dollars principal amount of bonds of City of Indianapolis Gas Plant Revenue bonds, dated June 1, 1935, is that correct?

A. That is corerct.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the negotiation or consummation of that sale?

A. With the negotiations.

Q. And what did you have to do with it?

A. Establishing a price which we could offer for the bonds.

Q. Establishing the price which Halsey Stuart & Company could offer the city for the bonds?

A. That is right. Halsey Stuart and Otis joined in that.

Q. Yes.

A. And the preparation of the bid itself which was submitted; then after we purchased the bonds, the preparation of the circular, arranging for the legal opinion, and my recollection is at the suggestion of the city we aranged for the preparation of the blank bonds as a matter of expediency. They were prepared here in Chicago.

Q. Now you said you arranged for or looked after the preparation of the circular which was used in the sale of those bonds. Have you a copy of that circular with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. May I see it?

A. Yes, sir (handing document to counsel).

Q. Is this an extra copy of the circular that we could have?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Burns: I will ask to have the reporter mark this P X 102.

(Said document was marked as requested P X 102.)

Q. Calling your attention, Mr. Simond, to P X 102, which I have just had marked, is that the circular which was prepared under your direction by Halsey Stuart & Company in connection with the sale of these bonds?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this was used, this same circular was used throughout your campaign in the sale of the bonds?

A. In the preliminary offering.

Q. What do you mean by the preliminary offering?

A. Well, in September we revised it slightly in the form of a sales memo, having some of the bonds remaining on hand, and we made a supplemental offering at that time.

Q. In September, 1935?

A. I think it was about September, 1935.

Q. Have you the supplemental one that you prepared in September, 1935?

A. September 28th (handing document to counsel).

Mr. Burns: I will ask to have this marked P X 103.

(Said document was marked as requested P X 103.)

Mr. Burns: Q. Now this paper which you have shown me, Mr Simond, marked P X 103, was issued by Halsey Stuart & Company on about September 28, 1935?

A. Yes.

Q. And was circulated by it in connection with the previous circular which has been identified as P X 102?

A. That is right. This was circulated among our sales organization.

Q. Simply among your sales organization?

A. Yes.

Q. The circular, P X 103, wasn't intended for circularization to the public, but merely to your sales organization?

A. That is right.

Q. And, as far as you know, the mimeographed sheet, P X 103, was not circularized to your—

Mr. Thompson: This question calls for something that the witness can have no possible personal knowledge of.

Mr. Burns: Q. —to the public generally, but only to the sales organization?

Mr. Burns: Will you read the question?

(Question read.)

A. My recollection is it wasn't circularized generally.

Q. That is, it went only to the sales organization?

A. To the sales organization. It was prepared for that purpose.

Q. And even after the preparation of P X 103 you continued to use the printed circular, P X 102, for the sale of the bonds to the public?

A. Well I can't answer that. I assume the salesmen referred to both. I can't answer that.

Q. You can't answer that?

A. I can't answer that.

Q. The circulars, P X 102, were still out and in the hands of your salesmen?

A. There was still a supply of them, yes.

Q. By the way, have you an extra copy of P X 103 so we can keep this for the record?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Halsey Stuart & Company get out any other circulars for circulation among the public generally except this printed circular P X 102?

A. It seems to me I saw one covering $510,000. That was fully a year and a half later. The text was the same.

Q. The text was the same?

A. The text was the same. It simply reduced the amount.

Q. At that time Halsey Stuart simply had about $510,000 of them left and a supplemental circular was put out with the same text as P X 102?

A. Practically the same text.

Q. But indicating there were only 510,000 left?

A. That is right.

Q. Now can you tell me at the time the circular, the mimeographed circular, P X 103, was put out, about how many bonds Halsey Stuart & Company had left on their shelves?

A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. You couldn't tell me whether it was one million or two million?

A. No, I can't tell you, Mr. Burns.

Q. When you say the supplemental circular was put out similar to P X 102, indicating there were 510,000 of the bonds left, did that mean that Halsey Stuart and Otis & Company had, or Halsey Stuart & Company had?

A. We had jointly.

Q. In the trading account?

A. In the trading account.

Q. Now in addition to the circular, P X 102, did Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company, either separately or jointly, advertise these bonds in various newspapers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you a copy of the advertisement which they used?

A. This was a copy of the ad that appeared July 1st in the Boston Herald (handing document to counsel).

Q. Is this something that you wish to keep yourself?

A. I would like to.

Mr. Thompson: May I see it, please?

Mr. Burns: Q. Have you a record showing in what other papers that advertisement appeared, Mr. Simond?

A. I am afraid not. I would have to rely on my memory, but I know it appeared in New York and Chicago.

Q. And Boston?

A. And Boston. I mean aside from Boston it appeared in New York and Chicago. I generally just keep one copy for my own file record. I know it appeared, I will say broadly. It appeared in Cleveland also, because Otis & Company's advertisement appeared there.

Q. Now calling your attention, Mr. Simond, to a photostatic copy of a newspaper advertisement, which I will ask the stenographer to mark P X 104—

(Said document was marked as requested, P X 104.)

Q. —I will ask you if that is a copy of the advertisement used by Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company in the newspapers of July 1, 1935?

A. It appears to be.

Q. And have you compared that with the advertisement which you produced from the Boston Herald?

A. May I glance at it? I didn't compare it.

Q. Will you?

Mr. Thompson: I assume, if Mr. Burns says this is a photostatic copy taken from some paper, we have no disposition to ask the witness to sit here and compare this thing. I am willing to agree that—

A. It appears to be a photostatic copy.

Mr. Burns: Is counsel willing to agree that this is a true copy of the advertisement which Mr. Simond has produced?

Mr. Thompson: On your statement, Mr. Burns, that it is a photostatic copy, we will so agree.

Mr. Sparks: That is right.

Mr. Burns: I will state that this is a photostatic copy, that P X 104 is a photostatic copy taken from the home edition of the Indianapolis Times of July 1, 1935. May that be stipulated?

Mr. Thompson: I will take that on your statement, Mr. Burns.

Mr. Sparks: Yes.

Mr. Higgins: Yes.

Mr. Thompson: I do not mean to agree by that that I believe it to be competent, but as far as its authenticity is concerned, yes.

Mr. Burns: Q. Did the same or substantially the same advertisement appear, Mr. Simond, in the Wall Street Journal of July 1st?

A. It appeared in New York. I don't know the name but we used the Wall Street Journal.

Q. How about the New York Times?

A. The New York Times.

Q. The New York Herald Tribune?

A. The New Yorw Herald Tribune. These are the papers we used. I can't say that it actually appeared in all those papers.

Q. You don't know in how many of those it appeared?

A. No, but I know it was given broad publicity.

Q. You know that it was given broad publicity?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Burns: Well, to save the trouble of proving it in some other way, if counsel is willing to agree that it is the fact, I will state that this advertisement, P X 104, has been compared with advertisements appearing in the Indianapolis News of July 1, 1935, the Indianapolis Star of July 1, 1935, the New York Times of July 1, 1935, the Chicago Tribune of July 1, 1935, the Wall Street Journal of July 1, 1935, and the Cleveland Plain Dealer of July 1, 1935, and that the advertisement in each of those papers is identical with P X 104, except that in one or two cases the order of the names, Otis & Company and Halsey Stuart & Company is reversed, and in the New York editions of the papers Otis & Company, I suppose in order to comply with the New York law, used the word "Incorporated" after the name Otis & Company.

Mr. Thompson: On behalf of the City of Indianapolis I am willing to make such an agreement, provided it is agreed by you that in none of these advertisements did the name of the City of Indianapolis appear as a signer of such advertisement.

Mr. Burns: Well it appears right on its face that it didn't.

Mr. Thompson: I know, but then—

Mr. Burns: I am perfectly willing to agree that the City of Indianapolis does not appear as a signer of this advertisement.

Is other counsel willing to agree that these papers—

Mr. Sparks: Yes, on the agreement that nobody appears as a signer except as indicated in that exhibit.

Mr. Burns: That is perfectly all right.

Q. Do you know whether this advertisement of July 1, 1935, appeared in any papers in Chicago other than the Chicago Tribune?

A. Probably the Journal of Commerce.

Q. Probably the Chicago Journal of Commerce?

A. Yes.

Q. The Chicago Daily News?

A. I should say the News and American.

Q. Probably the Chicago Daily News and the Chicago American, the two evening papers and the Journal of Commerce, and the Chicago Tribune?

A. Yes; maybe the Herald & Examiner in the morning, that I don't know.

Q. That you don't recall?

A. No.

Q. But you would say that very wide currency was given to this advertisement, P X 104, throughout the country?

A. That is correct—throughout the country? I can't say that, I don't know about the west coast.

Q. Over what territory does Halsey Stuart & Company advertise?

A. The middle west.

Q. As far west as the Mississippi river?

A. Oh yes. I don't know that we advertise in San Francisco or Seattle.

Q. Yes, but over the east and the middle west you would say the advertisement was given very wide currency in the newspapers?

A. I don't know how to construe that "wide currency." It was given—I am sure it was given publicity where we had sales representatives.

Q. And you had sales representatives through most of the east and the middle west?

A. Through most of the east and middle west.

Q. Now, did Halsey Stuart & Company later get out a different form of advertisement in connection with the sale of these City of Indiana Gas Plant Revenue Bonds?

A. What do you mean by "legal"?

Q. Beg pardon?

A. What do you mean by "legal"?

Q. No, later.

A. Oh, later. I don't know, Mr. Burns. They may have. That would have been handled by our advertising department.

Q. Well, to refresh your recollection, I show you a photostat of an advertisement appearing in the Indianapolis Star of July 8, 1935, and ask you whether you can identify that?

A. I can't identify it without having seen an original. I don't recall at this date.

Q. You can't recall at this date whether that advertisement was published?

A. I would say it is our form and our type and everything but—

Q. From an inspection of it you would say that it looks as though it were your advertisement?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you notice in there a reference to some booklet, booklet S. J. 7, in one of the little boxes at the bottom?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that a booklet Halsey Stuart put out for bond buyers?

A. Well I can't answer that definitely. I know we get out a series of booklets but I don't read them; I have no time to read them, and I don't prepare them. They are prepared by our advertising department.

Q. From an examination of that advertisement which I have just shown you, you haven't any doubt that is is a photostat of the Halsey Stuart advertisement?

A. No.

Mr. Burns: I will ask to have the reporter mark the photostat, of which we have just been inquiring, P X 105.

(Said document was marked as requested, P X 105.)

Mr. Burns: May it be stipulated that this photostat, P X 105, is a photostat of an advertisement appearing in the Indianapolis Star for July 8, 1935.

Mr. Thompson: Subject to the same stipulation that it isn't signed—this is just one specific publication?

Mr. Burns: That is right.

Mr. Thompson: Yes, I will agree to that.

Mr. Higgins: Yes, we will agree.

Mr. Burns: Mr. Sparks?

Mr. Sparks: Yes. What was the date?

Mr. Burns: July 8, 1935.

Mr. Higgins: In the Star?

Mr. Burns: In the Indianapolis Star.

Q. Would you have in your records of Halsey Stuart & Company, Mr. Simond, any record of the papers in which the advertisement of July 1, 1935, P X 104, and the advertisement of July 8, 1935, P X 102, appeared?

A. Yes, our vouchers would show that.

Q. Your vouchers would show that?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you get that information for us?

A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson: It is agreed that the witness in answer to the last question may furnish a list to the reporter of the newspapers in which P X 104 and P X 105 were inserted by Halsey Stuart & Company.

Mr. Burns: And the dates of such insertions?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, and the dates of such insertions.

The Witness: Do you want that certified?

Mr. Thompson: No.

Mr. Burns: No, just give him a letter and we would like it soon, because I take it it won't be very hard for you to get.

Q. Now in connection with the purchase of these bonds, Mr. Simond, did the city prepare and give to Halsey Stuart & Company a transcript of the proceedings, or something of that sort, upon which the bonds were to be issued?

A. That is right.

Q. Have you got a copy of that with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. May I see it?

A. (Witness hands document to counsel.)

Mr. Burns: I will ask to have this marked P X 106.

(Said document was marked as requested, P X 106.)

The Witness: I would like to keep that copy if I may.

Mr. Burns: All I want to do is to have an opportunity to make a copy of it.

Q. Mr. Simond, calling your attention to the transcript which you have produced, and which is marked P X 106, I will ask you if this is the transcript which Halsey Stuart & Company received in connection with the purchase of the City of Indianapolis Gas Plant Revenue Bonds?

A. That is right.

Q. And the information contained in this transcript was relied upon by Halsey Stuart in the purchase of those bonds?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you know from whom Halsey Stuart & Company received this transcript?

A. It is just recollection, but we got that with the delivery of the bonds, so I presume the City Treasurer brought that up with the bonds.

Q. The City Treasurer of the City of Indianapolis?

A. That is right, that being a customary procedure.

Q. You had previously examined various parts of the documents that made up this transcript, I take it?

A. Our attorneys had.

Q. Your attorneys had. And your attorneys in this transaction were who?

A. The firm of Matson, Ross, McCord & Clifford.

Mr. Burns: Well now may it be stipulated, for the purpose of saving expense in the copying of this transcript, which contains some 72 pages, that the copy of the transcript in the possession of the city will be produced at the trial and that every one will agree that it is a correct copy of this transcript which has been identified as P X 106?

Mr. Thompson: Yes.

Mr. Sparks: That is right.

Mr. Burns: Q. Mr. Simond, in the event that we are unable to locate another copy of this transcript, will it be agreeable to you to have the reporter or somebody from Mr. Snyder's office make arrangements with you to have this copied as long as it is returned safely to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Burns: I take it that that is perfectly agreeable to counsel, in the event that we can't locate a copy of the transcript?

Mr. Thompson: Certainly. I just agreed that we have got one copy.

Mr. Burns: I know it, but sometimes they turn out not to be identical, or something of that sort.

Mr. Thompson: It is a certainty that Mr. Matson's firm will have a correct copy because they gave their opinion.

Mr. Burns: Yes.

Q. Mr. Simond, calling your attention to a photostatic copy of a letter dated September 20, 1935, I will ask you if you recognize that as a letter from your office?

A. Well I can say this, that the gentleman who signed the letter was and is in our employ.

Q. And you recognize his signature?

A. I recognize his signature.

Mr. Higgins: A letter to whom?

Mr. Burns: To Newton Todd.

Q. Is this man now here in Chicago?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where is he located?

A. You mean this man Walter?

Q. Yes.

A. In Minneapolis.

Q. Was he located here in Chicago at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And you do recognize his signature attached to that letter?

A. I recognize his signature.

Q. And is W. R. Cosby, who is referred to in this letter which I have had marked P X 107, the same Cosby who you said traveled out of Champaign, Illinois, and covered Indianapolis?

A. That is correct. I may be mistaken about his home address being Champaign. I know he lived there.

Q. That isn't very vital.

A. In either Champaign or Urbana.

Q. The circular, Mr. Simond, referred to in that letter would be the circular, P X 102, which was currently in use by Halsey Stuart & Company?

Mr. Thompson: If you know of your own knowledge.

A. I don't know. I haven't seen this letter before.

Mr. Burns: Q. Was there any other circular that you were using at that time?

A. My assumption is—and it is only an assumption—that it refers to the circular of July 1st, because he shows here the available maturities.

Q. That is the circular identified as P X 102?

A. That is right.

Q. That is the circular which was then in current use by Halsey Stuart & Company in the marketing of these bonds?

A. That is right.

Q. Now showing you another letter, Mr. Simond, or photostat of letter marked P X 108, is that your signature shown on that photostat?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you write that letter on or about the date shown thereon?

A. Apparently so.

Q. And calling your attention particularly to your statement, "a circular of which released at the time of our general offering over a year ago is enclosed herewith". Can you identify from that what circular it was?

A. The one of July 1st.

Q. P X 102?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A copy of P X 102 was the circular which you enclosed in the letter to Mr. Todd, P X 108?

A. That is the circular, because it refers to the one released at the time the bonds were offered generally.

Q. You haven't any doubt about it, have you, that that is the one you enclosed?

A. No, I haven't much doubt about it. I can't say for a certainty, but from the description and the reference in the letter, that is the one.

Q. There wasn't any other circular which you issued at the time the bonds were generally offered, was there?

A. Not at that time, no, sir.

Q. Now calling your attention particularly to the last sentence of that letter, Mr. Simond,—"The statements contained therein"—when you said "therein" you were referring to the cir ular, were you not?

A. That is right.

Q. —"were approved by attorneys for the City and by engineers whose report on this project was available to us"?

A. That is right.

Q. When you wrote that you understood that to be the fact, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you still understand that to be the fact?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you a photostat of a letter, or a carbon copy of a letter marked P X 109. Can you identify that as a photostat of the carbon copy of the letter which you were answering to Mr. Todd?

A. Not very well, Mr. Burns.

Q. You haven't brought that letter with you, the letter from Mr. Todd?

A. No, sir.

Q. You would have it in your files at the office?

A. Probably in the sales files, yes, sir.

Q. And you could check that up and identify it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you with you, Mr. Simond, the other papers that were subpoenaed for you to bring here?

A. Have you a copy of the subpoena?

Q. I have.

A. Under (c) "The use which the City of Indianapolis expected to make of the proceeds of the sale of the Gas Plant Revenue Bonds it expected to issue or actually issued in 1935." The only information we have on that is in the transcript itself.

Q. You have no information on that other than the transcript?

A. I have no information on that other than the transcript.

Q. Now taking sub-paragraph (a) paragraph A, what have you on that subject?

A. Well I have this information here (indicating).

Q. May I see it?

A. I checked this—"All memoranda, minutes and records."

Mr. Thompson: What do you mean by "The plans of the City of Indianapolis"?

Mr. Burns: I think that is fairly clear. If I can see the papers which he has brought, I think it will save a little time.

The Witness: "All memoranda". You brought up Todd's letter. I didn't have that because that is filed under the individual's name.

Mr. Burns: I am not finding fault because you didn't bring it.

A. The heading is so general. Down in here (indicating) these paragraphs (indicating) you will see where I checked it. This (indicating) has reference to the circular. Now with respect to "(b) Any proceeding, meeting, transaction, negotiation, conversation or correspondence in connection with the sale". Here is a copy of the prospectus which was furnished by the City—

Q. May I see that please?

A. —on which we based our preliminary information.

(Handing document to counsel.)

Mr. Burns: Mark this P X 110.

(Said document was marked as requested P X 110.)

Mr. Burns: Q Mr. Simond, this paper which I have marked P X 110, containing 45 pages, is the statement pertaining to the proposed issue of Indianapolis Gas Plant Revenue Bonds which you just described as a prospectus, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And this was furnished to Halsey Stuart & Company by the City of Indianapolis?

A. It is furnished to any interested bidder interested in the bonds.

Q. This was furnished before the bid was made?

A. That is right.

Q. And do you remember, or is there anything shown in your records, just when you received this?

A. Not unless it is dated. Prior to the sale, that is all I can say, because our information is based on records of this sort.

Q. You relied upon this prospectus, as you describe it, P X 110, in making your bid for the bonds?

A. Not altogether; it was in part.

Q. But you relied in part upon that?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you had that at the time you made the bid which was accepted and resulted in the sale?

A. That is correct.

Q. From whom, if you recall, did you receive that?

A. From the city. Now who—

Q. Just who turned it over?

A. Who turned it over, I don't know.

Q. You don't recall?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Have you in your files any letter by which that was transmitted?

A. I haven't found any.

Q. Do you think it was probably handed to you or somebody in Indianapolis?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you another copy of this prospectus, or is that the only copy that you have?

A. Well I don't think it is material from our standpoint, because the transcript is all we would need, and so if you want it—

Q. Are you perfectly willing to have it marked and put in the deposition?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you some other papers which you brought here in response to the subpoena?

A. Correspondence in reference to the circulars.

Q. May I see that?

A. We submitted them to the attorneys and to the engineers for their approval.

Q. May we see that correspondence, please?

A. (Witness hands papers to counsel.)

Q. Mr. Simond, I call your attention to three documents, marked respectively, P X 111, P X 112, and P X 113. Calling your attention to P X 111, is that a correct copy of a letter which you wrote to Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson, about June 27, 1935?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was that sent on or about its date?

A. On that date.

Q. And did you on the following day, June 28th, have a telephone conversation with Mr. Rabb in Indianapolis?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now with your letter, P X 111, to Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson, did you enclose a proof of the proposed circular which was issued July 1st?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is this the copy of the proof which you enclosed—P X 114?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Burns: I will ask to have this marked P X 114.

(Said document was marked as requested, P X 114.)

Mr. Burns: Q. Calling your attention again to P X 114, is this the copy of the proof as Mr. Rabb sent it back to you (indicating)?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell us how many of the ink marks and changes that appear on that proof were made before it was sent to Mr. Rabb and how many were made by him?

A. I would say that the changes made in my writing were prepared prior to the submission to Mr. Rabb.

Q. And the changes in your writing—just so we will have this clear, suppose we mark the pages 1, 2, 3, and 4 respectively.

(Said pages were so marked by the Notary.)

Mr. Burns: Q. Now calling your attention to the change made in ink about the middle of page 2 by the insertion of the word "approximately", is that in your writing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would say that that was made prior to the time you sent it to Mr. Rabb?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And calling your attention to the various changes in ink made on page 3 of P X 114, are all of those changes made on that page in your writing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would say that those changes were made prior to the submission of this proof to Mr. Rabb?

A. That is correct.

Q. And calling your attention to the underlining of the words "or sale or disposition of any part," appearing on page 4 of this circular; and calling your attention also particularly to Mr. Rabb's letter to you, do you know who made that underlining?

A. I would say Mr. Rabb. The changes I made were in ink. And he refers to it here: "As stated over the telephone and in our wire the words 'or sale or disposition of any part' in the third sentence of the next to the last paragraph of this circular should be eliminated." So he underscores here what should be eliminated.

Q. The words that should be eliminated. And calling your attention particularly to the pencil notations at the top of page 1, other than the marks made here by the reporter, are they your writing?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whose they are?

A. They were signed by Mr. Rabb.

Q. That is all you know about it?

A. That is all I know, absolutely.

Q. Now as I understand it, this P X 114 was sent to Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson in your letter of which P X 111 is a copy, and was received back from Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson in P X 113, this letter from Albert L. Rabb to you, A. L. Rabb to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And enclosed in the letter P X 113 was a confirmation of a telegram P X 112?

A. That is right.

Q. Now would you object to parting with the proof of the circular, P X 114?

A. No, sir, if we get it back.

Q. That is, you will let us take it long enough to photostat it?

A. Oh sure.

Q. And also the letters?

A. And the letters.

Q. Did you have any other correspondence with Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson about this circular, or about anything in connection with these Indianapolis Gas Bonds?

A. Yes, with respect to the supplemental memorandum that we prepared, a copy of which you have entered as evidence.

Q. May I see that correspondence?

A. Yes, sir, (handing documents to counsel).

Q. Calling your attention, Mr. Simond, to the supplemental mimeographed memorandum dated September 28, 1935, which has been identified as P X 103, did you prepare that memorandum?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where did you secure the information from which that was prepared?

A. Well, it incorporated much of the stuff that was used in our original circular, from the prospectus and then from the City itself.

Q. When you say "prospectus" you are referring to P X 110?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you were speaking of your original memorandum you were referring to P X 102?

A. That is right; and then discussions with the city with respect to the personnel of the Board of Directors and their affiliations.

Q. Now where did you get the information contained in that memorandum in regard to the city being engaged in negotiations with the Indianapolis Gas Company for a definite lease basis?

A. Where did we get that information?

Q. Yes.

A. From the city.

Q. From the city. In what form did you get that information?

A. Probably a conversation. There was a representative sent down for that purpose.

Q. There was a representative sent to Indianapolis?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that representative?

A. I don't recall offhand.

Q. Do you know with whom he talked?

A. With whom he talked?

Q. Yes.

Mr. Sparks: How can he know that except by hearsay?

A. No.

Mr. Burns: Q. You do not?

A. Our correspondence as far as the city was concerned was with Mr. Rabb.

Q. Do you know what happened to the rest of this letter that appears to be torn off here, the letter of September 21, 1935?

A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know whether that letter was ever signed, or what was written on the bottom of it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know when you received it, or whether it was signed when you received it, or anything of the sort?

A. I don't recall now.

Q. You don't recall anything at all?

A. I don't recall now.

Mr. Thompson: How could it be signed when it was received if it isn't signed now?

Mr. Burns: Part of it has been torn off. You can't tell whether it was signed or not. Half the page is torn off.

A. No, "Very truly."

Q. Isn't there half a page torn off that sheet?

A. Apparently a blank. I don't know.

Mr. Higgins: That has been torn off.

Mr. Burns: It is pretty plain that half the sheet has been torn off.

Mr. Thompson: Yes, and it is perfectly apparent the letter ends there too.

A. Occasionally we get letters that aren't signed, just sent out carelessly.

Mr. Burns: Q. You don't know what happened to the balance of that sheet that is torn off?

A. No, I have no idea.

Sometimes the boys pick up our mail before it is signed.

Q. Have you any more material that you brought here in response to the subpoena?

A. Well, the answers to some of those questions are in the transcript. I have indicated that.

Q. Yes, but have you any more material?

A. Here is an ordinance with the letter of transmission of Matson, Ross, McCord and Clif[illegible]d with respect to it (handing document to counsel).

Q. Did you bring with you the Mullergren report, Mr. Simond?

A. A photostatic copy. That is what we seemed to have in our files.

Q. Do you know where the original is?
A. Mr. Eaton may have it; I am not sure.
Q. Mr. Eaton of Otis & Comapny in Cleveland?
A. Yes.
Q. Or Mr. Daily, the president of Otis & Company?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you receive this report from Mr. Mullergren on or about the date shown there, June 22, 1935?
A. Yes, approximately that date.
Q. Did you have anything to do with engaging Mr. Mullergren?
A. No.
Q. Who did engage him, if you know?
A. I don't know; whether Mr. Eaton did or Mr. Schroeder did, I don't know.
Mr. Thompson: Q. Who is Mr. Schroeder?
A. Schroeder is one of our corporation buying department men.
Mr. Burns: Q. But you personaliy didn't have anything to do with engaging him?
A. No, sir.
Q. This report of Mr. Mullergren's was part of the information upon which you relied in the purchase of these securities of the Indianapolis Gas Plant and in making up the circular, P X 102?
A. That is right.
Mr. Thompson: How could he have relied on that report in purchasing bonds which were bought on May 28th when the report is dated in June?
Mr. Burns: Q. How much earlier than the date of this report was Mr. Mullergren engaged, do you know?
A. I don't recall, Mr. Burns. I know he made a verbal report to us, and then reduced it to this form.
Q. Did he make this verbal report to you before you made your bid to the City of Indianapolis?
A. That I don't know.
Q. Well if he didn't you would want to correct—
A. Before we made our purchase?
Q. Before you made your purchase.
A. Well I know he was familiar with that situation down there, and we discussed it with him, and he made his examination prior to the sale, and then—or, I will put it this way, he went over with us an examination he had made previously, and then at the request of Otis and ourselves brought that report up to date.

Q. And this preliminary discussion that you had with him was before you made your bid for the bonds?

A. That is right.

Q. And did you personally have that discussion with him?

A. I sat in on it. I wasn't alone.

Q. You weren't alone. Do you recall who else was there?

A. I don't recall definitely. I know who probably would be there.

Q. But you don't at this time have any definite recollection?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Except that you and Mr. Mullergren were there?

A. That is right.

Q. And that it was before you submitted your bid in the latter part of May, 1935?

A. Yes.

Q. Now in connection with this preliminary conference that you had in May, 1935, was there some discussion of the lease from the Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company of the Indianapolis gas property?

Mr. Thompson: With whom?

Mr. Burns: Was there some discussion between Mr. Mullergren and Mr. Simond?

A. Not between us.

Q. Was anything said about the lease?

A. Well, I don't recall, because I wasn't alone in that discussion, you see. We knew of the lease.

Q. You knew of the lease?

A. We knew of the lease.

Q. Was anything said in that conversation about the lease?

A. With Mr. Mullergren?

Q. Yes, with Mr. Mullergren.

A. That I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether anybody mentioned anything about the lease?

A. To Mr. Mullergren? No, I don't know.

Q. Or to anybody else that was present there at the conversation?

A. I don't know.

Q. To whom were copies of this report of Mr. Mullergren's furnished?

A. Otis & Company and ourselves.

Q. Did you furnish copies to anybody else?

A. We may have in some instances where we were requested.

Q. Did you furnish a copy to the City of Indianapolis?

A. We didn't.

Q. Do you know whether anybody did?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know whether Mr. Mullergren did?

A. I don't know.

Q. Or whether Otis & Company did?

A. I doubt if Mr. Mullergren would because he was, for this occasion, in our employ. Whether Otis & Company did, I don't know.

Q. Is this the only report which you received from Mr. Mullergren?

A. No, there was a previous report. That was not our property.

Q. Did you receive that from him, receive copies from him?

A. No, sir.

Q. You received it from somebody else?

A. Otis & Company.

Q. Do you have a copy of that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever had a copy of it?

A. We had it in our possession. It was on the basis of that that we had our preliminary discussion with Mr. Mullergren, and that was a report which he brought down to date in this showing.

Q. Do you know when that previous report had been made by Mr. Mullergren?

A. No, sir. It was not made for us. I don't know when it was made.

Q. Now calling your attention particularly, Mr. Simond, to a statement appearing—the pages don't seem to be numbered—at the bottom of a page headed in caps "Leasehold"; calling your particular attention to the words "The lease in our opinion is a very favorable one for the Citizens Gas Company." In the conference that you had with Mr. Mullergren prior to your purchase of the bonds, was that opinion, or the substance of that opinion expressed by Mr. Mullergren?

Mr. Thompson: To which question the defendants, City of Indianapolis, and the individuals who are members of the Board of Trustees and Directors of the City of Indianapolis object, because this is purely hearsay as to them. This is a conversation between representatives of Otis &

Company and Halsey Stuart & Company, and is self-serving; the declarations would be self-serving, and could in no possible way bind the city.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company object for all those reasons, and for the further reason that that question or substantially that question has been asked and answered at least two or three times before.

Mr. Burns: Now will you read the question, please.

(Question read.)

A. Our discussion was primarily on the physical structure and situation. We didn't have anything to do with the lease as a legal matter.

Q. When you say the physical structure, was that the physical structure of the owned property or the leased property, or both?

A. All.

Q. All the property including the leased property?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is what you were discussing with Mr. Mullergren?

A. That is right.

Mr. Burns: I would like to have this Mullergren report, or the photostatic copy of it furnished by Mr. Simond, marked P X 115.

(Said document was marked as requested, P X 115.)

Mr. Burns: Now we would like to get this long enough to make a copy of it, if we may, if that is all right.

Q. Did you bring something else with you in response to the subpoena?

A. A memorandum here with respect to the lease, a legal document, in order to determine the scope, discretion and authority that the Board of Directors may exercise in taking over the gas property.

Mr. Thompson: Who prepared that memorandum?

A. Mr. Matson.

Mr. Burns: It has no date. Do you recall when you received this memorandum from Messrs. Matson, Ross, McCord & Clifford?

A. No, I don't, Mr. Burns.

Q. Have you had an opportunity to check on that Newton Todd letter, Mr. Simond?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Calling your attention again to P X 109, the photostat of a carbon copy from Newton Todd to Halsey Stuart, dated December 4, 1936, have you now found the original of that letter from Mr. Todd in your file?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this is a correct photostat of that letter?

A. A correct copy.

Q. Have you also found the carbon copy of your letter to Mr. Todd of December 7th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that serves to confirm your former statement that Plaintiff's Exhibit 108 was a letter that you wrote to Mr. Todd?

A. That is correct.

Q. Does that letter show what you enclosed with it, in any other way than the original letter shows?

A. No, nothing further.

Q. Have you brought with you, Mr. Simond, all of the correspondence between your office and the office of Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson, or anyone representing the City of Indianapolis?

A. To my knowledge I have.

Q. You have caused a search to be made of your files to locate that correspondence?

A. Yes. I was just thinking a moment ago that they sent us copies of the reports showing earnings and so forth, which I neglected to bring.

Q. Did you ascertain over the phone on what days and in what papers those various advertisements were published?

A. They are preparing that.

Q. They are preparing that?

A. That is right.

Mr. Burns: You may cross examine.

Mr. Thompson: Will you identify this as Defendant City's Exhibit No. 1.

(Said document was marked as requested, Defendant City's Exhibit No. 1.)

Cross-Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. Mr. Simond, I hand you now a memorandum which has been identified as City's Exhibit 1 and ask you whether that is a memorandum which you received from your attorneys, Matson, Ross, McCord & Clifford?

A. That is right.

Q. And this Exhibit No. 1, City's Exhibit No. 1, was produced here this morning at the request of the plaintiffs in response to the subpoena duces tecum that had been served upon you?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now you don't know at the present time just when you received this opinion which is identified as City's Exhibit No. 1?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who was the particular member of the firm of Matson, Ross, McCord & Clifford with whom you dealt?

A. Mr. Matson.

Q. Mr. Frederick E. Matson, who is the senior member of the firm?

A. Yes.

Q. And he is a man that has had a long and intimate connection with the problems arising out of the gas properties at Indianapolis?

A. Yes.

Q. He has been connected for the William Eaton Estate in litigation in the Federal Court respecting the validity of this public charitable trust?

A. I don't know that.

Q. Now I call your attention—naturally when you received this opinion of course it was given careful attention by the firm of Halsey Stuart & Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that from whatever date it was received you were aware that in the opinion of your counsel the following was true—and I read from page 13:

"The exact situation on the lease must depend on true meaning of the terms in the franchise contract, and in those provisions in the Articles of Incorporation of the Company out of which a public charitable trust arose. Did the Board of Public Works and the Common Council, when granting the franchise in 1905 and reserving therein the right to take over 'plant and property' on payment of a minimum cost, have in mind or contemplate that when such time came there would be found in the 'plant and property' of the gas company a 99 year lease on other utility property greater in extent than its own, the annual rental charge for which would be nearly half a million dollars? Or, if the creation of a public charitable trust, to arise out of terms under which stockholders of the Company were to invest their money under its Articles of Incorporation, was specifically contemplated, did the Common Council, in adopting the ordinance approving the franchise contract, which was its only action 'to receive' the trust and 'to agree to conditions and terms accompanying the same and binding the corporation (the City) to carry them out', contemplate or intend the trust res should ever include a lease with such burdens and obligations as the lease here involved?

"The answer to these questions would seem to be clearly and positively in the negative. It is inconceivable that the Board of Public Works, the Common Council, and the public spirited citizens of the City who promoted the enterprise, could at that time have had any such thing in mind. No such intention is expressed in the franchise contract, nor can any such intention fairly be implied therefrom."

Now that closes the quote for the present. Now you are familiar with that part of Mr. Matson's opinion?

A. Yes.

Mr. Burns: Just a minute. I would like to object to that as wholly irrelevant and immaterial, which is a mere speculation on the part of Mr. Matson. A copy of the opinion from an attorney to his client is privileged and otherwise objectionable.

Mr. Thompson: You caused it to be produced. You subpoenaed it. You can't subpoena something and then claim it is privileged.

Mr. Burns: I didn't subpoena that, as a matter of fact.

Mr. Thompson: You subpoenaed everything you could lay your hands on.

Mr. Burns: I didn't subpoena anything from Matson, Ross, McCord & Clifford.

Mr. Thompson: Q. In all your dealings—and when I say you, I mean Halsey Stuart & Company's dealings—after this opinion from Mr. Matson, you dealt with this proposition on the theory that this leased property was not a part of the trust res?

Mr. Burns: I object. That assumes he knows.

A. Of the trust what?

Mr. Thompson: Q. Of the trust res; that is to say, the trust property of the Citizens Gas Company that was being taken over by the City of Indianapolis, is that true?

A. That is true, but I don't know how many talks we had with Mr. Matson afterwards. I don't know when we received that.

Q. I understand that. I am going to find out from Mr. Matson what the date of this opinion was. Now Halsey Stuart & Company were interested jointly with Otis & Company in purchasing these Gas Plant Revenue Bonds?

A. Yes.

Q. And you made a joint bid for these bonds to the City of Indianapolis on the 28th day of May, 1935?

A. In response to advertised sale.

Q. And your bid was accepted on the following day, May 29, 1935?

A. Yes.

Q. Now when were these bonds physically delivered to you by the City and when did you pay the consideration for them?

A. Either on or subsequent to July 1st.

Q. Wasn't the payment made—

Mr. Burns: June 27th.

Mr. Thompson: Q. —June 27th?

A. That is right.

Q. Now between the date when your bid had been accepted and the date when the bonds were delivered, Mr. Simond, did you come to Indianapolis with Mr. Cyrus Eaton of Otis & Company and have an interview with me and with Mr. Broadhurst Elsey, who was then the Treasurer of the Board of Trustees for Utilities, City of Indianapolis?

A. Was that before or after sale?

Q. I say, after you had purchased the bonds but before you had issued this circular of July 1st, which is marked P X 102?

A. After we bought the bonds did we go to Indianapolis?

Q. Yes, and have a conversation with me, Mr. Elsey and Mr. Cyrus Eaton?

A. I don't recall whether it was before or after, Mr. Thompson.

Q. Well you remember that you did have a conversation with Mr. Elsey and me in connection with the City of Indianapolis participating in or becoming responsible for the bond circular which you and Otis & Company were to issue?

A. I am sorry. Will you repeat that question again?

Q. What I am asking you is this: that after you and Otis & Company had made this joint bid, and your bid had been accepted, and before you issued this circular that was dated July 1st, if it isn't a fact that you came to the City of Indianapolis and had a conference in my office at which was present yourself, Mr. Cyrus Eaton of Otis & Company, Mr. Boradhurst Elsey, who was then the treasurer of the Board of Directors for the Utilities district and myself?

A. With respect to the circular?

Q. Yes, sir. And to the City of Indianapolis participating in such a circular?

A. What do you mean by participating in the issuance of it?

Q. I will ask you if you didn't request the Board of Directors for Utilities to join with Otis & Company and your firm, Halsey Stuart & Company, in the issuance of this bond circular?

A. No, sir, we asked for the approval.

Q. You asked us to approve it?

A. That is right.

Q. And that conversation was held in my office, wasn't it, with the people present whom I have just indicated?

A. It was in your firm's offices, yes, sir.

Q. Now I will ask you if it isn't a fact that I told you at that time, in the presence of Mr. Eaton and in the presence of Mr. Elsey, that the only statutory authority which the Board of Directors for Utilities had was to make this offering of the bonds, and that the Board would not join in or approve the issuance of any circular whatever; that that was a matter that was entirely up to the people who had purchased the bonds?

A. That is right.

Q. So that when this circular was issued and when this correspondence was had with Mr. Rabb, you knew at that time that the only competent authority, that is, the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis had declined your express request to approve any circular which the underwriter of these bonds would put out?

A. I don't know whether it was a declination or not. I know they said that Mr. Rabb, as attorney for the city, it seems to me would approve a circular.

Q. Didn't Mr. Elsey tell you and didn't I tell you there that the city would have nothing to do with the approval of any bond circular?

A. That the city nor you would have anything to do with it?

Q. Yes, sir, that the city would have nothing to do with the approval of a bond circular; that it had sold revenue bonds, had exercised its statutory authority, and that it would have nothing to do with the approval of the circular?

A. That may be true.

Mr. Burns: You don't recall it?

Mr. Thompson: Now wait a minute, Mr. Burns; I am cross-examining.

Q. Is that your recollection of that conversation?

A. I am frank to say I don't recall all the details of that.

Q. Don't you recall that you asked our firm to give an opinion as to the non-taxability, for income tax purposes, of these revenue bonds?

A. Asked your firm to give an opinion?

Q. Yes, in that same conference.

A. They may have, because we were getting it from Matson, and the city was getting your opinion.

Q. And if I didn't tell you in that same conference, emphasizing again that the city would have nothing to do with your re-sale of these bonds; that all that the city would do through our firm, as counsel, would be to give an opinion as to the legality of this issue, and that it declined to join in any opinion as to the non-taxability of these bonds, the income on these bonds, isn't that true, Mr. Simond?

A. I know we had your opinion on tax exemption.

Q. I know, but don't you recall that conversation?

A. No, I am sorry, I don't.

Q. You wouldn't say it didn't occur, will you?

A. I don't say it didn't occur at all.

Q. You do know that you requested in that conference that the city approve these bonds and that I told you that it would not approve them, and that Mr.. Elsey told you that—I mean this bond circular?

A. You mean the bond circular?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I recall that.

Q. And when you wrote to Mr. Rabb, or to our firm—let me have these exhibits here—I call your attention to your letter of June 27th, which has been identified as P X 111. You wrote to us individually; you didn't even address us as attorneys for the Utility District or for the City of Indianapolis, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. And that was because, wasn't it, Mr. Simond, of this prior conference that we had had with you, at which we said we would not approve the circular for the City of Indianapolis and there emphasized that, that is right, isn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. And I call your attention also to P X 113, in which Mr. Rabb answered your letter and said, "As to the remainder of the circular we have no comment". You understood when you got that, that that was merely in line with what I had told you in the prior conference, that the city would have no part in the approval of this circular?

A. That is right.

Q. Now you produced certain other papers here this morning at Mr. Burn's request which he did not have identified as exhibits; that is right, isn't it—these papers that I have here before me now: a letter from Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson to Halsey Stuart & Company under date of September 25th; copy of a letter from Halsey Stuart & Company to Mr. Rabb under date of September 23, 1935, and an original from Mr. Rabb to yourself, or I will say from Mr. Rabb—it is on our letterhead, Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson, to yourself, on September 21, 1935; and also a letter from yourself to Mr. Albert Rabb under date of September 18, 1935.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Thompson: I will have these identified as City's Exhibits 2, 3, 3-A, 4, 4-A, and 5, respectively.

(Said documents were marked as requested, City's Exhibits 2, 3, 3-A, 4, 4-A, and 5, respectively.)

Mr. Thompson: Q. I will ask you first to state for the record whether that correspondence was produced by you this morning in response to the subpoena duces tecum that had been served upon you?

A. That is correct.

Q. I call your attention particularly to City's Exhibit No. 4, which is a letter on the letterhead of Thomson, Rabb & Stevenson, dated September 21, 1935, and ask you whether that letter, which is unsigned, apparently, was received by you in due course of mail from our firm probably on the 22nd or 23rd day of September?

A. I would say so. We acknowledged their letter of September 21st.

Q. And when in accordance with page 2 of this letter, Mr. Rabb wrote you as follows: "We make no comment on the other facts stated in the proposed circular, as to most of which we have no personal knowledge; and hence do not discuss," you understood also that that was in accordance with the former conversation which Mr. Elsey and I had had with you, that the city would not approve these circulars?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now your attention has been directed to certain newspaper advertisements which have been identified as P X 104 and P X 105. Those circulars were prepared by Halsey Stuart & Company—I mean those advertisements were prepared by Halsey Stuart & Company?

A. That is right.

Q. On their own initiative?

A. That is right.

Q. Without the assistance of anyone else except members of your own firm and Otis & Company?

A. Or possibly our advertising counsel and advertising agency.

Q. And were published individually and on your own responsibility in the newspapers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now your attention has also been directed to a prospectus issued by the City which has been identified as P X 110. That is a prospectus that went to bidders for these Gas Plant Revenue Bonds?

A. Yes.

Q. You did not furnish that prospectus to any purchaser of these bonds, did you; I mean, purchaser from you?

A. I don't think so

Q. All that you furnished to any purchaser of these Utility bonds was either the bond circular identified as P X 102 or possibly the bond circular P X 103, and the advertisements?

A. Yes.

Q. Plus the opinion of counsel if they asked for it?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now in the issuing of these circulars and the publication of these advertisements, Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company were engaged in the sale of Gas Plant Revenue Bonds issued by the City of Indianapolis, is that true?

A. That is right.

Q. And these advertisements were published and these circulars were issued, were they not, Mr. Simond, for the purpose of inducing people to buy Gas Plant Revenue Bonds?

A. Yes.

Q. You had no Indianapolis Gas Company bonds for sale, did you? I am not talking about—

A. The 5% bonds?

Q. That is right?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever make any representations to anyone on the basis of these circulars or these advertisements to purchase from you the Indianapolis Gas Company 5's gold bonds?

A. Did our organization?

Q. Yes, on the basis of these circulars?

A. I can't answer that. I don't know how to answer that.

Q. What I am getting at, Mr. Simond,—maybe I haven't made myself very clear—all this information which you have produced here this morning, and all that has gone into—or been identified during the course of this deposition, was information which was acquired to the extent you have described by Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company, who between them purchased Utility District Revenue Bonds?

A. That is right.

Q. And not Indianapolis Gas bonds?

A. That is right.

Q. You knew, of course, in the making of these purchases that you were dealing with a municipal corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whose powers were strictly limited by statute?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew that anyone dealing with any officer, attorney or employee of the Indianapolis Gas Company, unless he had express statutory power, he was without authority to bind the city?

A. That is right.

Mr. Thompson: I have nothing more.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Burns.

Q. Mr. Simond, you said that the newspaper advertising which appeared in various papers, and was identified as P X 104 and P X 105, was prepared by Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company and your advertising counsel, is that right?

A. Or agency.

Q. Or agency?

A. Rather agency than counsel.

Q. But in the preparation of that advertising material you relied, among other things, upon the prospectus, P X 110, that had been furnished to you by the city?

A. No, they relied on the circular for that.

Q. The circular was prepared in reliance upon the statements appearing in the prospectus, among other things?

A. In part, yes, among other things, that is right.

Q. Now calling your attention particularly to the language appearing on page 5 of the circular, or the prospectus, P X 110, "The lease is for a term of 99 years from October 1, 1913," and so forth; were you familiar with that language at the time the circular was prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said in answer to a question by Mr. Thompson that from the time that you received the opinion of Matson, Ross, McCord & Clifford, identified as Defendant City's Exhibit 1, you proceeded upon the assumption that the lease of the Indianapolis Gas—the Citizens Gas Company was not a part of the property which the city was leasing, is that right?

A. Well I think we proceeded on that basis prior to that, because when they took over the property it seemed to me the showings indicated that they were taking title to certain properties not leased properties. They couldn't take title to a leased property.

Q. Well, whether they were taking an assignment of the lease, do you know approximately when that opinion was received from Matson, Ross, McCord & Clifford?

A. No, I am sorry, I don't.

Q. Was it received during the year 1935?

A. I don't recall.

Q. You don't know whether it was in 1935 or 1936?

A. No.

Q. Can you tell whether it was received before or after you issued this circular P X 102?

A. After.

Q. After?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you know how long after?

A. No.

Q. You don't know whether it was a month after or a year after?

A. No, or a year and a half or two years after.

Q. But you know it was not received until after you had issued the circular, P X 102?

A. I can't say, I don't know. I will have to say I don't think so. I don't know the date of that.

Q. Now calling your attention again to P X 111, and particularly to the second paragraph, in which you say: "While I appreciate that you cannot substantiate perhaps the figures which our engineers obtained for us, it would be very helpful if you would give us your approval of the circular, insofar as you are able."

A. That is right.

Q. That you wrote to Mr. Rabb and the only suggestions that you got from him about the circular were those contained in P X 112 and P X 113, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And when you wrote Mr. Rabb you knew that the firm of Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson represented the city in this matter, didn't you?

A. That is right.

Q. And you were writing them because they did represent the city?

A. Yes, we wrote Matson, we wrote the engineers and we wrote Mr. Rabb.

Q. You mean you wrote Matson in regard to the circular?

A. That is right.

Q. Have you got a copy of that letter here?

A. It was attached to those showings.

Q. No, Mr. Mullergren's letter. You haven't produced any letter from Matson in regard to the circular?

A. I thought I had it there. We got all three.

Q. But your recollection is that you did submit the circular to Matson, Ross, McCord & Clifford?

A. That is right.

Q. And did they approve the circular as issued by you?

A. I don't recall. The final circular incorporated the suggestions of all three. Now whether the preliminary copy we sent to Mr. Matson came back with changes or corrections on I don't recall now.

Q. But the circular as issued, P X 102, incorporated whatever suggestions Mr. Matson had to make about it?

A. That is right.

Q. And he approved it in its final form?

A. That is right.

Mr. Burns: We offer as part of the deposition—

Mr. Thompson: Pardon me, Mr. Burns, I want to ask one question about this, if you don't mind.

Mr. Burns: That is all right.

Mr. Thompson: Q. P X 115 is a report and appraisal dated June 22, 1935, made to Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company by Arthur L. Mullergren, consulting engineer, of Kansas City, Missouri?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Mullergren was employed by Halsey Stuart & Company and Otis & Company for the purpose of making this report?

A. Yes.

Q. He was not employed by the City of Indianapolis in any way?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Burns: I offer in connection with the deposition of Mr. Simond, P X 101 to P X 115, both inclusive. It is understood, however, that P X 106 will not be transmitted with the deposition, and will be later attached if it is found that it is impossible to locate a copy of it in Indianapolis, is that correct? Is that satisfactory?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, we have already stipulated it twice, Mr. Burns.

The defendant, the City of Indianapolis, and the individual defendants who are members of the Board of Directors and Board of Trustees of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis object to the admissibility in evidence of each of said exhibits, identified as P X 101, P X 102, P X 103, P X 104, P X 105, P X 107, P X 108, P X 109, P X 110, P X 111, P X 112, P X 113, P X 114, and P X 115, for each of the followng reasons: First. A city cannot be estopped expressly. It follows it cannot be estopped impliedly or in a quasi manner. Furthermore such circular has no probative force since it would not tend to prove or disprove any of the issues in this case.

Second. Such admission to be admissible must be an admission of fact. In the instant case to have probative value it would have to be one of law, namely that the lease was valid.

Third. Such admission must be sufficiently certain without the aid of a forced or strained construction to bear out the interpretations placed on it. In the instant case it is not possible even by the most tortured construction of the language of the circular to put any words in the mouth of the city respecting the validity of this lease.

Fifth. The admission must have been made by a person having knowledge. This prospectus at the bottom of the front page recites: "The information contained herein has been carefully compiled from sources considered reliable and while not guaranteed as to completeness or accuracy, we believe it to be correct as of this date.

July 1, 1935."

Sixth. Since the City of Indianapolis is the party against whom this prospectus is being offered in evidence, it must be shown that the statement was made, or the prospectus written, authorized or ratified by someone having the legal right and power to do so and that such statement was made or such prospectus written, authorized or ratified within the scope of such authority. No one in this case had that authority with the possible exception, (which is not conceded) of the Board of Directors for Utilities and unless it can be shown that they had such authority and did in a proper legal manner either write, authorize or ratify the prospectus, it is not admissible in evidence.

Seventh. The entire prospectus is irrelevant and immaterial to the issues in this cause for the reason that there is nothing in such prospectus relating to any statement by the City of Indianapolis in respect to the validity of such lease. It is not shown who issued the prospectus since no signatures appear on it, nor is there any indication as to who the author or publisher is.

Eighth. As to the City of Indianapolis the prospectus is pure hearsay as is borne out by the many statements on its face.

Ninth. There can be no showing that plaintiffs relied on this prospectus for revenue bonds in their purchase of Indianapolis Gas Company bonds.

Tenth. There has been no showing that the lease is binding on or enforceable against the City; no showing that the City was a party to the lease, an assignee of the lease, or obligated to accept an assignment thereof or obligated by reason of recognition or adoption of the lease.

(Said Exhibi marked P X 101 to P X 115, both inclusive, except P X 106, are attached to this deposition and made a part hereof.)

Mr. Thompson: The defendant, City of Indianapolis, and the defendants individually who are members of the Board of Directors and Board of Trustees of the Department of Utilities, now offer in evidence City's Exhibits 1 to 5, both inclusive, identified by me in the course of the cross-examination of this witness.

Mr. Burns: The plaintiffs object to these exhibits. To Defendant City's Exhibit 1 on the ground that it is wholly irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial. It is the printed opinion of counsel to a client. It was not subpoenaed by the plaintiffs in this case, and it represents merely the conclusions of fact or conclusions of law which are wholly immaterial.

Plaintiffs object to City's Exhibits 2, 3, 4, and 5, as merely self-serving declarations of the City or its counsel, which are not admissible against either the bondholders or the trustees of the bonds issued.

(Said City's Exhibits 1 to 5, both inclusive, are attached to this deposition and made a part hereof.)

Mr. Burns: I am not sure whether I understood you, Mr. Simond, that you didn't want this prospectus back, or is that wrong? You do want it back, do you?

A. I would like to have all these things back.

Mr. Burns: In that case I will offer in evidence only the cover which is marked by the stenographer and the first 13 pages of Exhibit 110. The remaining parts of the transcript, covering pages 14 to 45, inclusive, are merely copies of the Indiana Statutes, and I think there is no use of having those copies included in the deposition, so I will instruct the stenographer to include only the cover and pages 1 to 13, inclusive.

Mr. Thompson: I will object to any partial offer of the instrument. It has to be interpreted and construed together.

In accordance with the stipulation made by counsel during the course of taking the depositions, Mr. Simond, the witness, furnished to the reporter a list of the papers in which the two advertisements, marked P X 104 and P X 105, appeared. Such a list with a copy of the advertisements is attached hereto, marked P X 116, P X 116-A, and P X 116-B.

By stipulation of counsel for the respective parties the signature of the witness to the foregoing deposition was waived.

Re: City of Indianapolis, Indiana

Gas Plant Revenue

4½% Bonds

* * * * * *

Acquisition of Gas Properties

As indicated in the descriptive circular, this issue was for the purpose, among other things, of providing funds for the City to exercise its franchise rights to acquire the properties of Citizens Gas Company, a privately owned company which was incorporated under the Laws of Indiana in 1906, and since 1913 has had control of the entire gas business in the City of Indianapolis and its environs. In this connection, it should be noted that such acquisition by the City was a logical outcome of the relationship of Citizens Gas Company to the City. The Articles of Incorporation of Citizens Gas Company as amended August 21, 1921, provided in effect that its common stock should be under the control of a board of self-perpetuating trustees who should hold and vote the stock and issue Certificates of Beneficial Interest to the subscribers to Capital Stock and that "it shall be the duty of the Trustees and Directors of the Company to convey the gas plant and property belonging to the Company to the City of Indianapolis" upon payment or assumption of all outstanding obligations, retirement of preferred and common stock at its face value plus accrued dividends. A similar provision was contained in the franchise of Citizens Gas Company. It has been established by the Courts that this franchise was not a purchase or contract to purchase by the City but created a public charitable trust in the Company's properties with the obligation on the part of the Company to transfer the property to the City when the Company's Capital Stock was retired. This set of circumstances explains the reason why the City was able to acquire properties with an appraised depreciated physical value in excess of $13,000,000 for a consideration of approximately $6,500,000.

* * * * * *

A change in ownership always suggests the possibility of a change in personnel. This fact undoubtedly caused uncertainty in the minds of the management of the Company, which probably made it less aggressive in its sales methods than it would have been under other circumstances. Furthermore, the amount the Company could earn and distribute on its Certificates of Beneficial Interest was limited to 10%. Accordingly, it is believed that the management was content to operate the properties at a volume simply sufficient to meet all of the Company's obligations and to provide a substantial amount for additions and retirements. In this connection independent engineers state in their report.

"• • • we find that the Company does not have as large a percentage of the potential business as we feel is obtainable. There have been no campaigns in the last several years for water-heating and house-heating business and as a result the revenues of the Company are not up to their potential possibilities. It is our opinion that a rearrangement of the rate schedule and an aggressive new business campaign will result in an additional volume of profitable business."

Value of Properties

The ultra-conservative policy followed by the management of providing for additions and improvements out of earnings and charging a very large amount of depreciation is reflected in the property account of $9,577,280 as shown on the books of the Company as of April 30, 1935, as compared with the depreciated physical value of $13,431,000 as appraised by independent engineers as of January 1, 1935.

	Cost of Reproduction—New	Depreciated Physical Value
Citizens Gas Co.	$17,607,310	$13,341,230
Indianapolis Gas Co.	12,730,490	9,181,960

Tax Exempt in Indiana

Exempt from all present Federal Income Taxation

The City of Indianapolis, Indiana, in exercising its franchise rights to acquire the properties and business of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and for improvements and extensions to the properties, has issued $8,000,000 of Gas Plant Revenue 4½% Bonds, due serially, without option of prior payment, June 1, 1938 to 1967.

In the opinion of counsel, these bonds are exempt from all present Federal Income Taxation and are also tax exempt in the State of Indiana. The available yields, ranging from 3.75% to 4.00% according to maturities, compare favorably with those of many high-grade corporation bond issues lacking these tax-exempt advantages.

As to security, the City of Indianapolis will own and or control all of its gas utility system and the City covenants to maintain rates sufficient to produce revenues adequate for payment of principal and interest on these bonds, maintenance costs, operating charges, funds for working capital, repairs and upkeep. In addition, the bonds constitute, in opinion of counsel, valid and binding obligations of the City, principal and interest payable solely from revenues derived by the City from its operation of the entire gas utility system.

The City covenants to deposit monthly from operating revenues of the gas utility system, in special bank accounts, a sum equal to one-twelfth of the annual principal and interest requirements on these bonds; further agreeing that, in this manner, not less than $360,000 annually in 1936 and 1937, $450,000 annually in 1938 to 1940, and $500,000 annually in 1941 to 1967 shall be deposited (under conditions preventing withdrawal of monies from such account or accounts except for the payment of interest on and principal of these bonds).

An appraisal of the Indianapolis gas utility system, including the leased property, made by an independent engineer as of January 1, 1935, which took into consideration an allowance of $700,000 for working capital, indicates the following values: cost of reproduction (new) $30,337,800; depreciated physical value $22,613,190. For the five calendar year period 1931-35, (1935, 5 months actual, 7 months estimated) the annual average balance available for bond service and depreciation (as compiled from the engineer's report, taking into account savings in taxes through municipal ownership as estimated by the City) was $804,854; annual service charges on these bonds are $360,000, 1936-37; $450,000, 1938-40; $500,000, 1941-67.

Gentlemen:

We are in receipt of your comments of the fourth instant regarding the Indianapolis Gas situation.

The questions which you raise are of a purely legal nature arising because of the controversy between Indianapolis Gas Company and the Municipal Utility District and for the reason that we have not at any time had much interest in this controversy we do not feel qualified to attempt to answer your questions. We presume Mr. Thompson, counsel for the Utility District can best advise you what his objective is. We have had no discussion or correspondence with him about the situation.

Our interest in the financing was confined entirely to the issue of Utility District Gas Plant Revenue 4 1/2s, a circular of which released at the time of our general offering over a year ago is enclosed herewith. The statements contained therein were approved by attorneys for the city and by engineers whose report on this project was available to us.

Very truly yours,

Halsey, Stuart & Co.,

Gentlemen:

I am enclosing herewith a clipping from the Indianapolis News. What legal right does the City of Indianapolis have to use the income it receives from a property wholly owned by the City, to pay principal and interest on bonds issued by a separate corporation? The Citizens Gas & Coke Utility owns no property whatever and has no funds with which to pay bond interest or principal, except, such income paid to it by the City of Indianapolis from a property owned in fee by the City. It seems to me that a tax payer of the City of Indianapolis could enjoin the City from making payments to service the Gas Utility.

The Citizens Gas & Coke Utility is using the mains of the Indianapolis Gas Company to deliver about 70% of the total amount of gas supplied in this City and the City is paying into escrow the interest on the Indianapolis Gas bonds and the dividend on Indianapolis Gas stock. I hold Indianapolis Gas bonds and between six and seven hundred shares of Indianapolis Gas stock. I am advised that the escrow agreement was made between the City of Indianapolis and directors of the Indianapolis Gas Company. I am in no way a party to this agreement.

In his answer to the suit of the Chase National Bank, Mr. Thompson, the attorney for the Utility District, avers that your offering circular of the Indianapolis Gas Plant Revenue bonds was not authorized by him or the City. In this circular you place a value on the Indianapolis Gas property and the old Citizens Gas property. Some statements in the circular do not agree with reports made to the Public Service Commission.

I would like to know just what Mr. Thompson's objective is. I am informed that he made overtures to trade Gas Plant Revenue bonds for Indianapolis Gas stock. I would rather hold my Indianapolis Gas stock than exchange for these bonds on a par for par basis, unless, I could dispose of the bonds.

Yours very truly,

Newton Todd.

PLAINTIFF'S DEPOSITION EXHIBIT 110.

STATEMENT PERTAINING TO PROPOSED ISSUE OF INDIANAPOLIS GAS PLANT REVENUE BONDS.

Statement.

It has been adjudicated by the courts that a public charitable trust exists in the property of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis in favor of the inhabitants of the City of Indianapolis; and that the City of Indianapolis is to take over and operate such property, subject to outstanding legal obligations, when the capital stock of the Company has been retired.

The Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company, as amended, provide that its common stock shall be under the control of a board of self-perpetuating trustees who shall hold and vote the stock and issue certificates to the subscribers to capital stock, and that:

"When all outstanding preferred stock of the company shall have been retired and the holders of the certificates representing the common stock shall have received by dividends, or otherwise, upon said certificates, an amount equal to the face value thereof, together with interest thereon at the rate of ten per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, then said certificates shall be deemed fully paid and cancelled, and it shall be the duty of the trustees and directors of said company to convey said gas plant and property belonging to said company to the City of Indianapolis, subject to all outstanding legal obligations of the company, to be owned and operated or leased by it, and all the rights, title and interest of said company or its certificate holders, stockholders, directors or trustees, shall be deemed to be fully paid and extinguished, and all such certificates, whether of stock or otherwise, shall be surrendered and cancelled and said corporation shall be wound up."

And it is provided by a franchise contract granted by the City of Indianapolis and assigned to the Citizens Gas Company that:

"If the plant and system of mains of said company shall not have become the property of said city by the cancellation of the certificates of subscribers and conveyance of such property to such city by the board of directors and trustees of said company on or before the expiration of the aforesaid period of said franchise, then said city, by and through its board of public works, upon the expiration of said franchise period' (August 30, 1930) "shall have the right to pay any balance remaining due said certificate holders and the plant and property of said company shall be conveyed to said city as above provided to be owned and operated, or owned and leased by it."

Litigation by stockholders or certificate holders of the Citizens Gas Company to which the City of Indianapolis and the Company were defendants, established that this franchise contract was not a purchase or contract to purchase by the City but created a public charitable trust in the Company's property with the obligation on the part of the Company to transfer the property to the City when the Company's capital stock was retired: Todd v. Citizens Gas Company, et al., 46 Fed. 2nd. 855 (C. C. A. 7; c. d. 283 U. S. 852). The validity of this trust was recognized by the Supreme Court of Indiana: Williams v. Citizens Gas Company et al., 206 Ind. 448.

The City of Indianapolis has demanded that the Company pay off its stockholders and transfer its property to the City, reserving to the City the right to furnish funds for such purpose. The boards of directors and trustees of the Company have adopted resolutions recognizing the City's rights in the premises, and declaring that such boards would proceed in all lawful ways to carry out the obligations of the Company to certificate holders and stockholders and having discharged such obligations, transfer the property of the City to the Company.

At present (May, 1935) the Mayor of Indianapolis is John W. Kern, Jr.; Walter C. Boetcher is city controller; the board of directors for utilities consists of Henry L. Dithmer, president; Fred Jungclaus, vice-president; Brodehurst Elsey, treasurer; Roy Sahm, secretary; and Isaac E. Woodard; and the board of trustees for utilities consists of Wm. J. Mooney, Sr., president, George J. Marott; A. D. Hitz, and A. M. Glossbrenner.

A statute effective March 13, 1935 (Chapter 311 Acts 1935) authorizes the board of directors for utilities to issue revenue bonds for the purpose of obtaining funds with which to pay for the acquisition of utility property in which the city has an interest, including money required to be paid for the purpose of redeeming or extinguishing capital stock and paying outstanding obligations of such utility, and making extensions, improvements and betterments. Such bonds are to be paid solely and exclusively from the revenues of such utility property, and not out of taxes; they are to be exempt from taxation as to principal and income; and are valid without the necessity of any approval of or ratification by either the public service commission of Indiana or the state board of tax commissioners of Indiana. The board may cause such bonds to be sold at a discount of not to exceed five per cent, with interest coupons at a rate not to exceed five and one half per cent, with the right to reject any and all bids, but the interest cost to the city for the money so received shall not exceed five and one half per cent.

The City of Indianapolis has a population of 364,161 according to the Federal census of 1930, which is included within its metropolitan district, as established by the Census Bureau, with a population of 417,685.

For over twenty-one years gas has been supplied to the inhabitants of Indianapolis and neighboring communities solely through the system operated by Citizens Gas Company; a system having 867 miles of mains and with 75,949 meters in use as of May 1, 1935.

This system is in part owned by Citizens Gas Company and in part is leased by it from Indianapolis Gas Company, which is not an operating company.

The Citizens Gas Company owns a coke oven plant at what is known as its Prospect Street station, consisting of three batteries of forty ovens each, with two water gas sets, and holder capacity of 9,000,000 cubic feet. It owns approximately 40 per cent of the mains in the system.

The leased property owned by Indianapolis Gas Company and operated by Citizens Gas Company since October, 1913, includes a battery of forty one coke ovens, four water gas sets, and a holder capacity of 3,000,000 cubic feet, located at what is known as the Langsdale Avenue plant; also approximately 60 per cent of the mains of the system.

The lease is for a term of 99 years from October 1, 1913, subject to a mortgage dated October 1, 1902, from Indianapolis Gas Company to Trust Company of America securing a 5% fifty year bond issue of $7,500,000 (not all of which bonds have been issued). The rental thereunder is (a) the amount of the interest on the outstanding bonds under said mortgage, and on any refunding bonds; (b) an amount equal to six per cent. annually on the $2,000,000 capital stock of said Indianapolis Gas Company (with a possible increase of $15,000 if the price of gas to the consumer does not exceed 45 cents per thousand cubic feet); and (c) $300 annually for organization expense. The lessee agrees to pay all taxes assessed against the Indianapolis Gas Company and its property. The covenants of the lease are for the parties, their successors and assigns. The lease contains a recognition of the rights of the City of Indianapolis under the terms of the franchise contract. In 1934 the total rent paid by the Citizens Gas Company under this lease was $482,527.76, consisting of $343,150 bond interest; $120,000 dividends on stock; $19,077.76 Federal income tax against Indianapolis Gas Company; plus $300.

Due serially June 1, 1938 to 1967, both inclusive

Principal and semi-annual interest (June 1 and December 1) payable at the option of the holder in New York City, Chicago, Cleveland or Indianapolis. Coupon bonds in the denomination of $1,000, registerable as to principal.

Circular No. 2406 July 1, 1935

Plaintiff's Exhibit 114

PURPOSE OF ISSUE

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, on May 7, 1935, entitled "A resolution (No. 2-1935) for the issuance of Gas Plant Revenue Bonds," and in compliance with all applicable provisions of law including Chapter 77 of the Acts of 1929, Chapter 67 of the Acts of 1931 and Chapter 125 of the Acts of 1933, as amended by Chapter 311 of the Acts of 1935 of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, these bonds are issued to provide funds for the purpose of taking over property owned by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and or in which it has an interest including monies required to be paid for the redemption or extinguishment of its capital stock and or for the payment of certain of its obligations (including funded debt) and for the necessary expenses incurred in connection therewith, including the expenses of the City incident to obtaining such funds as well as for the purpose of making certain betterments, improvements, extensions and additions to such property.

TERRITORY SERVED

Upon consummation of this acquisition the City advises it will control a business supplying the entire domestic and commercial gas requirements of the City of Indianapolis and its suburbs. Indianapolis, the capital of the State of Indiana and the county seat of Marion County, is located in the central part of the State. It is an important manufacturing, commercial and financial center. According to the 1930 census the City had a population of 364,161 with an estimated population including the suburban area of more than 427,000. Seven railroads and numerous bus lines entering the city supply ample transportation.

HISTORY AND BUSINESS OF CITIZENS GAS COMPANY OF INDIANAPOLIS

We are advised Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was incorporated under the laws of Indiana in May, 1906 and until 1913 supplied gas in part of the City. In that year the company leased for a period of 99 years the properties and business of the Indianapolis Gas Company, thereby gaining control of the entire gas business of the City of Indianapolis and its environs. By the terms of this lease, the lessee pays a rental consisting of (a) the interest on the Indianapolis Gas Company First Consolidated Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds due October 1, 1952, of which there were $6,830,000 principal amount outstanding at December 31, 1934 and the interest on such additional bonds as may be issued from time to time for refunding or extensions to the leased property; (b) an amount equivalent to 6% per annum on the $2,000,000 of capital stock of Indianapolis Gas Company (with a possible increase of $15,000 if the price of gas to the consumer does not exceed 15 cents per thousand cubic feet); (c) $300 annually for organization expense and (d) such amounts equal to the taxes levied against the property including Federal Income Tax. As of January 1, 1935 the company served through owned and leased property, 73,800 domestic, 866 commercial and 523 industrial consumers.

An appraisal made by an independent engineer found that as of January 1, 1935 the owned property of Citizens Gas Company consisted of a coke oven plant, known as Prospect Street Station, comprising three batteries of forty 14-ton Wilputte ovens with a total daily capacity of 11,000,000 cubic feet and two 8' 6" water gas sets having a total daily capacity of 1,800,000 cubic feet and 9,000,000 cubic feet of holder capacity. The distribution system consists of approximately 336 miles of cast iron and steel mains. The leased property, owned by Indianapolis Gas Company according to the same appraisal, consists of a coke oven plant of one battery of forty-one 15-ton Semet-Solvay coke ovens with a daily capacity of 3,500,000 cubic feet, also two 11' 0" and two 7' 6" water gas sets, with a total daily capacity of 6,000,000 cubic feet and holder capacity of 3,000,000 cubic feet. The distribution system consists of approximately 531 miles of cast iron and steel mains. Based on this appraisal which took into consideration an allowance of $700,000 for working capital for Citizens Gas Company, as well as present day average costs, the age of the equipment and the amount and kind of deferred maintenance, the following costs of reproduction new and depreciated physical values as of January 1, 1935, were estimated: and for the necessary expenses incurred in connection therewith, including the expenses of the City incident to obtaining such funds as well as for the purpose of making certain betterments, improvements, extensions and additions to such property.

	Cost of Reproduction—New	Depreciated Physical Value

HISTORY AND BUSINESS OF CITIZENS GAS COMPANY OF INDIANAPOLIS

We are advised Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was incorporated under the laws of Indiana in May, 1906 and until 1913 supplied gas in part of the City. In that year the company leased for a period of 99 years the properties and business of the Indianapolis Gas Company, thereby gaining control of the entire gas business of the City of Indianapolis and its environs. By the terms of this lease, the lessee pays a rental consisting of (a) the interest on the Indianapolis Gas Company First Consolidated Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds due October 1, 1952, of which there were $6,320,000 principal amount outstanding at December 31, 1934 and the interest on such additional bonds as may be issued from time to time for refunding or extensions to the leased property; (b) an amount equivalent to 6% per annum on the $2,000,000 of capital stock of Indianapolis Gas Company (with a possible increase of $15,000 if the price of gas to the consumer does not exceed 15 cents per thousand cubic feet); (c) $300 annually for organization expense and (d) such amounts equal to the taxes levied against the property including Federal Income Tax. As of January 1, 1935 the company served through owned and leased property 73,899 domestic, 866 commercial and 523 industrial consumers.

An appraisal made by an independent engineer found that as of January 1, 1935 the owned property of Citizens Gas Company consisted of a coke oven plant, known as Prospect Street Station, comprising three batteries of forty 14-ton Wilputte ovens with a total daily capacity of 11,000,000 cubic feet and two 8' 6" water gas sets having a total daily capacity of 1,800,000 cubic feet and 9,000,000 cubic feet of holder capacity. The distribution system consists of approximately 336 miles of cast iron and steel mains. The leased property, owned by Indianapolis Gas Company according to the same appraisal, consists of a coke oven plant of one battery of forty-one 15-ton Semet-Solvay coke ovens with a daily capacity of 3,500,000 cubic feet, also two 11' 0" and two 7' 6" water gas sets, with a total daily capacity of 6,000,000 cubic feet and holder capacity of 3,000,000 cubic feet. The distribution system consists of approximately 531 miles of cast iron and steel mains. Based on this appraisal which took into consideration an allowance of $700,000 for working capital for Citizens Gas Company, as well as present day average costs, the age of the equipment and the amount and kind of deferred maintenance, the following costs of reproduction new and depreciated physical values as of January 1, 1935, were estimated:

	Cost of Reproduction—New	Depreciated Physical Value
Citizens Gas Company	$17,607,310	$13,431,230
Indianapolis Gas Company	12,730,490	9,181,960
	$30,337,800	$22,613,190

At the present time we are advised the coke oven and water gas plants of the leased property are not used in operations but it is anticipated that the coke oven plant will be in operation by October 1, 1935. The by-products from the coke oven operations include coke, ammonia and coal tar, which in the past have been sold in the open market through various sales agencies. The coal requirements of Citizens Gas Company have been purchased principally from the Milburn By-Products Coal Company, Milburn, West Virginia, the entire capital stock of which is owned by Citizens Gas Company. Other coal purchases are made from other coal producers of the quality and quantity necessary for blending purposes. We are advised the capacity of the Milburn coal mine is greatly in excess of requirements.

Balance available for bond service and depreciation	$ 988,584	$ 737,340	$ 642,474	$ 782,624	$ 873,250

The annual service charge on this issue is $360,000 1936-1937; $450,000 1938-1940; $500,000 1941-1967.

(Note)—The City states that through municipal ownership and operation of Citizens Gas Company there will be a savings of Federal Income and City taxes which in the years covered above would have approximated the amounts shown.

THE FEASIBILITY OF NATURAL GAS

The City has been considering the possibility of introducing natural gas into Indianapolis provided it can be purchased at a sufficiently attractive price. An independent survey by recognized engineers finds it would be entirely feasible for the City to serve mixed natural and manufactured gas to domestic and commercial consumers and straight natural gas to industrial consumers. The change from manufactured gas to natural or mixed gas operation would, in engineer's opinion, necessitate a further expenditure of approximately $2,500,000 to extend the distribution system, but the belief is that such operation will materially improve the earning power of these properties. The sale of the present issue of $3,000,000 bonds, together with cash now on hand provides approximately $1,500,000 cash over and above the cost of acquisition of the property. It is the engineer's estimate that for the first normal year after the introduction of natural gas gross revenues would slightly exceed $5,000,000, net income before depreciation eligible under $2,935,000, while in the fifth year gross should approximate $10,000,000 and net income before depreciation should exceed $2,935,000.—

SECURITY

These Gas Plant Revenue bonds constitute, in the opinion of counsel, valid and legally binding obligations of the City of Indianapolis, secured by a charge upon all of the revenues derived from the entire gas system owned and or operated by the City of Indianapolis and principal and interest on the bonds are payable solely from such revenues.

COVENANTS OF THE CITY

With respect to these bonds the City covenants:

That it will cause to be deposited in any one or more responsible banks or trust companies in the City of Indianapolis, in a special account under such conditions as that the monies cannot be withdrawn from such account or accounts, except for the payment of interest on and the principal of these bonds, on the fifteenth day of each month during the operation of said gas system by the City out of the revenues derived from the operation of said gas system a sum equal to one-twelfth of the annual amount due and payable for principal and interest on the next succeeding date of said bonds and the City agrees that there will be credited to this bond and interest fund, $200,000 annually 1936-1937; $150,000 annually 1938-1940 and $500,000 annually 1941-1967;

That it will fix, maintain and collect reasonable and just charges for gas service and faithfully to comply with all pertinent provisions of law including the requirement of Chapter 190 of the Acts of the 1933 General Assembly of the State of Indiana, viz., that a reasonable and just charge shall be such as produces sufficient revenue to pay, among other things, principal of and interest on these bonds, maintenance cost, operating charges, adequate funds for working capital, repairs and upkeep;

That upon acquisition of the property operated by the Citizens Gas Company, it will cause the same to be continually operated as a gas system in an efficient manner and at reasonable cost and maintained in good operating condition; and it will use all reasonable efforts to resist competition and maintain the exclusive right to serve gas in the City of Indianapolis and in Marion County, Indiana and the towns therein;

That so long as any of these bonds are outstanding and unpaid the City shall maintain insurance on the insurable parts of said gas system of a kind and in an amount as would normally be carried by privately owned companies engaged in a similar business; which insurance shall be placed and maintained in responsible and qualified companies and the proceeds of such insurance shall be used in replacing, repairing or rehabilitating property destroyed or damaged, or in extensions, additions or improvements and if not so used shall be used in the purchase and retirement of outstanding bonds;

That so long as any of these bonds are outstanding and unpaid, not to sell, mortgage or dispose of said gas system or any substantial and useful part thereof unless the proceeds of such sale or disposition are used for the payment of the principal and interest of the then outstanding and unpaid bonds. The right to lease such utility property and gas system on terms and in a manner consistent with law may be exercised provided the terms do not adversely affect the rights and interest of the holders of these bonds. The city prior to the execution of any such lease or sale or disposition of any part of the gas system under the terms hereof, agrees to give notice of or when it intends to execute any such lease through publication in one newspaper, printed in the English language, of general circulation, in the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, in the City of Chicago, Illinois and in the City of New York, New York, at least four weeks prior to the execution of such lease.

That so long as any of these bonds are outstanding and unpaid, it shall not issue additional bonds or other obligations payable out of the revenues of said gas system except for refunding said outstanding bonds or for the acquisition of revenue producing property, betterments, extensions and or additions.

We Recommend These Bonds for Investment.

Attention of Mr. Simond.

Gentlemen,—

Thank you for your letter of the 23rd.

Russell J. Ryan has now qualified as a director of the Board of Directors for Utilities of the City of Indianapolis. The membership of seven now completes the Board.

Very truly yours,
Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson.

CITY DEPOSITION EXHIBIT 3.

September 23, 1935.

Mr. A. L. Rabb,
Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson,
115 No. Pennsylvania Street,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Dear Mr. Rabb:

I am in receipt of your letter of the twenty-first instant making certain suggestions with respect to the memorandum we prepared regarding anticipating a supplemental offering of our Indianapolis Gas Plant Revenue 4½% bonds. As we understand your proposed changes, the text will now appear as follows:

Page 2. Second paragraph will read as follows:

"It is the opinion of counsel for the bankers that it is very doubtful, etc."

The second sentence on that page in which it appears will now read:

"Even if it should be held, however, that the rates are subject to approval of the Public Service Commission, it is the opinion of the bankers' counsel that: etc."

Page 3. The second paragraph beginning with the third sentence will now read as follows:

"Approximately 60% of the distribution system is leased property. It is reasonable to assume that Indianapolis Gas Company recognizes the difficulty of re-establishing itself at this time as a company operating in competition with natural or mixed gas which should be available through municipal operation. Pending satisfactory adjustment of the instrument executed by Indianapolis Gas Company to Citizens Gas Company covering the leased properties, the City rejected an assignment to it by Citizens Gas Company of this lease but indicated to Indianapolis Gas Company that it would continue to operate for six months the leased properties at an equivalent to the former rental. It is expected that the City and the Indianapolis Gas Company will consummate a satisfactory rental or, in the event of failure to accomplish this, the negotiations should result in acquisition by the City of such leased properties which are essential to municipal operation at a satisfactory price including the service charge on the Indianapolis Gas Company First Consolidated Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds due October 1, 1952, of which there were $6,881,000 principal amount outstanding at December 31, 1934.

Page 5 and again on Page 8, we are adding the word "Estimated" before "Leasehold rentals."

We observe your comments regarding the appointment of Russell J. Ryan, ex-judge of the Marion Superior Court, as a member of the Board of Directors for Utilities and the nomination of Mr. Charles Rauh as a member of the Board of Trustees. We understand Mr. Ryan has accepted his appointment although he is not yet qualified and that Mr. Rauh has not yet been appointed or qualified. Since we propose to release our memorandum this week, perhaps it would be advisable for us not to make any reference to these two gentlemen unless, of course, their appointments have been accepted and they have qualified within the next two or three days.

We appreciate the very prompt attention which you gave this matter and we trust you will keep us advised of any important situations which may develop.

Very truly yours,

Halsey, Stuart & Co.,

(Letterhead of Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson, Indianapolis.)

September 21, 1935.

Mr. R. E. Simond,
Halsey, Stuart & Co.,
201 South LaSalle St.,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Simond,—

Answering your letter dated the 18th, with respect to a form of proposed supplemental circular on City of Indianapolis Gas Plant Revenue Bonds:

Reference is made in such form to opinion of counsel, from which quotations are made. Inasmuch as the original circular refers to the names of more than one counsel, we think mention by specific name should be given to counsel whose opinion is quoted in the present circular. We know of course that we are not the counsel whose opinion is there quoted, nor are we prepared to disagree with the opinion as quoted. But we suggest that counsel be named.

On page 3 of the draft sent us, we think the phrase "on the other hand" in line 7 of the 2nd paragraph should be eliminated, and that the words "an equivalent to" should be inserted in the 14th line of that paragraph after the 4th word; viz: so the line will read "the leased properties at an equivalent to the former rental"; the sentence then to conclude with the word "including" and the balance of what is now the last sentence in that paragraph commencing with the words "the service charge" etc. The words "It is not contemplated that these negotiations will impair" to be eliminated. The last sentence of such paragraph would then be the sentence beginning "It is expected that the City" etc.

On pages 5 and 8, should not the word "estimated" precede the words "leasehold rentals"? Otherwise the impression will be given that a lease is presently in effect; and none is now in effect.

Page 7: Russell J. Ryan, ex-judge of the Marion Superior Court, has been appointed a member of the Board of Directors for Utilities, and has indicated he will accept. He has not as yet actually qualified by filing an executed certificate of appointment, oath, and bond; but is expected to do so next week. Of course he should not be represented to be a director until he has formally qualified as such. Mr. Charles Rauh has been nominated as a member of the Board of Trustees; but as yet has not been appointed or qualified.

We enclose copy of resolution for use of natural gas adopted by the Board of Directors on September 12th; also copies of two resolutions pertaining to The Indianapolis Gas Company on September 9, 1935.

We make no comment on the other facts stated in the proposed circular, as to most of which we have no personal knowledge; and hence do not discuss.

More specifically with reference to the subject matter of the 2nd paragraph of this letter: the opinion of counsel to which we refer is that quoted on page two of the draft you sent us; not, of course, to page one.

Very truly,

CITY DEPOSITION EXHIBIT 5.

Otis & Co.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

September 18, 1935.

Mr. Albert Rabb,
Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson,
Consolidated Building,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Dear Mr. Rabb:

It is with considerable hesitancy that I submit to you the enclosed copy of a memorandum we are extremely desirous of distributing together with a circular descriptive of the Indianapolis Gas Plant Revenue 4½% bonds, all in connection with another solicitation of both dealer and investor business.

In view of the rather unfavorable press notices that have come out with respect to negotiations between the city and the Indianapolis Gas Company concerning the lease we are, of course, anxious to present this matter in the proper light and only for this reason are we imposing upon you to the extent of asking your approval or constructive criticisms of the memorandum.

We trust, accordingly, that you can give us your reaction to this promptly in order that Otis & Co. and we may proceed with our supplemental offering.

Presumably you are aware of the unfavorable market reaction on Indianapolis Gas Company First Mortgage 5's during the past two or three weeks which we can attribute only to unfortunate press comments. First Mortgage 5's have dropped from a price above par to quotes as low as 72, resulting in numerous inquiries and possibly some apprehension about the outcome of your negotiations with Indianapolis Gas Company. Had you given any thought to preparing from time to time statements for the press that would represent properly the status and the aim of these negotiations? It might be helpful in clarifying the uncertainties which have arisen in the minds of some holders of the First Mortgage 5's concerning their investment and indirectly it might help your negotiations with the company itself.

With kindest regards, I am

Very truly yours,

Appearances:

Milbank, Tweed & Hope, Esqs., Solicitors for the Plaintiffs, Hugh L. M. Cole, Esq. and William J. O'Connell, Esq., of counsel.

William G. Sparks, Esq., Solicitor for defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

W. R. Higgins, Esq., Solicitor for defendant The Indianapolis Gas Company.

W. H. Thompson, Esq., Solicitor for The City of Indianapolis and the individual defendants who are members of the Board of Directors and Board of Trustees of the Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis.

CHESTER M. CLARK, of 41 Summit Avenue, Bronxville, New York, called as a witness in behalf of the plaintiffs, having been duly cautioned and sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. Cole: Before interrogating Mr. Clark, I want to offer this copy of a stipulation as an exhibit. The stipulation is signed by all the attorneys and it is to the effect that one deposition may be taken and filed with the Clerk in either one or the other of the two above-entitled causes. I don't believe anybody objects to that as a part of the record.

(Copy of stipulation above referred to received in evidence and marked PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 1, annexed hereto.)

Mr. Cole: I also want to offer as another exhibit a copy of a letter sent to all the attorneys stating the time and place of the taking of the depositions, to which is annexed an affidavit of mailing.

(Copy of letter above referred to received in evidence and marked PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 2, annexed hereto.)

Mr. Thompson: As far as we are concerned, you don't need to do that. We agreed that the depositions might be taken at this time and no point will be raised about that.

Mr. Cole: May it be so stipulated on the record?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, so far as I am concerned.

Direct Examination by Mr. Cole.

Q. Mr. Clark, will you state your name and place of residence?

A. Chester M. Clark, 41 Summit Avenue, Bronxville, New York.

Q. Are you now associated with the corporation of Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc.?

A. I am.

Q. Will you state your connection, please?

A. I am Assistant Vice-President of the corporation, in charge of research and analysis. As such I have custody of statistical files.

Q. How long have you been associated with this corporation?

A. Since early in 1927.

Q. Does Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc. have the custody of any of the files that belong to the old partnership of Blodget & Company?

A. They do.

Q. Are you in charge of the custody of these files?

A. I am.

Q. Do these files include any of the documents relating to the bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company?

A. Yes, they do; a number of offering circulars and earning statements, balance sheets, and so forth.

Q. I show you an offering circular of Indianapolis Gas Company, First Consolidated Mortgage 5% Bonds, which has certain data in it relating to Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, including statements of earnings from 1916 to 1920, and ask you whether you can identify that as coming from the files of Blodget & Company (handing paper to witness)?

A. Yes, that came from the files of Blodget & Company.

Mr. Cole: I offer this in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: The notary had better mark it.

(Paper above referred to received in evidence and marked PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 3, annexed hereto.)

Mr. Thompson: May I see it, please? I would like to ask a question for the purpose of making an objection.

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. Is this date down in the corner, "12/20/21," December 20, 1921, the date when you received this circular?

Mr. O'Connell: Is that in point?

Mr. Thompson: Yes. The circular is undated.

Mr. O'Connell: That is not on the circular itself.

Mr. Cole: All this witness is doing is identifying it. He has not been associated with the firms, as he has already testified, during that period, so I don't see how he can answer that question.

Mr. Thompson: You are offering something and I want to know when it was received. I want to make an objection to it.

Mr. O'Connell: If you know, you can answer, and if you do not know, you can so state.

A. I do not know.

Q. You have no idea when this circular came into the hands of Blodget & Company?

A. No, sir, because I was not a member of the firm at that time.

Q. And you don't know from whom Blodget & Company received the circular?

A. I do not.

Mr. Thompson: The City of Indianapolis and the individuals who are members of its Boards of Trustees and Directors of the Department of Utilities object to the introduction into evidence of this circular for each of the following reasons:

First, it does not purport to have been issued or authorized by the City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation, and could, in no event, be binding on it.

Second, if this circular is introduced for the purpose of establishing an estoppel against the City of Indianapolis, it is ineffective for that purpose because there has been no showing of any authority on the part of the City of Indianapolis or any of its officers to issue or authorize the issuance of this circular.

Third, the circular is, as to the City of Indianapolis, hearsay, because it does not purport to have been issued or authorized by it or by any of its competent officers.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects to the introduction of this exhibit for the reason, first, that it does not appear that it was authorized by the Citizens Gas Company or any of its authorized officers; that if offered for the purpose of establishing an estoppel, or as an admission, it has no probative value, being an instrument of a conclusion of law as to the extent of the term or the validity of the lease in question; third, it does not appear that anyone in authority from the Citizens Gas Company has issued or circulated or put forward in any manner the information and statements contained in this exhibit; fourth, it does not tend to prove or disprove any of the issues in this case; fifth, it does not appear that anyone relied upon the statements made in this exhibit, or that anyone was entitled to rely thereon; sixth, any statement made by the Citizens Gas Company at that time with reference to the binding effect of this lease upon the successor trustee of the charitable trust could not possibly be effective to bind the City of Indianapolis or the Citizens Gas Company upon a conveyance of its property to the successor trustee.

Mr. O'Connell: It has already been marked.

Mr. Cole: I would like to substitute for the original exhibit a photostatic copy, subject to comparison by the notary. Have that identified as Exhibit 3.

Mr. O'Connell: Is that agreeable to you, gentlemen, that a photostatic copy be substituted?

Mr. Thompson: Oh, surely.

Mr. Sparks: If you will state it is a true copy, we have no objection.

Mr. Cole: I think Mr. Clark will so state.

The Witness: That is a true copy.

Mr. Thompson: Put the photostat in. We have no objection to substituting the photostat.

(Photostat substituted for Plaintiffs' Exhibit 3.)

By Mr. Cole:

Q. I show you another offering circular relating to the Indianapolis Gas Company First Consolidated Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds, containing similar data as that contained in the last exhibit, and showing earnings of the Citizens Gas Company for the year ending December 31, 1924, and ask you if you can identify that as coming from the files of Blodget & Company (handing paper to witness).

A. Yes. This came from the files of Blodget & Company.

Mr. Cole: I offer that in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: May I see it, please?

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. You have no knowledge as to when this was received?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or from whom it was received?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or who prepared it?

A. No, I have not.

Mr. Thompson: The City of Indianapolis objects to the introduction in evidence of Exhibit No. 4 on the same grounds as stated in the objection to Exhibit No. 3, and on the additional ground that there is no proof as to when this circular was received, from whom it was received and that anyone purchasing bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company relied or had the right to rely on any statement contained in the circular, particularly as to the statement of the legal question as to the lease for 99 years from the Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company. In addition, the City of Indianapolis objects on the ground that no statement, even if it had been made, by the initial trustee of a public charitable trust could bind the successor trustee, which is a municipal corporation and which cannot be bound except in accordance with the terms of an explicit statute.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects to the Exhibit 4 for the same reasons given in the objections to the introduction in evidence of Exhibit 3.

Mr. Cole: This is off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

(Paper above referred to received in evidence and marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 4, annexed hereto.)

By Mr. Cole:

Q. I show you another offering circular relating to the Indianapolis Gas Company First Consolidated Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds, containing data similar to that contained in the last exhibit, including earnings of the Citizens Gas Company for the years 1924 and 1925, and ask you if you can identify that as coming from the files of Blodget & Company (handing paper to witness).

A. Yes. This came from the files of Blodget & Company.

Mr. Cole: I offer it in evidence.

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. You know nothing about the date of the issuance of this circular?

A. No, sir.
Q. Nor who issued it?
A. No, sir.
Q. All that you know about it is that you found this in the files of Blodget & Company?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How does it happen to be on the letter-head of Blodget & Company? Is it a circular prepared by that company?
A. I would assume that, because it is on the letter-head of Blodget & Company, it was prepared in Blodget & Company's office.

Mr. Thompson: The City of Indianapolis makes the same objection to Exhibit No. 5 as it made to No. 4.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects for the same reasons given in objections to the admission of Exhibit No. 3, and for the further reason that any statement in the circular concerning any guarantee by the Citizens Gas Company as to the principal and the refunding of bonds is a statement of law which cannot be the basis for any estoppel or have any probative value as an admission as to any issue in this case.

(Paper above referred to received in evidence and marked PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 5, annexed hereto.)

By Mr. Cole:

Q. I show you another offering circular relating to First and Refunding Mortgage Gold 5% Bonds of Citizens Gas Company, containing data similar to that contained in the offering circular which is the last exhibit, including earnings of Citizens Gas Company for the years 1924 to 1926, and ask you if you can identify that as coming from the files of Blodget & Company (handing paper to witness).
A. Yes. This came from the files of Blodget & Company.

Mr. Cole: I offer it in evidence.

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. This circular which has been identified as Exhibit 6 is on the letter-head of Blodget & Company and, presumably, prepared by that company; is that right?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. It is undated?
A. May I interrupt there?
Q. Yes.
A. At the foot of the circular, as I think possibly may have been the case in the previous exhibit and I overlooked it, there is a mark—may I look at that?

Q. Yes (handing paper to witness).
A. "2J6."
Q. What does that mean?
A. It is a code symbol used in the old days by Blodget & Co., subsequently by Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., indicating the month and year when the circular was prepared.
Q. Now, what does the code symbol mean?
A. The code symbol means that that was prepared in the year 1926.
Q. December?
A. The 10th month, October.
Q. October?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And all you know about this circular is that it is on the letter-head of Blodget & Company and you found it in the files?
A. Yes.
Mr. Thompson: We make the same objection on behalf of the City to Exhibit 6 which we made to Exhibit No. 4.
Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company makes the same objection to this exhibit as it made to Exhibits Nos. 3 and 5.
Mr. Thompson: My attention has been directed to the fact that Exhibit No. 6 relates to the bonds of the Citizens Gas Company.
Mr. Cole: That is correct.
Mr. Thompson: And I object to it on the ground that no circular or representation made by anyone in connection with the sale of bonds of the Citizens Gas Company could have any possible bearing upon the issues involved in this case.
Mr. Sparks: I would also like to add to my previous objection the reason that any circular or any statement issued in connection with the sale or distribution of Citizens Gas Company bonds could have no bearing or be material in any way upon any issue in this case, or in either of the two cases.
Mr. O'Connell: That is No. 6?
Mr. Sparks: No. 6.
(Paper above referred to received in evidence and marked PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 6, annexed hereto.)
By Mr. Cole:
Q. Going back to Exhibits 4 and 5, I observe that they bear the same symbols at the bottom. Can you tell me whether they are explicable in the same manner as the symbol that is on Exhibit 6 (handing papers to witness)?

A. They are. Exhibit 4, according to the symbol, was prepared in March, 1925. Exhibit 5, according to the symbol, was prepared in December, 1926.

Mr. Cole: I would like to substitute for the original of Exhibit 6 this photostatic copy and have this marked as the original exhibit. I observe that it does not have the symbol at the bottom, because the corner was evidently turned up. I suggest that the notary or the stenographer put the symbol on in ink so that it will be identical, subject to comparison by the notary.

Mr. Sparks: That is agreeable.

(Notary marks "2J6" on photostat substituted for original of Plaintiffs' Exhibit 6.)

Q. I show you another offering circular which relates to the First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Bonds of the Citizens Gas Company and to the First Consolidated Mortgage 5% Bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company.

Mr. Higgins: Is that a joint circular?

Mr. Cole: They are both in the one exhibit.

Q. (Continued.) It contains data similar to that contained in Exhibit 6. I ask you if you can identify this as coming from the files of Blodget & Company (handing paper to witness).

A. Yes. This came from the files of Blodget & Company.

Mr. Cole: I offer it in evidence.

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. Is there any code symbol by which you can tell the date of this?

A. There is no code symbol which is intelligible to me. There is a code symbol there, but I do not know what it means.

Q. "ZF2" is the code symbol?

A. Yes. I do not know what it means.

Q. And this is a circular that was issued by Blodget & Company?

A. That is correct.

Q. You have no knowledge of where the information came from which Blodget & Company used in the preparation of that circular?

A. I personally have no knowledge of it.

Mr. Thompson: The defendant City of Indianapolis makes the same objection to Exhibit 7 that it made to Exhibit 4, plus the objection that this is a self-serving declaration on the part of Blodget & Company and not binding on the City of Indianapolis, in any event.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company makes the same objection to this exhibit as it made to Exhibit No. 6 and previous exhibits.

(Discussion off the record.)

Q. Anything on the face of any of these circulars which are offered as exhibits which are entries to identify the approximate dates on which they were prepared you may use and state what it is.

A. This circular shows capitalization as of May 1, 1922, and the text contains other dates in the year 1922, such as March 1, 1922, with respect to valuation of physical properties; May 15, 1922, as the date on which certain rate matters came up, all of which, to my mind, indicates that the circular was prepared during the latter part of the year 1922.

Mr. Sparks: May I see that a minute?

(Paper above referred to received in evidence and marked PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 7, annexed hereto.)

Mr. Cole: I have here the positive of a photostat of Exhibit No. 7 which I wish to substitute for the original. Subject to comparison, I ask that the notary mark that Exhibit 7.

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Cole, we will consent, in connection with any of these exhibits, that you may use photostatic copies instead of the original and no objection will be made on that ground.

Mr. Cole: All right.

(Discussion off the record.)

By Mr. Cole:

Q. I show you another offering circular relating to the First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Bonds of Citizens Gas Company and to the First Consolidated Mortgage 5% Bonds of Indianapolis Gas Company, containing data similar to that contained in Exhibit 7, including earnings of Citizens Gas Company for the twelve months ending December 31, 1923, and ask you if you can identify that as coming from the files of Blodget & Company.

A. Yes. This came from the files of Blodget & Company.

Mr. Cole: I offer it in evidence.

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. Can you identify the date of this Exhibit No. 8?

A. April, 1924.

Q. It appears on the letter-head, or, rather, on the head of this exhibit appears "Blodget & Co., 34 Pine Street, New York." It is a circular apparently prepared by Blodget & Company?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Thompson: The defendant City objects to the introduction in evidence of Exhibit No. 8 on the grounds stated in objecting to Exhibits Nos. 4 and 7.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects to the exhibit on the grounds stated in objections to Exhibit No. 7 and previous exhibits.

(The paper above referred to received in evidence and marked PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 8, annexed hereto.)

Mr. Cole: As in the previous cases, I ask that this photostatic copy be substituted.

By Mr. Cole:

Q. I show you an offering circular relating to Indianapolis Gas Company First Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds, containing data similar to that contained in the last exhibit, including earnings of Citizens Gas Company for the year ended December 31, 1915, and ask you if you can identify that as coming from the files of Blodget & Company (handing paper to witness).

A. Yes. This came from the files of Blodget & Company.

Mr. Cole: I offer it in evidence.

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. Do you know the date of this circular? 1916?

A. I would assume from the date of the information contained in it that it was prepared in 1916.

Q. This is a circular which obviously was prepared and issued by Blodget & Company: is that correct?

A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson: The defendant City objects to the introduction in evidence of Exhibit No. 9 on the same grounds stated in its objections to Exhibits 4 and 7.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects to the introduction in evidence of this exhibit for the same reasons stated in its objections to Exhibit No. 6 and previous exhibits.

(The paper above referred to received in evidence and marked PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 9, annexed hereto.)

Mr. Cole: As in the case of the previous exhibits, I wish to substitute this photostatic copy.

Mr. Sparks: I would like to change my objection to this Exhibit 9, if I may.

Mr. Cole: Surely.

Mr. Sparks: I object to it for the reasons stated in the objections to Exhibit No. 7 and previous exhibits.

By Mr. Cole:

Q. I show you another offering circular relating to the Citizens Gas Company First Mortgage Sinking Fund 5% Gold Bonds. In addition to containing data similar to that contained in the last exhibit, it also contains various other statements, including a copy of a letter addressed to Messrs. Blodget & Company, dated March 1, 1916, from J. D. Forrest, as Secretary and General Manager of Citizens Gas Company. I ask you if you can identify this as coming from the files of Blodget & Company (handing paper to witness).

A. Yes. This circular came from the files of Blodget & Company.

By Mr. Higgins:

Q. That also would be in 1916, would it?

A. Well, this contains a letter dated March 1, 1915, which would indicate that it was issued at about that time.

Mr. Cole: I offer it in evidence.

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. This also is a circular issued by Blodget & Company, this Exhibit No. 10, Mr. Witness?

A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson: May I ask counsel if the original of this letter from Mr. Forrest is in your possession?

Mr. Cole: No, it is not. We are going to explain that.

Mr. Thompson: The City of Indianapolis objects to the introduction in evidence of Exhibit No. 10 for the same reasons stated in its objections to Exhibits 4 and 7, and for the additional reason that this Exhibit No. 10 contains what purports to be a letter from J. D. Forrest, Secretary and General Manager of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, that this is not the original letter, it is not competent and is purely hearsay. In addition, this circular shows upon its face that the Citizens Gas Company was a quasi public corporation, and the fact is that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was merely the initial trustee of a public charitable trust with a fixed term or expiration of its trusteeship, that is, twenty-five years after the franchise contract of 1905 was granted, so that the Citizens Gas Company, as the initial trustee for a public charitable trust, could not estop its successor trustee, the City of Indianapolis, by any statement made by it; and, in addition, there is no showing that Mr. Forrest, as the Secretary and General Manager of the Citizens Gas Company, had the slightest authority as such even to bind the Citizens Gas Company.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects to the introduction in evidence of this exhibit for the reasons heretofore stated in its objections to Exhibit 7 and previous exhibits; and also for the additional reasons just stated by counsel for the City of Indianapolis.

(Paper above referred to received in evidence and marked PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 10, annexed hereto.)

By Mr. Cole:

Q. I show you another offering circular relating to the Citizens Gas Company First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds, containing various statements concerning the Citizens Gas Company and its property and the security for the bonds, including earning statements for the year ended December 31, 1918. This bears a date, July, 1919, at the bottom of the first page. I ask you whether you can identify this as coming from the files of Blodget & Company (handing paper to witness).

A. Yes. This came from the files of Blodget & Company.

Mr. Cole. I offer it in evidence.

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. Exhibit 11 is also a circular issued by Blodget & Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That circular was issued in July, 1919, as appears on the first sheet of Exhibit 11?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Thompson: The defendant City objects to the introduction in evidence of Exhibit 11 on the grounds stated in our objections to Exhibits 4 and 7

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects to this exhibit for the reasons stated in its objection to Exhibit No. 6.

(Paper above referred to received in evidence and marked PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 11, annexed hereto.)

By Mr. Cole:

Q. I show you another offering circular relating to $1,500,000. of Citizens Gas Company General Mortgage Sinking Fund 7% Gold Bonds, containing data relating to the business of Citizens Gas Company, its management, the security of the bonds and the earnings, including a copy of a letter dated June 15, 1918, addressed to Messrs.

Blodget & Company, and signed by J. D. Forrest, Secretary and General Manager of the Citizens Gas Company, and ask you if you can identify this as coming from the files of Blodget & Company (handing paper to witness).

A. Yes. This came from the files of Blodget & Company.

Mr. Cole: I offer it in evidence.

By Mr. Higgins:

Q. At what time, Mr. Clark, was that issued; can you tell?

A. The letter inside is dated June 15, 1918. I would, therefore, say that the circular was issued shortly thereafter.

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. Exhibit No. 12 is a circular issued by Blodget & Company; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you find the original of the letter therein contained, the copy of the letter therein contained, signed by Mr. J. D. Forrest and addressed to Blodget & Company?

A. I made a search for such a letter and I couldn't find it.

Q. And, of course, it goes without saying that, not being able to find the letter, you know nothing about whether this is an accurate copy of it?

A. Of my own knowledge, I don't know whether it is or not.

Mr. Thompson: The City of Indianapolis objects to the introduction in evidence of Exhibit No. 12 for the reasons stated in its objection to Exhibits 4, 7 and 10, and for this additional reason: this is an offering of $1,500,000. of Citizens Gas Company General Mortgage Sinking Fund 7% Gold Bonds. Under the public charitable trust created by the franchise contract of 1905, and other relevant papers, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis had no power or authority to mortgage its property, it being expressly provided by the terms of that public charitable trust that at the end of the franchise period in 1930, if the precedent obligations of that public charitable trust, that is, the stock of the Citizens Gas Company, had not been paid in full, then the Citizens Gas Company may execute a mortgage for the purpose of obtaining funds with which to pay off the precedent obligations. These mortgage bonds having been issued in violation of the public charitable trust, no statement made in connection with them could bind the City of Indianapolis.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects to the introduction in evidence of Exhibit No. 12 upon the same grounds stated in its objection to Exhibit No. 10 and previous objection.

(The paper above referred to received in evidence and marked PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 12, annexed hereto.)

Mr. Cole: As in the case of earlier exhibits, I wish to substitute for the original exhibit this photostatic copy, subject to comparison.

By Mr. Cole:

Q. You just testified with respect to Exhibit 12 you could not find the original of the letter from Mr. Forrest, of which a copy purports to be set forth. Is that equally true of the letter which is contained in Exhibit 10?

A. That is equally true of the letter which is contained in Exhibit 10. In that connection, I might say that, to my knowledge, none of the correspondence files of Blodget & Company were taken over by Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc. at the time of their consolidation in January, 1927, and that if such a letter were not in the statistical files, which is the case, I would not have it.

Q. Did you find any signed copies of these circulars which have been offered in evidence, bearing the signature of Mr. Forrest or any representative of the City Gas Company or Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. No, I did not.

Mr. Cole: Those are all the questions I wish to ask Mr. Clark at the moment. If you wish to cross-examine, you may, or would you rather wait?

Mr. Thompson: No; I will examine him briefly.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. Do you know where the letter files of Blodget & Company are?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Did you make any inquiry to ascertain whether they were in existence?

A. Yes.

Q. Of whom?

A. Mr. Baker.

Q. Was he formerly connected with Blodget & Company?

A. He was.

Q. Now, all that you know about these Exhibits 3 to 12, inclusive, is that they are various circulars or offerings--they have been designated as "offerings"—which were found in the files of Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc. and which came from the files of Blodget & Company, turned over to Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc. upon the consolidation of the two companies in 1926?

A. That is correct.

Q. You have no personal knowledge of who prepared them; is that right?

A. No personal knowledge of who prepared them; that is correct.

Q. The only information that you have about them is what anyone could gather from the face of the exhibits themselves?

A. That is right.

Q. You don't know how they were used.

A. I personally do not know how they were used.

Q. You don't know where the information came from except as it appears in these exhibits themselves?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you mean that you do know?

A. I do not know.

Mr. Thompson: That is all I have to ask.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Thompson: As far as we are concerned, we are perfectly willing to waive the signature.

Mr. Cole: I think we will have him sign it after it is typewritten.

Chester M. Clark.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this ..... day of ....., 1939.

JOSEPH EDWARDS BAKER, of 1220 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y., called as a witness in behalf of the plaintiff, having been duly cautioned and sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Cole.

Q. Will you state what connection you had with the firm of Blodget & Company and with Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., and for how long you were connected with those concerns?

A. I first became associated with Blodget & Company in 1919, shortly after I left the Army, and subsequently became a partner of that firm and, on December 31, 1926, when the firm of Blodget & Company ceased doing business, together with other partners of Blodget & Company, I became an officer, director and shareholder of Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., which was not a consolidation or merger, but we just agreed to quit business, the partnership remaining in existence for liquidation purposes only.

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. Is the correct name Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc.?

A. Yes. The "and" between "Stone" and "Webster" is the "and-sign," and between "Webster" and "Blodget" it is "a-n-d."

By Mr. Cole:

Q. For what years were you a partner in Blodget & Company?

A. I became a partner of Blodget & Company January 1, 1926.

Q. What is your present occupation?

A. I am a partner of J. E. Baker & Company, investment dealers.

Q. Will you state very briefly your experience in the buying and selling of securities?

A. From the time I became associated with Blodget & Company, continuously up to the present time, my function has been largely that of a buyer, although I have done considerable selling. Most of my selling has been what you would term block selling, in larger amounts. My duties in Blodget & Company, and in Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., and in the firm which I organized in 1934, was almost altogether that of the buying partner. In that connection, I bought whole issues of bonds, parts of an issue, for refunding or original capital purposes; I conducted, or caused to be conducted, the investigations that were necessary prior to those purchases; at times bought preferred stocks of corporations; at other times the common stocks; in one instance bought all of the assets of the corporation, which were afterwards recapitalized. In fact, you might say that, either directly for the firms of which I was a partner or an associate, I have participated in every phase of what we generally term the investment banking field. Such purchases, either for our own account or in association with others, or acting as agents for others, have aggregated over a billion dollars' worth of securities. The firms with which I have been associated have participated in most of the syndicates organized for the purchase and sale of public utility bonds during that period. I have also been engaged in industrial and other corporate activities as well as public utilities. During this period I have qualified and testified before Public Service Commission on matters pertaining to security issues and the rates of return, in the States of California, Ohio, South Carolina, Missouri and New York I have qualified and testified before the Federal Board of Tax Appeals and I have prepared affidavits acceptable to the U. S. Internal Revenue Department on securities and security values. Amongst miscellaneous things I have done in that period, in the State of Massachusetts, was considering the question of making public utility bonds a legal investment for the savings banks in that Commonwealth. I appeared before the General Court, I think it is termed—it is really the State Legislature—and cooperated with the committee of that General Court in preparing the law. That is, briefly, an outline of my experience.

Q. Are you familiar with the methods employed by firms you have been associated with and others in the sale of securities?

A. I am.

Q. And with the method employed in preparing offering circulars?

A. I am.

Q. While you were associated with Blodget & Company, did that firm sell any of the bonds of the Citizens Gas Company or of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. Yes. They sold bonds of both companies, either purchased directly from the company or purchased in the open market. We were constantly making a market on the bonds of both companies, the Citizens Gas Company, the operating company, and the Indianapolis Gas Company, which was leased by the Citizens Gas Company.

Q. Some of these bonds, both of the Citizens and of the Indianapolis, were bought by Blodget & Company from the Citizens Gas Company, were they not, during your association with that firm?

A. They were.

Q. Were you in charge of the dealings between Blodget & Company and the Citizens Gas Company?

A. Yes. During the period of the first phase of my association with Blodget & Company, I worked in close cooperation with one of the partners of the firm, Mr. Bayard F. Pope, and we were the ones who conducted the negotiations either with Mr. Forrest or Mr. Effroymson.

Q. Can you state, briefly, the nature of your contacts with these gentlemen?

Mr. Thompson: Are you calling now for conversations with them?

Mr. Cole: Anything that may have a bearing on how they happen to buy the bonds.

Mr. Thompson: The City of Indianapolis objects to any conversations between officials of the Citizens Gas Company and Mr. Baker, as the representative of Blodget & Company, for the reason that no estoppel can be predicated against a municipal corporation by the acts or conduct of officers of the initial trustee of the public charitable trust, the term of whose trusteeship was definitely fixed by the underlying papers creating the trust; that under the law of Indiana, which is controlling in this case, a municipal corporation cannot be estopped, either directly or in a quasi manner, and that these conversations or these transactions are, as against the City of Indianapolis, successor trustee of a public charitable trust, hearsay and do not prove or tend to prove any issue in the case.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects to testimony as to any conversations in the negotiations for the purchase of these bonds, or otherwise, relating to the effect or validity of the lease in question or the extent of the term or the legal effect of any of its provisions, for the reasons that this evidence cannot prove or disprove any of the issues in either case. Second, that any statement relating to the matters just mentioned must necessarily constitute a statement of a conclusion of law and not a statement of admission of fact having probative value on any issue. Any such statement as to the legal effect of any written instrument, or instrument, cannot be made the basis of an estoppel or as an admission having any probative value. Any such statement cannot create any rights not otherwise existing. Third, assuming that this evidence has any probative value, which we do not admit, which the Citizens Gas Company does not admit, it is not shown that anyone was entitled to rely upon any one statement as to the legal effect of the written instructions involved and of which, in law, everyone is presumed to have knowledge. Fourth, it does not appear that anyone had any authority, express or implied, to make any representations or statements concerning the matters mentioned in reason No. 1. Fifth, it does not appear that any purchaser of these bonds relied upon any statements or representations made during the negotiations.

(Question repeated by stenographer.)

A. As my memory serves me, I first visited Indianapolis in the Spring of 1920 and while there called on Mr. Forrest, the Secretary and General Manager of the company, and Mr. Effroymson, Treasurer of the company, and attempted to get generally familiar with the company, its affairs, and especially to investigate the current condition of the company and its finances. While there, aside from direct visits with the company, I called on various citizens of the City of Indianapolis to get a picture of the company's public relations. I regularly received financial statements from the company and, on frequent occasions, received copies of the minutes of the Board of Directors. At least, it was indicated in the letters that they were copies of them. They were not signed or authenticated by the Secretary.

Q. I show you Plaintiffs' Exhibits 3 to 8, which are offering circulars which have been identified as having been used during the period in which you were associated with Blodget & Company, and I ask you whether you will also identify them as having been used by Blodget & Company in connection with the sale of the bonds described in the circulars (handing papers to witness).

Mr. Thompson: I want to object to the form of that question in addition to the objections already stated to the preceding question. It is a general conclusion as to whether they were used. If he has some specific instance to state, that something was done with them, I have no objection to that, but I object to his stating a conclusion that they were used by Blodget & Company.

Mr. Cole: After you have examined them, I will rephrase the question.

Mr. Sparks: You are withdrawing that question?

Mr. Cole: Yes; I will withdraw the question.

Q. Can you state, of your own knowledge, that these circulars are copies of circulars which were distributed by Blodget & Company to its customers in connection with the sales of the bonds therein described?

Mr. Thompson: Now, without the necessity of repeating our objection to each of these questions and interrupting the orderly course of the deposition, may it be understood that to each of these questions put to Mr. Baker the City makes the same objection it made to the initial question asking him for what contacts and conversations he had had with the Citizens Gas Company?

Mr. Cole: Certainly.

Mr. Sparks: And the same as to the Citizens Gas Company.

Mr. Cole: Certainly.

Mr. Thompson: With that understanding, then, we can probably save some time.

A. I do identify these exhibits as being circulars, or copies of circulars, that were used by Blodget & Company, in the sale of these bonds, either to its customers or to other dealers.

Q. Can you state the manner in which they were distributed?

A. Through the mails and by personal delivery.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibits 7 and 8. These do not relate to any particular amount of bonds, but just refer generally to the securities of the two companies. Can you state whether they were used in over-the-counter sales or in connection with an original issue?

A. That I could not definitely state without reference to the books of Blodget & Company. They could have been used for either purpose.

Q. Can you state how these circulars were prepared?

A. They were prepared under my direction from information in our files previously received from the Citizens Gas Company. When we prepared new circulars it was our custom to send a copy of such circulars to Mr. Forrest, in order that Mr. Forrest could call our attention to any discrepancies in them.

Q. Mr. Clark has testified that there are no original communications in the files of Blodget & Company relating to the information contained in these circulars. Can you explain why this is, from your association with Blodget & Company, and the manner in which the files came in the possession of Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc.?

A. Yes. All of the partners of Blodget & Company became officers, directors and shareholders of Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., and in the case of the New York office, certain employees of Stone & Webster, Inc. came into the firm of Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc. and they occupied the quarters previously occupied by Blodget & Company, and the files of the two organizations were generally mingled, although the correspondence files belonged to the partnership, Blodget & Company, and they were located in Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc. for a good many years until, in order to save storage space, some three or four years ago, the partners of Blodget & Company permitted their destruction. In Boston, this new firm occupied quarters previously occupied by the Securities Division of Stone & Webster, Inc., and in that case the files of Blodget & Company were moved into those quarters. To the best of my belief, exactly the same thing happened to those files eventually.

Q. In the ordinary course of marketing securities, has it been your experience that the purchasers rely on statements contained in offering circulars?

Mr. Thompson: We make a special objection to that because it does not make any difference what happens in the ordinary course of business. While it is our claim that the City of Indianapolis cannot be estopped by any conduct on the part of the initial trustee, certainly under the general rules of estoppel we cannot rely on what happens in the ordinary course of business, but it is implicit in the claim of estoppel that you have got to prove and show that representations were made to some given individual who still holds the bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company and that he relied upon the representations so made.

Mr. Sparks: Let the record show the same objection made by the Citizens Gas Company.

(Question repeated by stenographer.)

A. Yes, they rely on the statements contained in the circulars.

Q. In the particular instance of these circulars, is it your opinion that the purchasers of the bonds described in circulars relied upon the statements?

Mr. Thompson: We object specially to the question because it asks this witness for an opinion and conclusion and not the statement of any fact, and the question of whether a particular purchaser relied could only be established by his evidence.

Mr. Sparks: Let the record show the same objection on the part of the Citizens Gas Company.

A. I would like to be sure I understand that question. I understand the question to mean, did the purchasers, when receiving one of these circulars, consider that the facts were substantially correct.

Q. And that they relied upon those facts as being correct.

A. Relied upon them?

Q. Yes.

A. I cannot tell you the working of the minds of the buyers. I can say that in my experience I have frequently talked to purchasers of bonds and they have insisted upon receiving a circular before consummating their purchase, even though they had all sorts of published public data before them.

Q. Can you state, through your association with Blodget & Company, and in particular your association in the dealings with the Citizens Gas Company, whether Blodget & Company sold any of the bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company prior to the association with the firm?

A. They did.

Q. I would now like to show you the other exhibits. That would be Exhibits 9 to 12, which have been identified as having been prepared and issued prior to your association with the firm, and ask you whether you can identify these as having been issued by Blodget & Company in connection with the sale of the bonds therein described (handing papers to witness).

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects to that because it appears, from his own previous testimony, that he had no connection with Blodget & Company prior to 1919, and, due to the fact that Exhibits 9 to 12, inclusive, were prepared and issued by Blodget & Company prior to that time, he is not qualified to answer the question.

Mr. Thompson: The City makes the same objection.

A. I can identify these circulars as being circulars that were in the files of Blodget & Company when I was associated with that firm and during the period that I was a partner in the firm.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company moves to strike the answer as not being responsive.

Q. Does your association with Blodget & Company lead you to believe that these circulars were prepared and used in the same manner as the ones which were issued during your association with the firm?

Mr. Thompson: The City objects specially to this question on the ground that it is obvious that the witness can have no personal knowledge. He is merely asked to express an opinion and conclusion about the matter, of which he knows personally nothing.

Mr. Sparks: The same objection on the part of the Citizens Gas Company.

(Question repeated by stenographer.)

A. All I can say on that is that when I first became identified with the firm, the partners of that firm, who had been members of the firm during this period, told me what their method was of preparing circulars, a method of going back to original sources; that in the preparation of circulars that contained letters from the corporation issuing them, that they would always have a filed copy that was signed by the officer whose name appeared in print; that they retained counsel to pass upon the legality of the proceedings and the issuance of the circulars, the title to the property, and all such legal points of that type.

Mr. Thompson: The City moves to strike out the answer on the ground it is purely hearsay.

Mr. Sparks: The same motion by the Citizens Gas Company.

Q. Referring specifically to the two letters contained in Exhibits 10 and 12, which purport to be copies of letters from Mr. Forrest, do you believe that they are true copies of the originals?

Mr. Thompson: To which the City certainly objects. The belief or opinion of this witness as to whether these are copies or not can mean nothing. If he has any personal knowledge as to whether they are correct or accurate copies, that is one thing, but his belief or opinion means nothing.

Mr. Sparks: The same objection on the part of the Citizens Gas Company.

A. Again, it is only based on belief as to their methods of operation; that I would not have found these circulars carrying Mr. Forrest's signature had they not been signed by Mr. Forrest. I might point out that in the two signed circulars shown here, that they were issued at a time when all original work was done in Boston, and if there is anything available it would be in the remainder of the Boston files.

Mr. Thompson: The City moves to strike out the answer on the ground it shows clearly that the witness has no personal knowledge as to whether the copies of the two letters purporting to have been signed by Mr. Forrest, contained in Exhibits 10 and 12, are correct and accurate copies of anything written by him.

Mr. Sparks: Let the record show the same motion on the part of the Citizens Gas Company.

Q. Most, if not all, of these circulars contain a reference to the lease from the Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company, together with the statement that it is a 99-year lease. Did you ever discuss this lease with representatives of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. I did.

Q. Can you state, briefly, the nature of your discussions?

Mr. Sparks: The defendant Citizens Gas Company objects to the witness answering the question unless he is asked specifically as to what representatives he discussed this matter with; also for the reasons heretofore stated to other questions.

Mr. Thompson: The same objection by the City of Indianapolis.

A. When I first visited the company in the Spring of 1920, as I recall the date, I questioned Mr. Forrest, the Secretary and General Manager, with respect to the lease and the location of the property under the leasehold. He showed me maps of the city, where the properties of the Indianapolis Gas Company were located. I visited the plant that had belonged to the Indianapolis Gas Company. I received statements from the company, copies of the minutes of the Board of Directors—

Mr. Higgins: Of which company now; the Citizens Gas Company?

A. (Continued.) Of the Citizens Gas Company. And balance sheets of the Citizens Gas Company, indicating plant additions to the leased property, and the balance sheet would have a statement on the asset side of bonds issued against extensions to the leased property. In fact, I had several conversations with Mr. Forrest with respect to the leasehold property.

Q. Could you be a little more specific in answering as to the nature of the conversations with respect to the leasehold?

A. About what?

Q. The nature of the conversations concerning the leasehold.

A. Oh, questions pertaining to the term of the leasehold, when it was entered into, some of the background of the leasehold property, who the shareholders were, what the possibilities might be at some date to acquire the stock and merge the two properties.

Q. Did Mr. Forrest state to you that the lease was a 99-year lease?

Mr. Thompson: To which question the City objects because clearly any such statement would be a representation not of fact but of law, and for the additional reason that Mr. Forrest had no power or authority, merely the Secretary and General Manager of the initial trustee, to bind the successor trustee or the municipal corporation of the City of Indianapolis.

Mr. Sparks: As for the Citizens Gas Company, I assume the objections heretofore made will apply to this question and I wish to have them made specifically to this question.

(Question repeated by stenographer.)

A. He did.

Q. In selling the bonds of the Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, did you consider the duration of the lease, the term of the lease?

A. Did I consider the term of the lease?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. Was the existence of this 99-year lease one of the factors bearing upon the sale of the bonds?

A. It did have a bearing on the sale of the bonds.

Q. If you had believed the lease was for less than 99 years, would you have sold the bonds to customers?

Mr. Thompson: We object to that as a mere speculation, having no bearing on the issues involved in this case.

A. The lease running beyond 1952, as I recall it, the maturity date of the bonds, and the indications that the property of the company was useful to the Citizens Gas Company, led me to believe that the 99-year term was of value.

(At this point a recess was taken to 2:15 P. M.)

(Deposition continued at 2:15 P. M.)

Cross-Examination by Mr. Higgins.

Q. Mr. Baker, were the circulars which you have identified as Exhibits 3 to 12, both inclusive, circulars published in the newspapers in New York, or otherwise, by you, or by Blodget & Company?

A. They were printed in duplicate, or multigraphed in duplicate, some of them in New York, others in Boston.

Q. Were they inserted as advertisements in the papers of New York or Boston, if you know?

A. I couldn't tell you offhand.

Q. Now, as to each of these circulars which have been identified as Exhibits 3 to 12, both inclusive, in each instance, before their printing, was the proof sent to Mr. Forrest or some officer of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. I couldn't say that they were in each instance, no.

Q. That was the general practice, however; is that correct?

A. Well, we got out so many different circulars for different purposes. When we bought bonds direct from the company, we would get direct verification, but if we got out what we might call a routine circular in connection with market purchases, why, we would prepare a circular based on previous information we had in our files and based on the previous circulars, and immediately put it out, and then we would send a copy of it to Mr. Forrest.

Q. Was that verification received by you both orally and in writing; orally from Mr. Forrest or some other officer of the company?

A. That phase of it, with these routine circulars, was rather informal. Forrest would be writing a letter that he had received a letter and noted no errors in it, or something of that type.

Q. Were all of the letters to which you referred directed to your own personal attention?

A. Not necessarily so. In the security business, especially in a partnership where the firm name is signed "Blodget & Company," very frequently the receiver of the letter would not know just who had written it. Sometimes I would write to him and sign it personally. Pope would do the same thing.

Q. At any time, either through correspondence or in your numerous conversations which you have already testified to, with Mr. Forrest, did he at any time ever make any corrections as to the facts set out in the circulars which have been introduced in evidence here today; that you remember?

A. I don't remember any specific instances where he has called attention to an error. There may have been some, but it is going back quite a long time to trust your memory on.

Q. Now, when the bonds were delivered to you, which you purchased directly from the Citizens Gas Company, were any of them delivered to you in person by Mr. Forrest or by any other officer of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. To me in person?

Q. To you or to Blodget & Company.

A. My guess would be that they were sent, according to usual form, in care of a bank, probably the Bankers Trust Company in their case because they had a relationship with the Bankers Trust Company.

Q. But you remember of no instances where he delivered bonds to you in person, bringing them to New York from Indianapolis?

A. Oh, no.

Q. How many visits, approximately, did you have to Indianapolis after your connection with Blodget & Company, if you remember; during the time you were marketing these bonds, both of the Indianapolis Gas Company and of the Citizens Gas Company? Just your best impression.

A. Oh, four to five times during that period.

Q. On those visits, or any one of those visits, did you meet with Mr. Henry H. Hornbrook, who was counsel for the Citizens Gas Company at that time, if you remember it?

A. I met him at lunch once.

Q. Did you meet and have any conversation with Mr. Franklin Vonnegut, who was an officer of the Citizens Gas Company at that time?

A. What is the name?

Q. Mr. Franklin Vonnegut.

A. No, I never met him.

Q. Your dealings, therefore, were primarily with Mr. Effroymson and Mr. Forrest; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, in any conversations which you may have had with either of those gentlemen during your visit in Indianapolis in connection with the purchase of these bonds, did Mr. Forrest at any time tell you anything as to the history immediately preceding the execution of this 99-year lease between the Indianapolis Gas Company and the Citizens Gas Company?

A. I don't recall any.

Q. Do you recall that at any of those conversations when Mr. Forrest was talking about the lease that he advised you, in these words or words to this effect, that the Citizens Gas Company had induced a group of Indianapolis citizens to purchase the stock of the Indianapolis Gas Company from outside owners for the purpose of effecting this lease?

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects to that because it does not tend to prove or disprove any issue in either case.

Mr. Thompson: The City of Indianapolis objects to it on the ground that it is, as to it, hearsay, and that if any attempt is to be made out of such conversation to build up an estoppel against the City of Indianapolis it is ineffectual for that purpose.

(Question repeated by stenographer.)

A. I don't recall that.

Q. You don't recall anything at all in conversation with either Mr. Forrest or Mr. Effroymson concerning the incidents immediately preceding the execution of the lease, so far as you remember: is that right?

A. No. I said "No" on your previous question. About the only thing I remember was that he spoke of its being an unhealthy situation, with the two companies operating in the same city. That is about all I recall in connection with it.

Q. You recall no conversation in which he stated that the merger, the execution of that lease, was brought about at the insistence of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. In what?

Q. Was brought about at the insistence or suggestion of the Citizens Gas Company.

A. No, I don't recall that.

Q. Did you ever, at any time subsequent to the printing and distribution of these circulars, have any communication from any officer of the Citizens Gas Company, either orally or in writing, advising you or stating that any of the information included in these circulars was not correct?

A. I don't recall any corrections, unless they were minor corrections.

Q. Did you ever have any correspondence or conversations in the distribution of the Indianapois Gas Company bonds from any officer of the Indianapois Gas Company?

A. We did not in my time, that I can recall.

Q. And the transactions which you had and by which you secured the Indianapolis Gas Company bonds of which you testified here today were all secured from the Citizens Gas Company; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And all your dealings, then, in the purchase of those bonds were had with the Citizens Gas Company?

A. All of my personal dealings were with the Citizens Gas Company.

Q. And you had no correspondence or no relation at all during that period with any of the officers of the Indianapolis Gas Company; is that correct?

A. I have never met or had any correspondence with any of the officers of the Indianapolis Gas Company.

Q. And all the bonds which you bought were purchased from the Citizens Gas Company; is that right? I don't mean over-the-market bonds.

A. No. I cannot tell you exactly the form of the final delivery, whom the confirmation came from. Forrest negotiated the deal.

Q. Of the Indianapolis Gas bonds?

A. Yes. He negotiated the deal. Now, whether the confirmation was made to the Indianapolis Gas Company, I couldn't tell you.

Q. Have you any information available which would confirm your views on that either one way or the other?

A. I think all of our old books are in Boston. I could find out, by a short telephone call, from our old cashier, whether he had any books here or not.

Q. Well, that is not necessary. Directing your attention particularly to the Exhibit Nos. 10 and 12, which are circulars including the letter purporting to be sent from Mr. Forrest as General Manager of the Citizens Gas Company to Blodget & Company, I will ask you if those circulars, after they were proofed and before they were distributed, if those particular circulars were submitted to Mr. Forrest for his approval or disapproval.

Mr. Sparks: The Citizens Gas Company objects to that because the witness has already stated that he had no connection with Blodget & Company at that time, and so it is perfectly clear that he has no knowledge, or that he does not have sufficient knowledge, to answer this question.

Mr. Thompson: The City makes the same objection.

A. All I can say on that is that knowing of the good business practice that they followed when I became associated with them, that it would be my belief that they had not put out circulars with the names of counsel and Mr. Forrest's name printed on them without first submitting them.

Mr. Thompson: The City moves to strike out the answer on the ground that it is apparent from the answer itself it is only a belief or opinion on the part of the witness and not his personal knowledge as to what actually was done.

Mr. Sparks: The same motion on the part of the Citizens Gas Company.

Q. Can you state, if you know, Mr. Baker, when was the last purchase of bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company purchased from the Citizens Gas Company?

A. I couldn't tell you offhand, no. I would have to go back to the books to give you the exact date.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Thompson.

Q. It has been more than ten years since Blodget & Company purchased any of the bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company from the Citizens?

A. Oh, I am quite sure it is more than ten years.

Q. Now, the Indianapolis Gas bonds were due in 1952; is that what you said, Mr. Baker?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. Yes. I think that is right. You recall now that the lease between the Citizens Gas Company and the City of Indianapolis was executed as of September 30, 1913 Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. So that these bonds that you purchased from the Citizens Gas Company were due some thirty-nine years after this lease was executed; is that right?

A. Right.

Q. And one of the things that you mainly relied upon was the fact that the Citizens Gas Company had a lease from the Indianapolis Gas Company of this property for a period of 99 years; is that correct?

A. Right.

Q. Now, did you have a copy of that lease which you examined?

A. I couldn't tell you whether I had actually examined a copy of the lease or not.

Q. Well, did your counsel examine it for you?

A. If so, it was prior to my time.

Q. Well, if you were going to rely upon the terms of the lease, wouldn't it be the most natural thing on the face of the earth that you would want to see what the lease contained?

A. Yes, but my firm had previously bought the bonds and—

Q. With an examination of the lease or without it?

A. Well, it would be reasonable for me to assume that my partners had used proper precautions.

Q. Now I direct your attention, Mr. Baker, to a portion of subdivision 32 of the lease between the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the Indianapolis Gas Company, and I ask you whether, at the time Blodget & Company made the purchases about which you have testified, you had knowledge of this provision of the lease:

"In event it should be determined by a court of final jurisdiction that the contract is ultra vires or void because of the length of the term created, and that such term is in excess of the authority of either party hereto to contract, then this lease shall nevertheless be binding upon the parties hereto for the longest term for which the parties hereto might lawfully contract."

A. Could I read that?

Q. Yes, sir. I will be very glad to have you do it. It is at the bottom of page 30 and at the top of page 31. What you have here before you is a copy of the bill of complaint of the Chase National Bank, trustee, against the Citizens Gas Company, to which this lease is attached as an exhibit.

A. All I can say on that would be that I assume that this whole lease was available to the counsel of the firm.

Q. There was a red flag of warning, wasn't there, right in that lease?

Mr. Higgins: I object to that.

Mr. Cole: I object also.

Mr. Thompson: It is cross-examination.

Q. There was a red flag of warning, wasn't there, as to the question of whether this lease was valid for a term of 99 years?

A. It would seem so to me.

Q. And I will ask you to state how, with that provision in the lease, you could rely on any representation made to you that the lease was in fact for a period of 99 years.

Mr. O'Connell: I object to the form of the question on the ground it is argumentative and calls for a conclusion of the witness.

A. That indicates a contingent possibility that the lease would not be in effect for 99 years.

Q. And you or your firm knew, presumably, of that provision in the lease when these bonds were purchased; is that a fact?

Mr. O'Connell: I object to the form of the question on the same grounds.

Mr. Thompson: I will withdraw the question.

Q. Did you or your firm know of that provision in the lease when you purchased the bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company?

A. I don't remember seeing the notation.

Q. In any event, you made no personal investigation of the terms of this lease before purchasing the bonds?

A. No. I found the lease and all of those things had been passed upon by counsel prior to my connection with the firm.

Q. Now, when were the bonds of the Citizens Gas Company which you purchased due; do you recall, Mr. Baker? Maybe one of these circulars will show it.

A. In 1942 or 1943.

Q. Calling your attention to Plaintiffs' Exhibit 10, do you recall now, Mr. Baker, when those were due?

A. The 5 per cent. bonds were due in 1942, as I remember it.

Q. Now, did you place any reliance, in purchasing those bonds, upon the fact that this lease existed and the Citizens Gas Company would be operating this property in 1942?

A. I knew there was a contingency with respect to who would be the owners of the Citizens Gas Company in 1942, but I did know they were a mortgage on the property.

Q. In determining whether those bonds were a mortgage on the property, did you or your firm examine the franchise of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis?

A. I remember discussing the franchise on various occasions.

Q. Did you know that that franchise contained the following provision:

"When said certificate-holder shall have received, by dividends or otherwise, upon said certificates an amount equal to the face value thereof together with interest thereon at the rate of ten per centum per annum payable semi-annually, then said certificates issued to said subscribers shall be deemed fully paid and cancelled and it shall be the duty of the trustees and directors of said company to convey said gas plant and property belonging to said company to said city, to be owned and operated or leased by it, and all of the rights, title and interest of said company or its certificate-holders, stockholders, officers, directors or trustees, shall be deemed to be fully paid and extinguished, and all such certificates, whether of stock or otherwise, shall be surrendered and cancelled and said corporation shall be wound up."

A. Yes, I recall that.

Q. In other words, you knew that the length of the franchise period extended from 1905 until 1930 and that the franchise under which the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was operating required it to be wound up in 1930, twelve years before these bonds became due?

A. Right.

Q. Did you know also when you relied upon the representations of the Citizens Gas Company in connection with these bonds that the franchise contract contained the following provision? I read from subdivision 22 of the franchise contract:

"If the plant and system of mains of said company shall not have become the property of said city by the cancellation of the certificates of subscribers and conveyance of such property to such city by the board of directors and trustees of said company on or before the expiration of the aforesaid period of said franchise, then said city, by and through its board of public works, upon the expiration of said franchise period, shall have the right to pay any balance remaining due said certificate holders and the plant and property of said company shall be conveyed to said city as above provided to be owned and operated, or owned and leased by it; or, at the option of said city, the board of directors of the corporate successor of the second parties"—that is the Citizens Gas Company—"shall, as heretofore provided, upon the conclusion of said franchise period, mortgage its plant and with the proceeds thereof, or with the mortgage notes issued in proper amounts, pay off and discharge the amount due certificate holders, and thereupon convey said plant to said city subject to such obligations and other legal obligations against said company."

Were you familiar with that?

A. That is as I generally remember it.

Q. Do you remember what was the authorized issue of Citizens Gas mortgage bonds?

A. The total amount authorized?

Q. Yes. Well, I will withdraw that. I don't care about that. Did you know that on the 9th day of September, 1935, when the property which had been operated by the Citizens Gas Company as initial trustee was transferred to the City, there were outstanding in the hands of the public $2,745,000 of Citizens Gas Company bonds?

Mr. O'Connell: I object to the question on the ground it is incompetent.

A. I would have no reason to know the exact amount.

Q. Now, as a practical matter—I am asking you now because of your experience and qualifications in the bond business—if there were a mortgage outstanding of approximately $3,000,000. on the Citizens Gas Company, that company could not have procured the money to pay off these certificate holders.

Mr. O'Connell: I object to the form of the question.

A. That money could not have—

Q. What I am getting at, Mr. Baker, so that you will understand what I have in mind, is this: I have just read to you a provision from the franchise contract between the City of Indianapolis and a man named Potts and others, which was to be assigned to the Citizens Gas Company. Now, in that franchise contract there was the provision which I have read to you, that at the end of the franchise period and at the option of the Board of Public Works of the City of Indianapolis the Citizens Gas Company should mortgage its plant and property for the purpose of procuring money to pay off the certificate holders of the Citizens Gas Company?

A. I remember that.

Q. Now, what I am asking you is, as an expert bond man and investment broker, whether an outstanding mortgage of nearly $3,000,000. on that property would not have, as a practical matter, prevented compliance with that provision of the contract.

Mr. O'Connell: I object to the form of the question.

A. You have refreshed my memory on that and I remember that some time ago I expressed the opinion that the bonds, for that purpose, as I read it, could not have been sold.

Q. Right.

A. Because it would have been practically a 100 per cent. mortgage on the property.

Q. Correct. Now, in the purchase of these Citizens Gas bonds from the Citizens Gas Company, did you take into consideration that provision which I have just read to you, which is in subdivision 22 of the franchise contract?

A. That it was a franchise contract—

Q. No. What I mean, Mr. Baker, in purchasing these bonds—I am talking now not about Indianapolis Gas bonds, but I am talking about Citizens Gas bonds—

A. All right.

Q. —you said you relied on certain information which had been furnished to you by the Citizens Gas Company. Now I am asking you did you also take into consideration, in purchasing these bonds of the Citizens Gas Company, this subdivision 22 of the franchise contract which I last read to you?

A. That permitted bonds to be sold for the purchase of the certificates?

Q. Yes. That is what I am talking about.

A. Yes. I had in mind they would be junior obligations to these bonds.

Q. Did you find any authority whatever in the franchise contract of the Citizens Gas Company to issue mortgage bonds for any purpose other than to retire these certificates?

Mr. O'Connell: I object to the form of the question on the ground it calls for a legal conclusion of the witness.

A. Well, what I know about that is that the previous original circular, this Exhibit 10, indicates its legality was passed on by eminent counsel.

Q. And you relied on their opinion?

A. I had to.

Q. As to the legality of the bond issue. Now, do you know, Mr. Baker, whether any of the persons to whom you have sold Indianapolis Gas bonds at the present time own them?

A. That I could not state

Q. You do not have any knowledge whatever as to whether any present holder of the bonds of the Indianapolis Gas Company has purchased the same from you?

A. No. I can state this, that when this litigation first came to light we recommended to our customers that they sell bonds at market, not because we did not believe in the ultimate value of them, but that there would be a period of litigation and the markets might not be so good.

Mr. Thompson: I have no further questions.

Mr. Sparks: I have no further questions.

Mr. Cole: I don't have any further questions.

By Mr. Higgins:

Q. Mr. Baker, you are not an attorney?

A. No.

Q. And so far as any conclusion which you have drawn from any of the instruments which Mr. Thompson asked you about, either the franchise or the lease, you relied solely upon your counsel's opinion of those matters, did you not?

A. Surely.

Q. You have no information as to how many of your purchasers sold their bonds which they bought from you of the Indianapolis Gas Company, have you?

A. No, I have nothing.

Q. You don't know whether they sold them or not?

A. I recall one case where I think they sold them.

Q. But so far as the others, you have no information? You don't know that they have sold them since they purchased them originally from you?

A. No.

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. And you have no knowledge as to whether they still hold them or not?

A. No.

Q. You just simply don't know anything about it one way or the other?

A. No.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Thompson: It is agreed by all the parties to this cause that it shall be unnecessary for either deponent to sign his deposition and that the same may be received with the same effect as if it had actually been signed.

Mr. Cole: And may I add this further stipulation, that the depositions may be transmitted to the attorney for the plaintiff instead of directly to the court?

Mr. Thompson: Oh, no. I want these filed in court.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this ..... day of ....., 1939.

Indianapolis Gas Company

First Consolidated Mortgage Gold 5% Bonds

Dated October 1, 1902 — Due October 1, 1952

Authorized $7,500,000 — Outstanding $5,351,000

Coupon bonds, denomination $1,000

Registerable as to principal

Interest payable (April 1 and October 1) at the Equitable Trust Company in New York

TRUSTEES—EQUITABLE TRUST COMPANY, NEW YORK, AND FERDINAND WILSON, INDIANAPOLIS

LEASE The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, in 1913, leased the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company for 99 years at a rental equivalent to the annual bond interest required, and 6% on the $2,000,000 stock of the latter company. This lease was executed with the approval of the Public Service Commission of Indiana.

HISTORY The Indianapolis Gas Company was formed in 1887 under the name of the Indianapolis Natural Gas Company, to supply the city of Indianapolis with natural gas. The Company enjoyed great prosperity until 1900, paying dividends at the rate of 12%, when the supply of natural gas gave out. From 1900 until 1913, when the Company was leased to the Citizens Gas Company, all surplus earnings went toward the completing of an artificial gas plant and the extension of the distributing system. The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was formed in 1906 to acquire the mains of the Consumers Gas Trust Company, a natural gas concern, which was forced to liquidate through the failure of the natural gas supply. The shares of the Citizens Gas Company were originally sold by popular subscription at par with no allowance for promotion expenses. Over 4,000 citizens of Indianapolis are now holders of this stock. From the time this company was organized in 1906 until 1913 it operated in competition with the Indianapolis Gas Company. The organization of the Indiana Public Service Commission made possible the consolidation of these two companies which was consummated by the lease above described to the advantage of both.

PROPERTY These bonds are secured by a direct first mortgage on all the property owned by the Company, consisting of a modern by-product coke oven plant, a large water gas plant, shops, and mains aggregating 375 miles, valued in excess of $8,000,000.

BUSINESS The business of the Indianapolis Gas Company and of the Citizens Gas Company, lessee of the property of the former, are operated as a unit and the operations of the plants of the two companies are not separately considered in any of the statements of operation made by the Citizens Gas Company. The Citizens Gas Company supplies without competition the entire city of Indianapolis and adjacent communities, serving a population of over 314,000. On September 1, 1921, it had 66,052 customers. For many years the Citizens Gas Company sold its gas at 55 cents per thousand cubic feet, the cheapest rate in the United States. An increase to 60 cents was authorized by the Public Service Commission in 1919, and recently that Commission has authorized an increase to 90 cents per thousand cubic feet. It is estimated that this will increase the revenue of the Citizens Gas Company by more than $900,000 per year, yet this rate still remains one of the lowest artificial gas rates in the country. In the past a large proportion of the Citizens Gas earnings have been derived from the sale of coke and its by-products. Earnings in 1921, owing to industrial conditions affecting the coke market, did not make an exhibit comparable to the record of the previous six years. The Company, however, has been able to finance itself very satisfactorily through the sale of preferred stock to its own customers, thus placing a considerable additional equity behind the underlying bonds.

MANAGEMENT The stock of the Citizens Gas Company is perpetually trusted to an honorary board of five representative citizens. These trustees elect the directors and are, therefore, responsible for the management of the Company. This form of control insures a local management at all times.

FRANCHISE The Company operates under an indeterminate permit granted by the Public Service Commission under which the Commission has control of rates and will not allow competition.

EARNINGS Under the terms of the lease the interest on the Indianapolis Gas 5's and 6% on the common stock of the Company is a charge against gross earnings of the Citizens Gas Company before the determination of net earnings applicable to interest charges on the funded debt of that Company.

HISTORY The Indianapolis Gas Company was formed in 1887 under the name of the Indianapolis Natural Gas Company, to supply the city of Indianapolis with natural gas. The Company enjoyed great prosperity until 1900, paying dividends at the rate of 12%, when the supply of natural gas gave out. From 1900 until 1913, when the Company was leased to the Citizens Gas Company, all surplus earnings went toward the completing of an artificial gas plant and the extension of the distributing system. The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was formed in 1906 to acquire the mains of the Consumers Gas Trust Company, a natural gas concern, which was forced to liquidate through the failure of the natural gas supply. The shares of the Citizens Gas Company were originally sold by popular subscription at par with no allowance for promotion expenses. Over 4,000 citizens of Indianapolis are now holders of this stock. From the time this company was organized in 1906 until 1913 it operated in competition with the Indianapolis Gas Company. The Citizens Gas Company was incorporated in 1967. It operated in competition with the Indianapolis Gas Company until 1913, when it leased for 99 years the plant and distributing system of that company. Since then the two properties have been operated as a unit. The company, operating under an indeterminate permit of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, supplies gas without competition to the entire city of Indianapolis and surrounding communities, serving a population of about 335,000.

Property

The reproduction value of the physical properties of both the Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company as established January 1, 1921, by the engineer of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, plus the cost of subsequent additions, was on March 1, 1922, $17,680,000. The total outstanding bonded debt of both companies as of May 1, 1922, was only $10,152,500.

Earnings

Net earnings, after leasehold rentals, for the last ten years have averaged $378,911, and for the last six years $454,911. Interest on all the present outstanding Citizens Gas Company bonds amounts to less than $250,000.

Besides the increased rate for gas which the company is now enjoying, the improvement in general business is having an appreciable effect. The company is now rapidly liquidating its large stock of coke, an important by-product for which in the past year there was very little market.

Rates

Until May, 1921, the company received only 60c per thousand cubic feet for its gas, which was approximately the cheapest manufactured gas sold in the country. Due to increased cost of labor and supplies, and the industrial depression, the company in the winter of 1920-21 was operating at a loss and in May, 1921, was granted an increase to 90c per M.C.F. On May 15, 1922, the company was granted a temporary injunction by the Federal Court authorizing it to charge $1.20 per M.C.F. The company states that if this rate, which is fairly comparable to the rates in other cities, had been in effect in 1921, they would have shown a substantial surplus instead of a deficit for that year.

Stock

The common stock was sold at a material premium and is held by about 3,000 citizens of Indianapolis. It is now quoted in Indianapolis at 88%. All the stock is perpetually trusteed to a board of five representative citizens. These trustees elect the directors and are therefore responsible for the management of the company. These bonds are a first mortgage upon the entire property of the Company. The Indianapolis Gas Company was incorporated in 1890. In October, 1913, with the consent of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, the Indianapolis Gas Company was leased to the Citizens Gas Company for 99 years, whereby the latter company controls the entire gas business of Indianapolis. As a part of the lease, the Citizens Gas Company guaranteed the interest on the Indianapolis Gas Company' bonds, their refunding at maturity and 6% dividends on its $2,000,000 capital stock. This stock is selling in the market at 120, at which it yields about 5%. We are advised that over $8,000,000 has been put into the Indianapolis Gas Company.

The Company sells gas at 55c per thousand cubic feet, the lowest price for manufactured gas in the United States. The Company makes the best coke, and also makes a good profit from the sale of tar and ammonia. About a year ago a plant was installed to recover benzol, and the first four months the plant paid for itself and is now showing a very handsome profit each month. It is anticipated that within six months this profit will be much increased.

The Company has just completed the installation of a plant to extract cyanide, which is the last by-product in the manufacture of gas, and they have a very profitable long time contract for the sale of all the cyanide which they can manufacture.

The Indianapolis Gas Company's plant is located on one side of the city and the Citizens Gas Company about eight miles away on the other side. The Indianapolis Gas Company has a system of mains amounting to about 375 miles, and a complete new coke oven plant, as well as a water gas and producer gas plant.

Full details as to capitalization, earnings, property and business will be found in the accompanying letter of Mr. J. D. Forrest, Secretary and General Manager of the Company, in which the following points may be noted:

First Mortgage on all the property owned by the company, conservatively estimated to have a reproduction value of about three times the par value of the bonds outstanding. Additional bonds can be issued only when the net earnings for the preceding 12 months shall have been equal to twice the interest charges on the bonds outstanding and those proposed to be issued.

Management. The stock of the company is perpetually trusteed with a board of five representative citizens, one appointed by the Mayor and the balance of the board is self perpetuating. They elect the directors and serve without compensation. Because of the quasi public character of the organization a number of leading citizens freely contributed their time to the promotion of the company and the sale of the original issue of stock which was all placed locally in small amounts to about three thousand investors. The stock is now quoted at about 150%.

Franchise. Company's 25 year franchise can be exchanged at any time for indeterminate permit granted by the Public Service Commission. Lease of the Indianapolis Gas Co. by the Citizens Gas Co. was approved by the Public Service Commission in September, 1913.

Earnings. Net earnings for 1914 more than twice the interest charges on the First Mortgage bonds outstanding for the year and also the $500,000 to be issued.

Business. The plant is the most modern and efficient in this country. Gas is supplied to the consumer at 55c. per 1000 cubic feet, the lowest price for manufactured gas in the United States, and with one exception the lowest in the world. Its Coke product is of the finest grade and especially adapted for blast furnaces. Coke is shipped as far west as Denver and Anaconda.

Legality approved by Messrs. Spooner & Cotton of New York City and Messrs. Smith, Remster, Hornbrook & Smith of Indianapolis.

Application will be made to list these bonds on the New York Stock Exchange.

Price 96 and interest, yielding 5¼%.

Dear Sirs:

Referring to the recent sale to you of $500,000 of First and Refunding Mortgage Sinking Fund Gold Bonds of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, I beg to submit the following information in regard to the property:

The Citizens Gas Company was organized in 1906 for the purpose of buying the mains of the Consumers' Gas Trust Company, a natural gas company which was placed in liquidation by order of court. In return for the agreement of the company to supply the people of Indianapolis with gas at the rate of sixty cents per thousand cubic feet, the city assigned to the company its rights under the franchise of the Consumers' Gas Trust Company, to acquire the mains of that company. After prolonged litigation in the State and Federal Courts, this system of 133 miles of mains and about 14,000 service pipes was purchased for the sum of $409,061. A conservative estimate of the reproduction value of this system, lying as it did chiefly under paved streets, was placed at $1,250,000. The system was found to be in excellent condition and the cost of putting the same into commission was only about $50,000. Such value as this distribution system had in excess of the cost to the company, has never been placed in the books. The company was financed by selling its stock to the citizens of Indianapolis by popular subscription at par with no payment whatever for promotion expenses. Over three thousand persons purchased the original issue consisting of $1,000,000 of stock. Since the company has been in operation it has sold $250,000 additional stock at an aggregate premium of $104,354.71, which is carried in the surplus of the company and cannot be distributed in dividends. In 1908 $500,000 of 6% bonds were sold to local interests at 95 and accrued interest, and thereafter $75,000 additional of these bonds were sold at prices in excess of the original syndicate price. These bonds were called and retired January 1st, 1913. The present First and Refunding Mortgage Sinking Fund Bonds, of which we have sold $500,000 to you, were authorized as of July 1st, 1912. In July of that year $420,000 of the new bonds were sold to local interests at 95 and accrued interest, and subsequently during that year $600,000 additional bonds of the same issue were sold for the purpose of refunding the original First Mortgage Bonds. These were sold at prices ranging from 95 to 98 and accrued interest, the greater portion of them being sold at the latter figure. Of the remaining $510,000 of bonds of the First and Refunding issue, $450,000 were sold at 95 and accrued interest during the year 1913 and $60,000 were sold at par prior to January 1st, 1914. All of the proceeds from the sale of the securities of the company as outlined above have gone into the property, there having been no promotion costs whatever.

In order to induce the people of Indianapolis to invest their savings in the securities of this company, the city agreed in its franchise, that the company should be permitted to pay its stockholders ten per cent dividends, computing the same from the date of issue of the certificate of stock; and further agreed that in the event it should take over the property, as it is permitted to do under the franchise, it should pay to the stockholders the par value of their stock together with ten per cent cumulative dividends from the date of issue of the certificates. The stock is perpetually Trusteed with a Board of five representative citizens, one of whom is appointed by the Mayor (but only when vacancies occur by death or resignation of the original appointee), and the balance of the Board is self-perpetuating. Because of the quasi public character of the organization, a number of leading citizens freely contributed their time to the promotion of the company and the sale of the original issue of stock. Subscriptions were made to the stock by persons who were to become customers of the company, with a view to securing at once an investment and a low price on gas for their own consumption. The spirit of these stockholders and the popularity of the company assured it a good business from the start, which was made in April 1909. By reason of the low price fixed for gas by the franchise, it was necessary for the company to adopt the most economical process of manufacture that could be obtained. This was found to be the by-product coke oven. Fifty such ovens were constructed in the original installation, and were put into commission at the end of November 1909. In 1913 fifty additional ovens were constructed and put into commission. Since the company was organized as a permanent institution in the city, all construction work has always been done in the best possible manner, and the operating results of the company have justified the wisdom of the management in its plans.

By reason of the popular support of the company which secured for it a satisfactory and growing gas business, and by reason of the economical method of production which was employed the company has shown gratifying earnings from the begininng of its operation, and finally, at the beginning of 1913, found itself in a position to acquire the plant and property of The Indianapolis Gas Company, its large and long established competitor. This company had been forced by competition finally to begin the construction of by-product coke ovens. The merger of the two companies was accomplished after prolonged investigation, with the approval of the Public Service Commission on October 1st, 1913. The Citizens Company then took over all of the operating property and business of The Indianapolis Gas Company under a ninety-nine year lease, under which the former agreed to pay as rental the interest on the First Consolidated Mortgage Bonds of the latter, the amount then outstanding being $4,833,000, and also to pay six per cent on the $2,000,000 of Capital Stock of the The Indianapolis Company. This latter payment may increase to a maximum of six and three-quarters per cent, on an ascending slide scale with a decrease in the maximum price of gas to the consumer. The amount of bonds of The Indianapolis Company outstanding has been increased by $77,000 issued to the treasury of the Indianapolis Gas Company on account of betterments made between the date of the contract for merger and the consummation of the same; and the Citizens Gas Company has in its treasury $142,000 (to be increased presently to $163,000) taken down under the terms of the lease and the mortgage on account of betterments made by it to the leased property.

The best evidence of the substantial strength of the company is to be found in the earnings for the year 1914, in the face of the remarkably bad conditions of that year, both for business in general and also for this company to a peculiar degree. The net earnings of $220,577.38 are more than twice the interest charges on the bonds outstanding at the beginning of the year and also on those which we have just sold to you. The year was one of unusual difficulty for this company. The new by-product coke ovens of the leased plant were not ready for use until the middle of February and were not fully in service until March. Meanwhile the old coal gas plant on the leased property was becoming less and less efficient until finally gas produced from it actually cost more than the company was receiving for gas at the consumer's burner. It was necessary to operate the old plant and also to make a very large amount of water gas in order to supply the city during the period of construction of the by-product coke ovens. Thus for a period of about two months fully one-half of the gas sold in the city was sold at an actual loss. Furthermore the serious business depression set in soon after the operation under the merger began. As a condition to its approval of the merger, the Public Service Commission demanded of the company a reduction of five cents per thousand cubic feet in the price for gas. While this reduction may ultimately lead to a considerable expansion of consumption, it requires some time to bring such a development about, and the business conditions of 1914 were unfavorable to any new development in the industrial uses of gas. The total consumption in 1914 was 2,055,849,500 cubic feet, while the consumption of the combined companies for the calendar year 1913 amounted to 1,928,931,700 cubic feet. Under normal conditions with the growth that has been going on in the city of Indianapolis and with the low price at which gas has been sold, it has been possible to count on an increase in gas sales amounting to over ten per cent per year, but the depression in 1914 made it impossible to maintain that average growth, even with the reduction in price. Therefore the reduction in the price of gas meant a falling off in income of $102,792 from what the company would have had under the sixty cent rate. This handicap can be overcome in time by the expansion of the business, but the past year was an unfavorable one for any such expansion. At the same time that the loss of income was suffered on account of the terms under which the merger was permitted, the wide-spread general depression, made much more acute by the European War, caused a serious falling off in the demand for coke for metallurgical purposes. The result of this was that the average price at which the company sold its coke during the year 1914 was 51.7 cents per ton less than the price which was obtained in the year 1913. Since the sales for the year amounted to 307,124 tons, this shrinkage in price meant a diminuation in revenue of $158,783. It is with gratification that I may report that there has been a marked improvement in the coke demand and in the average selling price since the beginning of the present year. All things considered, I feel safe in stating that the normal net earnings of the company under such average business conditions as prevailed between 1907 and 1914 should be at least $250,000 greater than they were in the year 1914. Having obtained reasonably safe earnings under these very unfavorable conditions, the position of the company may be taken as well assured.

The following statement shows the business of the company for a period of five years ending December 31st, last:

Comparative Earnings.

	1914	*1913	1912	1911	1910
Gross Income.	$2,575,025.56	$1,265,182.48	$815,422.96	$704,286.38	$525,583.74
Operating Expenses & Taxes	1,989,258.62	972,185.74	647,910.31	569,037.31	433,570.12
Leasehold Rental	365,189.56	90,412.50
Net Earnings.	$ 220,577.38	$ 202,584.24	$167,512.65	$135,249.07	$ 92,013.62

While the exceptionally unfavorable conditions existing during the year 1914 caused a falling off in the net profits available for reserves and dividends, the circumstances above related indicate that the company may anticipate increasingly more favorable returns from its operation. Many large economies have been made possible as the result of the merger, and the company is now in possession of two plants of by-product coke ovens capable of producing sufficient gas to supply the city, while it has well equipped water gas plants which are capable of producing fully as much additional gas as can be obtained from the by-product coke ovens. The company has the entire gas business in a city of 275,000 population, and is well established in its natural markets for coke and by-products. The amalgamation of the working forces of the two companies has been completed, and it is believed that few corporations have more efficient organizations than this one has at the present time. The city is a rapidly growing one and has shown ability and disposition to respond to the low price at which gas is sold.

The bonds of which you have purchased $500,000 are secured by a mortgage to the Bankers Trust Company as Trustee, under which a maximum of $10,000,000 is authorized. These bonds were authenticated by the Trustee on account of eighty per cent of the cost of betterments actually made, and only under such conditions may bonds be taken down. They bear interest at the rate of five per cent, payable semi-annually in January and July at the office of the Bankers Trust Company in New York; and during the years 1915 and 1916 a sinking fund of one-quarter of one per cent is operative, increasing to one-half of one per cent thereafter. The sinking fund is to be used in purchasing or calling bonds, and the bonds so purchased for the sinking fund shall be kept alive and draw interest for the sinking fund. The bonds mature July 1st, 1942, and may be called, after due notice, on any interest paying date at 108. Bonds are authenticated by the Trustee only when the net earnings for the preceding period of twelve months shall have been equal to twice the interest charges on the bonds outstanding and the new ones for which application is made. These bonds are now a first lien on all the property owned by the company, conservatively estimated to have a reproduction value about three times as great as the par value of the bonds outstanding and those now sold to you.

The franchise from the City of Indianapolis under which the company is operating runs until 1930, and may be surrendered in exchange for an indeterminate permit from the Public Service Commission. However, some special safe-guards of the franchise are deemed sufficient reason for continuing to operate under it instead of the indeterminate permit.

The legal status of the company and the validity of these bonds have been examined and approved by Messrs. Spooner & Cotton of New York, and Messrs. Smith, Remster, Hornbrook & Smith of Indianapolis.

Very truly yours,

J. D. Forrest,
Secretary and General Manager.
Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

4. (a) On or about the 1st day of October, 1902, Indianapolis Gas executed its certain Mortgage Deed of Trust (referred to herein as the "Mortgage") to The Trust Company of America, a banking corporation then existing and doing business in the City of New York, and one Ferdinand Winter, a citizen of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, as trustees to secure the payment of the principal and interest of the Bonds, which were authorized to be issued in the total principal amount of $7,500,000. Said Mortgage was duly recorded.

(b) The Trust Company of America at the time of the execution of the Mortgage and at all times thereafter up to and including February 24, 1912, was duly authorized 1072 and empowered to hold in trust the property transferred and conveyed in trust to it and to execute the trusts thereby created and was until February 24, 1912, the duly acting and qualified corporate trustee under said Mortgage. On February 24, 1912, the Trust Company of America was duly merged, pursuant to the laws of New York with The Equitable Trust Company of New York. Said The Equitable Trust Company of New York was on February 24, 1912, and at all times thereafter up to and including May 31, 1930, duly authorized and empowered to hold in trust the property transferred and conveyed in trust to it and to execute the trusts created by said Mortgage and became and was until May 31, 1930, the duly acting and qualified corporate trustee under said Mortgage. On May 31, 1930, The Equitable Trust Company of New York was duly consolidated with The Chase National Bank of the City of New York (plaintiff in cause 1844), which was on May 31, 1930, and has been at all times thereafter duly authorized and empowered to hold in trust the property transferred and conveyed in trust to it and to execute the trusts created by said Mortgage and was on May 31, 1930, and has been at all times thereafter the duly qualified and acting corporate trustee under said Mortgage.

(c) Said Ferdinand Winter died in March, 1935, and since his death plaintiff (in cause 1844) The Chase National Bank of the City of New York (hereinafter referred to as the "Trustee") has been continually and is now the sole trustee under said Mortgage. A correct copy of said Mortgage, marked "Exhibit A", is attached to the Bill of Complaint in each of these causes.

1073 5. (a) On September 30, 1913, Indianapolis Gas executed and delivered to Citizens Gas a certain written instrument of lease (hereinafter called the "Lease"). A correct copy of said Lease, marked "Exhibit B", is attached to the Bill of Complaint in each of these causes. All the property leased by Indianapolis Gas to Citizens Gas by said Lease of September 30, 1913, (Exhibit B) was covered by and included in the Mortgage.

(b) On September 30, 1913, the property of Indianapolis Gas included a plant for making and distributing gas to consumers in the City of Indianapolis, including about 375 miles of mains located in the streets and alleys of the City, which mains were connected with the meters of more than 41,000 customers who were served thereby.

6. (a) Citizens Gas was organized in 1906 under the general laws of Indiana providing for the incorporation of manufacturing and mining companies. Certain instruments pertaining to the creation and operations of Citizens Gas are as follows:

(I) A certain franchise contract, and all amendments thereto, signed and entered into on August 25, 1905, and finally approved by the City on August 30, 1905, by and between the City and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker, and Lorenz Schmidt. On May 24, 1906, said franchise contract was duly assigned by the grantees therein named to Citizens Gas. Amendments to said franchise con-
1074 tract were approved by the Common Council of the City of Indianapolis on May 22, 1912. Correct copies of said franchise contract, the assignment thereof, and all amendments thereto, are attached to the Bill of Complaint in cause 1844 as part of Exhibit C and in cause 1950 as Exhibit C.

(II) The Articles of Incorporation of Citizens Gas and all amendments thereto. Correct copies of said Articles of Incorporation, and all amendments thereto, are attached to the Bill of Complaint in cause 1844 as part of Exhibit C and in cause 1950 as Exhibit D.

(III) The By-Laws of Citizens Gas and all amendments thereto. A correct copy of said By-laws, and all amendments thereto, is attached to the Bill of Complaint in cause 1844 as part of Exhibit C.

(b) Citizens Gas operated under the terms of said franchise contract, and the amendments thereto, from the date of the assignments thereof until August 27, 1921, at which time, pursuant to the terms of an Indiana statute authorizing it to do so, it filed with the Public Service Commission of Indiana its declaration of surrender of said franchise and accepted an indeterminate permit, with the result that from August 27, 1921, until September 9, 1935, it operated as a public utility under an indeterminate permit. Said surrender and the acceptance of said indeterminate permit did not have the effect of modifying or rendering nugatory the terms of said franchise contract in so far as they created a public charitable trust and defined the terms and conditions thereof and the rights, duties, and liabilities of Citizens Gas as original trustee, of the City as successor trustee and of the inhabitants of Indianapolis as the beneficiaries of said trust.

1075 (c) On September 9, 1935, Citizens Gas transferred its gas producing and distributing plant and system to the City and since then the City has operated said gas producing and distributing plant and system. Since September 9, 1935, Citizens Gas has not been engaged in any business of any nature whatsoever.

7. (a) On or about May 21, 1913, Indianapolis Gas, lessor, and Citizens Gas, lessee, jointly submitted a tentative form of lease to the Public Service Commission of the State of Indiana and jointly petitioned said Commission to adopt and approve the terms and conditions set forth in said form of lease and to authorize them to enter into and execute said lease. Subsequently, one Frank S. Fishback filed with said Public Service Commission an intervening petition in which he objected to the granting of said joint petition of said gas companies.

(b) A correct copy of the Finding and Order of said Commission with respect to said Lease of September 30, 1913, is attached to the Bill of Complaint in each of these causes, marked "Exhibit D" in cause 1844 and "Exhibit E" in cause 1950.

(c) The proposed lease was so changed and modified as to comply with the provisions and conditions required by the Finding and Order of the Public Service Commission (Exhibit D in cause 1844 and Exhibit E in cause 1950), and thereafter the proposed Lease as so changed and modified was submitted to a meeting of the stockholders of Indianapolis Gas and at said meeting, which was attended by the holders of more than three-fourths of the outstanding capital stock of said company, the execution of said modified Lease was unanimously authorized and approved.

(d) At a meeting of the Board of Directors of Citizens Gas, duly called and held on February 26, 1913, certain 1076 actions were taken by said Board, as shown by the minutes of said meeting, a correct copy of which is attached to this Stipulation marked "Exhibit 5". On the same date and following said meeting of the Board of Directors a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Citizens Gas was duly called and held. The action of said Board of Trustees is shown by the minutes of said meeting, a correct copy of which is attached to this Stipulation marked "Exhibit 6".

(e) At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Citizens Gas, duly called and held, the execution of said modified Lease was unanimously authorized and approved by said Trustees. The respective Boards of Directors of Indianapolis Gas and Citizens Gas also duly authorized and approved the execution of said modified Lease. Correct copies of the minutes of the meetings of the Board of Trustees of Citizens Gas, of the Board of Directors of Citizens

Gas, and of the Board of Directors of Indianapolis Gas, approving the execution of said modified Lease, marked "Exhibit 7", "Exhibit 8" and "Exhibit 9", respectively, are attached to this Stipulation. Thereupon said Lease as thus changed and modified was executed by the respective officers of said companies and was submitted to the Public Service Commission, which Commission as part of said Finding and Order (Exhibit D in cause 1844 and Exhibit E in cause 1950) approved said Lease as thus changed and modified and ordered that it be spread upon the records of the Commission. Said Lease as so modified and executed is the same Lease hereinbefore referred to, 1077 a copy of which, marked "Exhibit B", is attached to the Bill of Complaint in each of these two causes. The parties to said Lease have complied with all the provisions and conditions set forth in said Finding and Order of the Public Service Commission which were conditions precedent to the approval of said Lease by the Commission.

(f) On or shortly after September 30, 1913, said Lease was recorded in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, Indiana, in Volume 78, page 257 and following, of the Miscellaneous Records of said office.

8. (a) Immediately after November 28, 1913, Citizens Gas took possession and control of the gas plant and system and all the other property of Indianapolis Gas described in said Lease, all of which property was and is covered by said Mortgage. Citizens Gas thereafter and until September 9, 1935, continued to operate the plant of Indianapolis Gas and to supply with gas the customers whose meters were connected with the mains of Indianapolis Gas.

9. (a) On November 28, 1913, the aforesaid Frank S. Fishback, who was a resident freeholder of the City of Indianapolis and a stockholder of Citizens Gas, commenced a suit in equity in the Circuit Court of Marion County, Indiana, against the Public Service Commission of Indiana, Citizens Gas and Indianapolis Gas, in which suit the City of Indianapolis was subsequently made a party defendant. Attached hereto is a correct copy of the first paragraph of complaint in said suit, omitting the parts stricken out on motion of some of the defendants, identified as "Exhibit 13" to this Stipulation. The plaintiff in said suit filed nine additional paragraphs of complaint, designated respectively as the amended second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth paragraphs of complaint. Each of said amended second to tenth paragraphs of complaint, inclusive, was sub-1078 stantially identical with said first paragraph of complaint (Exhibit 13), except that each of said amended second to tenth paragraphs of complaint, inclusive, contained in addition to the allegations of the first paragraph of complaint the respective additional allegations set forth in Exhibit 14 to this Stipulation. Said suit was transferred to the Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana, for determination. All the defendants therein were served with process and appeared generally in said suit.

(b) Three of the defendants in said cause, viz.: Public Service Commission of Indiana, Indianapolis Gas and Citizens Gas, filed a demurrer to each of the amended second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth paragraphs of the plaintiff's complaint. Said demurrer of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, Indianapolis Gas and Citizens Gas was sustained by the court.

(c) The City did not file a demurrer to any paragraph of the complaint or amended complaint in said cause, but filed an answer of general denial to all paragraphs thereof. Three of the defendants in said cause, viz., Public Service Commission of Indiana, Indianapolis Gas and Citizens Gas, filed a joint amended answer to the complaint (first paragraph). The plaintiff demurred to said amended answer on the ground that said amended answer did not state facts sufficient to constitute a defense to plaintiff's complaint, which demurrer was overruled.

(d) Before said action in equity brought by said Frank S. Fishback came on to be heard, the City, through its Board of Public Works, required extensions to be made in the lines and mains of Indianapolis Gas, as provided in said Finding and Order of the Public Service Commission (Exhibit D in case 1844 and Exhibit E in case 1950) and in subsection 6 of Section 27½ of said Lease.

1079 (e) On February 15, 1921, the Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana, entered final judgment in said action which judgment was in the words and figures following:

"Come now the parties and the plaintiff now dismisses this action as against the defendant, City of Indianapolis, upon which dismissal the court now renders judgment for costs against the plaintiff.

"And the demurrer of the plaintiff to the amended answer of the defendants, Public Service Commission of Indiana, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, having been overruled, and the demurrer of said defendants to the amended second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth paragraphs of complaint having been sustained and the plaintiff failing and refusing to plead further either by way of reply to such amended answer, or amendment to his complaint, but elects to stand upon such complaint and abide the ruling of the court upon such demurrers, judgment is now rendered in favor of the defendants, Public Service Commission of Indiana, Citizens Gas Company, and Indianapolis Gas Company, upon the demurrer of plaintiff to their amended answer and upon their demurrer to the amended second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth paragraphs of complaint.

"It Is Therefore Ordered, Adjudged, and Decreed by the Court that the plaintiff take nothing by this action, and that the defendants recover of and from plaintiff their costs herein laid out and expended in the sum of $, to which judgment the plaintiff at the time objects and excepts."

(f) After the City had been dismissed as a party defendant in said cause it was not again made a party thereto.

(g) Neither the Trustee nor any predecessor trustee under the Mortgage, nor any bondholder of said Indianapolis Gas was a party plaintiff, party defendant or intervener in said cause of Frank S. Fishback vs. Public Service Commission, et al. The only persons or corporations who were parties to said cause are those hereinbefore named in this subdivision of this Stipulation.

(h) Thereafter the plaintiff in said cause, Frank S. Fishback, prayed an appeal to the Supreme Court of Indiana. Said appeal was dismissed by said Supreme 1080 Court on March 8, 1923, and a rehearing was denied the appellant therein on May 31, 1923. The opinion of the Supreme Court in dismissing said appeal is reported in Fishback v. Public Service Commission, et al., 193 Ind. 282, 138 N. E. 346, and the opinion of the Supreme Court in denying a rehearing is reported in Fishback v. Public Service Commission, et al., 193 Ind. 282, 139 N. E. 449.

(i) The final judgment of the Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana, in said case of Frank S. Fishback vs. Public Service Commission, et al., has never been modified, reversed, vacated or set aside, but said judgment is now in full force and effect.

(j) The pleadings referred to and described in this subdivision of this Stipulation in said cause of Frank S. Fishback vs. Public Service Commission of Indiana, et al., were the only pleadings filed in said cause.

10. (a) At the date of the execution and delivery of the Lease $4,833,000 total face amount of Bonds were outstanding—which Bonds bore serial numbers One (1) to Four Thousand Eight Hundred and Thirty-three (4,833) both inclusive. From time to time between June 22, 1914, and February 11, 1932, upon the request of Indianapolis Gas, the Mortgage trustee authenticated and delivered to Indianapolis Gas additional Bonds in the total principal amount of $2,048,000 which Bonds bore serial numbers Four Thousand Eight Hundred Thirty-four (4,834) to Six Thousand Eight Hundred Eighty-one (6,881) both inclusive. Pursuant to the provisions of the Lease, Indianapolis Gas in turn delivered $1,971,000 principal amount of said additional Bonds to Citizens Gas for the purpose of reimbursing Citizens Gas for ninety per cent (90%) of its capital expenditures on account of extensions and betterments to the plant and system of Indianapolis Gas made and paid for by Citizens Gas. As a result of 1081 such expenditures for extensions and betterments and the reimbursement by issuance of Bonds as just stated, Citizens Gas has expended for additions and betterments to the plant of Indianapolis Gas approximately $200,000 for which it has received no reimburseme[illegible] All additions and betterments to the plant of Indianap[illegible] Gas for which Bonds were issued were made with its [illegible]nt, and under the terms of said Lease all said addit[illegible] and betterments became and are the property of Indi[illegible]polis Gas. All of said Bonds in the principal amount of $1,971,000 were sold by Citizens Gas, except the Bonds in the principal amount of $18,000 referred to in subdivision 3 (c) of this Stipulation, and the proceeds were retained by it.

11. (a) Citizens Gas operated the plant and property of Indianapolis Gas under said Lease continuously from and after November 28, 1913, until September 9, 1935. During the period from October 2, 1913, until September 9, 1935, Citizens Gas from time to time duly paid the interest on the outstanding Bonds by making payment thereof to the holders of Bonds, either at the office of the Mortgage trustee or directly to the holders of Bonds themselves. During said period Citizens Gas paid all the rentals payable in cash under the terms of the Lease, and also paid all the taxes required to be paid by the lessee under the terms of the Lease.

(b) The total payments made by Citizens Gas as interest on Bonds of Indianapolis Gas, dividends on stock of Indianapolis Gas, taxes due from Indianapolis Gas and corporate organization maintenance fees to Indianapolis Gas, during the period from October 1, 1913, to September 9, 1935, are shown by Exhibit 20 attached to this Stipulation.

(c) During the period from its organization in 1906 to June 30, 1935, Citizens Gas paid dividends to the holders of its common stock at the rate of 10% per annum. (b) On April 3, 1929, the Board of Directors of Citizens Gas, after receiving the resolution of the City above referred to (Exhibit 22), unanimously adopted two resolutions, true copies of which, marked "Exhibit 23", and "Exhibit 24", respectively, are attached to this Stipulation. On April 3, 1929, the Board of Trustees of Citizens Gas unanimously adopted a resolution approving each of said resolutions of the Board of Directors (Exhibits 23 and 24).

13. (a) On April 30, 1929, one Newton Todd, a stockholder of Citizens Gas, commenced an action in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana, Indianapolis Division, being cause 1191 in Equity on the dockets of said Court, seeking to enjoin Citizens Gas from transferring its property to the City. A correct copy of the bill of complaint in said cause, marked "Exhibit 30", is attached to this Stipulation. All the defendants in said cause were duly served with process, appeared generally, and filed their answers to plaintiff's bill of complaint.

(b) A correct copy of the separate and several answer to plaintiff's bill of complaint in said cause of the following named defendants, viz: City of Indianapolis; L. Ert 1083 Slack, as Mayor of said City; William A. Boyce, Jr., as City Clerk of said City; and Theodore H. Dammeyer, John C. McCloskey and Emsley W. Johnson, as and constituting the Board of Public Works of said City; marked "Exhibit 31", is attached to this Stipulation.

(c) The following defendants in said cause, viz: Citizens Gas; Gustav A. Schnull, Robert Lieber, Lucius B. Swift, Thomas L. Sullivan, and Henry Kahn, individually, and as voting trustees of the common stock of Citizens Gas; John R. Welch, Gustav A. Efroymson, Henry H. Hornbrook, William H. Insley, Clarence L. Kirk, James H. Rooker, Franklin Vonnegut, James I. Dissette, and Edgar H. Evans, filed their separate and several answer to plaintiff's bill of complaint, which answer was substantially identical with the answer of the City of Indianapolis, et al. (Exhibit 31).

(d) Plaintiff in said equity cause No. 1191 filed an amended motion to strike out portions of said answer of the City, et al. (Exhibit 31). A correct copy of said amended motion, marked "Exhibit 32", is attached to this Stipulation. Said plaintiff also filed an amended motion to strike out portions of said answer of Citizens Gas, et al., which amended motion was substantially identical with the amended motion to strike out portions of the answer of the City, et al. (Exhibit 32). Said amended motions were overruled by the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Indiana on February 26, 1930.

(e) During the pendency of said cause certain of the defendants named in plaintiff's bill of complaint died and certain of the other defendants ceased to occupy their respective official positions as officers of the City. On the 5th day of May, 1930, the following substitution of parties was made:

1084 Henry O. Goett, as City Clerk of the City of Indianapolis, in lieu of William A. Boyce, Jr.; E. Kirk McKinney, Louis G. Brandt and Charles O. Britton, as and constituting the Board of Public Works of said City, in lieu of Theodore H. Dammeyer, John C. McCloskey and Emsley W. Johnson; Frank C. Dailey, and Otto Lieber, individually and as voting trustees of Citizens Gas, in lieu of Lucius B. Swift and Robert Lieber; and Reginald H. Sullivan, as Mayor of the City of Indianapolis, in lieu of L. Ert Slack. Said substituted parties adopted as and for their respective answers in said cause the answers theretofore filed by the persons for whom they were substituted as defendants.

(f) On April 19, 1930, plaintiff filed a supplemental and anciliary bill of complaint in said cause making Allen G. Williams, William V. Rooker, Seth S. Ward and John F. Robbins parties defendant therein. No answer was filed by said defendants but on April 30, 1930, a stipulation was entered into by all the parties to said cause, including said defendants, by the terms of which stipulation it was agreed in open court that a certain action then pending in the Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana, (which action is more fully described in subdivision 14 of this Stipulation) would not be prosecuted or any further steps taken therein until the final determination of said equity cause No. 1191. Said Allen G. Williams was the same Allen G. Williams who was plaintiff in said action then pending in the Superior Court of Marion County and the other defendants to said supplemental and ancillary bill of complaint were attorneys for said Allen G. Williams in said action.

(g) The pleadings hereinbefore identified are all of the pleadings which were filed in said equity cause 1191. Neither Indianapolis Gas, the Trustee, nor any predecessor trustee under said Mortgage, nor any bondholder of 1085 Indianapolis Gas was a party plaintiff, party defendant or intervenor in said equity cause No. 1191. The only persons or corporations who were parties to said cause are those hereinbefore referred to in this Stipulation.

(h) Said cause was tried to the court and evidence and arguments of counsel were heard. Thereafter, on May 29, 1930, the following decree was entered in said cause:

"It is Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed that the plaintiff's bill of complaint be and it is hereby dismissed for want of equity, to which ruling of the Court the plaintiff at the time excepts."

(i) Said Newton Todd took an appeal from said decree of the District Court to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit. Said decree of the District Court was affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, its decision in said cause being reported in Newton Todd v. Citizens Gas Company, et al., 46 F. (2d) 855.

(j) Said Newton Todd filed a petition in the United States Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review its affirmance of said decree of the District Court, which petition was denied by the United States Supreme Court on May 18, 1931, its decision being reported in Newton Todd v. Citizens Gas Company, et al., 283 U. S. 852, 75 L. Ed. 1459.

(k) Said final decree of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana, Indianapolis Division, in said cause No. 1191 has never been modified, reversed, vacated or set aside, but said decree is now in full force and effect.

Ruddell and Guy A. Wainwright, as the Board of Directors for Utilities of said City of Indianapolis, filed their separate motion to strike out portions of the complaint in said cause. A correct copy of said motion, marked "Exhibit 37", is attached to this Stipulation.

(c) On November 5, 1931, the Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana, sustained the specification of said motion (Exhibit 37) which sought to strike out the following portion of plaintiffs' complaint:

1087 "That thereupon it was designed by said confederates that a public service commission should be created in and by the State of Indiana with plenary powers to circumvent the Constitutional restrictions of the state and by those means destroy said Public Charitable Trust and substitute in its place and stead a plan and method whereby said Citizens Gas Company should be required to bear the burden of replacing said Indianapolis Gas Company as a going concern, invested with modern and efficient methods, all to the end that upon the termination of an alliance between said Citizens Gas Company and said Indianapolis Gas Company, the latter company would be in exclusive control of the territory of Indianapolis for all purposes of gas production and sale, and all without cost and expense to said conspirators, but wholly at the cost and expense of the inhabitants and taxpayers of said City of Indianapolis."

At the same time said court overruled all other specifications of said motion.

(d) After said motion to strike had been ruled upon by the court and on November 5, 1931, all the defendants in said cause, except Indianapolis Gas, Trust Company of America and Ferdinand Winter, as trustees under the Mortgage, and the individuals who were members of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, filed a demurrer together with their memorandum stating the grounds upon which they claimed said demurrer should be sustained. Cuthbertson and Jere West, as members of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, filed a demurrer to plaintiffs' complaint, together with their memorandum stating the grounds upon which they claimed said demurrer should be sustained. 1088

(g) The only persons or corporations who were parties to said cause are those named in the complaint therein (Exhibit 35). The pleadings hereinbefore identified are all of the pleadings in said cause.

(h) The Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana, sustained each of said demurrers to the plaintiffs' complaint, and plaintiffs refused to plead further. On December 10, 1931, the following final judgment was entered in said cause:

"It is, therefore, considered, adjudged, decreed and ordered by the Court that the plaintiff take nothing by his complaint herein and that the defendants recover their costs herein laid out and expended, taxed at ..... dollars, to all of which the plaintiff at the time excepts."

(i) Thereafter said Allen G. Williams, as a plaintiff in said cause, took an appeal from said judgment to the Supreme Court of Indiana. On December 22, 1933, said judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court of Indiana, its decision in that case being reported in Williams v. Citizens Gas Company, et al., 206 Ind. 448, 188 N. E. 212. Thereafter said Allen G. Williams filed a petition for a rehearing of said cause in the Supreme Court of Indiana, which rehearing was denied by the Supreme Court of Indiana on the 17th day of April, 1934.

(j) Said final judgment of the Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana, has never been modified, 1089 reversed or set aside, but is now in full force and effect.

25. In the preparation of this Stipulation Exhibit numbers ranging from 1 to 87 have been employed, but no exhibits are identified in this Stipulation bearing any of the following numbers: 1 to 4 inclusive, 10, 11, 12, 15 to 19 inclusive, 21, 25 to 29 inclsuive, 33, 34, 41 to 46 inclusive, 51 to 54 inclusive, 57, 71 to 74 inclusive.

Minutes of Meeting of Board of Directors of Citizens Gas Company, February 26, ~~1915~~. 1913

"An Adjourned Meeting of the Board of Directors of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis Was Held at the University Club at 12:15 P. M. February 26, 1913.

"The following members were present within ten minutes of the beginning of the meeting:

"Messrs. Bachman, Forrest, Hooker, Lieber, Schmidt, Vonnegut, Welch. Messrs. Potts and Mooney were absent.

"On motion of Mr. Lieber, seconded by Mr. Hooker, it was ordered that First and Refunding Mortgage bonds be sold to a syndicate headed by Gavin L. Payne & Company, at a price of 95 and interest, on the following dates and in the following quantities:

May 1	$ 50,000
June 1	50,000
July 1	100,000
August 1	100,000
September 1	50,000
October 1	100,000.

"Mr. H. H. Hornbrook of counsel was invited into the meeting and read a certain proposed contract with Volney T. Malott and Associates, providing as follows:

" 'This Agreement made and entered into this 27th day of February 1913, by and between Volney T. Malott for himself and Associates, party of the first part, and The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, Indiana, party of the second part, Witnesseth:

" 'Whereas, the party of the first part, on behalf of himself and associates, has been in negotiations for more than one-half of the capital stock of the Indianapolis Gas Company and expects to acquire sufficient of such stock to insure, so far as the acts of the Indianapolis Gas Company and of its stockholders are concerned, the power to execute a valid lease of that company's operating plant and system in the City of Indianapolis, and whereas the consummation of such purchase will be materially affected in its details if said Malott and associates shall before completing it know to a certainty that a lease, such as hereinafter mentioned, will be made by said Indianapolis

Gas Company to said Citizens Gas Company, subject only to the approval of the Public Utilities Commission of the State of Indiana.

1100 "'And Whereas, the Citizens Gas Company is desirous, upon proper terms and conditions, of securing a lease of such part of the plant and system of the Indianapolis Gas Company as may be used by it and useful to it in manufacturing and distributing gas.

"'Now Therefore It Is Agreed: That in the event the party of the first part and his associates shall complete the purchase of sufficient of the stock of said Indianapolis Gas Company of the State of Indiana, to execute a valid lease to the second party hereto of the plant and system of said Indianapolis Gas Company, in the form of the contract of lease hereto attached and marked 'Exhibit A', that the second party hereto will promptly upon the completion of the purchase of such stock by the first party enter into the contract of lease, a copy of which is attached hereto, and upon the same being duly executed by said Indianapolis Gas Company, the same shall be a binding and effective contract of lease between said companies, subject only to the approval of the Public Utilities Commission of the State of Indiana. And the first party agrees that upon securing control of such stock, it will cause said lease to be executed by said Indianapolis Gas Company, so far as it legally may do so, provided if said lease is not fully closed by October 1, 1913, then neither party shall be further bound by any obligation hereof.

"'The parties mutually agree that they will use all reasonable effort in securing the approval of said lease by said Public Utilities Commission, such lease being, as it appears to them, in all respects a fair lease and contract.

"'In event any extensions or betterments are made after this date by the Indianapolis Gas Company to its plant and system (other than those embraced in the contract of the Semet Solvay Company) for which said Gas Company is entitled to draw down bonds under its existing mortgage, it shall be permitted to do so, and in addition thereto it shall be permitted as between it and the second party to draw down bonds on account of the work being done under the Semet Solvay Company contract in such amount as when added to the bonds drawn down on account of extensions and betterments not covered by said contract, will produce if sold at 85 per cent of par the total cost of such additional extensions or betterments, other than those covered by the Semet Solvay Company hereafter made; and the bonds thus drawn down shall remain the property of said Gas Company to use as it sees fit and such amount of bonds shall be added to the total of $4,833,000 now outstanding as the total outstanding bonds on which the said Citizens Gas Company shall pay interest as a part of its rental under said lease. Except as herein provided escrow bonds shall not be drawn down on account of the Semet Solvay contract or on account of any betterments heretofore made.

1101 "'After control of said stock is acquired by the first party the merchandise and supply account of the Indianapolis Gas Company shall be kept up to substantially the same value as to the several items thereof as existed on February 1, 1913, to the end that when said lease goes into effect there shall be on hand usual and customary quantities of such supplies and merchandise as said Indianapolis Gas Company would probably have on hand were no lease in contemplation. Any variation from the total value of the supplies and merchandise on hand February 1st, 1913, shall be adjusted by a cash payment one way or the other as the case may be, provided Lessee shall not be required to take over supplies and merchandise in excess of $75,000.

"'The parties hereto shall mutually cooperate to limit the total cost of the work done under the Semet Solvay Company contract to a total of not to exceed $600,000.'"

"Mr. H. H. Hornbrook of counsel then read the proposed contract of lease provided for in the foregoing, as follows:

* * * * * *

"(Here is inserted the proposed 'Agreement of Lease'. Said Agreement of Lease is substantially identical with the Lease finally executed between the parties, a copy of which is attached to the bill of complaint as Exhibit B thereto I R. 51-80), with the following exceptions:

"(a) The proposed 'Agreement of Lease' did not contain:

"(I) The metes and bounds description of the Indianapolis Gas property as it appears in the 4th to 9th grammatical paragraphs, inclusive, of the executed Lease (I R. 52-4).

"(II) The 13th grammatical paragraph of the executed Lease (I R. 55).

"(III) The 3rd grammatical paragraph of Subdivision 6 of the executed Lease (I R. 58).

"(IV) The last grammatical paragraph of Subdivision 7 of the executed Lease (I R. 60).

"(V) The next to the last grammatical paragraph of Subdivision 15 of the executed Lease (I R. 66).

"(VI) All of Subdivision 16 of the executed Lease, except the first sentence thereof (I R. 66-7).

"(VII) Subdivisions 26, 27 and 27½ (containing 19 grammatical paragraphs) of the executed Lease (I R. 73-77).

"(VIII) Subdivision 31 of the executed Lease (I R. 79).

"(b) In place of the 3rd, 4th, and 5th grammatical paragraphs of Subdivision 21 of the Lease as executed (I R. 70, lines 8-43), the proposed Agreement of Lease contained the following provisions:

" '2. The Lessee will pay to the Lessor as additional rental for the demised property:

" 'On the 31st day of December, 1913, the sum of ..... thousand Dollars, being at the rate of One Hundred and Twenty Thousand Dollars per year for the period from the beginning of this lease to the 1st day of January 1914.

" 'On the 30th day of June and the 31st day of December, 1914, and thereafter semi-annually on the last days of June and December of each year, the sum of Seventy Thousand Dollars, provided however when the dividends paid on the capital stock of the Lessee Company shall in any calendar year equal eight per cent of the par value thereof, thereupon in the calendar year following the semi-annual rental to be paid the Lessor shall be Eighty Thousand Dollars and being thus once fixed shall, except as hereafter provided, remain at such sum during the remainder of the term created by this lease; provided if in any calendar year during the running of this lease after the rental hereunder has reached the sum of $160,000 a year, the earnings of the Lessee available for dividends to its stockholders shall not be sufficient to enable a dividend of eight per cent to be paid to the Lessee's stockholders (whether or not in fact such dividend be actually declared and paid), then the rental to be paid to the Lessor under this paragraph of the lease for the succeeding calendar year shall be only One Hundred and forty thousand dollars ($140,000), payable in two equal semi-annual payments, as hereinbefore provided. For any fractional six months period immediately preceding the termination of the lease, the rental shall be at the same rate as that paid for the preceding six months period.'

"(c) In place of Subdivision 22 of the Lease as executed (I R. 72), the proposed Agreement of Lease contained Subdivisions 22 and 23, reading as follows:

"'22. The Lessee covenants to perform and observe all the covenants and agreements of the Lessor, except those as to the payment of the principal of the bonds, contained in its mortgage to the Trust Company of America, dated October 1st, 1902, securing an issue of bonds in the sum of Seven Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($7,500,000) hereinabove referred to; and also all covenants and agreements of the Lessor, except those as to the payment of the principal of the bonds contained in any refunding or renewal mortgage executed pursuant to the provisions of Article 7 of this lease.

"'As between the parties hereto it is agreed that the Lessee may at any time invest its funds in the outstanding bonds of the Lessor, but its acquirement thereof shall not be deemed a cancellation or retirement thereof unless the Lessee expressly elects to have the same cancelled or retired.

"'23. The Lessee covenants that it will upon the original or other maturity of any of the obligations secured by the aforesaid mortgage of the Lessor, or by any mortgage or mortgages taking its place, refinance such debts with new bonds secured by mortgage on the leased property, or with other obligations of the Lessor, in such manner and form as the Lessee shall deem advisable and the Lessor in writing approves, and the Lessor covenants to do such acts as may be reasonably required of it to carry out such refinancing.')".

1118 "Mr. Lorenz Schmidt offered the following resolution and moved its adoption.

"'Whereas Volney T. Malott for himself and associates at the suggestion of persons connected with the management of this Company has been in negotiations for the purchase of a control of the Indianapolis Gas Company with the sole object of bringing the plants and gas system of said Company under the control of the Citizens Gas Company, and such negotiations have now reached a point where the said Volney T. Malott must close or abandon the same, and he is unwilling to close the same except upon proper assurances that if he acquires such control a proper lease will be entered into by the Citizens Gas Company, for the taking over of such property.

"'Now therefore be it resolved by the Board of Directors of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis 1119 that the President and Secretary of the Company be and they are hereby authorized to execute on behalf of the Company the contract with V. T. Malott this day read at the meeting of the Board, and in event said V. T. Malott and his associates shall acquire control of the Indianapolis Gas Company so as to authorize the execution of the form of lease accompanying said contract, that then the President and Secretary of this Company be and they are hereby authorized to enter into said contract of lease on behalf of this Company, and in connection therewith to consent to any changes in form in said lease which in their judgment do not vary the material rights acquired and obligations incurred by this Company.

"'A copy of said contract and lease shall be set out in the minutes of this meeting.'"

"Which motion was seconded by Mr. Bachman.

"After full discussion by all the Directors present, which was participated in by the Trustees present, the motion was amended with the consent of Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Bachman by adding to said resolution the following provision:

"'Provided however that to the rental clause in the lease as read to the meeting the following be added—"provided if in any calendar year during the running of this lease after the rental hereunder has reached the sum of $160,000 a year, the earnings of the Lessee available for dividends to its stockholders shall not be sufficient to enable a dividend of eight per cent to be paid to the Lessee's stockholders (whether or not in fact such dividend be actually declared and paid) then the rental to be paid to the Lessor under this paragraph of the lease for the succeeding calendar year shall be only One Hundred and Forty Thousand Dollars, payable in two equal semi-annual payments as hereinabove provided."'"

"The resolution as thus amended was put to a vote and all the Directors present voted aye, except Mr. Lieber, who voted no.

"On motion, duly seconded, the Board adjourned, all members who were present at the beginning of the meeting being present at the adjournment of same."

(Sgd.) Franklin Vonnegut,
President."

1128 PLAINTIFFS' STIPULATION EXHIBIT 13.

Fishback vs. Public Service Commission of Indiana, et al.

First Paragraph of Complaint.

Omitting the parts stricken out on motion of some of the defendants, the caption, the signatures and the verification, the first paragraph of complaint in Fishback vs. Public Service Commission of Indiana, et al. (cause No. 23,231 in the Circuit Court of Marion County, Indiana; No. 101,192 in the Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana; and No. 23,943 in the Supreme Court of Indiana) was as follows:

"The plaintiff, Frank S. Fishback, by way of complaint against the defendants, Public Service Commission of Indiana, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and Indianapolis Gas Company, alleges the following facts:

"The plaintiff is now and for many years last past has been a resident freeholder and taxpayer in the city of Indianapolis; that he was one of the incorporators of the defendant, Citizens' Gas Company, and is now and since its organization has been the owner of eight shares of its capital stock. He holds a certificate of such stock duly issued by the company, which reads as follows:

"Trustee's Certificate

Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis

Number 3006 Shares—8

This certifies that Frank S. Fishback is entitled to eight shares of the par value of $25.00 each, of the capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, which, together with all other outstanding stock of said company, have, with the consent and agreement of the aforesaid owner been issued to a board of five trustees as provided in the articles of incorporation of said company and in the gas franchise granted to it by city of Indianapolis, August 25, 1905; and said capital stock shall be and remain under the exclusive and irrevocable control of said board of five trustees and their successors, with full, complete, exclusive and irrevocable power in said board of trustees to hold said stock and vote the same during the continuance of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis as a corporation, for all uses and purposes in the articles of incorporation of said company mentioned, set forth and described. The aforesaid holder of this certificate shall receive all dividends declared from the earnings of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by the directors thereof; and when said certificate holder shall have received, by dividend or otherwise, upon said certificate an amount equal to the face value thereof, together with interest thereon at the rate of ten per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, then this 1129 certificate shall be deemed fully paid and canceled and the interest of said holder in said company and its assets shall thereupon cease, and the property of said company shall be disposed of as provided in said articles of incorporation. This certificate is transferable only on the books of the company by holder thereof in person or by attorney, on surrender of this certificate properly endorsed.

In Witness Whereof, This certificate is signed by the president of the board of trustees, attested by the president and secretary of the board of directors, and sealed with the seal of said company, this 11th day of August, A. D. 1908.

Thomas L. Sullivan,
President Board of Trustees.

Attest:

Franklin Vonnegut,
President Board of Directors.
J. D. Forrest,
Secretary Board of Directors."

"The plaintiff brings this action as such stock and certificate holder, and as such resident of the city of Indianapolis, for the protection of his rights as such stock and certificate holder and such resident, and for the protection of all others similarly interested.

"The defendant, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, is a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Indiana, the articles under which it was incorporated having been filed in the office of the secretary of state of the state of Indiana on the 23d day of May, 1906, and which read as follows:"

(The Articles of Incorporation of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis were copied here. A copy of said Articles of Incorporation is attached to the Bill of Complaint in cause 1844 as part of Exhibit C and in cause 1950 as part of Exhibit D.)

"On the 30th day of August, 1905, the City of Indianapolis entered into a franchise contract with Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, by the terms of which the grantees were given the right to enter upon, and lay, construct, maintain and operate a system of pipes in and along the streets, alleys, and other places in the city of Indianapolis for the distribution and sale of gas. By the terms of such contract, the grantees were given permission to, and thereafter on the ..... day of ....., 1906, they did, assign such contract to the defendant, Citizens Gas Company, and that company entered into and became possessed of all the rights of the original grantees of such contract. It took over, constructed and laid a system of mains, pipes, machinery, and tools, and from that date until the present time the defendant has been operating such a system under the contract originally granted to Potts, Stalnaker and Schmidt, which contract reads as follows:"

(The Franchise Contract by and between the City of Indianapolis and Alfred F. Potts, and others, and the amendments thereto were copied here. A copy of said Franchise Contract and the amendments thereto is attached to the Bill of Complaint in cause 1844 as part of Exhibit C and in cause 1950 as part of Exhibit C.)

1130 "The defendant, the Indianapolis Gas Company, is a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Indiana, now and for many years heretofore owning and operating a plant in the city of Indianapolis through which it supplied artificial gas to the residents of Indianapolis. At the time of the filing of the petition for leave to lease the plant of this company by the Citizens Gas Company, such plant included about 375 miles of mains and pipes of various sizes laid in the streets and alleys of the city, together with certain coal gas and water gas plants, used in the manufacture of the artificial gas sold by the Indianapolis Gas Company. A large part of the mains are old, much having been in the ground for twenty years and more, and large portions of them are in bad repair, rotten, weakened by having been buried in the ground for such a length of time and by electrolysis. The coal and water gas plants are obsolete and incapable of providing gas at a cost that would enable the producer to sell it at a profit in competition with a plant manufacturing and selling gas produced by modern methods, and within the price fixed by the laws of the State of Indiana. The condition of the system of the Indianapolis Gas Company, and the obsolete character of its plants and machinery are and have been such that it has not been able to do a profitable business for many years, has not been able to pay any dividends to its stockholders for twenty years, and has been compelled to borrow money to pay the interest on its bonds and other fixed liabilities. Prior to and at the time of the filing of the petition by the defendants as hereinafter referred to, the Indianapolis Gas Company was practically insolvent. The capital stock of such company is $2,000,000, and its bonded indebtedness $4,833,000, which capitalization is much beyond the actual value of the combined property of said company.

"On the 21st day of May, 1913, the defendant, Citizens Gas Company, filed with the defendant Public Service Commission, a petition asking for permission to take over and lease the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company for a term of 99 years, which petition reads thus:

"Indianapolis, Ind., May 21, 1913.

To the Public Service Commission of the State of Indiana:

Gentlemen:

The undersigned, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and The Indianapolis Gas Company, respectfully show:

1. That each of the undersigned companies is a corporation duly organized under the laws of the State of Indiana, authorizing the formation of mining and manufacturing companies, and is now actively engaged in the manufacture and sale of gas for heating and lighting purposes in the City of Indianapolis.

2. That said companies are both furnishing gas to consumers in the City of Indianapolis at a maximum rate of sixty cents per thousand feet; and at lower rates upon a sliding scale to large consumers; that the rates for gas in the City of Indianapolis are at least fifteen per cent lower than now exist in any other city in the United States and are at least twenty-five per cent below the average rates of cities of equal or larger size.

3. That said companies have at all times since the completion of the plant of the Citizens Gas Company been active and aggressive competitors, the result 1131 of which has been, not only a duplication of pipe lines in many parts of the city, which would have never occurred had there been a unification of service, but also a wastage in current expense as the direct result of dual operation amounting to a great many thousand dollars annually.

4. That the interests of the public generally and of the stockholders of the undersigned companies require that said plants shall be put under a single management, the wastage of further duplicate service and dual operation terminated, if the same can be done on proper terms and conditions.

5. That as will be seen from the accompanying copy of its charter, by-laws and franchise from the City of Indianapolis under which it operates, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis is largely a co-operative institution organized for the purpose of affording to the public the benefits of cheap gas with limited dividends to the stockholders, and providing for an ultimate transfer of the property on certain conditions to the City of Indianapolis for the benefit of the entire public; and it is believed that the lease now proposed will promote the realization of the purposes of the organization of said company.

6. That one of the occasions of the passage of the law creating this commission was the growing feeling throughout the country that there should be vested in some public agency the authority to regulate the affairs of public utilities and as an important phase of such regulation to save to the public the expense of maintaining duplicated service when the same can properly be done.

The foregoing facts being considered, the undersigned have prepared a tentative form of lease, under the terms of which the undersigned, The Indianapolis Gas Company, leases unto the undersigned Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis all its operating plant and system in the City of Indianapolis, which it submits to this commission for its consideration.

And they now respectfully request the commission to make due inquiry in the premises and if thereupon they shall deem the same proper and for the interests of the public, as well as the stockholders of the undersigned companies, that they shall adopt and approve the terms and conditions in said form of lease set forth and thereupon authorize the undersigned companies to enter into and execute the same in such manner and upon such conditions as may be by law required or by the commission prescribed.

Respectfully submitted,

Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis,

By .....

The Indianapolis Gas Company,

By ....."

"The plaintiff, Fishback, desiring to oppose the execution of such a lease as was described in the petition, filed with the defendant, the Public Service Commission, an intervening petition by way of remonstrance, which read as follows:

"STATE OF INDIANA,

BEFORE THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION OF INDIANA.

In the Matter of a Petition of the Citizens Gas Company for Permission to Lease Property of the Indianapolis Gas Company.

Objections of Frank S. Fishback.

Comes now Frank S. Fishback and respectfully shows that he was one of the incorporators of the Citizens Gas Company, and is now a stockholder therein, and that he is a resident free holder of the city of Indianapolis;
1132 that as such stockholder and as such resident of said city he objects to the granting of the petition filed in this matter by the Citizens Gas Company on the following ground:

First. The physical valuation and the earning capacity of the Indianapolis Gas Company are not such as to warrant the payment to it of the rental proposed to be charged the Citizens Company.

What evidence is there before the commission of the real value of the Indianapolis Company's property? Mr. Forrest guessed it at five million dollars and that is the best evidence offered. Mr. Malott stated he thought the Gas building was worth $350,000, but I have no recollection that he placed a valuation on the plant. Upon such evidence the commission is asked to hold that $..... is a fair annual rental for the property proposed to be leased.

It was made plain that no dividends had been earned by the Indianapolis Company for twenty years. The plan suggested now is that the Citizens Company shall take over the system, guarantee seven per cent dividends on the two million dollars of stock and interest on the several million dollars of bonds and at the same time pay ten per cent interest to its own stockholders and the interest on its own issue of bonds. That is a stupendous task Mr. Forrest seems willing to undertake, but I doubt if the commission is convinced that the interests of the stockholders of the Citizens Company will be as well protected as those of Mr. Malott and his associate philanthropists.

On the question of valuation I submit as a part of this protest a copy of a statement in writing made and filed by L. C. Boyd, vice-president of the Indianapolis Gas Company, on May 12, 1913, with the assessor of Marion county. Mr. Boyd is Mr. Malott's associate in the syndicate, and probably has had more to do with the transaction than anyone else. His estimate of the value of the assets of the company is official, made after due consideration, and should carry much weight with the commission.

Mr. Boyd places a total valuation on all of the property of the company, real and personal, of $1,223,250. Deducting from this $350,000, the valuation of the office building as fixed by Mr. Malott, leaves a balance of $873,250. That, according to the vice-president of the company, is the actual value of the property now proposed to be leased to the City of Indianapolis for a period of seventy-four years from 1931 for an annual rental of over $370,000.

Mr. Forrest stated that Citizens Gas stock was now worth one hundred sixty-five on the market. That, he stated, was because of the guaranteed dividends and the record of the company. In answer to Mr. Murphy's question he stated his belief that Indianapolis Gas stock would advance if the lease were made but would not reach one hundred and sixty-five.

The dividend guaranteed under the lease is seven per cent or more. I figure that the stock will be worth at least 145-1/2, basing the estimate on Mr. Forrest's statement. If Mr. Malott and his friends paid ninety, being the experienced financiers that they are, they could easily and evidently did assume that the profit to them would be large, certain and quick.

I submit that a stock paying a guaranteed dividend of 7 or 8 per cent for ninety-nine years bought at 90 is a better investment than a stock paying 10 per cent bought at 1133 165 guaranteed for 18 years. If Mr. Malott et al. are sincere in their protestations of friendliness to the Citizens Company, why have they not offered to base the 7 per cent rental on what the stock cost them.

Second. The Indianapolis Gas Company is without power to enter into the lease proposed for the following reasons:

A. The statutes under which it and its predecessors were organized give it no power.

B. It has no charter or franchise from the city to use the streets. It is there at the sufferance of the city. Under no contract that it could make with the Citizens Company would the latter acquire any right to use the streets in the operation of the system of the Indianapolis Company. If the latter has no right in the streets the permission of this commission to make the lease as petitioned would not create any rights. (Section 95, Acts 1913, page 198.)

Before it be permitted to make the lease proposed in any event I suggest to the commission that the Indianapolis Company must do one of two things, i. e., either show it has a right to the use of the streets occupied by its mains, under a charter; or admit it has no charter and ask for an indeterminate permit under conditions to be fixed by the commission.

In this connection it is pointed out that this is not an application by the Citizens Company for permission to purchase the plant of the other company, make it a part of its own plant and operate under the Citizens Company charter. The two systems are to be kept separate.

Third. Under section 95-1/2 of the Public Utilities Act (Acts 1913, page 169), no public utility may lease the plant of any other like public utility without the consent of the holders of three-fourths of the capital stock outstanding of the proposed lessee.

It may be assumed that the petitioner offers as a reason for the non-application of the above act to the case in hand, the provision in the charter of the Citizens Company that the board of trustees of the company shall have full, complete, exclusive and irrevocable power to hold its stock and vote the same as fully and completely as if they were the owners of the capital stock, and that the trustees have voted in favor of the leasehold arrangement.

A voting trusteeship of the kind created would not deprive the owners of the stock of the right created by section 95-1/2. It is not a question of how the stock shall be voted by the trustees. The trustees may vote as a unit in favor of the proposition but that will not take the place of the required consent of the stockholders. That consent has not been asked or given and in its absence I submit the application should be denied.

Fourth. The Citizens Company has no power to make a lease covering a period longer than the term of its existence. If not before, by dividends and interests, then at the end of 25 years the certificates of stock are to be canceled and the corporation wound up.

A fair interpretation of the charter means that the city now owns the Citizens Company's plant and business, and that the company is to have the use of them until it has paid the shareholders the money they advanced to pay 1134 for its building, with 10 per cent interest on that money. If the money with the interest is repaid at any time within 25 years, the company must surrender the plant to the city; if not paid before, then at the end of 25 years the plant must be surrendered to the city subject to the lien of the mortgage that may be given to pay the shareholders the balance due on their original loan with the 10 per cent.

I contend that the Citizens Gas Company is without power to make lease binding on the city of Indianapolis for a period of 74 years after the company goes out of existence.

I attach to this protest clippings from the Daily Reporter, a commercial paper published in Indianapolis, showing quotations on the Indianapolis exchange on Indianapolis Gas stock. These show that in 1911 the stock was down to fifteen cents and that after public intimation was made of the proposed lease the stock has risen to almost par. It seems to me this justifies the foresight of Mr. Malott and the other gentlemen."

"The Public Service Commission heard evidence upon the petition of the Citizens Gas Company and the Indianapolis Gas Company and upon the remonstrance of the plaintiff, and made a record of its decisions, including a finding of various facts, and an order permitting the execution of the lease referred to in the petition aforesaid, a copy of which lease is hereafter referred to.

"The finding and order of the Commission were duly entered as of October 1, 1913, and read as follows:"

(The Finding and Order of the Public Service Commission of Indiana was copied here. A copy of said Finding and Order is attached to the Bill of Complaint in cause 1844 as Exhibit D and in cause 1950 as Exhibit E.)

"Following the provisions of the order as set out above, the Indianapolis Gas Company filed with the Public Service Commission and with the clerk of the city of Indianapolis a notice of its intention to surrender its franchise rights to occupy the streets of the city of Indianapolis; the defendant Citizens Gas Company has not surrendered its franchise contract with said city and on the ..... day of ....., 1913, said Indianapolis Gas Company and the defendant Citizens Gas Company executed a lease in conformity with the provisions of the order of the Public Service Commission, and referred to in the order as above set out, the lease reading as follows:"

(The Lease of September 30, 1913, was copied here. A copy of said Lease is attached to the Bill of Complaint in each of these causes as Exhibit B thereto.)

"That after the entry of the order of the Public Service Commission granting authority to execute the lease mentioned, the plaintiff Fishback filed a petition for a rehearing before said Public Service Commission, which reads as follows:"

"STATE OF INDIANA.

BEFORE THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION OF INDIANA.

In the matter of the Petition of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and the Indianapolis Gas Company for authority to execute lease.

Petition of Frank S. Fishback for Rehearing."

The petitioner, Frank S. Fishbank, one of the par-
1136 ties of record to this proceeding, respectfully petitions the Commission for a rehearing in the above entitled cause on the following grounds:

1. The Public Service Commission was without power or authority to order or permit the Citizens Gas Company to enter into the lease described under the terms and conditions of the order as entered and of the lease.

2. The Public Service Commission fixed the rental charge to be paid by the Citizens Gas Company under the lease described in the order without fixing or finding the value of the plant and property to be leased, and without regard to the value of such plant and property.

3. The rental ordered and permitted to be paid by the terms of the order and lease, is unreasonable and unlawful, and will result in a waste and misapplication of the funds, earnings, and property of the Citizens Gas Company, and an irreparable injury to its stockholders and certificate holders.

4. The terms and conditions of the order and of the lease are unreasonable and unlawful, and prejudicial and injurious to the interests and rights of the plaintiff as a stock and certificate holder, and of all others holding shares or certificates of stock in the Citizens Gas Company. They impair the obligation of the contract existing between the company and this petitioner and all other certificate and stock holders.

5. The order of the Commission is unlawful and unreasonable for the reason that the Citizens Gas Company is without power or authority under the law to enter into the lease under the terms and conditions as set forth therein and in the order, for the following reasons:

a. The consent of three-fourths of the holders of the capital stock of the Citizens Company outstanding never has been obtained or given to the making of the lease.

b. The trustee and directors and officers of the Citizens Gas Company are not authorized by law or otherwise to enter into such a lease for a period of ninety-nine years.

c. Such trustees, directors and officers are not authorized by law or otherwise to surrender their power to fix and determine the rates at which gas manufactured by such company hereafter shall be sold, as specified in item 7 of the order of the Commission.

6. The fulfillment of the terms and conditions of the lease and order will render impossible the fulfillment of its contract with the city of Indianapolis, and such order and lease impairs the obligation of the contract between the company and said city as it relates to the taking over and ownership of the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company by the city.

7. The city of Indianapolis has not given its consent to such lease and has granted no right to the Citizens Gas Company to operate the plant and system of the Indianapolis Gas Company within the city of Indianapolis.

8. The finding and order of the Commission are not sustained by sufficient evidence.

9. The finding and order of the Commission are contrary to law.'

1137 "That on the 28th day of November, 1913, the Public Service Commission of Indiana, overruled said petition for a rehearing and entered an order relating thereto as follows:

"STATE OF INDIANA.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION OF INDIANA.

In re Petition of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the Indianapolis Gas Company for authority to make lease."

"The Commission having under consideration the motion of Frank Fishback for a new trial in the above entitled cause, and being fully advised in the premises,

It Is Ordered by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, That said motion be, and the same is now here overruled.

"On the day the order of the Public Service Commission was entered as described, the Citizens Gas Company took possession and control of the plant and system, and all other property of the Indianapolis Gas Company described in said lease, and since then has been and now is operating the same in connection with the system theretofore owned and operated by it.

"The plaintiff alleges that the order of the Public Service Commission granting permission and authority to the defendants, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, to execute the lease described upon the terms and conditions of the finding and order of said Commission and upon the terms and conditions specified in the lease, should be set aside and vacated, and the defendants enjoined from carrying out the terms and conditions of such order and lease on the following grounds:

"1. The defendant, Public Service Commission of Indiana was without power or authority under the law to order or permit the Citizens Gas Company to enter into the lease described under the terms and conditions of the order granting such permission and under the terms and conditions of the lease.

"3. The defendant, Public Service Commission of Indiana, fixed the rental charge to be paid by the Citizens Gas Company without regard to the value of the plant and property to be leased, contrary to the provisions of the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, and to the evidence adduced in the hearing of this matter before said Commission.

"4. The rental and fixed charges to be paid as part of the rental ordered and permitted to be paid by the terms of the lease and order, are unreasonable and unlawful, and their payment will result in a waste and misapplication of the funds, earnings and property of the Citizens Gas Company, and an irreparable injury to its stock and certificate holders, including plaintiff.

"7. The order of the Public Service Commission is unlawful and unreasonable, for the reason that the Citizens Gas Company is without power or authority under the law to enter into the lease upon the terms and conditions of the order and lease for the following reasons:

1138 "(a) The consent of the holders of three-fourths (3/4) of the capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company outstanding never has been obtained or given to the making of the lease as required by the provisions of the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

"8. The city of Indianapolis has not given its consent to such lease, and has granted no right to the Citizens Gas Company and that company has no right to operate the plant and system of the Indianapolis Gas Company within the city.

"9. The finding and order of the Commission are not sustained by sufficient evidence.

"10. The finding and order of the Commission are contrary to law.

"Wherefore, for the reasons above stated the plaintiff prays that the finding and order of the Public Service Commission entered as hereinbefore set out, shall be vacated and set aside; that the lease executed by the defendant, Indianapolis Gas Company and Citizens Gas Company, be declared null and void, and that such Commission and such gas companies be restrained and enjoined from carrying out the provisions of such order, finding, and lease; and for all other proper relief."

1139 PLAINTIFFS' STIPULATION EXHIBIT 14.

Fishback vs. Public Service Commission of Indiana, et al.

Amended Second to Tenth Paragraph of Complaint, Inclusive.

Each of the amended second to tenth paragraphs of complaint, inclusive, was substantially identical with the first paragraph of complaint (Exhibit 13 to this Stipulation), with the exception of the omission of the nine grammatical paragraphs of said first paragraph of complaint immediately preceding the prayer thereof, and the addition of the respective additional allegations set forth below.

Amended Second Paragraph of Complaint.

The additional allegations in the amended second paragraph of complaint were as follows:

"The plaintiff avers that the order of the Public Service Commission granting permission and authority to the defendants, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, to execute the lease described, upon the terms and conditions therein set out, is unlawful and unreasonable and should be set aside and vacated and the lease executed thereunder declared invalid and void, and the defendants, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, enjoined from carrying out the terms and conditions of such order and lease for the following reasons:

"The trustees, directors and officers of the Citizens Gas Company were not authorized by law or otherwise to enter into the agreement to permit the Public Service Commission of Indiana during the term of said lease to fix and determine the rates and charges at which gas produced, transmitted, or sold by the Citizens Gas Company through the properties operated by it or by the Indianapolis Gas Company, should be sold, as fully and completely as if the said Citizens Gas Company had surrendered its license, permit or franchise and received an indeterminate permit as provided in the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act."

1140 Amended Third Paragraph of Complaint.

The additional allegations in the amended third paragraph of complaint were as follows:

"The plaintiff avers that the order of the Public Service Commission granting permission and authority to the defendants, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, to execute the lease described, upon the terms and conditions therein set out, is unlawful and unreasonable and should be set aside and vacated and the lease executed thereunder declared invalid and void, and the defendants, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, enjoined from carrying out the terms and conditions of such order and lease for the following reasons:

"The Citizens Gas Company is indebted to its stockholders in dividends provided to be paid them under the provisions of its articles of incorporation, by-laws and certificates of stock to an amount equal to 40 per cent of its capital stock; that said defendant can make the payment of the rental and other charges required by the order and lease hereinbefore referred to, only as operating expenses out of the earnings of said company that should be first applied to the payment of said accumulated dividends and accruing dividends; that if such rental charges are so first paid from the earnings of such company, the company will be unable to pay such accumulated unpaid dividends and accruing dividends due and to become due this plaintiff and other stockholders in said company.

"Plaintiff avers that said company will so divert and misapply the earnings of said company, by applying them to the payment of such rental charges and will not pay dividends now owing and that will hereafter accrue and be owing plaintiff and other stockholders in said company, to plaintiff's irreparable injury, unless the order and lease are canceled and set aside by this court and the defendants enjoined from carrying out the provisions thereof."

Amended Fourth Paragraph of Complaint.

The additional allegations in the amended fourth paragraph of complaint were as follows:

"The plaintiff avers that at the time the petition for leave to lease the plant of the Indianapolis Gas Com-1141 pany was granted, such plant included about 375 miles of mains and pipes of various sizes laid in the streets and alleys of the city, together with certain coal gas and water gas plants, used in the manufacture and distribution of artificial gas sold by such gas company. A large part of the mains were old, having been in the ground for twenty years and more, and large portions of them were in bad repair, rotten, weakened by having been buried in the ground for such length of time and by electrolysis. The coal and water gas plants were obsolete and incapable of producing gas at a cost that would enable the producer to sell it at a profit in competition with a plant manufacturing and selling gas produced by modern methods, and within the price fixed by the laws of the State of Indiana.

"The condition of the system of the Indianapolis Gas Company, and the obsolete character of its plants and machinery were such that it has not been able to do a profitable business for many years, has not been able to pay any dividends to its stockholders for twenty years, and has been compelled to borrow money to pay the interest on its bonds and other fixed liabilities.

"Prior to and at the time of the filing of the petition by the defendants as hereafter referred to, the Indianapolis Gas Company was practically insolvent. The capital stock of such company is $2,000,000, and its bonded indebtedness $4,833,000, which capitalization is much beyond the actual value of the combined property of said company.

"The plaintiff alleges that a fair, reasonable value of the property taken under the lease by the Citizens Gas Company was and is less than $4,000,000 and that a fair and reasonable and lawful rental therefor would not exceed $240,000 per annum as a maximum; that the defendant, Public Service Commission, fixed a rental charge in said order and lease to be paid by the Citizens Gas Company, amounting to over $360,000 per year as a minimum.

"Plaintiff alleges that the rental and fixed charges ordered and required to be paid by the terms of the lease and order as hereinbefore set forth are unreasonable and unlawful and their payment will result in a waste and misapplication of the funds, earnings and property of the Citizens Gas Company and irreparable injury to its stock and certificate holders, including plaintiff."

1142 Amended Fifth Paragraph of Complaint.

The additional allegations in the amended fifth paragraph of complaint were as follows:

"Plaintiff alleges that the City of Indianapolis did not assent to or join in the execution of the lease between the two defendant gas companies or approve or assent to the order permitting such lease; that said city has not granted to the Indianapolis Gas Company or the Citizens Gas Company any right to operate the plant and system of the Indianapolis Gas Company in the streets of said city since the surrender by said Indianapolis Gas Company of its franchise rights in said streets, and neither company has any right to so operate such plant and system; that the operation of the plant of the Indianapolis Gas Company in the streets of said city by the Citizens Gas Company is merely at the sufferance of the City of Indianapolis and may be discontinued by said city at any time."

Amended Sixth Paragraph of Complaint.

The additional allegations in the amended sixth paragraph of complaint were as follows:

"The plaintiff avers that the obligation taken on by the Citizens Gas Company under said order and lease, to pay the interest on the bonds and dividends on the stock of the Indianapolis Gas Company for a period of ninety-nine years, impairs the obligation of the contract existing between the Citizens Gas Company and this plaintiff and other stockholders, and between the company and the City of Indianapolis, in the following particulars:

"1. It constitutes such a lien and incumbrance upon the property and earnings of said company, that the company at the end of twenty-five years from the date of its franchise, can not mortgage such property for the purpose of raising funds from which to pay the stockholders of said company, including this plaintiff, the par value of the stock held by them and the balance of the unpaid accumulated ten per cent annual dividends.

"2. It constitutes such lien and incumbrance upon the property and earnings of said company that the city can not at the end of twenty-five years from the date of the franchise of the company take over the plant and system of the company as provided in section 22 of the franchise of said company, as shown in Exhibit No. 2 hereto attached."

1143 Amended Seventh Paragraph of Complaint.

The additional allegations in the amended seventh paragraph of complaint were as follows:

"The plaintiff avers that the order of the Public Service Commission granting permission and authority to the defendants, Citizens Gas Company and, Indianapolis Gas Company, to execute the lease described, upon the terms and conditions therein set out, is unlawful and unreasonable and should be set aside and vacated and the lease executed thereunder declared void and invalid, and the defendants, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, enjoined from carrying out the terms and conditions of such order and lease for the following reasons:

"The defendant, Public Service Commission, was without power or authority under the law to order or permit the Citizens Gas Company to enter into the lease described under the terms and conditions of the order granting such permission and under the terms and conditions of the lease."

Amended Eighth Paragraph of Complaint.

The additional allegations in the amended eighth paragraph of complaint were as follows:

"The plaintiff avers that the order of the Public Service Commission granting permission and authority to the defendants, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, to execute the lease described, upon the terms and conditions therein set out, is unlawful and unreasonable and should be set aside and vacated and the lease executed thereunder declared invalid and void, and the defendants, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, enjoined from carrying out the terms and conditions of such order and lease for the following reasons:

"The defendant, Public Service Commission of Indiana, fixed the rental charge to be paid by the Citizens Gas Company without regard to the value of the plant and property to be leased contrary to the provisions of the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, and to the evidence adduced in the hearing of this matter before said Commission."

Amended Ninth Paragraph of Complaint.

The additional allegations in the amended ninth paragraph of complaint were as follows:

1144 "Plaintiff avers that after the lease hereinbefore referred to was modified to meet the conditions set forth in the order of the defendant, Public Service Commission, as above referred to, the same was submitted to a meeting of the stockholders of the Indianapolis Gas Company and at a meeting attended by the holders of more than three-fourth of the outstanding capital stock of said company, the execution of such lease as amended and modified was authorized and approved.

"Plaintiff avers that during all the time hereinbefore referred to, the entire capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company was held by and stood in the names of Thomas L. Sullivan, Lucius B. Swift, Thomas H. Spann, Gustav A. Schnull and Henry Kahn, trustees, who held such stock with the powers and subject to all provisions of the Articles of Association of said Citizens Gas Company. That on September 30, 1913, at 2 o'clock p. m., a meeting of said trustees was held, which was attended by Thomas L. Sullivan, Thomas H. Spann, Lucius B. Swift and Henry Kahn. That at such meeting said Henry Kahn introduced and moved the adoption of the following resolution:

'Resolved, That the trustees of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis upon consideration of the proposed lease of the plant and property of the Indianapolis Gas Company by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis embodying the modifications therein required by the Public Service Commission of the State of Indiana, do hereby consent to and approve the execution thereof, and do vote all the stock of said company in favor of such lease.'

"Which motion was seconded by Lucius B. Swift and unanimously adopted.

"That thereafter the respective boards of directors of said Indianapolis Gas Company and said Citizens Gas Company also duly authorized and ratified the execution of said lease.

"That thereupon said lease as thus modified and amended was executed by the respective officers of the defendant gas companies and presented to the Public Service Commission of Indiana, which Commission had thereupon confirmed and approved the same as shown by its order hereinbefore set out.

"Plaintiff avers that the consent of the holders of three-fourths of the capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company outstanding, including this plaintiff, was not obtained or given to the making of the lease."

1145 Amended Tenth Paragraph of Complaint.

The additional allegations in the amended tenth paragraph of complaint were as follows:

"The plaintiff avers that the order of the Public Service Commission granting permission and authority to the defendants, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company to execute the lease described, upon the terms and conditions therein set out is unlawful and unreasonable and should be set aside and vacated and the lease executed thereunder declared invalid and void, and the defendants, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company, enjoined from carrying out the terms and conditions of such order and lease for the following reason:

"The trustees, directors and officers of the Citizens Gas Company were not and are not by law or otherwise authorized to enter into such a lease as hereinbefore referred to for a period of 99 years."

"(Here follows detailed description of real estate owned by Citizens Gas Company)."
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

Defendant Company has also acquired title to and now owns certain leasehold rights in coal lands located in the Counties of Raleigh and Fayette, in the State of West Virginia, used and useful for the purpose of mining and producing therefrom coal for use in the operation of the business of defendant Company. Defendant Company also is the owner of a certain leasehold estate in and to the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company, as created by a certain contract of lease dated September 30, 1913, and recorded in Miscellaneous Record 78, pages 257-278, inclusive, of the records in the Recorder's office of Marion County, State of Indiana.

V.

Plaintiff became a holder of trustees' certificate No. 12093, dated May 16, 1924, evidencing the entire beneficial ownership of 100 shares of common capital stock of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis on or about said date, and has been a holder of said certificate continuously ever since. Plaintiff acquired other similar certificates from time to time thereafter, and now is the owner and holder of trustees' certificates No. 12093, 13230, 13231, dated May 16, 1924, October 17, 1927, October 17, 1927, respectively, and evidencing, respectively the entire beneficial ownership of 100, 100 and 50 shares of the common capital stock of defendant Company. This suit is not a collusive one to confer on a court of the United States jurisdiction of a suit of which it would not otherwise have cognizance.

VI.

On the 30th day of August, 1905, defendant City of Indianapolis, acting by and through its common council, ratified, confirmed and approved a certain Franchise Contract executed on the 25th day of August, 1905, by the Board of Public Works of the said City, and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, contracting for themselves and their associates and assigns. Said Franchise Contract and the Ordinance ratifying the same are in the following words and figures, to-wit:

* * * * * *

"(Here follows the Franchise Contract of August 25, 1905, which appears as part of Exhibit C to the bill (I. R. 81-94))."

(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

Said Franchise was published in a book printed and published by authority of the City of Indianapolis, entitled "Charter and Ordinances of the City of Indianapolis," which said book was published in the year 1905, and which said Franchise appears on pages 289-311, inclusive. Said Franchise was also published in a book printed and published by defendant City entitled "Proceedings of the Common Council of Indianapolis," which was the journal of said Common Council from October 15, 1903, to December 31, 1905, and said Franchise, and the proceedings of the Common Council relating thereto, appear in said book on pages 795-806, inclusive.

VI-a.

During the year 1905 and prior thereto The Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, was furnishing gas in certain portions of the City of Indianapolis under a franchise from said City. During the year 1905 and until the formation of defendant Citizens Gas Company, The Indianapolis Gas Company was the sole company furnishing gas in the City of Indianapolis. The rates and service of The Indianapolis Gas Company were unsatisfactory and it was feared that because of its entrenched position it might be able to absorb, through stock ownership, any new competing companies. The purpose of the voting trust provided for in the franchise of 1905 heretofore set out and in the articles of incorporation of defendant Citizens Gas Company hereafter set forth, was to insure that control of defendant Citizens Gas Company should not pass to The Indianapolis Gas Company or its stockholders and to that end it was provided that no Voting Trustee of the Gas Company should be an employee or stockholder of said The Indianapolis Gas Company.

VII.

On the 23d day of May, 1906, defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was incorporated under an Act of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, entitled:

"An Act for the incorporation of manufacturing and mining companies and companies for mechanical, chemical and building purposes," approved May 20, 1852, and subsequent amendments thereto. The Articles of Incorporation of said defendant, omitting names, signatures and acknowledgments, were as follows:

* * * * * *

"(Here follows the Articles of Incorporation of Citizens Gas Company, which appears as part of Exhibit C to the bill (I. R. 95-100))."

(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

Said Articles of Incorporation were recorded on the 23d day of May, 1906, in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, State of Indiana, in Miscellaneous Record, Vol. 50, beginning at page 96.

VIII.

Thereafter, on the 24th day of May, 1906, the aforesaid Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt assigned and transferred to defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis all of their rights in the aforesaid Franchise Contract, which assignment was accepted by defendant Company, and said defendant Company continuously thereafter operated under said Franchise until it surrendered the same as hereinafter alleged.

IX.

Thereafter defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis proceeded to take subscriptions for its common stock to the full authorized amount of $1,000,000, and upon payment of said subscriptions defendant Citizens Gas Company issued certificates representing its common capital stock in the following form:

"Incorporated under the laws of the State of Indiana

Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis

Capital Stock $1,000,000

Number Shares $25.00 Each Shares

This Certifies that ..... is the owner of .....
fully paid shares of the Capital Stock of the par value of $25.00 per share in the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, to be held by the Board of Five Trustees named in the Articles of Incorporation and their successors as Trustees in accordance with the terms of the Articles of Incorporation of said Company.

A trust Certificate is issued to said Stockholder by said Trustees on surrender of which with proper assignment of same on the books of said Corporation by the aforementioned Stockholder or his attorney, the Trustees of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis will make proper transfer as directed in said assignment.

In Witness Whereof, the said corporation has caused this certificate to be signed by its President and Secretary and to be sealed with the seal of the corporation of Indianapolis, Ind., this ..... day of .....,
A. D. 19.....

.....,
President

.....,
Secretary"

When issued there were inserted in each certificate the name of the owner of the shares and the number of shares represented by said certificate. Said certificates were placed in the possession and control of the voting trustees who thereupon issued and delivered to each stockholder a certificate representing such shares, which certificate is the document referred to herein as a certificate of beneficial interest in the common stock of defendant Citizens Gas Company. Thereafter on the 25th day of March, 1911, said defendant Company increased its common capital stock from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 face value, the amount of such increase being divided into 40,000 shares of the par value of $25.00 each, and said defendant Company proceeded to sell and issue said additional $1,000,000 of common stock in the manner provided in the Articles of Incorporation, and in the sale thereof received a net premium above such face or par value in the sum of $418,-711.28. For said increase of stock said defendant Company issued stock certificates and trustees' certificates in the same manner and form as the stock certificates and trustees' certificates were issued in connection with the original issue of stock of defendant Company. Stock certificates in the above form were issued by defendant Citizens Gas Company for the shares of stock purchased by plaintiff at, or shortly before, the time when the trustees' certificates were issued and delivered to plaintiff, as alleged in Paragraph V of this bill.

X.

Thereafter, the General Assembly of the State of Indiana passed an act entitled

"An Act concerning public utilities, creating a public service commission, abolishing the railroad commission of Indiana, and conferring the powers of the railroad commission on the public service commission."

Said Act went in force on the 1st day of May, 1913, and is commonly referred to as the "Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act." Under the terms and provisions of said Act, as amended by Indiana Acts 1921, page 197, in force May 31, 1921, defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, on the 27th day of August, 1921, filed with the City Clerk of defendant City of Indianapolis, and with the Public Service Commission of Indiana, a written declaration, legally executed, surrendering its Franchise from the City of Indianapolis and accepting an indeterminate permit in lieu thereof, as provided in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act. Said written declaration and the certificate of the City Clerk of defendant City of Indianapolis are in the words and figures following, to-wit:

"Declaration of Surrender of Licenses, Permits and Franchises
By
Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis

This Indenture Witnesseth, That Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Indiana, and which is the owner and operator of by-product gas plants in the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, and is a public utility, declares that it hereby surrenders each and every license, permit and franchise from the city of Indianapolis, Indiana, now owned or held by it and under or by virtue of which said Company is operating its gas utility or any part thereof, in said city; and hereby accepts indeterminate permits in lieu of said licenses, permits and franchises hereby surrendered as provided in the Act of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana entitled "An Act concerning public utilities creating a public service commission, abolishing the railroad commission of Indiana, and conferring the powers of the railroad commission on the public service commission," approved March 4, 1913, and acts amendatory thereof or supplemental thereto; but if said act shall be repealed or annulled, then said Company shall be reinstated in the possession and enjoyment of all the licenses, permits and franchises hereby surrendered as provided in said Act.

In Witness Whereof, the said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has this 12th day of August, 1921, caused its name to be hereunto subscribed by its President and its corporate seal hereto affixed, attested by its Secretary duly authorized thereto by resolutions of the stockholders and directors of said Company, duly adopted at meetings of said stockholders and directors duly called and held.

Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis,
By John R. Welch,
President.

Attest:
John D. Forest,
Secretary.

Certificate

This is to certify that on the 27th day of August, 1921, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis filed in the office of the Clerk of the city of Indianapolis, Indiana, a declaration, of which the above is an exact copy.

Geo. Hutsell,
Clerk of the City of Indianapolis."

Thereafter certain proceedings were had before the Public Service Commission of Indiana in a matter entitled "In the matter of the declaration of surrender of licenses, permits and franchises by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis," numbered 6178. In said proceedings, the Public Service Commission of Indiana made an order on the 12th day of December, 1921, which order is in the following words and figures, to-wit:

"On August 27, 1921, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis filed with the Commission its declaration of surrender of its franchise with the City of Indianapolis, said declaration being in the usual form and executed in conformity to the law of Indiana in such cases made and provided.

On August 30, 1921, Ira Chase Koehne, on his own behalf and on behalf of all other consumers of the said Citizens Gas Company, filed his objection to the surrender of said franchise by said Citizens Gas Company, the specific objections set out being as follows:

First: That the Citizens Gas Company is not a public utility;

Second. That said Company forfeited its contract with said City on May 4, 1921, when it began to receive a price for its gas in excess of that provided for in its contract and franchise with the City of Indianapolis, and by reason thereof had no franchise to surrender on said 27th day of August, 1921;

Third. That the Acts of the Legislature of 1913 and 1921 concerning surrender of franchises are each unconstitutional.

After due notice this cause was heard in the rooms of the Commission on December 6, 1921.

It is wholly useless for the Commission to go into a detailed examination of the specific objections hereinbefore set out, for the reason that the petitioner is only attempting to surrender whatever franchise it may have with the City of Indianapolis. If it has no franchise the objectors can in no way be prejudiced or harmed by the declaration of surrender on the part of petitioner. If, on the other hand, petitioner has a franchise with the City of Indianapolis, it has the power to surrender the same and receive in lieu thereof by operation of law, an indeterminate permit as defined by the statutes of the State of Indiana.

If the objectors have any rights in the premises herein, their remedy is through the courts and not through this Commission.

This Commission is not a court, although in certain matters its acts are quasi-judicial. The formal order written in surrender of franchises is a mere acknowledgment of the filing of such surrender and a finding that the surrender was made in conformity to the provisions of the law applicable thereto. The order of the Commission therefore neither adds to nor detracts from the sanctity of the declaration of surrender.

The Commission therefore, of its own motion, dismisses the objections filed by the said Ira Chase Koehne, and being fully advised in the premises, finds that said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, Indiana, has filed its written declaration, as provided by the Public Service Commission Act, surrendering all licenses, permits and franchises from the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, now owned or held by the petitioner herein in accordance with the provisions of said Act and that said Company receives in lieu thereof, by operation of law, an indeterminate permit to be held under all the terms, conditions and limitations of said Act.

It Is Therefore Ordered by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, that said declaration and all instruments in writing filed by said Company in the matter shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commission and kept on file as a record of said surrender.

Defendant City had notice of the above proceedings but took no steps to join with those objecting to the surrender of said franchise. Defendant City took no steps of any kind to oppose the surrender of said franchise and acceptance of said indeterminate permit and did not at the time of said surrender and acceptance, or defendant Company's right to operate under said indeterminate permit, or make any objection thereto, but on the contrary acquiesced in said surrender and acceptance of said indeterminate permit and the operation by defendant Company under said indeterminate permit until defendant City on the 20th day of March, 1929, took action as hereinafter alleged.

As a result of the aforesaid surrender of said Franchise and acceptance of said indeterminate permit, the original contract between defendant City of Indianapolis and defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was entirely rescinded, abrogated and annulled, and a new contract was substituted therefor, the terms of which were and are prescribed in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

X-a.

On and before the 27th day of August, 1921, the Citizens Gas Company was in serious financial embarrassment. It had been found impossible to earn a sufficient sum from the sale of gas at sixty cents per thousand cubic feet to pay matured debts and operating expenses, semi-annual dividends at the rate of ten per cent per annum, and to make and pay for such extensions and betterments as were ordered by the Board of Public Works of the defendant City of Indianapolis, or as were necessary to meet the needs of the inhabitants of said City and of defendant Citizens Gas Company. According to the books of defendant Citizens Gas Company the total curent assets aggregated on the 30th day of June, 1921, $2,704,108.41, and included cash and deposits $207,647.99; accounts receivable, $295,450.20; notes receivable, none; materials and supplies $944,128.34; and saleable products, $1,256,881.88; and on said date current liabilities aggregated $2,303,-993.04, and included accounts payable, $394,737.67; short time notes payable to banks for money borrowed to finance operation, $1,520,511.89; and trade acceptances payable, $388,743.48. Due to the unsatisfactory operations of defendant Citizens Gas Company it was impossible for said Company, so long as it continued to operate under the provisions of its franchise to borrow more money on bonds or to market any stock in order to obtain additional working capital. The paid-in surplus of said Company of $418,711.28 had been impaired to the extent of $323,-714.22, and on said date amounted to $94,997.06. By reason of general business conditions then prevailing, it was impossible to dispose of the items of materials and supplies, and saleable products, except at prices far below the figures at which they were carried, as above stated. Said condition continued to be substantially the same until said surrender of the franchise and acceptance of the indeterminate permit. By reason of the aforesaid condition, on August 27, 1921, defendant Citizens Gas Company was in imminent danger of insolvency.

XI.

On the 27th day of August, 1921, defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis filed in the office of the Secretary of State a document, which, omitting signatures and acknowledgments, is in the following words and figures, to-wit:

* * * * * *

"(Here follows a certificate of amendment to the Articles of Incorporation of Citizens Gas Company, filed August 27, 1921, which appears as part of Exhibit C to the bill (1 R. 112-116))."

(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

Said document was also filed for record on the 27th day of August, 1921, in the office of the Recorder of Marion County, State of Indiana, and was placed of record in said office in Miscellaneous Record Vol. 121, at page 32.

XI-A.

The statutes under which defendant Citizens Gas Company was incorporated, and in force when the above quoted amendments to its original Articles of Incorporation were purported to be made, contained no sanction or authority for any of the provisions contained in said original Articles, or in the attempted amendments thereto, relating to the payment of certificate holders or the transfer or conveyance of the plant and property of defendant Company to defendant City; and all such provisions, and particularly Articles 9, 10 and 12, both in their original and amended form, were and are mere surplusage, and null, void and of no effect. Furthermore, said defendants Voting Trustees were wholly without authority to execute the purported certificate of amendment to said Articles of Incorporation, or to cause the same to be adopted or filed on behalf of defendant Company, and had no authority or right under any terms of said voting trust or said original Articles of Incorporation to vote the stock of the Company, or to take any other steps, which would extend, increase or otherwise modify their powers as Voting Trustees, or to make any new or amended agreement affecting the rights or the property of said Company or its stockholders, and for said reason said purported amendments to said Articles were and are invalid, void and of no effect.

XII.

Defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis now has outstanding first mortgage bonds in the amount of $3,404,000, bearing interest at 5% per annum; and has outstanding preferred capital stock in the face amount of $1,000,000, entitled to cumulative dividends at 5% per annum; and has outstanding common stock in the face amount of $2,000,000, entitled to dividends at 10% per annum, payable semi-annually. It is not possible that the net earnings of defendant Company from January 1, 1929, to August 30, 1930, will be sufficient, together with existing earned surplus, to redeem and retire the preferred stock of defendant Company according to the terms and conditions thereof, and thereafter to pay to the holders of certificates of beneficial interest in the common stock of said Company an amount equal to the face value thereof, together with interest thereon at the rate of 10% per annum. The individual defendants, directors and trustees of defendant Company, having knowledge of the financial condition of the Company and of the facts aforesaid, have not undertaken, nor asserted that they would undertake, to pay to said certificate holders of common stock the entire face value thereof, with dividends thereon at 10% per annum, pursuant to Section 1, Clause (g) of the Franchise Contract, repeated in Article X of the Articles of Incorporation. Defendant City, knowing that it could not become entitled, under the terms of Section 1, Clause (g) of the Franchise, repeated in Article X of the Articles of Incorporation, to a conveyance of the plant and property of defendant Company on or before August 30, 1930, proceeded, through its Board of Public Works, to assert its alleged right and option to acquire the plant and property of defendant Company, as provided by Section 22 of the aforesaid Franchise, repeated in Article XII of the Articles of Incorporation of said Company, by adopting the resolution of March 20, 1929, and by serving the same, including the notice and demand therein contained, upon said defendant Company, its trustees and directors, as hereinafter set forth.

XIII.

Thereafter, during the early part of the year 1929, defendant City of Indianapolis, acting through its Board of Public Works, Legal Department, and special counsel employed expressly for the purpose of bringing about the conveyance of the plant and property of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to defendant City in accordance with the terms of the original Franchise Contract, in part repeated in said Articles of Incorporation heretofore referred to, prepared a bill to be submitted to the Seventy-sixth General Assembly of the State of Indiana, for the purpose of securing the enactment of said bill into a statute to assist defendant City in acquiring the plant and property of defendant Company. Said bill was introduced in the House of Representatives of said General Assembly by members thereof residing in said City of Indianapolis and elected from Marion County, in said State of Indiana. Said bill is entitled:

"A Bill for an Act relating to corporations organized before May 1, 1913, for the purpose of furnishing gas for fuel or illuminating purposes or electric lights or water, or light, heat and power to any town or city or the citizens or inhabitants thereof, and the articles of incorporation of which provide for the transfer of the property of such corporations to such town or city, legalizing certain provisions in the articles of incorporation thereof and authorizing the conveyance of the property of such corporations to such towns or cities and authorizing such towns or cities to accept such conveyance, repealing all laws in conflict therewith and declaring an emergency."

Said bill thereafter passed both branches of said General Assembly in the exact form prepared and submitted by said counsel for defendant City without change or amendment of any kind or character. Said bill contained an emergency clause providing for its taking effect immediately upon its passage, was approved on the 11th day of March, 1929, and said act became a law on said day. Said act was directed solely at the Articles of Incorporation of defendant Company, and by the terms of said act, said General Assembly of the State of Indiana purported to legalize the Articles of Incorporation of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis in order that defendant City might assert successfully the right to obtain the plant and property of defendant Company on payment to holders of certificates of beneficial interest in the common stock of said Company the face value of their certificates plus dividends at ten per cent per annum, all as provided in said original Franchise Contract between defendant City of Indianapolis and defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and repeated in part in the Articles of Incorporation of defendant Company.

XIV.

On the 20th day of March, 1929, the defendant City of Indianapolis, acting by and through its Board of Public Works, passed a resolution asserting its right to acquire the plant and property of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis under the provisions of the Franchise and the Articles of Incorporation hereinbefore set out. Said resolution was in the following words and figures, to-wit:

• • • • • •

"(Here follows the resolution adopted by the Board of Public Works on March 20, 1929, a copy of which is in evidence as Plaintiffs' Stipulation Exhibit 22)."
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

Defendant City of Indianapolis, through its agents and employees, served a copy of said resolution upon the defendants constituting the Board of Directors of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and upon the defendants constituting the Board of Trustees of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, on said 20th day of March, 1929.

XV.

On the 3rd day of April, 1929, the directors of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, in meeting assembled, adopted a resolution designated as "Resolution No. 1," purporting to acknowledge the claim of right asserted in the aforesaid notice and demand of said City, to acquire the plant and property of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, which Resolution No. 1 is in the words and figures following:

• • • • • •

"(Here follows the first resolution of the Board of Directors of Citizens Gas Company adopted on April 3, 1929, a copy of which is in evidence as Plaintiffs' Stipulation Exhibit 23)."

(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

At the same meeting, said Board of Directors adopted a second resolution designated as "Resolution No. 2," purporting to authorize the payment from the surplus of the defendant Company of $5.00 as a "capital dividend" upon each share of the common capital stock of defendant Company, to be paid to the persons holding the certificates evidencing the beneficial ownership of said shares of common stock respectively. Said Resolution No. 2 is in the following words and figures:

* * * * * *

"(Here follows the second resolution of the Board of Directors of Citizens Gas Company adopted on April 3, 1929, a copy of which is in evidence as Plaintiffs' Stipulation Exhibit 24)."
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

The aforesaid action of said Board of Directors in response to the demand of said City of Indianapolis is in violation of the rights of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and of all owners of common stock in said defendant Company, including this plaintiff, in the particulars hereinafter set forth.

XVI.

Each of said resolutions adopted by said Board of Directors on April 3, 1929, as aforesaid, was approved by the Board of Trustees of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, by a resolution adopted at a meeting of said Board on said April 3, 1929, and the resolution adopted by said Board of Trustees, approving said resolutions, is in the following words and figures:

"Whereas, the directors of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis have this day adopted resolutions reading as follows: (Here the trustees inserted the directors' resolutions replying to the city's demand), and

"Whereas, such resolutions were adopted in joint meeting with this board of trustees and the form of such resolutions was agreed upon by both the trustees and directors; now therefore be it

"Resolved, that the board of trustees of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis hereby recognize the trust created by the franchise referred to in the resolutions adopted by the board of directors, by the assignment thereof to the Citizens Gas Company and by the articles of association and the amendments thereto and acknowledge the right of the City of Indianapolis to take over the property and assets of said Citizens Gas Company pursuant to the terms of said franchise and articles of association, subject to the retirement of the certificates representing the beneficial ownership of the common stock of said company and the preferred stock of said company. And be it further

"Resolved, that this board of trustees hereby adopts and confirms the resolutions adopted by the board of directors of said company as a correct statement of the attitude of the board of trustees with reference to the matters therein contained. And be it further

"Resolved, that said board of trustees of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis proceed in all lawful ways to carry out all the obligations of said company to its certificate holders and preferred shareholders, and that upon the discharge of said obligations the property and assets of said company be conveyed and transferred to the City of Indianapolis and that said conveyance be made as soon as that can reasonably be done. And be it further

"Resolved, that Thomas L. Sullivan, chairman of the board of trustees, be authorized and empowered to transmit a true copy of these resolutions, as adopted by the board of trustees, to the City of Indianapolis."

Said action of said Board of Trustees is in violation of the rights of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and of all owners of the common stock therein, including this plaintiff, in the particulars hereinafter set forth.

VII.

Prior to the filing of this bill of complaint, and on the 26th day of April, 1929, plaintiff served upon defendants constituting the Board of Trustees of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a demand in writing, by which plaintiff demanded of said Board of Trustees that they demand of the Board of Directors that said Board of Directors cause defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to assert certain rights. Plaintiff's demand upon said Board of Trustees is in the words and figures following, to-wit:

To Gustav A. Schnull, Robert Lieber, Lucius B. Swift, Thomas L. Sullivan, Henry Kahn, Constituting the Board of Trustees holding legal title in and to all shares of the common capital stock of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, in trust for the holders of certificates of beneficial interests in such common stock.

You and each of you are notified hereby:

That I, the undersigned, holder of certificates representing the entire beneficial interest in 250 shares of the common capital stock of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, on behalf of myself and all other holders of certificates of beneficial interest in the common stock of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, without confirming or acknowledging the existence of any title, power or authority in you as trustees or in any other capacity, and without decreasing or waiving any rights, legal or equitable, in such common stock which certificate holders may have possessed heretofore, or may now or may hereafter possess, respectfully request and demand that you, as record holders in trust of the common stock of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, take action as follows:

1. That you rescind the resolution adopted by you on the 3rd day of April, 1929, approving Resolution Number 1 and Resolution Number 2, adopted by the Board of Directors of said corporation on said date, and notify the officers and directors of said corporation of your action in rescinding your said resolution.

2. That you serve upon the Board of Directors and officers of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis a written notice of protest and objection, therein protesting and objecting

(a) To the adoption by said Board of Directors, on April 3, 1929, of the resolutions designated as Resolution Number 1 and Resolution Number 2.

(b) To the recognition or acknowledgment by said Board of Directors or by said officers, then, now or hereafter that there was created, has existed, and now exists or may hereafter exist a trust for any purpose whatsoever either by virtue of the franchise heretofore granted by the City of Indianapolis to Alfred F. Potts, et al., under date of August 25, 1905 (afterwards assigned to Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis), or by virtue of recitals contained in either the original or amended Articles of Incorporation of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

(c) To the recognition or acknowledgment by said Board of Directors or by said officers, then, now or hereafter, that there exists in the City of Indianapolis any right to acquire, at any time, any of the property of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, except in accordance with the terms and conditions prescribed by the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act of the State of Indiana.

(d) To the performance or the taking of any steps looking to the performance by said Board of Directors or by the said officers of any of the acts referred to and described or proposed in said Resolution Number 1 and said Resolution Number 2.

3. That you serve upon the Board of Directors and officers of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis a written request and demand, therein requesting and demanding

(a) That said Board of Directors rescind and cancel the aforesaid Resolution Number 1 and Resolution Number 2 and enter such action upon the records of the said Company.

(b) That said Board of Directors make reply to the notice served upon it by the City of Indianapolis, which notice is in such Resolution Number 1 described and, in such reply, expressly deny the assertion, claim and demand of said City that any rights, title, interest and/or ownership of any nature or character whatsoever have been granted, reserved, transferred or vested in and to said City in and to the gas plant, mains and property or in and to any property of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by virtue of either the certain ordinance franchise of August 25th, 1905, or the said Company's original or amended Articles of Incorporation or the certificates issued to the subscribers of the common stock of the said Company or by virtue of any other writing or document or by virtue of any statute or law.

(c) That said Board of Directors and officers institute and prosecute to final judgment in any court of competent jurisdiction a suit in equity or action at law or any other legal proceeding which may be proper to have declared wrongful and void and to quiet title against any and all claims of the City of Indianapolis in and to any of the property, real or personal, of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and that said Board of Directors and said officers take all and such other steps as may be required to remove any clouds upon the title in and to the Company's said property.

4. That you, as the owners in trust of the common stock of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, in behalf of yourselves as such trustees and in my behalf and in behalf of all other holders of certificates of beneficial interest in the common stock of said corporation, take all steps necessary to protect the said corporation against any claim of the City of Indianapolis to and against the title of any of the property and assets of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and if Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, its Board of Directors and officers fail, neglect or refuse to take the steps requested and demanded in accordance with the foregoing, that you, as holders of the legal title in the common stock of said corporation, proceed to exercise all stockholders' rights, by instituting suit or any other proper legal proceeding to have declared null and void, and to quiet the title of the Corporation against, any such claim or assertion of such claim by the City of Indianapolis to or against any of the property or assets of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and to prevent the carrying out of any of the said claims of said City or the performance or attempted performance of any of the acts or purposes described in the aforesaid Resolution Number 1 and Resolution Number 2.

Because of the emergency existing by reason of the notice heretofore served by the City of Indianapolis upon Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, its Board of Directors and officers, and by reason also of the action with reference thereto by said Board of Directors, I ask respectfully a prompt reply hereto, setting forth your position and intentions in connection with the foregoing demands. On failing to hear from you within a reasonable time, I shall assume that no action is by you to be taken and shall, as the owner of the equitable interest in the common stock represented by my certificates, proceed to take such action as may be necessary to protect and establish all of such rights of said corporation, of its stockholders, and of the holders of certificates of beneficial interests in the common stock of said corporation.

Dated this 26th day of April, 1929.

(Signed) Newton Todd.

Said Board of Trustees denied plaintiff's demand, and failed and expressly refused to take the action requested of them in said demand, and notified plaintiff of such refusal on the 27th day of April, 1929.

XVIII.

Thereafter and on the 27th day of April, 1929, plaintiff served upon defendants constituting the Board of Directors of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a written demand that said Board of Directors enforce the rights of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis which plaintiff is asserting in this bill of complaint. Said demand is in the following words and figures, to-wit:

To

Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

The Board of Directors of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

James I. Dissette, G. A. Efroymson, Edgar H. Evans, J. H. Hooker, H. H. Hornbrook William H. Insley, Franklin Vonnegut, Clarence L. Kirk and John R. Welch, who constitute the Board of Directors of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

John R. Welch, President of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

C. L. Kirk, Vice-President of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

G. A. Efroymson, Treasurer of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

F. C. Rastenburg, Secretary of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

L. M. Edwards, Assistant Secretary of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

V. V. Smith, Assistant Treasurer of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

You and each of you are notified that I, the undersigned, holder of certificates representing the entire beneficial interests in 250 shares of the common capital stock of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, respectfully object to and protest against the certain actions heretofore taken and proposed hereafter to be taken by Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, its Board of Directors, and officers, in the following particulars, to-wit:

1. In adopting, at a meeting of the Board of Directors, on April 3, 1929, the resolution designated as Resolution Number 1.

2. In recognizing, by such resolution or otherwise, then, now or hereafter, that there was created a trust for any purpose whatsoever by the franchise heretofore granted by the City of Indianapolis to Alfred F. Potts, et al., under date of August 25th, 1905 (afterwards assigned to Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis), or that there now exists or may exist hereafter any such trust by virtue of such franchise.

3. In recognizing, by such resolution or otherwise, then, now or hereafter, that there was created a trust for any purpose whatsoever by either the original Articles of Incorporation or by the Amended Articles of Incorporation of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, or that there now exists or may exist hereafter, any such trust by virtue of such Articles of Incorporation.

4. In acknowledging, by such resolution or otherwise, then, now or hereafter, the existence of any right of the City of Indianapolis to take over the property and assets of said Company pursuant to the terms of said franchise and/or of such Articles of Incorporation, either subject to the retirement of the certificates representing the beneficial ownership of the common stock of said Company and subject to the retirement of the preferred stock of said Company or upon any conditions whatsoever, except such as are prescribed by the terms and provisions of the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

5. In proceeding or proposing to proceed, in any manner or form whatsoever, now or hereafter, either before or after carrying out any of the Company's obligations to such certificate holders and preferred stockholders, to convey the property and assets of said Company to the City of Indianapolis, except in accordance with the terms and conditions provided in the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

6. In adopting, at a meeting of the Board of Directors, on April 3, 1929, the Resolution designated as Resolution Number 2.

7. In proposing to make or hereafter making, from the assets of said Company, a capital payment in the amount of five dollars ($5.00) per share on account of the Two Million Dollars ($2,000,000.00) of certificates outstanding, representing the beneficial interest in the Common Stock of the Company, to be distributed to the record holders of such certificates.

8. In proposing to receive or hereafter receiving presentation of any of such certificates for endorsement thereon of the amount of any such proposed capital payments or in proposing to make or hereafter making any such endorsements upon such certificates.

9. In proposing to appropriate or hereafter appropriating from the assets of the said company and withdrawing from its proper corporate uses and depositing with the Union Trust Company of Indianapolis or with any other bank, trust company, person, firm or corporation any moneys whatsoever for the purpose of making any capital payments to certificate holders as in said Resolution Number 2 provided.

10. In declaring, claiming, recognizing, acknowledging or asserting by said resolution or by any other form of resolution or corporate action, then, now or hereafter that from and after May 16, 1929, or from any other date, any or all right of the several holders of the certificates representing the beneficial ownership of the common stock of said Company, to receive dividends on that portion of the par value of such certificates represented by such capital payment, in such Resolution Number 2 described, shall cease; or that the capital account represented by the common stock of the Company shall be reduced to the sum of One Million Six Hundred Thousand Dollars ($1,600,000.00) or to any other sum below Two Million Dollars ($2,000,000.00) or carried on the books of account of said Company in any amount below Two Million Dollars ($2,000,000.00); or that there should be placed any indorsements or additional recitals upon new certificates issued by the Company representing the beneficial ownership of the common stock of the Company.

11. In recognizing, acknowledging or asserting, in any manner or form, that the City of Indianapolis possesses any right, title or interest, legal or equitable, vested or unvested, contingent or otherwise, in any of the property or assets, real or personal, belonging to Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

The objections and protest herein contained are addressed separately to each of the actions above specified, and are based upon each of the following reasons:

1. Any rights and claims in and to any of the property or assets of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis asserted to exist in the City of Indianapolis by virtue of the recitals of any franchise or Articles of Incorporation as amended or otherwise, always have been and are illegal, invalid and void.

2. Any right and claims in and to any of the said Company's property or assets asserted to exist in the City of Indianapolis by virtue of the terms of any franchise ordinance or by virtue of any other written instrument were terminated and rescinded by the action of the State of Indiana in accepting the surrender by such Company of such franchise and the issuance, in lieu thereof, on December 15, 1921, of an Indeterminate Permit in accordance with the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana.

3. Because of the foregoing and other reasons, good and sufficient in law, all claims of said City in and to any of the assets of said Company are null and void, cast a cloud upon the said Company's title to its property, depreciate the value of shares of the Company's common capital stock and thereby do great wrong and injury to the undersigned as well as to all other holders of certificates of beneficial interests in such stock.

Wherefore, I do now request and demand that you and each of you take corporate action as follows:

1. Rescind and cancel the aforesaid Resolution Number 1 and Resolution Number 2 and enter such action upon the records of the said Company.

2. Make reply to the notice served upon you by the City of Indianapolis, which notice is in such Resolution Number 1 described, and, in such reply, expressly deny the assertion, claim and demand of said City that any rights, title, interest and/or ownership of any nature and character whatsoever have been granted, reserved, transferred or vested in and to said City in and to the gas plant, mains and property or in and to any property of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by virtue of either the certain ordinance franchise of August 25th, 1905, or the said Company's original or amended Articles of Incorporation or the certificates issued to the subscribers of the common stock of the said Company or by virtue of any other writing or document or by virtue of any statute or law.

3. That you institute and prosecute to final judgment in any court of competent jurisdiction a suit in equity or action at law or any other legal proceeding which may be proper to have declared wrongful and void and to quiet title against any and all claims of the City of Indianapolis in and to any of the property, real or personal, of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and that you take all and such other steps as may be required to remove any clouds upon the title in and to the Company's said property, and to prevent the carrying out or the attempt to carry out now or hereafter, any claims of said City to any of the property of said Citizens Gas Company.

In view of the notice of assertions of claim to title heretofore made by the City of Indianapolis and of actions taken by the Board of Directors of said Company, and the emergency arising by reason thereof, I ask respectfully a prompt reply to the matters contained herein, and, upon failure to receive the same within a reasonable time, I shall proceed to take such action as, in my opinion, will protect and safeguard the property of the Company against the illegal claims of the City of Indianapolis.

Dated this 26th day of April, 1929.

(Signed) Newton Todd.

Said Board of Directors denied plaintiff's said written request and failed and expressly refused to take the action requested therein to be taken, and notified plaintiff of such refusal on the 27th day of April, 1929. Plaintiff has made no effort, other than as heretofore alleged, to secure action from the common stockholders of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, for the reason that said Board of Trustees claims the exclusive right to vote all of the common stock of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, including the right to elect the Board of Directors thereof, and having so refused to act for the protection of the stockholders, as heretofore alleged, any further demand upon the body of common stockholders of defendant Company would have been futile and unavailing.

XIX.

The original agreement between the State of Indiana, acting through the agency of defendant City of Indianapolis, and the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, which was contained in and evidenced by the aforesaid Franchise Contract and in part repeated in the Articles of Incorporation of said Company, was in all respects rescinded, abrogated and annulled, and a new agreement between said State and said defendant Company was substituted therefor, by the voluntary act of said Company in accepting the offer to enter into a new agreement made by the State to defendant Company in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, which said acceptance was evidenced by the surrender by defendant Company of the aforesaid Franchise, and the receiving, in lieu thereof, of an indeterminate permit under the terms and provisions of said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act. The effect of the foregoing was the creation of a new contract between the State and the defendant Company. One of the terms of said new agreement was that, in lieu of the right of defendant City of Indianapolis to acquire the plant and property of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, as provided in Sections 1, 2, 22 and 23 of said Franchise Contract and in part repeated in Articles X and XII of said Articles of Incorporation, defendant City should have the right to acquire the property of defendant Company under the terms and conditions, and at its then value, as determined and prescribed by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, and defendant Company relinquished all of the rights and remedies secured to it by its former contract with defendant City, and thereafter possessed only such rights and remedies as were granted to it under the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act. In so far as the Articles of Incorporation of defendant Company were inconsistent with said new agreement, they were by implication modified by the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act to conform to the provisions thereof; and Articles X and XII of the Articles of Incorporation of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis were completely abrogated, rescinded, annulled and superseded by said new agreement arising out of the acceptance by defendant Company of the aforesaid indeterminate permit. The passage by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana of said legalizing act of 1929 purporting to revive and legalize all of the provisions of said Articles of Incorporation, and particularly those in respect to the mode of acquisition of the plant and property of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by defendant City of Indianapolis, constitutes and is an impairment of the obligations of the aforesaid new contract between the State and the defendant Company in violation of Article I, Section 10, of the constitution of the United States, and in violation of Article I, Section 24, of the Constitution of Indiana, and said legalizing act is therefore void and of no effect.

XX.

The aforesaid legalizing act of 1929 denies to defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis the equal protection of the laws in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that it makes certain facts a basis for classification in order to enact, under the guise of a general law, a special law directed at and applicable to defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis alone. The distinctions made by said act, in order to render it applicable to defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis alone, are based upon mere differences and have no reasonable or substantial relation to the purpose of the act in respect to which the classification is proposed. Said differences and arbitrary distinctions, the possible purposes thereof, and the reasons why each of said differences and distinctions is arbitrary and irrational, are as follows, viz.:

(a) Said act applies only to certain corporations organized prior to May 1, 1913, and implies that the reason for selecting said date is that May 1, 1913, was the date of the creation of the Public Service Commission of this State under said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act. The only rational ground that can be suggested for selecting such time as a basis of classification is that corporations organized prior to that date ought not to be under the control of the Public Service Commission. That said alleged ground has no basis in reason is shown by the fact that the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act in Section 101 thereof provided that any utility organized prior to the date of said Act might bring itself voluntarily under the terms of said Act by filing a written declaration of the surrender of its franchise and taking in lieu thereof an indeterminate permit. In the original Section 101 of said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, utilities organized prior to May 1, 1913, were required to file said surrender prior to July 1, 1917. The General Assembly of the State of Indiana extended the time for filing said surrender by Acts 1915, page 110, and further extended the time for filing said surrender by Acts 1921, Chapter 93, thereby establishing the legislative policy of the State of Indiana as favoring the bringing under the terms of the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act all public utility corporations organized prior to May 1, 1913, and the attempt on the part of said legalizing act to alter said legislative policy for corporations having certain charter provisions is wholly irrational and arbitrary.

(b) Said legalizing act of 1919 contains the following provision, viz.:

"That if in the original articles of incorporation of any corporation organized under the laws of this state prior to May 1st, 1913 (that being the date of the creation of the public service commission of this state), for the purpose of furnishing natural or artificial gas for fuel or for illuminating purposes, or for furnishing electric lights or water to the citizens of any town or city within this state, or to furnish light, heat and power to any town or city, or the inhabitants thereof, provision is made for the transfer or conveyance of the property of such corporation to such town or city, subject to the outstanding legal obligations of said corporation, whenever the holders or owners of shares of stock, stock certificates or holders or owners of any beneficial interest in such capital stock shall have received the face or par value of such shares of stock, stock certificates or beneficial interest, together with the interest or dividends thereon provided for in such articles of incorporation, such provision in such articles shall be, and is hereby legalized and declared to be, valid and binding upon such corporation and upon the holders and owners of any such shares of stock, stock certificates or beneficial interest therein or their assigns."

The only rational purpose for a general statute legalizing a provision such as that referred to in the above quoted part of said act would be that, when a public utility has made a contract with a municipality under which such municipality has the right under certain conditions to acquire its property, such contract should be enforced. Said legalizing act does not purport to legalize all contracts between municipalities and public utility companies which contain provisions for the transfer or conveyance of the property of such public utility to the municipality, but only such contracts as are contained in articles of incorporation of a corporation of the type described in said act. Said agreements are much more frequently contained in franchises than in articles of incorporation, and in legalizing only such agreements contained in articles of incorporation, said legalizing act makes a classification which is based upon a mere difference and which has no reasonable or rational relation to the only possible lawful end to be secured by such legalizing act.

(c) Said legalizing act further provides as follows: "and said town or city shall be authorized and entitled to accept a transfer and conveyance of any such property in accordance with the terms and conditions of such articles of incorporation, without the question of the acceptance or acquisition of such property being submitted to a vote of the electors of such town or city and without any election being held therein to determine whether such property shall be acquired by such town or city."

The general law in force with regard to the acquisition of public utility property by a municipality in the State of Indiana is found in an Act entitled "An Act concerning municipal corporations," approved March 6, 1905. Section 93 of said act, in so far as material, provides as follows:

"The Board of Public Works shall have power: * * *

Eighth. To purchase within or without the limits of such city, and to construct, by contract or otherwise, and to operate, water works, gas works, electric light works, heating and power plants, steam and power houses and lines, for the purpose of supplying such city and the inhabitants thereof with the use and convenience of such works, or to purchase or hold a majority of the stock in corporations organized for any of the above purposes; and to purchase within or without the limits of such city, lands or other property for such purposes; Provided, That none of the powers conferred by this paragraph shall be exercised except pursuant to an ordinance specifically directing the same, and after an election had in relation thereto, as hereinafter provided."

Section 249 of said act, as amended by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana in 1915, provides:

"Any city or town may erect or construct water works, gas works, electric light works, heating, steam and power plants, or combination of such utilities, together with all building, lines and accessories necessary thereto, and may purchase or lease any such works and utilities already constructed or in course of construction, and owned by any other persons; and may also purchase, condemn or lease other lands for said purposes, and may also extend, change and improve such works and utilities when so acquired, all for the purpose of furnishing the inhabitants of such city or town and vicinity thereof with the use and convenience of any or all of such utilities: Provided, That before any city or town shall enter upon the policy of erecting and constructing any such new works and utilities, or the purchase of the same from other persons, the common council of such city or the board of trustees of such town, as the case may be, shall adopt a resolution, designated by number, declaring the necessity for entering upon the policy of such erection and construction or purchase. In case of the proposed erection and construction of new works, said declaratory resolution shall fix the general character and the probable maximum cost thereof; and in case of the purchase of such works from other persons, such common council or board of trustees shall first procure an option from the owners of such works, agreeing to sell the same upon the terms of a definite proposed contract of sale, upon approval thereof by popular vote, and a full copy of said proposed contract of sale shall be incorporated in, and made a part of, said declaratory resolution. Before such declaratory resolution is confirmed and the policy thereof entered upon, said common council or board of trustees shall submit the same to the qualified voters of such city or town, at a special or general election, of which election previous notice shall be given by publication once each week for two weeks in some newspaper printed and of general circulation in such city or town, and if there be no such newspaper, then in some newspaper printed and of general circulation in the county in which such city or town is situated, the first of said publications to be at least twenty days prior to the day fixed for such election. The tickets for such election shall have printed thereon, in separate lines, the following phrases:

'For declaratory resolution Yes' and 'Against declaratory resolution No', designating the number of resolution submitted, or other similar phrases by which the voter may effectually express his choice upon the question submitted; and each phrase shall have printed to the left thereof a voting square, by marking in which square, the voter shall express his choice; and such elections shall otherwise be governed by the general election laws of the State of Indiana, so far as applicable. If such resolution be submitted at a general election of such city or town, the tickets therefor shall be printed upon and at the bottom of the general tickets containing the names of candidates at such election. If a majority of the votes cast at such election be in favor of such resolution, such common council or board of trustees may, by ordinance, confirm such resolution and proceed to execute the policy thereof; but if a majority of such votes be opposed to such resolution, then such common council or board of trustees shall have no power to confirm the same or to execute the policy thereof. Such city or town is hereby authorized, for the purpose of procuring the means to acquire the aforesaid works and utilities, or to improve the same when acquired, as hereinbefore authorized, to issue and sell the bonds of such city or town pursuant to and in conformity with the provisions of section 55 of this act."

Since the Legislature has deemed it desirable that an election should be held to determine whether any municipal corporation will acquire a utility plant, the mere fact that articles of incorporation of a utility operating within the municipality contain stipulations empowering the municipality to acquire its plant under certain conditions, offers no basis for dispensing with an election to determine whether or not the municipality will acquire such property; and the attempted creation of such an exception on such grounds is arbitrary and based on a mere difference and amounts to a denial to defendant Citizens' Gas Company of Indianapolis and its stockholders of the equal protection of the laws.

(d) Said legalizing act further provides:

"It shall not be necessary to obtain the consent or approval of the public service commission of Indiana or any other state board, commission or officer for such transfer and conveyance or of the terms and conditions upon which the same is to be made, but such transfer and conveyance shall be valid without any order or approval of such commission, board or officer."

The general law in force with regard to the acquisition of public utility property by a municipality in the State of Indiana, where utilities are operated under the provisions of the Public Service Commission Law, as is defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, is found in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, and more particularly in Section 102 thereof, which provides as follows:

"Sec. 102. Any public utility accepting or operating under any indeterminate license, permit or franchise hereafter granted shall by acceptance of any such indeterminate license, permit or franchise be deemed to have consented to a future purchase of its property by the municipality in which the major part of it is situate at the value and under the terms and conditions determined by the commission as provided in this act, and shall thereby be deemed to have waived the right of requiring the necessity of such taking to be established by the verdict of a jury, and to have waived all other remedies and rights relative to condemnation, except such rights and remedies as are provided in this act and shall have been deemed to have consented to the revocation of its license, permit or franchise by the commission for cause."

If the Legislature deemed it desirable that the purchase of the plant and property of a public utility and the terms of such purchase should be approved by the Public Service Commission, the fact that the articles of incorporation of a utility operating within a municipality contain provisions that the municipality may acquire said plant and property under certain conditions, offers no basis in reason for dispensing with the approval of said Public Service Commission, nor the adoption of any other and different rule than if said option were contained in a franchise, contract or other document other than articles of incorporation, and the attempted creation of such exception on the foregoing grounds is arbitrary and irrational, and based upon a mere difference, and is a denial to defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and its stockholders of the equal protection of the laws.

XXI.

Said legalizing act of 1929, in so far as it purports to legalize the Articles of Incorporation of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and make them binding upon said defendant Company and enforceable by defendant City of Indianapolis, with respect to the provisions and terms upon which said defendant City would have a right to acquire the plant and property of defendant Company, deprives defendant Company of its property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, because the agreement between the State of Indiana, acting through the agency of defendant City of Indianapolis, and defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, contained in said franchise and in part repeated in said Articles of Incorporation, was abrogated by the surrender of said franchise by defendant Company and the acceptance, in lieu thereof, of an indeterminate permit under the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, one of the terms of which indeterminate permit was that the defendant City could only acquire the plant and property of defendant Company at its then value and under the terms and conditions determined by the Public Service Commission of Indiana; and said legalizing act purports to authorize defendant City to enforce conveyance and to require defendant Company to convey upon the terms fixed in said Franchise and in part repeated in said Articles of Incorporation, to-wit, upon the receipt by the stockholders and holders of certificates of beneficial interest, either from earnings of the company, or from money paid by defendant City, or from the proceeds of a mortgage to be placed upon the property of defendant Company at the request of defendant City, of the face value of their stock and/or certificates of beneficial interest, together with the stipulated dividends thereon, which sum is far less than said defendant Company, and indirectly said stockholders and/or holders of certificates of beneficial interest, including plaintiff, would receive if defendant City were to acquire the plant and property of defendant Company as provided for in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

XXII.

Said legalizing act of 1929, in so far as it attempts to legalize and make enforceable the provisions of the Articles of Incorporation of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis with respect to the right of the City of Indianapolis to require a conveyance of the plant and property of defendant Company, is in violation of Article I, Section 21, of the Constitution of Indiana, because it permits said State of Indiana, through the agency of the City of Indianapolis, to take private property without just compensation, in that the agreement between the State of Indiana, acting through the agency of defendant City of Indianapolis, and defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, contained in said Franchise and in part repeated in said Articles of Incorporation, was abrogated by the surrender of such Franchise by defendant Company and the acceptance, in lieu thereof, of an indeterminate permit under the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, one of the terms of which indeterminate permit was that defendant City could only acquire the plant and property of defendant Company at a price equal to its then value as fixed by the Public Service Commission of Indiana; and said legalizing act purports to authorize defendant City to enforce conveyance and to require defendant Company to convey upon the terms fixed in said Franchise and in part repeated in said Articles of Incorporation, to-wit, upon the receipt by the stockholders and holders of certificates of beneficial interest, either from earnings of the Company, or from money paid by defendant City, or from the proceeds of a mortgage to be placed upon the property of defendant Company at the request of defendant City, of the face value of their stock and/or certificates of beneficial interest, together with the stipulated dividends thereon, which sum is far less than said defendant Company, and indirectly said stockholders and/or holders of certificates of beneficial interest, including plaintiff, would receive if defendant City were to acquire the plant and property of defendant Company as provided for in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

XXIII.

Plaintiff and numerous other persons, subsequent to the issuance of said indeterminate permit in 1921 and prior to the passage of said legalizing act of 1929, purchased, acquired still hold and own certificates of beneficial ownership in the common stock of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, having paid therefor amounts far in excess of what their value would have been if the said City had possessed the right thereafter to acquire the Company's property in the manner now asserted by said City. Said legalizing act, in so far as it purports to validate and make binding upon defendant Company certain of the aforesaid invalid and non-binding provisions of said Articles of Incorporation after the rights of plaintiff and the said other certificate holders had vested, deprives them of their property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and takes private property without just compensation in violation of Article I, Section 21, of the Constitution of the State of Indiana, and grants to certain citizens or classes of citizens, namely, the defendant City, privileges or immunities which, upon the same terms, do not equally belong to all citizens, in violation of Article 1, Section 23, of the Constitution of the State of Indiana.

XXIV.

Said legalizing act of 1929 not only purports to legalize articles of incorporation containing the provisions therein stated, but also purports to grant to municipal corporations power to acquire the property of a public utility without submitting the question of the acquisition of said property to a general election, and also purports to remove determination of the terms of acquisition of such utility property from the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission. Said act does not deal with but one subject and the matters properly connected therewith, but deals with three separate and unrelated subjects, viz., (a) the legalizing of said Articles of Incorporation, (b) the powers of said municipal corporations, and (c) the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission, and as such is in violation of Article IV, Section 19, of the Constitution of the State of Indiana, and is void.

XXV.

By reason of the facts heretofore alleged in paragraph XX of this bill, which are hereby referred to and by reference made a part of this paragraph, said legalizing act of 1929 grants to certain citizens or classes of citizens, viz., defendant City of Indianapolis, privileges or immunities which, upon the same terms, do not equally belong to all citizens, and said legalizing act of 1929 constitutes special legislation aimed solely at defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis in violation of Article I, Section 23, of the Constitution of the State of Indiana.

XXV-A.

By reason of the facts heretofore alleged in paragraph XX of this bill, which are hereby referred to and by reference made a part of this paragraph, said legalizing act of 1929 attempts to create a corporation, not a banking corporation, by special act, and not under general laws, in violation of Article XI, Section 13, of the Constitution of the State of Indiana.

XXVI.

The provisions in Section 1, Clause (g) of the aforesaid Franchise Contract of August 30, 1905, and repeated in Article X of the Articles of Incorporation of defendant Company, that the gas plant and property of said Company shall be conveyed to said City when the said certificate holders shall have received by dividends or otherwise the face value thereof with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent per annum purports to create an interest in real and personal property to vest upon a contingency which might occur at a time more remote from the date of the creation of such right, than the period of a life or lives then in being and twenty-one years thereafter, and such provisions were in violation of the common law of the State of Indiana and are now and at all times have been illegal, null, void and unenforceable by defendant City of Indianapolis.

XXVII.

The option or right of defendant City of Indianapolis to demand the conveyance of the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, under the provisions of Sections 1, 2 and 22 of the aforesaid Franchise Contract of August 30, 1905, and in part repeated in Article XII of the Articles of Incorporation of defendant Gas Company, by its terms might be exercised at a time more remote from the date of the creation of such option or right than the period of a life or lives then in being and twenty-one years thereafter, and is in violation of the common law of the State of Indiana and is now and at all times has been illegal, null, void and unenforceable by defendant City of Indianapolis.

XXVIII.

Under the provisions of the aforesaid Franchise, in part repeated in said Articles of Incorporation, defendant City of Indianapolis claimed an option or right to acquire the property of defendant corporation on or before the expiration of the term and period of said Franchise. The term and period of said Franchise expired on the 27th day of August, 1921, when said Franchise was surrendered by defendant Company, and in lieu thereof an intermediate permit was accepted under the terms and provisions of the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act. The defendant City took no steps to exercise the alleged option at or prior to said 27th day of August, 1921, and in truth and fact took no steps whatever looking toward the acquisition of said plant and property until the 20th day of March, 1929, at which time the term and period of said Franchise had long since expired, and the attempt on said 20th day of March, 1929, to exercise said option was and is of no effect, because the period within which said option must, by its terms, have been exercised, terminated on the 27th day of August, 1921.

XXIX.

Under the terms and provisions of Sections 100, 101, 102, 105 and 106 of said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, defendant City of Indianapolis is without the power to purchase or acquire a public utility, except according to the terms and conditions fixed by the Public Service Commission of Indiana. Defendant City of Indianapolis has not proceeded under the terms of said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act in making its aforesaid demand, and the Public Service Commission of Indiana has neither ordered nor approved the acquisition by defendant City of the plant and property of defendant Company, nor determined the value of said plant and property, nor affixed the terms and conditions of such acquisition. The demand of defendant City upon the officials of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, as heretofore set forth, is therefore ultra vires and void.

XXX.

At the time of the execution and approval of the aforesaid Franchise, and of the incorporation of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and of the service upon defendant Company and its directors and trustees of the demand of the Board of Public Works, heretofore referred to, there was and is now in force in the State of Indiana an act entitled "An Act concerning municipal corporations," approved March 6, 1905. By the express provisions of Section 93 (Eighth) and Section 249 of said Act, before any municipality could lawfully construct or acquire the property of a public utility, it was and is necessary to submit the question of said construction or acquisition to popular vote at a special or general election under the terms and restrictions contained in said Section 249. At no time has the question of the acquisition of the plant and property of defendant Company by defendant City been submitted to popular vote of the electors of said City under the terms and restrictions of said Section 249. Said attempt, on the part of defendant City, to acquire said plant and property of defendant Company, is therefore ultra vires and void.

XXXI.

Said directors of defendant Company have caused the aforesaid resolutions to be printed and mailed to all holders of the certificates evidencing ownership of the beneficial interest in the common capital stock of defendant Company, including this plaintiff, and have caused said resolutions No. 1 and No. 2 to be published in newspapers in the City of Indianapolis and elsewhere, and have publicly expressed their intentions of acceding to the demands of defendant City and of conveying the plant and property of defendant Company to defendant City in accordance with the foregoing notice and demand, notwithstanding that the only method by which said property may lawfully be transferred from defendant Company to defendant City is under the terms and provisions of Sections 100, 101 and 102 of said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act. Said directors and trustees will carry out said threats, and will pay said "capital dividend," and will convey said plant and property of defendant Company, pursuant to said demand by defendant City, unless restrained and enjoined from such action.

XXXII.

The aforesaid record of said Franchise and Articles of Incorporation, and the purported amendments thereto, under date of August 27, 1921, and the aforesaid acts, proceedings, and threatened acts and proceedings of defendants City of Indianapolis, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the other defendants herein, create a cloud upon the title of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to its plant and property, greatly impair the value thereof, and render the sale of said property at an adequate price impossible, and impair the value of the stock and certificates of beneficial interest therein held by plaintiff and all others in a similar situation.

XXXIII.

The aforesaid notice and demand of defendant City of Indianapolis and the acquiescence therein of the individual defendants, constituting the Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, will, if carried into effect, compel defendant

Company to convey its property at a tremendous loss, and compel plaintiff and all others in like situation to accept the sum of $25 per share in full satisfaction of all their rights as holders of certificates of beneficial interest in the common stock of defendant Company, instead of a much larger sum, the amount of which is uncertain and unknown and can only be ascertained by a valuation of the plant and property of defendant Company by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, as provided in the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act. The amount of said damage is large and cannot be definitely ascertained, and by reason of the aforesaid facts, the action of defendant City of Indianapolis and of the other defendants herein has caused, and is causing great and irreparable injury and damage to defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the plaintiff, and all others in a similar situation.

Prayer.

Inasmuch, therefore, as the plaintiff is without adequate remedy at law and can obtain relief only in a court of equity, plaintiff prays:

1. That writs of subpoena be issued to each of the defendants, requiring each of them to answer this complaint fully and truthfully, but not under oath, an answer under oath being hereby expressly waived as to each and all of said defendants.

2. That defendant City of Indianapolis and defendants L. Ert Slack, as Mayor of the City of Indianapolis, William A. Boyce, Jr., as City Clerk of the City of Indianapolis, Theodore H. Dammeyer, John C. McCloskey and Emsley W. Johnson, as and constituting the Board of Public Works of the City of Indianapolis, and their successors in office be each and all forever enjoined, after final hearing, from asserting any right, title or interest, present or future, in and to any of the property of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by virtue of the aforesaid Franchise, and or Articles of Incorporation, and or by virtue of the apparent force of said legalizing act of 1929, or from attempting to acquire the same in any manner other than pursuant to the terms and conditions of the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

3. That defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and defendants Welch, Efroymson, Hornbrook, Insley, Kirk, Hooker, Vonnegut, Dissette, Evans, Schnull, Lieber, Swift, Sullivan and Kahn, and their successors in office, be forever restrained and enjoined, after final hearing, from carrying into effect the provisions of the aforesaid Resolutions No. 1 and No. 2, and the resolution of the Board of Trustees heretofore referred to, and from paying a capital dividend of $5.00 per share, or any other amount, upon the common stock of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, or upon the certificates of beneficial interest in said stock, and from taking any steps of any kind or character, acknowledging, admitting or recognizing any right in, or asserted by, defendant City of Indianapolis, its officers, agents or employees, now or hereafter, to acquire the plant and property of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, other than in the manner and subject to the terms and conditions prescribed by the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act.

4. That this Court order and decree that the claims of defendant City of Indianapolis of any right, now or hereafter, to acquire the plant and property of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, under the aforesaid Franchise and or Articles of Incorporation, and or by virtue of the apparent force of said legalizing act of 1929 are illegal, unfounded and without right, and constitute a cloud upon the title of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to its plant and property aforesaid, and that the title of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to its said plant and property be quieted and forever set at rest as against said illegal and unfounded claims of defendant City of Indianapolis, its officers, agents, attorneys, servants and employees.

5. That this Court grant to plaintiff such other and further relief as may be deemed proper in the premises.

SEPARATE AND SEVERAL ANSWER OF DEFENDANTS, CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS; L. ERT SLACK, AS MAYOR OF THE CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS; WILLIAM A. BOYCE, JR., AS CITY CLERK OF THE CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS; THEODORE H. DAMMEYER, JOHN C. McCLOSKEY, AND EMSLEY W. JOHNSON, AS AND CONSTITUTING THE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS OF THE CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS, TO PLAINTIFF'S BILL OF COMPLAINT.

City of Indianapolis; L. Ert Slack, as Mayor of the City of Indianapolis; William A. Boyce, Jr., as City Clerk of the City of Indianapolis; Theodore H. Dammeyer, John C. McCloskey, and Emsley W. Johnson, as and constituting the Board of Public Works of the City of Indianapolis, defendants in the above cause, for answer to plaintiff's bill of complaint, say:

1. These answering defendants admit all the allegations contained in each of the following numbered subdivisions of plaintiff's bill of complaint numbered One, Four, Six, Seven, Fourteen, and Seventeen.

2. These answering defendants deny the allegations of Subdivision II of the complaint that the plaintiff is the owner of 250 shares of the common capital stock of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, but allege that although there was delivered to the Trustees of the Citizens Gas Company certificates reciting that the plaintiff was the owner of shares of stock in said Citizens Gas Company, in the form set forth in Subdivision IX of the complaint herein, such certificates were at all times held by the Trustees of the Citizens Gas Company subject to the provisions of the Articles of Association of said company as set out in Subdivision VII of the complaint herein, and the only interest in said stock held by the plaintiff was that evidenced by the certificates of beneficial ownership issued to the plaintiff by the Trustees of said Citizens Gas Company in the form set out in Subdivision 15 of this answer. Pursuant to the plan as established at the time of the organization of said Citizens Gas Company, for the purpose of carrying out the limitations upon the interest of subscribers to the capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company and establishing the public charitable trust in and to the property of said Citizens Gas Company, as more particularly alleged in Subdivision 15 of this answer, all the stock of said Citizens Gas Company was delivered to the Trustees of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and trustees' certificates representing the beneficial interest of the subscribers were issued to all subscribers to the capital stock of said company and to their several assignees, including the plaintiff herein, and neither the plaintiff nor any person similarly situated ever had, or claimed the right to hold, or requested the possession of, any stock certificate of said company or any other evidence of his interest therein than such trustees' certificates representing their beneficial interest; and these defendants allege that plaintiff acquired and holds said certificates and each of them subject to all the terms and conditions of the ordinance and franchise set out in Subdivision Six of plaintiff's bill of complaint, originally granted to Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, and by said individuals assigned to defendant Citizens Gas Company on the 24th day of May, 1906, of the original Articles of Association of said Citizens Gas Company set out in Subdivision Seven of plaintiff's bill of complaint and the amendments thereto set out in Subdivision Eleven of plaintiff's bill of complaint, of the provisions contained in said trustees' certificates and subscriptions for the common capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company, as hereinafter in Subdivision 15 of this answer set out and also subject to all the terms and conditions of a public charitable trust created in the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis in favor of the City of Indianapolis in trust for the inhabitants and/or gas consumers of said city as more specifically alleged in Subdivision 15 of this answer.

These answering defendants further admit that plaintiff brings this suit on behalf of himself and all others claiming similar rights in the common stock of the Citizens Gas Company, defendant hereto. who may wish to join in this suit and contribute to the expense thereof, and that plaintiff is attempting to assert corporate rights and immunities of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis; these answering defendants further admit that the amount in controversy herein exceeds, exclusive of interests and costs, the sum or value of $3,000.00.

These answering defendants admit that this is a suit in equity, but deny that it arises under the Constitution of the United States and deny that there has been any threatened deprivation under color of any statute of the State of Indiana of any rights, privileges or immunities secured to the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis or to plaintiff or others similarly situated by the Constitution of the United States.

These answering defendants further admit that plaintiff seeks in this action to quiet the title of said defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to certain real and personal property situated within the Southern District of Indiana as against the claims and demands of the City of Indianapolis and its officers, but deny that the claims so asserted are based exclusively upon a certain franchise and Articles of Incorporation and an Indiana statute purporting to legalize such Articles of Incorporation and allege that the bases upon which said claims are asserted are more fully set forth in Subdivisions 15 and 16 of this answer. These answering defendants deny that the statute referred to deprives the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, the plaintiff or others similarly situated of any rights, privileges or immunities secured to them by the Constitution of the United States.

3. These answering defendants admit all of the averments contained on Subdivision Three of the plaintiff's bill of complaint except the averment that the trustees of the Citizens Gas Company hold the stock of said Company in the voting trust provided for in Articles 6, 7 and 8 of said Citizens Gas Company, answering which these defendants allege that said trustees hold said stock not only in a voting trust but subject to all the terms and conditions of the trust in the property of the Citizens Gas Company, as set out in the Articles of Association of said Company, and as hereinafter set out in Subdivision 15 hereof, and except the averment that the trustees' certificates issued to the plaintiff and other holders thereof evidence the entire beneficial ownership of the shares of stock represented thereby, but on the contrary aver that the holders of said beneficial certificates acquired and hold the same subject to all of the terms and conditions heretofore set out in Subdivision 2 of this answer and hereafter set out in Subdivision 15 hereof.

4. These answering defendants admit that there were issued to the plaintiff the certificates of beneficial ownership described in Subdivision Five of the plaintiff's bill of complaint at the times herein stated and further admit that this suit is not a collusive one to confer on a court of the United States jurisdiction over a suit of which it would not otherwise have cognizance, but deny that by reason of the issuance of such certificates the plaintiff acquired the entire beneficial ownership of 250 shares of the common capital stock of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, but on the contrary allege that plaintiff at the time he acquired said certificates and continuously since such time was bound by all the terms and conditions more particularly set forth in Subdivisions 2 and 15 of this answer.

4a. These answering defendants for answer to the averments of Subdivision VIa of the plaintiff's complaint admit that during the year 1905 and prior thereto the Indianapolis Gas Company, an Indiana corporation, was furnishing gas in certain portions of the City of Indianapolis, but whether under a franchise, these defendants have no knowledge and leave plaintiff to make proof thereof if deemed necessary; they further admit that during the year 1905 and until the formation of Citizens Gas Company the Indianapolis Gas Company was the sole company furnishing gas in the City of Indianapolis.

As to the allegation in said complaint, that the rates and service of the Indianapolis Gas Company were unsatisfactory and that it was feared that because of the intrenched position it might be able to absorb through stock ownership any new competing companies, these defendants have not sufficient knowledge to admit or deny the same, but leave the plaintiff to make proof thereof.

These defendants deny that the purpose of the voting trust provided for in the franchise of 1905, as set out in the complaint and in the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company, as set out therein, was to insure that control of defendant Citizens Gas Company should not pass to the Indianapolis Gas Company or its stockholders, and that to that end it was provided that no Voting Trustee of the Citizens Gas Company should be an employee or stockholder of said Indianapolis Gas Company, but on the contrary these defendants allege that such voting trust had for its primary object, and was one of the means of carrying out, the public charitable trust in the property of the Citizens Gas Company as hereinafter alleged.

5. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in Subdivision Eight of the plaintiff's bill of complaint except they do not admit that after the surrender of the franchise of the Citizens Gas Company and the acceptance by said company of an indeterminate permit that the rights of the certificate holders or the City of Indianapolis were in any way changed or affected so far as the public charitable trust in the property of the Citizens Gas Company is concerned.

6. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in Subdivision IX of the plaintiff's bill of complaint, averring that the defendant Citizens Gas Company took subscriptions for its common stock and upon payment of such subscriptions, issued certificates representing its common stock in the form set out in said Subdivision, and that the name of the subscriber and number of shares represented by said certificate were written into such certificates, and that such certificates of stock were placed in the possession and control of the voting trustees, who thereupon issued and delivered to each stockholder, a beneficial certificate, but these defendants deny that such beneficial certificates represented the ownership of said shares of common stock, but only the restricted interest therein of the beneficial certificate holders, all as more particularly set out in Subdivision 15 of this answer.

These defendants further admit the allegations of said Subdivision of plaintiff's complaint, alleging the increase in the common stock of defendant company and the sale thereof in the manner provided in the Articles of Association of the corporation and the amount of net premium above the face value received therefor; they further admit that for such increase the defendant company issued stock certificates and trustees certificates in the same manner and form as such certificates were issued in connection with the original issue, and defendants further admit that stock certificates in the form above referred to were issued by the Citizens Gas Company for the shares purchased by plaintiff at or shortly before the time when the trustees' certificates were issued and delivered to plaintiff, as alleged in Subdivision IX of the complaint, but allege that such stock certificates did not evidence any absolute ownership in the plaintiff of such shares of stock, but only a restricted interest therein, as more particularly hereinafter set forth.

7. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in the Tenth Subdivision of plaintiff's bill of complaint to the effect that the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act became effective May 1st, 1913; that on the 27th day of August, 1921, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, defendant hereto, filed in the office of the Clerk of the City of Indianapolis the written declaration set out in said subdivision of said answer and that in Cause No. 6178 the Public Service Commission of Indiana entered the written order set out in said paragraph of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

These answering defendants admit that the defendant City of Indianapolis had notice of the proceedings looking to the surrender of the franchise of the Citizens Gas Company and the acceptance of an intermediate permit by that company; that the defendant city took no steps to oppose the surrender of said franchise or the acceptance of said permit and did not at that time or at any time since dispute the legality of such surrender and acceptance or the defendant company's right to operate under said indeterminate permit and made no objection thereto, but acquiesced in such surrender and acceptance and the operation by the defendant company under said indeterminate permit; but these answering defendants deny that such surrender of said franchise or the acceptance of said indeterminate permit in any way affected the right of the City of Indianapolis to acquire the plant and property of the defendant Gas Company or the public charitable trust created in favor of the inhabitants and gas consumers of said city and refer the court to Subdivision 17 of this answer wherein is specifically alleged the effect of the surrender of said franchise.

These answering defendants deny that as a result of the certificate so filed by the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and of the action taken by the Public Service Commission of Indiana with respect thereto that the original contract between the City of Indianapolis and the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was entirely rescinded, abrogated and annulled and a new contract substituted therefor, the details of which were and are prescribed in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, but on the contrary aver that the public charitable trust created in the property of the Citizens Gas Company, as hereinafter more particularly set out in Subdivision 15 of this answer was in no way affected, altered or changed by the surrender of said franchise and the taking out of said indeterminate permit.

7a. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in Subdivision Xa of the complaint, that on or before the 27th day of August, 1921, the Citizens Gas Company was in serious financial embarrassment and that it had been found impossible to earn a sufficient sum from the sale of gas at Sixty Cents (60¢) per thousand cubic feet to pay maturing debts and operating expenses, semi-annual dividends at the rate of 10% per annum, and to make and pay for such extensions and betterments as were ordered by the Board of Public Works of the defendant City of Indianapolis, or as were necessary to meet the needs of the inhabitants of said City and the defendant Citizens Gas Company; they further admit that according to the books of said company, the current assets and liabilities and the amount of paid-in surplus as it has originally existed and as it was on June 30, 1921, were as set out in said subdivision of the complaint. These defendants deny that due to unsatisfactory operations of the said Citizens Gas Company it was impossible for said company, so long as it continued to operate under the provisions of its franchise, to borrow more money on bonds, or to market any stock in order to obtain additional working capital, and they deny that by reason of general business conditions then prevailing it was impossible to dispose of the items of materials and supplies (although they admit the same as to certain salable products) except at prices far below the figures at which they were carried, and that said condition continued to be substantially the same until said surrender of the franchise and acceptance of an indeterminate permit, and that by reason of such conditions, on August 27, 1921, said company was in imminent danger of insolvency, but on the contrary these defendants say that the financial condition of the company as it then existed did not in any wise arise from the fact that it was operating under said franchise, nor was such condition relieved through the surrender of said franchise in August, 1921, but on the contrary such condition arose from the inadequate rate of 90¢ per thousand cubic feet, which was then being received by said company for gas and which financial condition was changed for the better not as a result of the surrender of such franchise, but as a result of the action of said company instituted in the year 1922, in the United States District Court for the District of Indiana, through which compensatory rates were secured for the use of the property of said company devoted to public service.

8. These answering defendants admit that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis filed in the office of the Secretary of State the document set out in Subdivision Eleven of plaintiff's bill of complaint and further alleged that said document is a certificate of amendment to the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company which was duly and legally adopted by the voting stockholders of said company in accordance with law and that the same became and was effective from the date of the filing thereof, August 27, 1921, and that the amendments therein set forth were duly and legally adopted and constitute valid amendments to the original Articles of Association of the Citizens Gas Company set out in Subdivision Seven of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

For answer to the averments contained in Subdivision XI-A of plaintiff's bill of complaint, these defendants deny that the statutes under which the defendant, Citizens Gas Company, was incorporated, and in force when the amendments to its Articles of Incorporation were made in 1921, contained no sanction or authority for any of the provisions contained in said original Articles or in the amendments thereto in 1921, relating to the payment of certificate holders or the transfer or conveyance of the plant and property of said company to the City of Indianapolis, and deny that all such provisions, and particularly Articles IX, X, and XII, both in their original and amended form, were and are mere surplusage and null and void and of no effect.

These answering defendants allege that it was at the time of the organization of said company and always since has been the law in Indiana that Articles of Incorporation could contain valid and binding agreements although such agreements were not included in the facts required by law to be stated in the Articles of Incorporation, provided such agreements are not inconsistent with any of the provisions of law. These defendants further allege that the provisions contained in said Articles of Incorporation respecting the payment of certificate holders and the acquisition by the City of Indianapolis of the plant and property of said Gas Company were to evidence the creation of a public charitable trust, all as hereinafter in Subdivision 15 of his answer more particularly alleged, and that the insertion thereof in said Articles of Incorporation and the amendment thereto was legalized by the Act of 1929 hereinafter more particularly referred to.

These defendants deny that the Voting Trustees of said Gas Company were wholly without authority to execute the purported Certificate of Amendment to the Articles of Incorporation of said company or to cause the same to be adopted or filed on behalf of the defendant company, and deny that they had no authority or right under any terms of said Voting Trust or of the original Articles of Incorporation to vote the stock of the company or to take any other steps which would extend, increase or otherwise modify their powers as Voting Trustees or to make any new or amended agreement affecting the rights or the property of said company or its stockholders, and deny that for such reason said purported amendments to said Articles were and are invalid, void and of no effect; and the defendants alleged that said Voting Trustees had full power and authority under the provisions of said Voting Trust as embodied in the Articles of Association of said company and as referred to in the certificates issued representing the stock of said company and the beneficial interest in said stock to vote all the stock of said company and to do all other things as stockholders which it might be found wise or expedient in their judgment to do for the best interests of said company not inconsistent with the objects, provisions and purposes of said trust as embodied in the Articles of Association of said Company; and these defendants allege that all of the amendments so made in said Articles of Association were consistent with such objects, provisions and purposes and the action of said Voting Trustees in voting said stock for the adoption of such amendments was consistent with and within the power so granted to them.

These defendants further allege that each and every holder and owner of trustees' certificates of beneficial ownership in the first million dollars of capital stock issued by the Gas Company agreed, in the manner alleged in subdivision 15 hereof, by the execution of the subscription agreement and the acceptance of the trustees' certificates as therein alleged, to the inclusion in said articles of incorporation of said provisions, and each and every holder of trustees' certificates of beneficial ownership in the second million dollars of said capital stock, by buying pursuant to the published notice referred to in subdivision 15 hereof, and by accepting the trustees' certificates referred to in subdivision 15 hereof ratified and agreed to the inclusion of said provisions in said articles of incorporation and these defendants say that by reason of the foregoing facts, neither these plaintiffs nor any others similarly situated, can now object to the said agreement contained in said articles of incorporation nor question the validity of such provisions in said articles or in the amendments thereto.

9. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in Subdivision Twelve of plaintiff's bill of complaint that the defendant Citizens Gas Company now has outstanding first mortgage bonds in the total amount of Three Million Four Hundred and Four Thousand Dollars ($3,404,000), bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum; has outstanding preferred stock of the face value of One Million Dollars ($1,000,000) entitled to cumulative dividends at the rate of five per cent. per annum and has outstanding common stock in the face amount of Two Million Dollars ($2,000,000), but allege that all of said common stock is held by the defendants, Gustav A. Schnull, Robert Lieber, Lucius B. Swift, Thomas L. Sullivan and Henry Kahn as voting trustees of said common stock pursuant to the Articles of Incorporation and the amendments thereto of said Citizens Gas Company, and as provided by law; these answering defendants further allege that beneficial certificates have been issued by said voting trustees representing the interest of the holders thereof in the common stock of the company, but allege that the holders of such beneficial certificates are entitled to dividends thereon, payable out of earnings at the rate of ten per cent.

per annum, payable semi-annually, only so long as the face value of such benefit certificates, viz: $25 each remains unpaid and that if and as any partial payment is made thereon future dividends are to be paid at the rate of ten per cent. per annum only upon the remaining unpaid portion of the face value of such certificates.

These answering defendants further admit that the net earnings of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis from January 1st, 1929, to August 30th, 1930, together with existing earned surplus, will not be sufficient to redeem and retire the preferred stock of said defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and also to pay to the holders of beneficial certificates an amount equal to the face value thereof together with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum; these answering defendants further admit that the individual defendants who are directors and trustees of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis have not at this or any previous time undertaken nor asserted that they would undertake to pay to the certificate holders the entire face value of such certificates with dividends thereon at this time.

These answering defendants deny that the City of Indianapolis knew that it could not become entitled under the terms of Section 1, Clause "G" of the franchise set out in the Sixth (6th) Subdivision of plaintiff's bill of complaint and in Article Ten (10) of the Articles of Incorporation of said company to a conveyance of the plant and property of said defendant on or before August 30th, 1930; but on the contrary allege that, properly interpreted, said subdivision of said franchise and the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company authorize and permit the transfer of the plant and property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to the City of Indianapolis when the certificate holders have received either by dividends or otherwise an amount equal to the face value of such certificates together with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum and these answering defendants further allege that it is wholly immaterial whether said payments are made by way of dividends or from any other source and that upon said payments being made to the extent of the face value of said certificates with interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, all interest of the certificate holders in the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis ceases and that the City of Indianapolis is thereupon entitled to receive a conveyance of such property.

These answering defendants admit that the City of Indianapolis did proceed through its Board of Public Works to assert its right to acquire the plant and property of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by adopting a certain resolution on March 20, 1929, and by serving the same upon the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, its trustees and directors; but these answering defendants deny that the demand of said city set out in Subdivision Fourteen of the plaintiff's bill of complaint is predicated or based exclusively upon the provisions of Section 22 of the franchise of the Citizens Gas Company as repeated in Article Twelve (12) of the Articles of Incorporation of said company, but allege that said demand was in the form and tenor set out in the Fourteenth Subdivision of plaintiff's bill of complaint and that in such demand the defendant City of Indianapolis, asserted its right to said property not only under the franchise, the Articles of Incorporation and the amendments thereto, the certificates issued to the subscribers of the common stock of the Citizens Gas Company, but under all statutes and laws of this State.

10. These answering defendants admit the averment contained in Subdivision Thirteen of the plaintiff's bill of complaint as to the enactment by the 76th General Assembly of the State of Indiana of a bill, the title of which is correctly set forth in said Subdivision of plaintiff's bill of complaint. These answering defendants deny that said Act was directed solely at the Articles of Incorporation of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, but on the contrary allege that said law is a general law applicable to all companies covered by the terms of said Act. These answering defendants admit that said bill contained an emergency clause and that it did become a law on the 11th day of March, 1929.

These defendants further allege that if said Act is a special law and only applicable to the Citizens Gas Company and said City that it is valid: that the General Assembly of the State of Indiana could have authorized the inclusion in the articles of incorporation of such corporations of the provisions contained in the articles of the Citizens Gas Company before the same was formed, and it legally could and did legalize such provisions by said Act of 1929.

These answering defendants admit that said bill was prepared by the legal department and special counsel of the City of Indianapolis employed for the purpose of bringing about a transfer of the plant and property of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to the City of Indianapolis; that said bill was passed in the exact form prepared and submitted by said counsel for the defendant City without change or amendment of any kind or character, and that it was introduced in the House of Representatives of the General Assembly by members residing in the City of Indianapolis and elected from Marion County; but while admitting said averments of Subdivision Thirteen of plaintiff's bill of complaint last above referred to, these answering defendants say that said averments are wholly immaterial and without any legal effect whatever.

11. These answering defendants admit that on the 3rd day of April, 1929, the directors of defendant, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, in meeting assembled, adopted two resolutions designated in Subdivision Fifteen of Plaintiff's Bill of Complaint as "Resolution No. 1" and "Resolution No. 2," and that correct copies of the said resolutions are set out in said Subdivision of plaintiff's bill of complaint; but these answering defendants deny that said action so taken by the directors of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was or is in violation of the rights of defendant, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, or of plaintiff or others similarly situated in any particular whatsoever.

12. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in Subdivision Sixteen of the plaintiff's bill of complaint that the resolutions adopted by the Board of Directors of the Citizens Gas Company on April 3, 1929, as set out in Subdivision Fifteen of the plaintiff's bill of complaint were approved by the Board of Trustees of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by a resolution adopted at a meeting of said Board of Trustees on April 3, 1929, and that a correct copy of said resolution of said Board of Trustees is set out in Subdivision Sixteen of plaintiff's bill of complaint. These answering defendants deny that said action of said Board of Trustees was or is in violation of rights of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis or of plaintiff or others similarly situated in any particular whatsoever.

13. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in Subdivision Eighteen of the plaintiff's bill of complaint to the effect that on the 27th day of April, 1929, the plaintiff served upon the defendants, constituting the Board of Directors of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a written demand, a correct copy of which is set out in said Subdivision of plaintiff's bill of complaint and admit that any further demand upon the body of the common stockholders of the defendant company would have been futile and unavailing and admit that said demand so made on the Board of Directors by plaintiff was denied and admit that said Board of Trustees claims the exclusive right to vote all the common stock of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, including the right to elect the Board of Directors thereof, but deny that said Board of Directors or said Board of Trustees of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has refused to act for the protection of the stockholders but on the contrary allege that both said Board of Directors and said Board of Trustees have at all times acted in accordance with the legal rights of said holders of beneficial certificates, although said answering defendants admit the refusal to comply with the demand of plaintiff.

14. That with respect to the averments contained in Subdivisions nineteen to thirty-three both inclusive of plaintiff's bill of complaint, these answering defendants say:

(a) These answering defendants deny that the franchise contract a correct copy of which is set out in Subdivision Six of the plaintiff's bill of complaint, was in all respects rescinded, abrogated and annulled and a new agreement substituted therefor by the act of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis in taking the action set out in Subdivision Ten of plaintiff's bill of complaint; deny that the effect of said action was the creation of a wholly new contract between the State and the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and deny that one of the terms of said alleged contract was that the defendant City of Indianapolis should have the right to acquire the property of the defendant company under terms and conditions and at its then value as determined and prescribed by the Public Service Commission of Indiana; deny that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis relinquished all of the rights and remedies secured to it by its contract with the City of Indianapolis and thereafter possessed only such rights and remedies as were granted to it under the Shively-Spencer Utility Act; deny that the Articles of Incorporation of the defendant company and the amendments thereto were by implication or otherwise modified by the Shively-Spencer Utility Act, and deny that there is any inconsistency between said Articles of Incorporation and the Shively-Spencer Utility Act; deny that Articles 10 and 12 of the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis were abrogated, rescinded or superceded by the acceptance by said company of said indeterminate permit; deny that the passage by the General Assembly of Indiana of the Legalizing Act of 1929, impaired the obligations of any contract between the State and the defendant company in violation of Article I, Section 10 of the Constitution of the United States and in violation of Article I, Section 24 of the Constitution of Indiana; deny that said Legalizing Act of 1929 is void and of no effect; deny that said Legalizing Act impairs the obligation of any contract between the State of Indiana and the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis; deny that by virtue of the surrender of said franchise and the acceptance of said indeterminate permit any contract exists or ever has existed between the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the State of Indiana so far as said public charitable trust is concerned, but on the contrary allege that a public charitable trust was created in the plant and property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis in favor of the inhabitants and/or gas consumers of the City of Indianapolis, all as more particularly alleged in Subdivision 15 of this answer; and allege that no act of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis or of the City could in any way alter, modify or impair said public charitable trust, or deprive the beneficiaries thereof, viz: the inhabitants and/or gas consumers of Indianapolis, of their interest in said property constituting such public charitable trust.

(b) These answering defendants admit that there are correctly set forth in Subdivision Twenty of plaintiff's bill of complaint, portions of certain statutes of the State of Indiana; deny that the Legalizing Act of 1929 denies to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, defendant hereto, the equal protection of the laws in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States or that it is a special law directed at and applicable to the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis alone, but on the contrary allege that said Legalizing Act of 1929 is a valid law and that the classification therein contained is general and proper. They further deny that the classification made by said Act of 1929 is unreasonable, irrational or arbitrary in any of the particulars set forth in said Subdivision of plaintiff's complaint, or in any other particular.

These answering defendants refer to Subdivision 16 of this answer in which is set forth the bases upon which the Legalizing Act of 1929 can properly be sustained, and in which facts are stated showing that the plaintiff's interests are not adversely affected by said act.

(c) These answering defendants deny that said Legalizing Act of 1929 deprives the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis of its property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in any of the particulars set forth in Subdivision Twenty-one of plaintiff's complaint or in any other particular; deny that the acceptance of an indeterminate permit by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis resulted in the abrogation of the franchise and articles of incorporation of the defendant company, or that thereby the defendant City of Indianapolis could only acquire the plant and property of the Citizens Gas Company at its then value through an application to the Public Service Commission of the State of Indiana. And reference is hereby made to Subdivision 17 of this answer in which these answering defendants allege the effect of the acceptance of said indeterminate permit.

(d) These answering defendants deny that said Legalizing Act of 1929 in any respect violates Article 1 of Section 21 of the Constitution of Indiana in any of the particulars set out in Subdivision Twenty-two of the plaintiff's bill of complaint or in any other particular; deny that the result of accepting said indeterminate permit under the Shively-Spencer Utility Act was that the City of Indianapolis could only acquire the plant and property of the defendant company at a price equal to its then value as fixed by the Public Service Commission of Indiana; deny that said Legalizing Act takes private property without just compensation in any of the particulars alleged in said Subdivision Twenty-two of the plaintiff's complaint or in any other particular; and deny that the original franchise contract, the Articles of Incorporation and the amendments thereto of the Citizens Gas Company were abrogated by the acceptance of said indeterminate permit in whole or in part so far as the right of the City of Indianapolis to acquire the property of the Citizens Gas Company was concerned.

(e) That with respect to the averments contained in Subdivision Twenty-three of the plaintiff's bill of complaint to the effect that the plaintiff and numerous other persons subsequent to the issuance of said indeterminate permit in 1921 and prior to the passage of said Legalizing Act of 1929, purchased, acquired and still hold and own said certificates of beneficial ownership in the common stock of Citizens Gas Company having paid therefor amounts far in excess of what their value would have been if said City had possessed the right thereafter to acquire the company's property in a manner now asserted by said City, these answering defendants neither admit nor deny said averments but leave plaintiff to his proof thereof, but aver that during all of said time the City of Indianapolis did have the right to acquire the property of the Citizens Gas Company in the manner and for the considerations now asserted by said City of Indianapolis. These answering defendants deny that said Legalizing Act of 1929 deprives the certificate holders, including plaintiff, of their property without due process of law in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States or takes private property without just compensation in violation of Article 1, Section 21 of the Constitution of the State of Indiana, or grants to certain citizens or classes of citizens, namely, the defendant City of Indianapolis, privileges or immunities which upon the same terms do not equally belong to all citizens, in violation of Article I, Section 23 of the Constitution of the State of Indiana, but on the contrary allege that said Legalizing Act of 1929 is not invalid because of any of the provisions of the Constitution of Indiana or the Constitution of the United States.

(f) These answering defendants deny that the Legalizing Act of 1929 deals with three separate and unrelated subjects in violation of Article 4 Section 19 of the Constitution of the State of Indiana, and deny that said Legalizing Act is void, but on the contrary allege that it deals with a single subject and matters properly connected therewith.

(g) These answering defendants deny that by reason of the facts alleged in Paragraph 20 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint, which are made by reference a part of Paragraph 25 thereof, that said Legalizing Act of 1929 grants to certain citizens or classes of citizens, viz., the defendant City of Indianapolis, privileges or immunities which upon the same terms do not equally belong to all citizens or that said Legalizing Act of 1929 constitutes special legislation, aimed solely at defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, in violation of Article 1, Section 23 of the Constitution of the State of Indiana; deny that said Legalizing Act creates a corporation, not a banking corporation, by special act in violation of the Indiana Constitution.

(h) These answering defendants deny the averments contained in Subdivision Twenty-six of the plaintiff's bill of complaint that the provisions in Section 1, Clause (g) of the franchise contract of August 30, 1905, and also contained and incorporated in Article 10 of the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to the general effect that the gas plant and property of said company shall be conveyed to said City when said certificate holders shall have received by dividends or otherwise the face value thereof with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, purports to create or does create an interest in real and personal property to vest upon a contingency which might occur at a time more remote from the date of the creation of such right than the period of a life or lives in being and twenty-one years thereafter; deny that such provisions were or are in violation of the common law of the State of Indiana, and deny that said provisions now are or ever were illegal, null, void or unenforceable by the defendant City of Indianapolis, but on the contrary aver that said provisions are valid and do not offend against the common law of Indiana or any statute of this state.

(i) These answering defendants deny the averments contained in Subdivision Twenty-seven of the plaintiff's bill of complaint that the option (if such provision should be construed as an option) or right of the defendant City of Indianapolis to demand the conveyance of the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis under the provisions of the franchise contract of August 30, 1905, and the provisions of Article 12 of the Articles of Incorporation, is in violation of the common law of Indiana or that such provision is or ever has been illegal, null, void or unenforceable by the defendant City of Indianapolis for the reason that its terms might be exercised at a time more remote from the date of the creation of such option and right than the period of a life or lives in being and twenty-one years thereafter, but on the contrary allege that the right so granted and given to the City of Indianapolis is and always has been valid and enforceable under the statutes and law of this State.

(j) These answering defendants deny the averments contained in Subdivision Twenty-eight of the plaintiff's bill of complaint that the right of the City of Indianapolis to acquire the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis expired on the 27th day of August, 1921, when the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis accepted an indeterminate permit under the terms and provisions of the Shively-Spencer Utility Act, and further deny that said franchise, insofar as it evidenced the right of the City to acquire said plant and property, was in any way affected by the acceptance of said indeterminate permit; but on the contrary allege that the public charitable trust created in the property of the Citizens Gas Company as hereinafter in Subdivision 15 of this answer set forth, was wholly unaffected by the acceptance of said indeterminate permit.

These answering defendants admit that the City of Indianapolis did not attempt to exercise the right which it had to acquire the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis prior to March 20, 1929, but deny that the rights of the City had at that time expired and deny that the City's right to acquire the property of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis terminated on the 27th day of August, 1921, but allege that such right has not now terminated but on the contrary exists.

(k) These answering defendants deny the averments contained in Subdivision Twenty-nine of the plaintiff's bill of complaint that under Sections 100, 101, 102, 105 and 106 of said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act the defendant City of Indianapolis is without power to purchase or acquire a public utility except according to the terms and conditions fixed by the Public Service Commission of Indiana; but on the contrary allege that the City of Indianapolis has the right to acquire the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company under the terms of said public charitable trust, and by virtue, among other things, of said Legalizing Act of 1929.

These answering defendants admit that the defendant City of Indianapolis has not proceeded under the terms of said Shively-Spencer Utility Act in making its demand upon the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and admit that the Public Service Commission of Indiana has neither ordered nor approved the acquisition by defendant City of the plant and property of defendant Company nor determined the value of said plant and property, nor fixed the terms and conditions of such acquisition, and allege that under the law of Indiana as applicable to the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company, the Public Service Commission of Indiana has no jurisdiction whatever to determine whether such a conveyance will be made, the price to be paid or to annex any conditions whatever to such transfer, but is wholly without jurisdiction in the premises.

These answering defendants further deny that the demand of the defendant City upon the officials of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was ultra vires and void, but on the contrary allege that it was a valid and legal demand.

(l) These answering defendants admit that the question of the acquisition of the plant and property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by the City of Indianapolis has never been submitted to a popular vote of the electors of said City under the terms of Sections 93 and 249 of an Act entitled "An Act Concerning Municipal Corporations," approved March 6, 1905. These defendants admit that said Sections are now in force, but allege that they have no application whatever to the acquisition by the City of Indianapolis of the plant and property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

These defendants say that under the terms of Section 53 of the aforesaid Act of 1905 the Common Council of said City had power by ordinance to receive and accept public trusts and to agree to conditions and terms accompanying the same and bind such City to carry them out, and said defendants further allege that independently of statutory authority said City had power to accept and execute public trusts.

These answering defendants deny that the attempt on the part of the defendant City to acquire said plant and property is therefore ultra vires and void.

(m) These answering defendants admit the averments contained in Subdivision Thirty-one of plaintiff's bill of complaint that the directors of the defendant Company have caused the resolutions referred to in plaintiff's bill of complaint to be printed and mailed to all holders of certificates evidencing ownership of beneficial interest in the common capital stock of the Company, including plaintiff, and that said resolutions Nos. 1 and 2 have been published in the newspapers of Indianapolis and elsewhere, and that said directors have publicly expressed their intention of acceding to the demands of the defendant City and of conveying the plant and property of the defendant Company to the City in accordance with the notice and demands set out in plaintiff's bill of complaint, but deny that the only method by which said property may lawfully be transferred from the defendant Company to the defendant City is under the terms and provisions of Sections 100, 101 and 102 of said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act. These answering defendants further admit that said directors and trustees will carry out said expressed intention and will pay said capital dividend and will convey said plant and property of the defendant Company pursuant to said demand by the defendant City unless finally enjoined and restrained from such action.

(n) These answering defendants deny the averments contained in Subdivision Thirty-two of plaintiff's bill of complaint that the franchise and articles of incorporation and amendments thereto and the acts, proceedings and threatened acts and proceedings of the defendants City of Indianapolis, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the other defendants herein create a cloud upon the title of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to its plant and property, impair the value thereof, render the sale of said property at an adequate price impossible and impair the value of the certificates of beneficial interest held therein by plaintiff and all others in a similar situation, but on the contrary allege that the plaintiff and all others similarly situated acquired and hold such certificates subject to all the terms and provisions set out in Subdivision 2 and 15 of this answer. These defendants deny that plaintiff or any others similarly situated hold any stock certificates or interest therein which were impaired as alleged in said subdivision of plaintiff's bill of complaint.

(o) These answering defendants deny that the aforesaid notice and demand of the defendant City of Indianapolis and the acquiescence therein of the individual defendants constituting the Board of Directors and Board of Trustees of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis will, if carried into effect, compel defendant Company to convey its property at a tremendous loss, although admitting that if said public charitable trust is carried out the City of Indianapolis has the right to acquire the property of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis after the certificate holders have been paid the par value of their certificates with interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum and the preferred stock of the Company has been retired. These answering defendants admit that the plaintiff and others in like situation will receive no more than $25.00 per share and interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum in full satisfaction of all their rights as holders of certificates of beneficial interest in the common stock of defendant Company, and allege that they are not entitled to receive any more, but admit that if said public charitable trust could be declared invalid and the holders of the beneficial certificates could become entitled to the entire equity in said property after the payment of defendant Gas Company's preferred stock and other indebtedness, and the right of the City to acquire said plant and property could be defeated, that said certificates of beneficial interest would be worth a sum in excess of $25.00 per share, and that the value thereof would, under such circumstances, be uncertain and can not now be definitely ascertained, but these answering defendants deny that by reason of any of the facts stated in the bill of complaint the action of the defendant City of Indianapolis and other defendants hereto has caused or is causing great and irreparable injury and damage to the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and the plaintiff and all others in a similar situation, or is causing any damage whatever to any of said parties.

15. These answering defendants allege that a public charitable trust was created and exists in the plant and property of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis in favor of the inhabitants and/or gas consumers of said City of Indianapolis, which trust was to be administered by the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and by the defendant City of Indianapolis as respective trustees thereof, in accordance with the terms of said trust, as hereinafter in this subdivision of this answer alleged.

That the facts in connection with the establishment of said public charitable trust were and are as follows:

That in the year 1887, the City of Indianapolis by an ordinance granted to the Consumers Gas Trust Company a franchise to furnish natural gas to the citizens of said City and vicinity upon the terms and conditions specified in said ordinance; that the supply of natural gas failed some time prior to 1904 and that an attempt was made by said Consumers Gas Trust Company to engage in the business of furnishing artificial gas to the citizens of Indianapolis; that as a result of this effort, litigation ensued in the District Court of the United States for the District of Indiana and the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit wherein it was held and finally adjudged as follows:

First. That the certificate holders of the Consumers

Gas Trust Company of Indianapolis had the right to enjoin that company from engaging in the business of supplying artificial gas to the citizens of Indianapolis on the theory that such business was ultra vires the corporation.

Second. That under the franchise, Articles of Incorporation, Subscription Contracts and other relevant agreements, the City of Indianapolis had the right, by giving six months notice, to purchase the property of the Consumers Gas Trust Company at any time after the expiration of ten years from the date of the ordinance, the amount to be paid for such plant to be determined by three disinterested appraisers.

Third. That a public charitable trust existed in favor of the inhabitants and/or gas consumers of Indianapolis in the property of the Consumers Gas Trust Company to the end that gas should be furnished at cost after the holders of beneficial certificates had received by dividends or otherwise an amount equal to their subscriptions and eight per cent. interest per annum.

That as a result of such litigation the City of Indianapolis was determined to have the right to purchase the plant and property of the Consumers Gas Trust Company and did in fact exercise such right by the assignment thereof for a nominal consideration to Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, being the same identical persons to whom the franchise and ordinance set out in subdivision six of the plaintiff's bill of complaint was granted, to the end that such persons should organize or cause to be organized the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

That the property formerly belonging to the Consumers Gas Trust Company was in fact purchased by the said Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt and by them conveyed to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, defendant hereto; that as a result of said litigation there was a wide-spread public movement in the City of Indianapolis to the end that a Gas Company should be organized which should own the property and plant formerly owned by Consumers Gas Trust Company; that said property should be acquired through the medium of a new corporation in which the stockholders or the owners of beneficial certificates representing common stock should be entitled to receive only the re-payment of the face value of such beneficial certificates with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum until paid and that thereafter the city on behalf of the gas consumers of Indianapolis and the inhabitants thereof should have the right to acquire such property without the payment of any additional consideration; the plan was so formed for the purpose of avoiding that which had theretofore happened, viz: that the persons owning the beneficial certificates of stock should receive the face value of such certificates with interest and thereafter the city be compelled to purchase said plant and pay therefor a large sum of money.

That wide publicity was given by the public spirited citizens engaged in the organization of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to the plan, including publicity in all of the newspapers in the City of Indianapolis, Marion County, Indiana, and that the essential elements of the plan and of the public charitable trust to be thereby created were stated and agreed upon as follows:

First. That all of the common stock of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis should be held and perpetually voted by voting trustees to be appointed as provided in Section 6 of the original Articles of Incorporation which are set forth in Subdivision Seven of the plaintiff's bill of complaint.

Second. That such Trustees should issue to each subscriber to the capital stock of the company a beneficial certificate and that the holder thereof should be entitled to repayment of the face value of the same out of dividends or otherwise with interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually and that when the face value of such certificate had been paid the holder should have no further interest in the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company.

Third. That when said certificate holders have been paid in full the City of Indianapolis should have the right to acquire said property for the benefit of the public and the consumers of gas in Indianapolis without the payment of any money or further consideration.

Fourth. That a public charitable trust to be administered by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the City of Indianapolis respectively as trustees was to be and was created in the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to the end that private exploitation thereof should be prevented and that gas should be supplied at the lowest possible cost to the citizens of Indianapolis who should desire to use the same.

It was necessary, in order to acquire the property and plant formerly belonging to the Consumers Gas Trust Company, to interest local capital in the enterprise and for the purpose of inducing the persons who should invest in the common stock of said company to make such investment upon the condition that they should never receive any more than the face value of said certificate, it was proposed and agreed that interest thereon should be paid at the rate of ten per cent. per annum.

Fifth. Said plan contemplated that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis should be the Trustee of said public charitable trust until such time as said certificate holders were repaid the face value of their certificates with interest at the rate of ten per cent. annually and that thereafter the City of Indianapolis should acquire said property for the benefit of the gas consumers and inhabitants of said city, but that it was never intended that title to the plant and property of said Citizens Gas Company should be vested and it was not in fact vested in the City of Indianapolis as an agency of the State, but solely for the benefit of the inhabitants of said city and particularly those who at that time or thereafter should desire to use the gas to be supplied by said company.

That each of the original subscribers to the common capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company with which it was to begin business, to wit: One Million Dollars par value thereof was required to and did execute subscriptions to the capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company upon the following form:

"Trustees—Thos. L. Sullivan, Thos. H. Spann, W. D. Cooper, Lucius B. Swift, Henry Kahn.

Directors—Franklin Vonnegut, Lorenz Schmidt, Jas. L. Keach, Geo. J. Marott, E. H. Eldridge, Alfred F. Potts, Jno. R. Welch, Robert Lieber, J. D. Forrest.

That on the 25th of March, 1911, pursuant to the provisions of Article 4 of the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, as set out in subdivision Seven of the plaintiff's bill of complaint, the common capital stock of said Company was encreased from One Million Dollars to Two Million Dollars, and thereafter, from time to time, prior to July 1, 1919, said additional One Million Dollars of common capital stock was sold at public auction to the highest bidder therefor after giving thirty (30) days notice of the time and place of such sale by publication in three Indianapolis newspapers having the largest city circulation, all as provided in said Article 4 of said original Articles of Incorporation.

That in said published notices of the offering of said additional common stock for sale at public sale, it was specifically stated that all stock sold should be issued in all respects conformably to the terms and conditions of the Articles of Incorporation and franchise of the Citizens Gas Company relating thereto.

That all of said additional One Million Dollars of common stock was sold, pursuant to such notices of sale, and Trustees' certificates representing the beneficial ownership of said additional One Million Dollars of common stock were issued to the purchasers at such public sales, or their nominees, in the form of the certificate hereinabove set out, and no other form of certificate or other evidence of ownership was ever issued to any such purchasers or the nominees of any such purchasers.

That all subsequent owners of any of said second Million Dollars of common stock, upon acquisition thereof from prior owners thereof, received, and the present owners thereof now hold, Trustees' certificate of beneficial ownership in the form hereinabove set out, and there has never been issued or authorized any other form of certificate representing any part of the Two Million Dollars authorized common capital stock of the company other than the Trustees' certificates of beneficial ownership in the form hereinabove set out.

That the plaintiff and each and every present or former holder of Trustees' certificates has received, accepted and held such Trustees' certificates containing the specific agreements hereinbefore set forth and has never at any time had any other evidence of his ownership of the beneficial interest in the Citizens Gas Company and that the plaintiff and all the other holders of beneficial certificate of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis defendant hereto are bound by each and all of the terms and conditions of the foregoing subscription contract and beneficial certificates as well as by the provisions of the franchise contract the Articles of Association the amendments thereto and the public charitable trust created at the time of the organization of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, defendant hereto, as in this paragraph of answer specifically alleged.

That neither the plaintiff nor any other present holder of such beneficial certificates has ever objected or protested against the form of such beneficial certificates or the covenants or agreements therein contained or in any way at any time evidenced his unwillingness to be bound thereby until within the last few months when publicity was given to the plan of the City of Indianapolis to acquire the plant and property of the Citizens Gas Company; that at no time either before or after such mentioned publicity has the plaintiff or any other holder of beneficial certificates of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis surrendered or offered to surrender the same or asked or demanded the issuance to him or them of certificates representing his or their beneficial ownership free from the conditions above set forth.

16. These answering defendants say that said Legalizing Act of 1929 is valid in all respects. Said Act only legalizes a contract voluntarily made by said corporation with the State in its articles of incorporation and in the amendments thereof and enables said City to take said property in accordance therewith. Said Act does not attempt to revive any obligation abrogated by the surrender of said franchise, but only places the express stamp of approval by the State on a contract made by said corporation and which survived the surrender of said franchise.

Said act does not deprive plaintiff of the equal protection of the law by providing for an invalid classification. The classification to which it applies is a self-created class consisting of corporations who voluntarily placed in their articles of incorporation provision for the transfer of their properties prior to the time when the new rules in said Shively-Spencer Act governing such transfers came into effect, on to-wit, May 1, 1913. Said Act does not impose on said class any obligations, but merely approves self-imposed obligations contained in articles of incorporation. Said corporation is not complaining of said Act, but is voluntarily performing its obligations which said Act approves. Plaintiff cannot complain of said Act for the reason that he, through said board of trustees having power to vote all stock, has given his consent to the performance of said obligation, and further because he is not injuriously affected by said Act in that he took his rights subject to the obligations which said Act approves.

Plaintiff cannot complain on the ground that said Act should also, to be valid, have approved similar provisions appearing only in franchises held by corporations for the reason that he is not injured by such exclusion. Only an excluded corporation could complain on that ground if any such ground of complaint exists.

Said defendants say that said Act is not invalid in that it provides a method for effecting the acquisition of the instant property different from the methods provided for in said Shively-Spencer Act, or the Act of 1905 mentioned in plaintiff's complaint. Said Acts do not apply to cases, as the instant one, where a corporation owns its property subject to a trust and an obligation to transfer its property in accordance with an agreement contained in its articles of incorporation. The Act of 1929 directly approves provisions for the transfer of property subject to trusts and obligations voluntarily created by the corporations included in the class to which the Act applies. Plaintiff is not injuriously affected by said Act on account of approval therein by the legislature of the transfer in question without the submission thereof to a vote or to the Public Service Commission. By such direct approval said Act only provides for the transfer which said corporation voluntarily agreed to, and which the plaintiff and all other holders of certificates of beneficial interests in said stock agreed to by accepting his and their certificates wherein said conditions for surrender of said stock and the transfer of said property were incorporated. If said provisions for transfer of said property are not as advantageous to plaintiff as transfers under the provisions of other statutes, in the absence of such contract, might be, such disadvantage is not created by said Act of 1929, but is a disadvantage voluntarily created by said corporation when it agreed to make such transfer and voluntarily acquiesced in by plaintiff when he purchased said certificates subject to such obligation to transfer, and said Act cannot be invalid as to plaintiff in such situation.

These defendants further allege that if said Act is a special law and only applicable to the Citizens Gas Company and said City that it is valid. That the General Assembly of the State of Indiana could have authorized the inclusion in the articles of incorporation of such corporations of the provisions contained in the articles of the Citizens Gas Company before the same was formed, and it could and did legalize such provisions by said Act of 1929.

Said defendants say that said Act of 1929 is not duplicitous. The subject on which it legislates is the transfer of utility properties under agreements to transfer expressed in articles of incorporation.

The provisions approving and legalizing such agreements and those enabling cities to take under such agreements are matters properly connected with said subject and are in aid of the main object of said Act to give effect to such agreements to transfer. Said Act of 1929 is in all respects valid.

17. These answering defendants allege and say that the City of Indianapolis now has all of the rights in and to the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis as claimed by it in the resolution set out in Subdivision Fourteen of plaintiff's complaint, and as recognized in the several resolutions of the board of directors and the board of trustees of said corporation set out in Subdivisions Fifteen and Sixteen of said complaint; that the surrender of said franchise did not, and legally could not, take said rights from said city, or impair in any manner the aforesaid trust or the rights, interests and obligations thereunder. As to the effect of this surrender of said franchise upon the said rights of said city, these defendants allege more particularly as follows:

(a) That it was the desire of the public spirited citizens of Indianapolis who promoted the formation of said public charitable trust, as set forth in Subdivision 15 of this answer, of the City of Indianapolis and of said Citizens Gas Company that said public charitable trust and the terms and conditions thereof should, for the protection of all concerned, be evidence in every possible way. In order to accomplish such purpose, the dominant terms and conditions of said trust were placed in the franchise contract itself, in the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company and the amendments thereto, in the subscription contracts and in the beneficial certificates issued by the trustees of the Citizens Gas Company. These answering defendants allege that the agreement so arrived at was not intended to be merely a part of the franchise contract or of the Articles of Incorporation, or of the subscription contracts, or of the Trustees' Certificates, but was stated in each and all of said papers and writings for the purpose aforesaid and in order to evidence the public charitable trust which had been created and which was to continue to exist and which trust could not be abrogated by the surrender of said franchise.

(b) Any provisions contained in the ordinance granting said franchise which provide for the retirement and cancellation of the common stock and the conveyance of such property to the city, were not abrogated by the surrender of the municipal franchise to the state, but the surrender of such franchise only had the effect herein alleged in sub-paragraph (c) (2) hereof, and all such provisions relating to the retirement of such stock and the conveyance of such property continued and remained in full force and effect after the surrender of such franchise and are still in full force and effect.

The voting trustees of the defendant Citizens Gas Company, at a meeting thereof held on the 11th day of August, 1921, adopted a formal resolution authorizing the surrender of said franchise and at the same meeting of said voting trustees a formal resolution was adopted authorizing the amendments to the Articles of Association of said Gas Company which are particularly set forth in Subdivison Eleven of the bill of complaint herein; that by such action of said voting trustees taken at such meeting in authorizing the surrender of said franchise and the amendment of its Articles of Association the purpose of said trustees was plainly evidence and expressed to preserve and protect all rights of the City of Indianapolis and the inhabitants thereof in and to the property of the Citizens Gas Company.

These defendants further say that under the provisions of Section 53 of the Act of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, entitled, "An Act Concerning Municipal Corporations," approved March 6th, 1905, said City was authorized and empowered by ordinance to receive and accept public trusts and to agree to conditions and terms accompanying the same and bind such City to carry them out, and by the ordinance set out in Subdivision Six of plaintiff's bill of complaint the Common Council of said City did receive and accept the public trust created in the manner set out in Subdivision Fifteen of this answer and as provided in the Articles of Association of the Citizens Gas Company, and did agree to the conditions and terms therein provided, and the surrender of said municipal franchise by said company did not abrogate or affect the public trust so accepted and agreed to; and said defendants further allege that independently of statutory authority said City had power to accept and execute public trusts.

(e) Even though it be held that the surrender of said franchise operated to abrogate all the terms and provisions embodied therein, such fact would not impair the rights of said city in and to the property of said Gas Company for the following reasons:

(1) The rights of said city in and to said property were never in favor of the state or of said city as the agent of the state and were in no sense subject to any power reserved in the State of Indiana by virtue of which it could make a legally effective offer to said corporation to abrogate the same.

(2) The only offer made by the state to said corporation in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act was the offer to abrogate the franchise contract entered into by it, through said city as its agent, and said corporation, and to substitute therefor a new contract directly between itself and said corporation. The effect of such offer was to establish new contractual and regulatory relations between the state itself and said corporation, and, to that end, to substitute for the permit granted by the city, as such agent, an indeterminate permit direct from the state, and to substitute direct regulations as to rates and service by means of state legislation to be administered by the Public Service Commission for regulation by the agency of the City of Indianapolis as embodied in such franchise contract. Such offer did not include the abrogation of obligations owing by said corporation to any one other than the state or to said city in its capacity as an agent of the state. Said offer did not include a proposition to surrender the corporate franchise of said corporation, or to abrogate the contract between the said corporation and the state which existed between them by virtue of the articles of incorporation of said company, or to abrogate said trust which was created as aforesaid, or to abrogate the obligations of said corporation to said city in its capacity as the beneficiary or prospective trustee of said trust, or to abrogate the rights and interests of the inhabitants of said city as beneficiaries of said trust, or as beneficiaries of the right to have said city acquire said property in accordance with said provisions for the acquisition of said property for their benefit. Said corporation could not, and did not, by surrendering said franchise, abrogate more than said offer included, and such surrender in no manner affected matters which were not a part of, or dependent upon, said franchise.

(3) Said rights of said city in its said capacity as the prospective owner and/or trustee of said property, and the obligation of said corporation to transfer said property to said city, and said trust, and said rights and interests of the inhabitants of said city were not dependent alone upon the franchise which said corporation surrendered. Said franchise and the exercise of any rights thereunder were themselves dependent upon the prior creation of said obligations, rights, trusts and interests aforesaid. Notwithstanding the fact that the provisions for the acquisition of said property by said city were included in the original instrument by which said city granted said franchise, the said provisions and the obligations and rights thereby created were at no time solely dependent upon said franchise or on the terms and provisions constituting the contract or franchise. The facts hereinabove alleged relating to the circumstances existing prior to,

and at the time of the granting of said franchise, together with said original instrument show that said provisions were included in the same instrument which evidences the contract of franchise, in part for the purpose of providing what should be incorporated in the articles of association of said company when it should be thereafter incorporated and it appears therefrom that a further and permanent agreement embodying said provisions should be the articles of incorporation of the corporation to be formed by the grantees of said franchise. The form of such permanent agreement was embraced in said original instrument, and the same was intended to be incorporated in said articles in haec verba. Such permanent agreement was intended to become a part of the corporate franchise thereafter to be granted by the state to the proposed corporation, made by the articles of incorporation between such corporation and the state, and, as there evidenced, was to be effective for the benefit of said city and its inhabitants. The provisions for the formation of said corporation and the inclusion of said permanent agreement for the acquisition of said property by said city in its articles constituted part of the consideration for the granting of said franchise by said city to said grantee and constituted conditions precedent to the exercise of any rights by said corporation under the said franchise to be assigned to it. The said circumstantial facts and said original instruments show that it was intended upon the organization of said corporation and the adoption of its articles of incorporation thereby to create vested rights and interests on the part of said city and the inhabitants thereof in and to the property of which the corporation might become the owner and that said corporation should own such property subject to said rights and interests and the obligation to transfer its property to said city in accordance therewith.

(4) In conformity with the aforesaid intention of the parties to said original instrument, and in performance of said conditions precedent, the persons to whom said franchise was granted formed the contemplated corporation, the said Citizens Gas Company, defendant herein, and incorporated in its articles the said provisions for the acquisition of said property by said city, and assigned said franchise to said corporation. Said corporation was thus created and said provisions were thus incorporated in its articles of incorporation more than fifteen years before said corporation surrendered said franchise. Said provisions have ever since remained in, and are now a part of, said articles of incorporation. Said articles are a part of the corporate franchise of said corporation and constitute a permanent agreement between said corporation and the State of Indiana for the benefit of said city and its inhabitants, as aforesaid. By said provisions, said Citizens Gas Company became a trustee of its property for the purposes of said provisions. All of the property acquired by it became affected by said provisions and said trust, and the inhabitants and said city acquired vested rights and interests in and to all of said property, as aforesaid, before the said surrender of said franchise, and they are now the owners of said vested rights and interests. Said provisions in said articles, and said trust and said rights and interests have at all times since said incorporation existed wholly independently from said franchise. When said franchise was surrendered the said provisions in said articles, and the corporate franchise of said corporation, and said trust and said rights and interests, were not abrogated but remained unimpaired, and are now in full force and effect. The new contract arising between said corporation and the state upon surrender of said franchise, and the indeterminate permit as part thereof, do not in any sense supersede or abrogate said corporate franchise, said articles of incorporation or the contract made thereby, or said trust or any of said rights or interests. Any rights which said corporation may have under said indeterminate permit and under said new contract are subject to its obligations under said provisions in said articles of incorporation and to said trust, and to said rights and interests on the part of said city and its inhabitants to have said property transferred to said city in accordance with said provisions in said articles. The provisions in said Shively-Spencer Act relating to the purchase of the property of a utility that has surrendered its franchise do not supersede said provisions for the transfer of its property contained in the articles of association of said corporation, and said corporation has no right by virtue thereof to a purchase price for its property determined in accordance with the provisions of said act. Said act did not intend that said corporation could abrogate the contract made by its articles of incorporation and particularly by said provisions therein hereinbefore referred to, and did not intend that said trust and said obligations, rights and interests could be abrogated by the surrender of said franchise. The right of said city to the transfer of said property and the right of the inhabitants to have it so transferred, the obligation of said corporation to make such transfer, the said trust, and the said vested rights and interests in no degree depend for the existence on the franchise which was surrendered, but they arise out of an executed consideration and executed conditions precedent, and are efficaciously evidenced by said provisions in said articles of incorporation.

(5) The inhabitants of said city and the said city have a continuing right to the transfer of said property in accordance with said provisions. Said right was created and given by said corporation as a consideration for and condition precedent to the granting of said franchise and the exercise of any rights thereunder. The surrender by said corporation of its franchise did not in anywise surrender or abrogate the irrevocable rights of others which it had agreed to confer, and did confer, before it could receive and enjoy the thing with which it has voluntarily parted, viz.: said franchise. Said corporation could, by said surrender, abandon or exchange the rights it received, but it could not escape its obligation provided for in the independent contract and which constituted the consideration and condition precedent which were essential to the existence and enjoyment of the rights granted it by said city.

(6) If the provisions for the transfer of said property constituted no more than an offer to make such transfer, the surrender of said franchise would not have operated to withdraw the same, inasmuch as said provisions have at all times appeared in said articles of incorporation and such articles were unaffected by the surrender of said franchise. Coincident with such surrender said provisions were reincorporated in articles of amendment of said articles of incorporation. Neither said corporation nor plaintiff ever did anything to withdraw or to avoid said provisions in said original and amended articles of incorporation before said city made demand for performance. On the contrary said corporation, by and through its board of directors, and its board of trustees having full power to represent plaintiff by virtue of the terms of said voting trust, is now carrying said provisions into effect in response to the demand made in behalf of said city, all as shown in Subdivisions Fourteen, Fifteen and Sixteen of plaintiff's complaint. Plaintiff's certificates, by virtue of which he claims the right to maintain this action, were issued and purchased by him after said franchise was surrendered, and the same have incorporated therein the same provisions for such transfer as appear in said original and amended articles. Said provisions were in effect when plaintiff acquired said certificates, are a part of said certificates, and his rights in and to the property and assets of said corporation are subject to the rights of said city under said provisions for transfer.

(7) Said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has at no time claimed, and is not now claiming, that the surrender of said franchise abrogated the right of said city to said property in accordance with said provisions. On the contrary said corporation reaffirmed said provisions in said amended articles coincident with said surrender, as aforesaid, and is now intending to perform in accordance therewith. Plaintiff is in no position to complain of said corporation's intention to transfer said property in accordance with said provisions for the reason that said provisions are a part of the contract between himself and said corporation and he took his certificate subject to said provisions, also for the reason that so far as his consent is material to performance of said provisions by the corporation such consent is being given by said board of trustees, who have full authority to give such consent for plaintiff by virtue of their power under said voting trust to vote all of the stock of said corporation on all matters affecting said corporation.

Wherefore, these answering defendants say that plaintiff's bill of complaint should, on final hearing, be dismissed for want of equity and that the plaintiff is not entitled to any relief whatever in the premises.

AMENDED MOTION TO STRIKE OUT PORTIONS OF SEPARATE AND SEVERAL ANSWERS OF DEFENDANTS, CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS; L. ERT SLACK, AS MAYOR OF THE CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS; WILLIAM A. BOYCE, JR., AS CITY CLERK OF THE CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS; THEODORE H. DAMMEYER, JOHN C. McCLOSKEY, AND EMSLEY W. JOHNSON, AS AND CONSTITUTING THE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS OF THE CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS, TO PLAINTIFF'S BILL OF COMPLAINT.

Plaintiff, Newton Todd, for the reason that each of the hereinafter specified portions of the answer of the above-named defendants fails to state a ground of defense to plaintiff's bill of complaint, moves the court to strike out each of said portions of said answer, to-wit:

1. That portion of Subdivision 3 of said answer reading as follows:

"answering which these defendants allege that said trustees hold said stock not only in a voting trust but subject to all the terms and conditions of the trust in the property of the Citizens Gas Company, as set out in the Articles of Association of said Company, and as hereinafter set out in Subdivision 15 hereof, and except the averment that the trustees' certificates issued to the plaintiff and other holders thereof evidence the entire beneficial ownership of the shares of stock represented thereby, but on the contrary aver that the holders of said beneficial certificates acquired and hold the same subject to all of the terms and conditions heretofore set out in Subdivision 2 of this answer and hereafter set out in Subdivision 15 hereof."

2. That portion of Subdivision 4 of said answer reading as follows:

"but deny that by reason of the issuance of such certificates the plaintiff acquired the entire beneficial ownership of 250 shares of the common capital stock of defendant Cititzens Gas Company of Indianapolis, but on the contrary allege that plaintiff at the time he acquired said certificates and continuously since such time was bound by all the terms and conditions more particularly set forth in Subdivisions 2 and 15 of this answer."

3. That portion of Subdivision 5 of said answer reading as follows:

"except they do not admit that after the surrender of the franchise of the Citizens Gas Company and the acceptance by said company of an indeterminate permit that the rights of the certificate holders or the City of Indianapolis were in any way changed or affected so far as the public charitable trust in the property of the Citizens Gas Company is concerned."

4. Those portions of Subdivision 6 of said answer reading as follows:

"but these defendants deny that such beneficial certificates represented the ownership of said shares of common stock, but only the restricted interests therein of the beneficial certificate holders, all as more particularly set out in Subdivision 15 of this answer."

and

"but allege that such stock certificates did not evidence any absolute ownership in the plaintiff of such shares of stock, but only a restricted interest therein, as more particularly hereinafter set forth."

5. That portion of Subdivision 7 of said answer reading as follows:

"but these answering defendants deny that such surrender of said franchise or the acceptance of said indeterminate permit in any way affected the right of the City of Indianapolis to acquire the plant and property of the defendant Gas Company or the public charitable trust created in favor of the inhabitants and gas consumers of said city and refer the court the Subdivision 17 of this answer wherein is specifically alleged the effect of the surrender of said franchise."

and also Subdivision 17 of said answer.

6. That portion of Subdivision 7 of said answer reading as follows:

"These answering defendants deny that as a result of the certificate so filed by the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and of the action taken by the Public Service Commission of Indiana with respect thereto that the original contract between the City of Indianapolis and the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was entirely rescinded, abrogated and annulled and a new contract substituted therefor, the details of which were and are prescribed in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, but on the contrary aver that the public charitable trust created in the property of the Citizens Gas Company, as hereinafter more particularly set out in Subdivision 15 of this answer was in no way affected, altered or changed by the surrender of said franchise and the taking out of said indeterminate permit."

7. That portion of Subdivision 8 of said answer reading as follows:

* * * * * *

"(Here follows all but the first paragraph of subdivision 8 of the answer of the City of Indianapolis, et al. in the Todd case, a copy of which answer is in evidence as Plaintiffs' Stipulation Exhibit 31)."

(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

8. That portion of Subdivision 9 of said answer reading as follows:

"but allege that the holders of such beneficial certificates are entitled to dividends thereon, payable out of earnings at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, only so long as the face value of such benefit certificates, viz: $25 each remains unpaid and that if and as any partial payment is made thereon future dividends are to be paid at the rate of ten per cent. per annum only upon the remaining unpaid portion of the face value of such certificates."

9. That portion of Subdivision 9 of said answer reading as follows:

"but on the contrary allege that, properly interpreted, said subdivision of said franchise and the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company authorize and permit the transfer of the plant and property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to the City of Indianapolis when the certificate holders have received either by dividends or otherwise an amount equal to the face value of such certificates together with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum and these answering defendants further allege that it is wholly immaterial whether said payments are made by way of dividends or from any other source and that upon said payments being made to the extent of the face value of said certificates with interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, all interest of the certificate holders in the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis ceases and that the City of Indianapolis is thereupon entitled to receive a conveyance of such property."

10. That portion of Subdivision 10 of said answer reading as follows:

"These answering defendants deny that said Act was directed solely at the Articles of Incorporation of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, but on the contrary allege that said law is a general law applicable to all companies covered by the terms of said Act."

11. That portion of Subdivision 10 of said answer reading as follows:

"These defendants further allege that if said Act is a special law and only applicable to the Citizens Gas Company and said City that it is valid; that the General Assembly of the State of Indiana could have authorized the inclusion in the articles of incorporation of such corporation of the provisions contained in the articles of the Citizens Gas Company before the same was formed, and it legally could and did legalize such provisions by said Act of 1929."

12. That portion of Subdivision 10 of said answer reading as follows:

"but while admitting said averments of Subdivision Thirteen of plaintiff's bill of complaint last above referred to, these answering defendants say that said averments are wholly immaterial and without any legal effect whatever."

13. That portion of Subdivision 12 of said answer reading as follows:

"These answering defendants deny that said action of said Board of Trustees was or is in violation of rights of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis or of plaintiff or others similarly situated in any particular whatsoever."

14. That portion of Subdivision 13 of said answer reading as follows:

"but deny that said Board of Directors or said Board of Trustees of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has refused to act for the protection of the stockholders, but on the contrary allege that both said Board of Directors and said Board of Trustees have at all times acted in accordance with the legal rights of said holders of beneficial certificates, although said answering defendants admit the refusal to comply with the demand of plaintiff."

15. Subdivision 14(a) of said answer.
16. Subdivision 14(b) of said answer.
17. Subdivision 14(c) of said answer.
18. Subdivision 14(d) of said answer.
19. Subdivision 14(e) of said answer.
20. Subdivision 14(f) of said answer.
21. Subdivision 14(g) of said answer.
22. Subdivision 14(h) of said answer.
23. Subdivision 14(i) of said answer.
24. The first grammatical paragraph of Subdivision 14 (j) of said answer.
25. The first grammatical paragraph of Subdivision 14 (k) of said answer.
26. That portion of Subdivision 14(k) of said answer, reading as follows:

"and allege that under the law of Indiana as applicable to the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company, the Public Service Commission of Indiana has no jurisdiction whatever to determine whether such a conveyance will be made, the price to be paid or to annex any conditions whatever to such transfer, but is wholly without jurisdiction in the premises.

These answering defendants further deny that the demand of the defendant City upon the officials of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was ultra vires and void, but on the contrary allege that it was a valid and legal demand."

27. Subdivision 14(l) of said answer.
28. That portion of Subdivision 14(m) of said answer reading as follows:

"but deny that the only method by which said property may lawfully be transferred from the defendant Company to the defendant City is under the terms and provisions of Sections 100, 101 and 102 of said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act."

29. That portion of Subdivision 14(o) of said answer reading as follows:

"and allege that they are not entitled to receive any more."

30. That portion of Subdivision 2 of said answer reading as follows:

* * * * *

("Here follows all of the first paragraph of subdivision 2 of the answer of the City of Indianapolis, et al. in the Todd case (Plaintiffs' Stipulation Exhibit 31) except the first few lines of said paragraph, reading as follows: 'These answering defendants deny the allegations of Subdivision II of the complaint that the plaintiff is the owner of 250 shares of the common capital stock of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis')."

(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

also that portion of Subdivision 14(n) of said answer reading as follows:

Plaintiff hereby saves and reserves to himself all of his rights in the presentation of evidence and proofs, and to a hearing upon the merits of the issues of fact and law involved in this cause, in the event it should be determined that this motion should not be sustained.

"That the plaintiffs are inhabitants and taxpayers of said City of Indianapolis and as such are cestuis que trustent of the Public Charitable Trust herein defined.

(2)

"That on August 30, 1905 defendant City of Indianapolis, acting by and through its common council and its mayor, by ordinance duly enacted, ratified, confirmed and approved a certain franchise contract therefore executed on August 25, 1905, by the Board of Public Works of and for said City and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, contracting for themselves, their associates and assigns, which said franchise contract, and the said ordinance which ratified, confirmed and approved the same, were in the words and figures following, towit:

• • • • • •

"(Here follows the Franchise Contract of August 25, 1905, which appears as part of Exhibit C to the bill (I R. 81-94))."
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

"Said franchise ordinance was published in a book printed and published by authority of the City of Indianapolis, entitled 'Charter and Ordinances of the City of Indianapolis', which said book was printed and published in the year 1905, and in which said franchise ordinance appears on pages 289-311, inclusive. Said Franchise ordinance was, also, published in a book printed and published by defendant City of Indianapolis entitled 'Proceedings of the Common Council of Indianapolis,' which was the journal of said Common Council from October 15, 1903, to December 15, 1905, and said franchise ordinance, and the proceedings of the Common Council relating thereto, appear in said book on pages 695-806, inclusive.

(4)

"That said defendant Citizens Gas Company was incorporated on May 23, 1906, and its Articles of Association, omitting names, signatures and acknowledgments, were as follows:

• • • • • •

"(Here follows the Articles of Incorporation of Citizens Gas Company, which appears as part of Exhibit C to the bill (I R. 95-100))."
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

"(Said Articles of Incorporation were recorded on the 23rd day of May, 1905 in the office of the recorder of Marion County, State of Indiana, in Miscellaneous record, Vol. 50, beginning at page 96.)

(5).

"That on May 24, 1906, said Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt assigned and transferred to defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis all their rights in and to the aforesaid contract, which assignment was duly accepted by said Citizens Gas Company and thereupon said Citizens Gas Company and said City of Indianapolis agreed and entered upon a practical construction and exposition of said franchise contract as being a Public Charitable Trust for the use and benefit of the inhabitants and taxpayers of said city and in carrying out such construction and exposition said Citizens Gas Company and said City of Indianapolis put into effect the following acts, towit:

(6).

"That thereupon said Citizens Gas Company took possession of the streets, alleys, avenues and public places of said city with the mains and connections of said Gas Company and erected and acquired a gas plant and continuously, thereafter, said Gas Company has operated, and does now operate, under said franchise, notwithstanding the pretense subsequently made by said company to abrogate the same.

(7).

"That thereupon said Citizens Gas Company proceeded to take subscriptions for the full amount of its authorized capital stock, viz., one million ($1,000,000.00) dollars; that each of said subscriptions for said stock was taken upon a form of memorandum as follows, towit:

" 'Trustees:—Thos. L. Sullivan, Thos. H. Spann, W. D. Cooper, Lucius B. Swift, Henry Kahn.

" 'I hereby subscribe for and agree to take ..... shares (par value $25.00) of the capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, and to pay for same at the rate of $25.00 per share to the Union Trust Company of Indianapolis, Trustee for said Citizens Gas Company, as follows: 10 per cent. on demand, and 20 per cent. on the tenth day of each month thereafter (except that the last payment shall be 30 per cent.) until the full amount of said subscriptions shall have been paid.

" 'All money paid on this subscription shall be held by the Union Trust Company, Trustee, until the first installment of 10 per cent. shall have been paid on not less than $500,000 of subscriptions; but if for any reason such installment shall not be paid by October 31, 1907, then the full amount of money paid on the subscription shall be returned to subscriber by said Union Trust Company, trustee.

" 'I hereby agree that the stock above subscribed shall be issued to a board of five (5) trustees, named in the articles of incorporation of said company, in perpetual and irrevocable trust, in the manner and according to the terms and conditions of the Articles of Incorporation under which said Company is formed; and that when the indebtedness of said company is fully paid, and the subscribers shall have received an amount equal to the amount by them subscribed and paid, with dividends equal to 10 per cent. per annum, then the trustees and directors of said company shall execute proper instruments transferring all the property of said company, of every kind and description, to the City of Indianapolis, and that, thereupon, all my interest in said company and all its property shall be cancelled, released and extinguished.

"That upon the incoming of said stock subscriptions executed on said memorandum, and for the uses and purposes therein stated, the same were accepted by said defendant Citizens Gas Company, and said memorandum and the said acceptance thereof became, and they were, merged into a holder's certificate in the words and figures following, towit:

" 'Capital Stock $2,000,000.00. Shares $25.00 each.

The aforesaid holder of this certificate shall receive all dividends declared from the earnings of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by the directors; and when said certificate-holder shall have received, by dividends or otherwise, upon said certificate, an amount equal to the face value thereof, together with interest thereon at the rate of ten per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, then this certificate shall be deemed fully paid and cancelled and the interest of said holder in said company and its assets shall thereupon cease and the property of said company shall be disposed of as provided in said Articles of Incorporation. (9).

"That said memorandum of subscription and the Company's acceptance thereof and said holder's trustees-certificates of ownership, stated in writing the full, indivisible and entire transaction between said Citizens Gas Company and its said subscribers, save the proper and lawful reference to said frachise transferred to said company on May 24, 1905, by said Potts, Stalnaker and Schmidt, and save the proper and lawful reference to said Company Articles of Association; that thereafter said defendant, Citizens Gas Company, made no further memorandum concerning said stock except to note on its transfer books the transfer, from time to time, by assignment, of said certificate and the memorandum so made and executed by and between said Company and said subscribers constitutes a single and indivisible and entire contract and the sole contract in the premises.

(10).

"That thereupon and thereby said Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt fully performed all the conditions of said franchise contract on their part to be performed and such performance was duly accepted by all parties in interest.

(11).

"That thereafter the General Assembly of Indiana confirming said contract, passed an act entitled: 'An act regulating the making of contracts between cities having a population of one hundred thousand or over according to the last preceding United States Census, and persons, firms, associates and corporations furnishing fuel and illuminating gas to such cities or inhabitants thereof, fixing a standard of quality of gas for such contracts; fixing a maximum price for such gas for such contracts; providing for the submission of the question of the approval of such contracts to the voters of such cities; fixing a standard of quality below which gas furnished should not go, and a price above which consumers of such gas in such cities should not be charged by any person, firm, association or corporation occupying the streets and alleys of such cities by sufferance or having no contract governing the price of such gas; fixing the duties of persons, firms, associations and corporations to consumers of such gas in such cities where such persons, firms, associations and corporations had no contract with such cities governing the price of such gas to consumers, and where such persons, firms, associations and corporations had failed to remove their pipes and mains from the streets and alleys of such cities within a reasonable time after the expiration of their contracts governing the price of such gas with such cities; providing penalties for the violation thereof and declaring an emergency'. Approved March 4, 1907. (Acts 1907 page 149).

"Plaintiffs aver that if said Potts contract ordinance of 1905, when passed, was without legislative authority, then the act of 1907 constituted the persons named in said franchise ordinance of 1905 and their successors, a body politic and corporate under the name 'Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis as trustee' for the term stated in the ordinance with all the powers incident to such corporation as trustees, at the expiration of which time said Citizens Gas Company became a part of the municipal city and the powers of the city, which were in the beginning inchoate as trustee, became vested as trustee. But the change in the nature and in the extent of the trustee's holding never modified the trust itself as to the beneficial interest of the cestuis que trustent. That said Public Charitable Trust is of the nature of a corporation sole with its beneficiaries the real parties in interest and the equitable owners thereof, and it may be dealt with accordingly in this suit and this right in its behalf these plaintiffs herein now claim and they ask that their said claim be determined and adjudged by this court in this suit.

(13).

"That in, by and upon the proceedings, records memoranda and agreements aforesaid, a Public Charitable Trust was created, established and confirmed for the use and benefit of the inhabitants and taxpayers of the City of Indianapolis, including these plaintiffs, in which said Citizens Gas Company and its trustees, agents, servants and representatives became the active trustee, for the time being, and the municipal city of Indianapolis became the inchoate trustee, said inchoate trusteeship to cease and to become determined, and to be transformed into an active trusteeship for the use and benefit of said inhabitants and taxpayers, when said municipal corporation should become liable, in due course of the administration of said trust, to take over the property and franchise of said Citizens Gas Company; that said trust, and said several trusteeships, constituted a single and indivisible contract and as such it ever has been, and is, entitled to protection under the contract clause of the Constitution of the United States against any impairment by the State of Indiana and this Federal right these plaintiffs now here assert and set up, and they ask that it be heard and determined and that their rights in the premises be accordingly protected and saved; that said Public Charitable Trust being for the benefit of the inhabitants and taxpayers of said city of Indianapolis be deemed to have been accepted by them, among whom are these plaintiffs.

(14).

"That there has been a substantial performance of all the conditions precedent to the changing of said inchoate trusteeship into an active trusteeship on the part of said municipal City of Indianapolis and said trust is now entitled to have made the formal and final transfer, accordingly, of all the property and franchises of said Citizens Gas Company to said Municipal City of Indianapolis as the active trustee of said Public Charitable Trust for the use and benefit of the inhabitants and taxpayers of said city, among whom are these plaintiffs. And plaintiffs say that such formal and final transfer should and would have been made at this time and the title of said Municipal City as trustee should and would at this time have become and be vested and clear of all clouds but for certain wrongful and unlawful obstructions put in the way thereof by the defendants, conspiring and confederating and colluding with others, in the form and manner hereinafter more fully stated; that the said wrongful acts of the defendants and their said confederates constitute an unlawful cloud upon the title of said Municipal City, as trustee, to the said property and franchises of said Citizens Gas Company which it is the object and purpose, among other things, of this suit to remove.

(15).

"That on March 25, 1911, pursuant of Article IV of its Articles of Association, hereinbefore set out, said Citizens Gas Company increased its common capital stock from the amount of one million dollars to the amount of two million dollars, and thereafter, from time to time, until July 1, 1919, said additional one million dollars of the common capital stock was sold at public auction to the highest bidder therefor, after having given thirty days notice of the time and place of such sale by publication in three Indianapolis daily newspapers having the largest circulation, all as provided in said Article IV of said Articles of Association. That in each of said published notices of sale, it was specifically stated that all said stock sold should be issued and acquired in all respects conformably to the terms and conditions of the Articles of Incorporation of said Citizens Gas Company, relating to such sale of stock. That in said sales of stock the conditions imposed by said Articles of Incorporation were complied with and said trustees certificates were accordingly issued to said purchasers of said stock and said stock was assigned to said trustees in trust.

(16).

"That on November 29, 1911, said city of Indianapolis and said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, made with each other and entered into a supplemental agreement intended to amend certain provisions in the said franchise contract of August 25, 1905, thereafter confirmed by ordinance, made by and between said City of Indianapolis as one party and said Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker an Lorenz Schmidt, as other party. That said supplemental agreement of November 29, 1911 is exhibited at large in General Ordinance No. 86, 1911, passed by the common council of said City of Indianapolis and approved May 22, 1911, which said ordinance was duly published and appears in General Ordinance record 13, page 341, of the ordinances of said City and it is in the words and figures following, towit:

"'General Ordinance No. 86, 1911.

* * * * * *

"(Here follows the Agreement of November 29, 1911, between the City of Indianapolis and Citizens Gas Company, modifying the Franchise Contract of August 25, 1905, which Agreement appears as part of Exhibit C to the bill (I R. 108-112))."
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

"That said amending ordinance was approved by S. L. Shank, Mayor, on May 12, 1912, and was published in General Ordinance Record 13, page 341. It was published also, in the Municipal Code of the City of Indianapolis, 1917, pages 454-457.

"That said amending ordinance being in aid of said Public Charitable Trust and for the benefit of the inhabitants and taxpayers of said City of Indianapolis, its acceptance by them will be implied.

(17).

"That in part performance of said Public Charitable Trust and in aid thereof, said Citizens Gas Company acquired property of the great value, towit, $20,000,000.00; that all said property became and it is impressed with said Public Charitable Trust; that plaintiffs herein have attempted to describe all said property according to its classification, and without particular enumeration of all the various specific items which compose any class; that if any item shall have been omitted herefrom, or shall be hereafter acquired or shall be inaccurately described herein, plaintiffs ask leave, upon discovery, to describe such newly discovered item and to include its enumeration herein and to make any proper correction as a part of this complaint, to the end that all the assets and property of said Citizens Gas Company, of whatsoever kind and wheresoever situate, may be brought properly within the issues of this suit and dealt with accordingly.

"That defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, has acquired title to and is now the owner of certain real estate, together with the buildings, fixtures, machinery and equipment used and useful for the manufacture, storage and distribution of artificial gas and the by products thereof, together with pipe lines, mains and other necessary equipment for the distribution of artificial gas in the City of Indianapolis, and, also, a manufacturing plant and ovens for the production, manufacture and sale of commercial coke. Said real estate is situate in the city of Indianapolis, Marion County, State of Indiana, and is more particularly described as follows, towit:

• • • • • •

"(Here follows a detailed description of the property of the Citizens Gas Company)."
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

That said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis also, has acquired title to and owns certain leasehold rights in coal lands located in the counties of Raleigh and Fayette, in the State of West Virginia, useful and used for the purpose of producing therefrom coal for use in the operation of the business of defendant Company.

"That defendant Indianapolis Gas Company pretends to have been organized in 1891 pursuant of said act of the General Assembly of Indiana entitled 'An act for the incorporation of manufacturing and mining companies and companies for mechanical chemical and building purposes', approved May 20, 1852; that no articles of association of said Indianapolis Gas Company have ever been filed, or are on file, in the office of the Secretary of State of Indiana, but in lieu thereof, there appears a certified copy of an order of the Marion Circuit Court of Indiana changing the corporate name of Electric Lighting, Gas Heating and Illuminating Company to Indianapolis Gas Company; from this certified copy of decree the following facts may be traced chronologically, towit: On April 3, 1876, there was approved a general ordinance enacted by the common council of said city of Indianapolis investing Robert Dickson and his associates and their assigns with the privilege of furnishing gas to the City of Indianapolis and the inhabitants thereof, upon certain conditions therein named; pursuant of the conditions of the franchise granted Dickson and others, they incorporated a company shortly after the adoption of the ordinance, which was known as the 'Citizens Gas Company', and to that company the franchise was turned over. The 'Citizens Gas Company' constructed a gas-works plant on West Pratt Street and engaged in business of furnishing gas under this ordinance. A short time before 1880 the plant was damaged by an explosion and fire. Financial trouble ensued and as a result of the litigation in the Superior Court of Marion County, Indiana, the franchise was sold, as well as the entire plant, by the Sheriff. The purchaser was John S. Tarkington, who in 1881, incorporated a company known as the 'Electric Lighting, Gas Heating and Illuminating Company' with capital stock fixed at $100,000.00.

"The Articles of Association contained no provision subjecting them to revision or change by the State of Indiana. At the expiration of the year for redemption from said sheriff's sale, there having been no redemption, the sheriff's certificate was assigned to the company which had been organized by John S. Tarkington and all the property of the Citizens Gas Company was conveyed to the Tarkington Company. There does not appear any record of the dissolution of 'Citizens Gas Company'. The 'Electric Lighting, Gas Heating and Illuminating Company' appears to have done business in that name until 1890 at which time that company, the Indianapolis Natural Gas Company and the Indianapolis Gas Light and Coke Company were purchased by E. C. Benedict and others, of Philadelphia, and consolidated into the Indianapolis Gas Company, the latter name having been authorized by said decree of the Marion Circuit Court. The Indianapolis Gas Company appears to claim a direct succession from the original Electric Lighting, Gas Heating and Illuminating Company, the chartered duration of which was limited to expire in 1931. Other than as indicated the Indianapolis Gas Company does not appear to have had any franchise from the City of Indianapolis. On November 9, 1907, it appears that the capital stock was increased to $2,000,000.00. The Indianapolis Gas Company eo nomine does not appear to have had any franchise from the city of Indianapolis to operate an artificial gas plant but on May 12, 1890, it filed its acceptance of the general ordinance of June 27, 1887, concerning the use of streets and public places for supplying the city of Indianapolis and its inhabitants with natural gas. Since 1904 no company has supplied natural gas in Indianapolis.

"That on towit the 1st day of January, 1913, the defendant Indianapolis Gas Company was the owner of, and was operating a gas plant in said city of Indianapolis through which it supplied gas for fuel and illuminating purposes to the inhabitants of said city; that there and then said Indianapolis Gas Company's said plant included about 375 miles of mains and pipes of various sizes, theretofore laid and devoted to the distribution of natural gas and at the time existing by sufferance only, in the streets and alleys of said city, together with certain coal-gas and water-gas plants used in the manufacture of artificial gas for sale by said Indianapolis Gas Company; that a large part of said gas mains were old, much having been in the ground for twenty years and more, and large portions of them were in bad repair and rotten, and weakened by having been buried in the ground for such length of time, and by electrolysis; that said coal-gas and water-gas plant were obsolete and incapable of producing gas at a cost which would enable said company to sell said gas at a profit in competition with a plant efficiently constructed and equipped and operated according to modern methods, and selling within the price fixed by the laws of Indiana. That the condition of the system pursued by said Indianapolis Gas Company and the obsolete character of its plants and machinery were such that said company had not been able to do a profitable business for many years and it had not, at that time, been able to pay any dividends to its stockholders for twenty years and it had been compelled to borrow money with which to pay interest on its bonds and other fixed liabilities; that the capital stock of said company was $2,000,000.00 and its bonded indebtedness was stated to be $4,833,000.00, which capitalization and bonded indebtedness were largely in excess of the actual value of all the property of said company; that a fair and reasonable value of all the property, real and personal, of said gas company was $1,223,250.00 which included an office building of the fair and reasonable value of $400,000.00; that said office building is not used, nor useful, in the production of gas and it is subject to the lien of a preferred stock issue of $300,000.00, due to mature in December, 1931; that the total net value of all the property of said Indianapolis Gas Company, used and useful in the manufacture of gas, was not to exceed $923,250.00, and said company was unable to liquidate its indebtedness and was insolvent; that at that time said E. C. Benedict of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, commonly called "Commodore" Benedict, and his associates were in financial and administrative control of said Indianapolis Gas Company and Benedict was its president and he was thoroughly informed as to the said condition of said Company and as to the gas-production situation in said city of Indianapolis.

"That on towit said 1st day of January, 1913 one J. D. Forrest was the general manager of said Citizens Gas Company and, notwithstanding the subordinate title of his office, he was largely in actual control of all the affairs of said Citizens Gas Company and he was thoroughly informed as to the condition and methods of said Citizens Gas Company, and as to the condition and methods of said Indianapolis Gas Company and as to the gas production situation in said city of Indianapolis.

"That on towit, said 1st day of January, 1913 one Volney T. Malott, one Linneas C. Boyd and one Clarence L. Kirk were capitalists of said city of Indianapolis, who worked together and were commonly known in financial circles as the Malott interests, and each of them was thoroughly informed as to the gas situation in Indianapolis and as to the condition the plans, the purposes and methods of both said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and said Indianapolis Gas Company.

"That on towit January 1, 1913, said Commodore Benedict and J. D. Forrest came to a mutual understanding and accord and thereupon they conspired, confederated and agreed together, pretending that said Benedict should retire from the gas competitive field of Indianapolis, leaving said territory wholly open to the use of said Citizens Gas Company and saving said Indianapolis Gas Company only from complete destruction, but, in fact, they planned that said Forrest should get advantages and emoluments arising upon putting into effect a financial composition involving many millions of dollars and that said Benedict should save to himself and his associates a nominal value out of the common stock of said Indianapolis Gas Company and the face value of a pretended mortgage, purporting to have been executed on October 1, 1902 to secure an authorized issue of $7,500,000.00 gold payment bonds bearing interest at 5 per centum per annum and due fifty years after date and of which Ferdinand Winter and Trust Company of America were nominal trustees; that thereupon said Forrest-Benedict interests solicited and engaged said Malott-Boyd-Kirk interests to enter said conspiracy upon assurance that they should acquire at a preferential price the common stock of said Indianapolis Gas Company and that all interests should work together to destroy said Public Charitable Trust and divert the earnings of said Citizens Gas Company, and the revenues which properly belonged to said Public Charitable Trust, into the funds and holdings, by any possible course of direction or indirection, of said Malott-Boyd-Kirk interests; and to such effect said confederates then and there conspired and agreed together; that thereupon said trades were consummated and upon their consummation said confederates, through agencies of publicity and finance, took control of the policy of said Citizens Gas Company and of its officers, servants and representatives, including the said trustees of said Public Charitable Trust.

"That thereupon it was designed by said confederates that a public service commission should be created in and by the State of Indiana with plenary powers to circumvent the constitutional restrictions of the state and by those means destroy said Public Charitable Trust and substitute in its place and stead a plan and method whereby said Citizens Gas Company should be required to bear the burden of replacing said Indianapolis Gas Company as a going concern, invested with modern and efficient methods, all to the end that upon the termination of an alliance between said Citizens Gas Company and said Indianapolis Gas Company, the latter company would be in exclusive control of the territory of Indianapolis for all purposes of gas production and sale, and all without cost and expense to said conspirators, but wholly at the cost and expense of the inhabitants and taxpayers of said city of Indianapolis.

(Note: The matter indicated supra with distinguishable type is the matter which the court ordered be struck out of the complaint.)

"That thereupon and with the aid of publicity and large financial resources said confederates began to act, and they have so accomplished their said ends as that the following events and acts appear to their advantage, towit:

(21).

"On the 4th day of March, 1913 there was approved an act of the General Assembly of Indiana, to take effect on the 1st day of May, 1913, entitled 'An act concerning public utilities, creating a public service commission, abolishing the railroad commission of Indiana, and conferring the powers of the railroad commission on the public service commission' (Acts 1913, 167).

(22).

"That on the 21st day of May, 1913, and pursuant of said conspiracy on the part of said Benedict-Forrest and said Malott-Boyd-Kirk interests, and in the carrying of said conspiracy into partial effect, said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and said Indianapolis Gas Company pretended to agree together to unite, and accordingly they did unite, in a pretended petition in common to said Public Service Commission, to authorize said Indianapolis Gas Company, as lessor, to lease its plant and property to said Citizens Gas Company as lessee which petition, omitting the signatures and attestations of the proper officers of each of said companies, was in substance, towit:

• • • • • •

"(Here follows the joint petition of Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and The Indianapolis Gas Company to the Public Service Commission, previously set forth as part of Plaintiffs' Stipulation Exhibit 13)".
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

(23).

"The pretended finding and order of the commission purporting to approve and confirm said lease were made and entered of record on October 1, 1913. The order provided inter alia that before the lease should become effective the Indianapolis Gas Company should surrender its franchise with the City of Indianapolis and take an indeterminate permit from the Public Service Commission. And this was attempted to be done.

"The pretended contract of lease as entered into in accordance with the pretended order of the Public Service Commission, omitting its caption, signatures and attestations contained the following provisions:

* * * * * *

"(Here follows a copy of the Lease between Indianapolis Gas and Citizens Gas, a copy of which is attached to the bill as Exhibit B (I R. 51-80))".
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

(24).

"That said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has well and truly performed all the obligations imposed upon it by said pretended lease and in so doing it has laid out and expended of the moneys, funds and property of the taxpayers of said city, among whom are included these plaintiffs, for the use and benefit of said Indianapolis Gas Company, a large sum, including interest thereon, towit, ten million dollars, which sum, except for this suit, will be wholly lost to said taxpayers and residents; that particular items which have entered into said payments, with interest thereon, are as follows, towit:

"That said payments with interest thereon in their aggregate are more than ten times the entire value of all the property of said Indianapolis Gas Company and said Indianapolis Gas Company is insolvent; that said pretended petition by said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and said Indianapolis Gas Company of May 21, 1913, is ultra vires said Citizens Gas Company, its officers, agents, servants and representatives, and of said trustees and it is wholly void; that said pretended lease of October 1, 1913, ordered and directed to be executed by said Public Service Commission is in contravention of the contract clause of the Constitution of the United States for that it impairs the charter of said Citizens Gas Company and it impairs, also, the said contract of August 25, 1905, by and between the City of Indianapolis by and through its Board of Public Works, and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, approved on August 30, 1905, by General Ordinance No. 72 as exhibited in General Ordinance Record 12, page 244; wherein and whereby said Public Charitable Trust was created; that these plaintiffs specially set up and claim the protection in this their suit, of said contract clause of the Constitution of the United States and they ask the Court that their said claim of protection be heard and sustained herein; and likewise these plaintiffs specially set up and claim the protection in this their suit, of the contract clause of the constitution of the State of Indiana and they ask the Court that their said claim of protection be heard and sustained herein.

"And these plaintiffs further say that said act of the General Assembly of Indiana of March 4, 1913 pretending to create said Public Service Commission is void for that it is in contravention of the constitution of Indiana concerning the formation of corporations, in this, that said constitution withholds from the General Assembly all authority to authorize charters or substitute charters in the form of permits of any kind to any corporation except under general laws and such charters and permits never can be authorized nor granted upon the special petition of any person, firm or corporation; that forasmuch as said Public Service Commission is an unlawful body and wholly without any authority and power under the Constitution of Indiana its said pretended order of lease of October 1, 1913, is wholly void and it takes the property of these plaintiffs without due process of law and in the denial of the equal protection of the law in contravention of the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States, and these plaintiffs now specially set up and claim in this their suit the protection of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States and they ask that the court hear and sustain their said claim herein.

"That all the defendants herein, were either parties to the said conspiracy in the beginning as formed by and between the said Benedict-Forrest interests and the Malott-Boyd-Kirk interests, or, if not so involved in the beginning, said persons thereafter made themselves parties to said conspiracy by acceptance, ratification and adoption and they are now engaged in and about carrying out details of said conspiracy and making the same effective to the purposes for which it was created; that said Ferdinand Winter and the Trust Company of America were named, and their powers defined as trustees, in a certain pretended mortgage executed on, towit, October 1, 1902, by said Indianapolis Gas Company pretending to secure the payment of an authorized issue of $7,500,000.00, gold payment 5 per centum per annum bonds, due fifty years after date and of which authorized sum $4,833,000.00 may have been issued; that plaintiffs are not advised as to the consideration, if any, attending said issue of bonds, nor as to their existence at this time nor as to their legality, nor as to their value, sufficiently to admit the same and therefore, plaintiffs deny the existence, the legality and the value of said issue of bonds and the priority of said mortgage as against the claim and right of said Public Charitable Trust, and of said City of Indianapolis as trustee, and of said receiver to be appointed herein, for money laid out and expended, without consideration therefor, in and about the replacement, preservation and maintenance of said mortgaged property, and said mortgage trustees are made parties defendants herein to answer to their interest and to defend said mortgage against this suit to defeat the lien of said mortgage and to quiet title against the same, or on default said trustees to suffer the removal of said mortgage lien from said property, and the determination and adjudication that the lien of said mortgage should be and is junior and inferior in right and equity to the lien of said city as trustee, and of said Public Charitable Trust, and of the receiver to be appointed herein, for said moneys laid out and expended to replace, preserve and maintain said mortgaged property and that said mortgage should be determined and adjudged to be an unlawful cloud upon said Public Charitable Trust and that the title of said Public Charitable Trust and of said City of Indianapolis, as trustee, as against said pretended mortgage lien should be forever quieted and that said mortgage trustees should be summoned and required to answer accordingly herein.

"That said City of Indianapolis its officers and representatives never have taken, and they are not now taking, any affirmative action to preserve and rescue said Public Charitable Trust and to execute and carry the same into effect in the terms in which it was created and established but on the contrary the policy and conduct of said city, its officers and representatives has been and is to aid and assist to make effective the purposes and objects of said conspiracy and to obstruct the execution of said trust in the terms in which it was created and the performance of the duties of trustee thereby imposed upon said municipal city, so that unless these plaintiffs, as inhabitants and taxpayers of said city, for their own use and benefit, and for the use and benefit of all other persons similarly situate, can maintain this suit, said Public Charitable Trust will be defeated and wholly destroyed, to the irreparable loss and injury of the cestuis que trustent of said trust, and for which they can have no adequate remedy at law; that the conduct and acts of said City of Indianapolis, its officers, agents, servants and representatives constitute, and is, in effect, a repudiation of said trust and a renunciation of said office of trustee.

(26).

"That on August 27, 1921, said Citizens Gas Company further in aid of said conspiracy herein described and acting under the control, and at the direction of the members thereof, filed with said Public Service Commission a pretended declaration of surrender of its said franchise with the City of Indianapolis, which said declaration was in substance towit:

" 'Declaration of Surrender of Licenses, Permits and Franchises by Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis

" 'This Indenture Witnesseth, That Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Indiana, and which is the owner and operator of by-product gas plants in the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, and is a public utility, declares that it hereby surrenders each and every license, permit and franchise from the city of Indianapolis, Indiana, now owned or held by it and under or by virtue of which said Company is operating its gas utility or any part thereof, in said city; and hereby accepts indeterminate permits in lieu of said licenses, permits and franchises hereby surrendered as provided in the Act of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana entitled "An Act concerning public utilities creating a public service commission, abolishing the railroad commission of Indiana, and conferring the powers of the railroad commission on the public service commission," approved March 4, 1913, and acts amendatory thereof or supplemental thereto; but if said act shall be repealed or annulled, then said Company shall be reinstated in the possession and enjoyment of all the licenses, permits and franchises hereby surrendered as provided in said Act.

"'In Witness Whereof, the said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has this 12th day of August, 1921, caused its name to be hereunto subscribed by its President and its corporate seal hereto affixed, attested by its Secretary duly authorized thereto by resolutions of the stockholders and directors of said Company, duly adopted at meetings of said stockholders and directors duly called and held.

"'This is to certify that on the 27th day of August, 1921, the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis filed in the office of the Clerk of the city of Indianapolis, Indiana, a declaration, of which the above is an exact copy.

(27).

"That on December 12, 1921, said Public Service Commission entered its order pretending to approve the simulated declaration of surrender of franchise by said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis from said City of Indianapolis, which said order was in substance, towit:

"'The commission being fully advised in the premises finds that said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, Indiana, has filed its written declaration, as provided by the public service commission act, surrendering all licenses, permits and franchises from the City of Indianapolis, Indiana now owned or held by the petitioner herein in accordance with the provisions of said act and that said Company receives in lieu thereof by operation of law an indeterminate permit to be held under all the terms, conditions and limitations of said act.

"'It is therefore ordered by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, that said declaration and all instruments in writing filed by said company in the matter shall be filed in the office of the secretary of the commission kept on file as a record of said surrender'.

"That said order of December 12, 1921, entered by said Public Service Commission and purporting to approve the declaration of surrender of franchise by said Citizens Gas Company from said City of Indianapolis is unlawful and void for each of the reasons following, towit:—

"1. In and by the provisions of the constitution of Indiana the franchises of corporations are immutable and cannot be changed so as to affect existing rights, and the laws in relation thereto are inflexible; that a rule prescribed in the constitution of other states to the effect that corporation charters and franchises shall be issued subject to the right of the state to enact subsequent laws changing said charters and franchises of corporations does not prevail, and never has prevailed, in Indiana, but, on the contrary, all corporations must be formed and must operate under general laws made without participation by any corporation in the legislative endeavor and no permit, license nor privilege shall be granted to one corporation upon its own terms, or petition reciting special and particular facts which does not pertain to all corporations alike under general laws and no permit, license or privilege may be granted to affect retroactively a charter or franchise which has once issued; that forasmuch as the General Assembly is without power to grant any permit, license, or privilege to any one corporation which does not pertain to all corporations alike under general laws and is without power to grant any permit, license or privilege to affect retroactively any charter or franchise which has once issued, so the General Assembly is without power to authorize any person, subordinate to said General Assembly, to grant any permit, license or privilege to one corporation which does not pertain to all corporations alike under general laws and is without authority to grant any permit, license or privilege which shall affect retroactively any charter or franchise which has once issued; that in consideration of the premises said act of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana entitled 'An act concerning public Utilities, creating a Public Service Commission, abolishing the railroad commission of Indiana, and conferring the powers of the railroad commission on the public service commission', approved March 4, 1913, is unconstitutional and void in so far as it attempts to confer any authority on said commission to grant any permit, license or privilege to one corporation which does not pertain to all corporations alike under general laws; that the franchise which said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis simulated to surrender was local and it was specific in its provisions and it carried with it a Public Charitable Trust to which the inhabitants and taxpayers of said city were cestuis que trustent, so that the pretended indeterminate permit granted by said Public Service Commission was special and did not pertain to all corporations alike, and said cestuis que trustent never assented thereto.

"2. In and by the constitution of Indiana, corporation franchises are immutable contracts and they cannot be impaired by the state because of the contract clause of the state constitution, towit, Article 1, section 24 of the constitution of Indiana; that the franchise which said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis simulated to surrender carried with it contractual provisions creating a Public Charitable Trust in which the inhabitants and taxpayers of said city of Indianapolis, including these plaintiffs were cestuis que trustent and which Public Charitable Trust was not perpetuated in said indeterminate permit; that said Public Charitable Trust came within the protection of said contract clause of the constitution of Indiana and was inviolate, and this right these plaintiffs now assert and claim, and they ask that it be adjudged and determined by this court in this suit, and they say that said cestuis que trustent never assented to the surrender of said franchise.

"3. In and by the constitution of Indiana, Article 6, section 6, municipal officers 'shall reside within their respective counties, townships, and towns and shall keep their respective offices at such places therein'; that at the time said constitution was adopted there were no cities in Indiana but the Supreme Court has construed the word 'town' to be generic and to include cities; that members of said Public Service Commission do not reside in said City of Indianapolis nor hold offices therein; that said order of said Public Service Commission is not a municipal ordinance and was not enacted nor published as a municipal ordinance and said order is in contravention of the constitution of Indiana and is void.

"4. In and by the Constitution of the United States corporation franchises are immutable contracts and they cannot be impaired by the state because of the contract clause of the Constitution of the United States, towit, Article I, section 10; that the franchise which said Citizens Gas Company simulated to surrender carried with it contractual provisions creating a Public Charitable Trust in which the inhabitants and taxpayers of said City of Indianapolis were cestuis que trustent and which said Public Charitable Trust was not perpetuated in said indeterminate permit; that said Public Charitable Trust came within the protection of said contract clause of the Constitution of the United States and was inviolate, and this right these plaintiffs now assert and claim and they ask that it be determined and adjudged by this court in this suit, and they say that said cestuis que trustent never assented to the surrender of said franchise.

"5. That on April 19, 1816, James Madison, as President of the United States of America, approved an act of the Congress entitled 'An act to enable the people of the Indiana territory to form a constitution and state government, and for the admission of such state into the Union on equal footing with the original states'; that the first section of said act was as follows, towit: 'Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in congress assembled: That the inhabitants of the territory of Indiana be, and they are hereby authorized, to form for themselves a constitution and state government, and to assume such name as they shall deem proper; and the said state, when formed, shall be admitted into the Union upon the same footing with the original states, in all respects whatever;' that said act of the congress carried with it an offer to said people that they should have the right to interpret their own institutions; that afterwards, on June 29, 1816, the representatives of the people of the territory of Indiana, in convention met at Corydon, on Monday the tenth day of June, 1816, adopted an ordinance of acceptance of the provisions of said act of Congress of April 19, 1816; that said act of Congress and said ordinance of acceptance together constituted a contract within the protection of the contract clause of the Constitution of the United States and said contract was ever thereafter inviolate; that following upon the adoption of said ordinance of acceptance said representatives of the people, met at Corydon, proceeded to carry out the terms of said compact founded upon said act of the Congress, and said offer to said people of their right to interpret their own institutions and accordingly they formed for themselves a constitution and state government in which constitution they reserved the power of amendment of the Constitution; that pursuant of such right of interpretation and of said reserved power of Amendment the people of the State of Indiana thereafter adopted their present state constitution, to take effect on November 1, 1851, superseding the constitution of 1816; that Article IV of the present Constitution is devoted to the law-making authority of the state which is vested in a general assembly, which is defined and its province prescribed, and therein is included a definition of what shall constitute 'the law' of Indiana, towit: 'Section 1. The legislative authority of the state shall be vested in the General Assembly, which shall consist of a senate and house of representatives. The style of every law shall be: "Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana", and no law shall be enacted except by bill;' that thereafter the Federal government adopted the fourteenth amendment of its constitution, which became effective, according to the proclamation of the secretary of state, on July 28, 1868; that in said amendment provision is made in restraint of law of the state including: 'Nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law;' that at the time said Fourteenth Amendment was adopted the words 'equal protection of the law' and 'due process of law', each had a defined and accepted meaning in the jurisprudence alike of the United States and of the several states including the state of Indiana and thereby 'the law' was meant to be 'the law' as previously declared, and said fourteenth Amendment was adopted in acceptance of those meanings of 'the law', and those meanings cannot be changed by any authority less than the constitution itself, and this inviolability of the meaning of 'the law' these plaintiffs now set up and claim as a federal right and they ask this court to determine and adjudge the same in this suit, and to adjudge that said Public Service Commission is incompetent to declare 'the law' or to define 'the law' and that the promulgation of orders made after the fact by said Public Service Commission are null and void, and are wholly inadequate as a foundation, to support any revision or any supervening order by any governmental authority whatsoever; and this right to have the corporation laws of Indiana held to be and to have them maintained inviolate and not exposed retroactively to any change by the general assembly or by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, or by any other authority whatsoever, these plaintiffs now set up and claim as a right arising under the contract clause of the Federal Constitution and under the laws of the United States, and they ask that their said claim be determined and adjudged by this court in this case, and, that said act of March 4, 1913, be adjudicated to be unconstitutional and void and that each of the said orders of said Public Service Commission of Indiana herein set forth be held to be without any authority in law and void, including that said orders, and any of them are not competent in law to confer a right of revision upon any tribunal or body whatsoever, whether of the state of Indiana, or of the United States.

"That said act of March 4, 1913, and each of the proceedings had and taken and each of the orders made and entered thereunder, constitute an unlawful cloud upon the title of said Public Charitable Trust which should be removed by the judgment and decree of this court in this suit and said title should be forever cleared of said cloud.

"That since the entry of said order of December 12, 1921, there have been various simulated petitions by said conspirators acting in the name of said Citizens Gas Company to said Public Service Commission concerning rates and in re-action to said petitions there have been various pretending orders made and promulgated by said Public Service Commission concerning said rates; that each and all said petitions were in aid and furtherance of said conspiracy herein described and each and all said pretended orders of said commission were unlawful and void; that each of said separate proceedings presents questions of law similar to the question which arises upon said proceedings which originated in said simulated petition of August 27, 1921 and because of their similitude it would be impertinent to burden this complaint with an iteration of the details of said subsequent proceedings, with this exception however, towit: On April 7, 1922, said Citizens Gas Company filed its simulated petition with said Public Service Commission for authority to increase its rate for gas, furnished to the inhabitants of said city, to $1.25 per unit of 1000 cubic feet which petition was docketed as cause No. 6969, and was denied; that upon the denial of said petition said conspirators acting in the name of said Citizens Gas Company filed its bill of complaint in the United States District Court for the District of Indiana in which bill said company stated the proceedings had before said Commission; averred that the order made by the commission was a confiscatory 'law' and in contravention of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States and asked as relief that said commission be enjoined from interfering with the establishment of a rate of $1.25 per unit of 1000 cubic feet for gas furnished to the inhabitants of said City; that said Federal Court sustained said bill and granted the prayer thereof and entered an injunction restraining said commission from interfering with said rate of $1.25 per unit as aforesaid; that said proceedings in said court were beyond its jurisdiction and were void because said Federal Court was asked to and it did grant a relief which superimposed the Fourteenth Amendment upon the contract clause of the Constitution of the United States to the effect of the latter's nullification; that there can be no confiscation, nor any taking of property without due process of law, nor in denial of the equal protection of the law, where the affected rights of the respective parties in interest are contractual; that a confiscation can occur only where rates are imposed by law, as distinguished from rates provided for by contract and then only the Fourteenth Amendment can have any application; that no rates ever had been imposed by law upon said Citizens Gas Company and the only lawful rates it ever could charge were those fixed by said franchise schedule of 1905; that forasmuch as said injunction of said United States District Court was without jurisdiction and void the said order of said Public Service Commission is void.

"That said proceedings in said United States District Court are of no effect and are void as to said Public Charitable Trust for the reason that said Public Charitable Trust was not a party to said proceedings and its rights in the premises were not presented to the Court nor heard and determined in said suit.

"That the said pretended agreement of lease made and entered into on September 30, 1913, by and between the Indianapolis Gas Company, as lessor, and the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, as lessee, was ultra vires said Citizens Gas Company, its officers and representatives, and is unlawful and should be determined and adjudged in this suit to be, and to have been ab initio, void and said pretended lease should herein be determined and adjudged to constitute an unlawful cloud upon the title of said Public Charitable Trust and should be removed by the proper decree of this court in this suit.

"That said pretended agreement of lease made and entered into on September 30, 1913, by and between the Indianapolis Gas Company, as lessor, and the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis as lessee, was brought about and made effective, and has been maintained throughout, because of the wrongful conspiracy by and between said Benedict-Forrest interests, on the one hand, and said Malott-Boyd-Kirk interests and their respective and several allies and confederates as successors in interest, on the other hand, by reason whereof said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was and is corruptly and fraudulently deprived of and denied the good faith and fidelity of its own officers, servants and representatives, in council, in negotiations and in conduct, in and about all matters pertaining to said lease, by reason whereof said lease was in the beginning and ever has been and is now wrongful and unlawful and in this suit it should be determined and adjudged to be void and to constitute an unlawful cloud upon the title of said Public Charitable Trust and should be removed by the proper decree of this court in this suit.

"That said pretended agreement of lease made and entered into on September 30, 1913, by and between said Indianapolis Gas Company, as lessor, and said Citizens Gas Company, as lessee, was wrongfully and unlawfully brought about and imposed upon said Citizens Gas Company by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, that the order of said Public Service Commission approving said pretended lease and all the subsequent orders of said Commission pertaining thereto, impaired the contract of said Public Charitable Trust in contravention of the contract clause of the Constitution of the United States and of the contract clause of the Constitution of the State of Indiana, and in this suit should be determined and adjudged to be void.

"That because said pretended agreement of lease made and entered into September 30, 1913, by and between said Indianapolis Gas Company, as lessor, and said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, as lessee, was unlawful and void, it furnishes no consideration for the moneys laid out and expended by said Citizens Gas Company for, and to the benefit and use of, said Indianapolis Gas Company and said moneys should be recovered through the instrumentality of a receivership, to be created in this suit, as moneys had and received by said Indianapolis Gas Company in the sum, to wit, ten million dollars.

"That said City of Indianapolis its officers and representatives and their confederates well knowing the condition of said Public Charitable Trust and the wrongs which had been committed against it, and designing how they could deceive the taxpayers and inhabitants of said city, who were and are the cestuis que trustent of said trust, caused and procured the General Assembly of the State of Indiana to pass an act entitled 'An act supplemental to an act entitled "An act concerning municipal corporations" approved March 6, 1905,' approved March 11, 1929; that said act of March 11, 1929 is unconstitutional and void upon the same grounds that said act of March 4, 1913 purporting to create said Public Service Commission, is unconstitutional, viz. that it is in contravention of Article IV section 1 of the Constitution of Indiana in each of the several particulars towit: (1) That said act attempts to confer upon, and to ratify, approve and confirm in the Public Service Commission of Indiana, legislative authority; that said Public Service Commission is not composed of two houses, as provided in said section 1 of Article IV of the Constitution of Indiana and it is not elected by the people, but is appointed by the governor, and the members thereof are not appointed according to districts, but are appointed at large and capriciously by the governor and at least nine of the congressional districts of the state and at least eighty-seven counties of the state are wholly disfranchised in the selection of said commissioners, in contravention of Article I section 23 of the Constitution of Indiana; (2) That the pretended orders of said commission in the premises are not, nor is any one of them, styled 'Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana', nor is any one of said orders a law enacted by bill as provided and defined in said Article IV section 1; (3) Nor is any one of said orders preceded with a title to express the subject matter of said order and matters properly connected therewith, as provided in said Article IV section 19; (4) Nor is any one of said orders a general law as provided in said Article IV section 23; (5) Nor is any one of said orders published as provided in said Article IV section 28; (6) Nor is any one of said orders signed or vetoed by the governor as provided in Article V section 14 of the Constitution of Indiana, and said Public Service Commission is wholly without any authority whatsoever to speak for and represent the people of Indiana as a law making body; (7) That said Public Service Commissioners are not residents of any one and single county, township, or town within which they keep their office, as required concerning municipal officers by Article VI section 6 of the Constitution of Indiana.

"That the defendants, Sterling R. Holt, Thomas C. Howe, George J. Marott, A. Dallas Hitz and William J. Mooney, pretending to be the Board of Trustees for Utilities and Edward H. Kahn, Henry L. Dithmer, Eli Lilly, Brodehurst Elsey, John J. Madden, Almus G. Ruddell and Guy A. Wainwright, pretending to be the Board of Directors for Utilities of said City of Indianapolis, are made defendants herein to answer to their interest; that said defendants pretend to hold office and to exercise authority pursuant of said act of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana entitled 'An act supplemental to an act entitled "An act concerning municipaf corporations" approved March 6, 1905,' approved March 11, 1929, but plaintiffs say that said pretenses are wholly without right and unlawful and they constitute a cloud upon the title of said Public Charitable Trust, which should be removed in this suit; and for that said act is, further in contravention of Article IV section 19 of the Constitution of Indiana; that said act consists of twenty sections bearing upon subjects wholly unrelated and not connected with one another and that neither of said subjects, and the matters properly connected therewith, is mentioned in the title of said act; that the title 'An act supplemental to an act' etc., is no title at all within the meaning of said Article IV section 19; that the statement that the act is 'Supplemental' is a mere conclusion of law and it has no proper place in the title of an act of the General Assembly; that said word 'supplemental' contains no verb and it states no object and no purpose; that the effect of a statute is a matter for juridical determination and applies alike to all statutes whether the object and purpose be 'to amend', 'to repeal', 'to authorize', 'to provide for', 'to establish', etc.; that the legislature has plenary power to declare its own objects and purposes, but it is for the judiciary to determine whether such object and purpose when declared has been attained; that if the legislature can by enactment establish its own accomplishments, it can thereby enact laws as to which judicial inquiry will be foreclosed, in contravention of Article III of the constitution. The legislature has from time to time attempted to declare that the different sections of a statute were independent of one another and that the failure of one section should not affect others; also, it has attempted to declare that a statute was 'declaratory' as in defining public offences, and thereby of restrictive meaning, or that it was 'remedial' as in defining liens of working men and therefore of liberal meaning, but in all such cases the legislative expression was in the body of the act and not in its title; that a public service commission is not an essential part of the government of a first class city and therefore there has been no such void or deficiency in such city government as could be supplied and supplemented with a law imposing upon such city a public service commission; that it may be assumed, from the text of the act, that it relates to a public service commission although the title of said act of March 11, 1929 (Acts 1929 page 252) imparts no information as to whether it means to impose upon the city a supplement relating to garbage, parks, boundaries, sanitation, gypsies and peddlers, public improvements, dog-licenses, taxation, recreation centers or finance; that an amendment of said act of March 6, 1905, is not mentioned in the title of said act of 1929; that said acts of 1905 and 1929 have different and inconsistent standards of determination of the class of cities to which they respectively pertain in this, viz. That said act of 1905 pertains to first class cities, in a series of cities, having a population of 100,000 or more, and as they then existed, whereas said act of 1929, pertains to cities having a population of not less than 300,000 in the year 1929; i. the act of 1929 be a supplement to the act of 1905 then it must be so written as to come within the date of the act of 1905. But in 1905 there was no Indiana city which had a population of not less than 300,000; therefore there was in 1905 no Indiana city to which the act of 1929 can apply as a supplement.

"Nor can the act of 1929 be made to function effectively as an act creating an additional department of the city of Indianapolis because of Article XIII of the Constitution of Indiana; that at the time said act was passed the assessed valuation of property in Indianapolis was $666,461,290 which furnished a bonding capacity of $13,329,225.80 as against which there were outstanding the several issues of bonds towit:

City, general	$ 7,217,050.00
Sanitary district	3,655,500.00
Park district	3,130,000.00
Total	$14,002,550.00

"That at the time said sanitary and said park district bonds were issued, it was supposed by some persons, that said Sanitary district and said Park district were, respectively, municipal units separate and distinct from the municipal city of Indianapolis, but any such false impression was removed by the decision of the Supreme Court in State Board v. State ex rel, (1926) 198 Ind. 343, 350;

that at this present time the bonded debt of Indianapolis is at its summit and there is no financial capacity on the part of Indianapolis without the aid and assistance of the court as herein set forth, to take over said Citizens Gas Company, if to do so will require said municipal city to incur any debt, and this fact had been well known to the defendants herein since July 26, 1926, the date of said Supreme Court decision; that said act of March 11, 1929, cannot be interpreted and construed to have created a special assessment district, for the reasons following towit: (1) The title of said act does not state that the creation of such assessment district is the subject, or the purpose or the object of the act; (2) That said act contains no definition of the boundaries of any assessment district, nor the purposes thereof nor any procedure in respect thereto; that there is no method prescribed for fixing the value of property to be taken by assessment, nor of the value of the property to be assessed, nor is there any notice of valuation, assessment or maturity nor for the definition and administration of any lien such as would arise upon an assessment.

"Plaintiffs say that said act of March 11, 1929, can have no effect other than to hinder, delay, obstruct and defeat the taking over of said Citizens Gas Company by said City of Indianapolis without the aid and assistance of this court in this suit and that for this fact, as well as others present upon the record, this Honorable Court should sequester said Citizens Gas Company and take over all its property with a receivership in which authority should be granted to said receiver, and he should be directed and required, to issue his receivers certificates whose payments should be secured with a proper pledge of said property, with which to pay all determined debts and thereupon deliver said Citizens Gas Company, clear and free from any obligation whatsoever, through the administrative agency of this court in this suit, to said City of Indianapolis as trustee of said Public Charitable Trust, and unless this can be done these plaintiffs as inhabitants and taxpayers of said city, and all other persons similarly situate, all of whom are cestuis que trustent of said Public Charitable Trust, will be denied all remedy whatsoever and their property will be confiscated and taken without due process of law and in denial of the equal protection of the law, all in contravention of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States; and this federal right these plaintiffs now expressly set up and claim and they ask this court to determine and adjudge and sustain said claim in this suit.

"That said act of March 11, 1929, and each and every act of the defendants, and any of them, thereunder, should be determined and adjudged to be unlawful and to constitute a cloud upon the title of said Public Charitable Trust which should be removed by the proper decree of this court in this suit.

(31).

"That said conspirators are now contriving to have numerous suits brought to defeat said Public Charitable Trust; that it is the agreed and accepted policy of the defendants city of Indianapolis and its various officers, agents, servants and representatives of said Citizens Gas Company functioning as ever under the control of said conspirators, that no affirmative claim shall be made in any of said suits, and that no demand shall be made as an affirmative right that said Public Charitable Trust shall be preserved and the property of said Citizens Gas Company be turned over and delivered to said City of Indianapolis as trustee of said Public Charitable Trust and for the use and benefit of said inhabitants and taxpayers, including these plaintiffs; that a multiplicity of suits to destroy said Public Charitable Trust is threatened and the solvency of said Public Charitable Trust as a corporation sole is in imminent danger; that a receiver should be appointed to take over said Public Charitable Trust and protect and execute the same and that such receivership should include the sequestration and administration of the property of both said Citizens Gas Company and said Indianapolis Gas Company, and all appropriate relief should be granted.

(32).

"Wherefore plaintiffs demand judgment that the said franchise contract of August 25, 1905, by and between the City of Indianapolis by and through its board of public works and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker, and Lorenz Schmidt, as approved by ordinance of the common council of the City of Indianapolis on August 30, 1905 be determined and adjudged to be, and to have been, acts sufficient to have created and that they did create a Public Charitable Trust for the uses and purposes therein set forth and that thereby the inhabitants and taxpayers of said City of Indianapolis including these plaintiffs be came and they are now the cestuis que trustent of said Public Charitable Trust; and that said trust being for the use and benefit of said cestuis que trustent their acceptance of its terms and provisions will be implied and that the same thereupon became and ever since have remained inviolate; that the formation of said Citizens Gas Company and the transfer to it of said franchise contract of August 25, 1905, as approved by ordinance of the common council of said city on August 30, 1905, be determined and adjudged to have been acts in aid and advancement of said Public Charitable Trust and for the use and benefit of said cestuis que trustent and that their acceptance of the terms thereof will be implied and that thereby a contract was made and constituted which became inviolate under the Constitutions, respectively of the State of Indiana and of the United States, and that these plaintiffs are competent to have title of said Public Charitable Trust in this suit forever quieted and set at rest in the City of Indianapolis as trustee for the inhabitants and taxpayers of said city as against the said pretenses and claims, to the contrary, of these defendants and each of them; that the said pretenses of the defendants and each of them be determined and adjudged to be unlawful and without right; that the said pretended act of the General Assembly of Indiana entitled 'An act concerning Public Utilities, creating a public service commission, abolishing the railroad commission of Indiana, and conferring the powers of the railroad commission on the public service commission.' Approved March 4, 1913, be determined and adjudged to be void and of no effect; that each and all the acts, orders and promulgations of said Public Service Commission purporting to affect, in any manner whatsoever, said Citizens Gas Company be determined and adjudged to be void; that said pretended agreement of lease of the property, franchise and effects of said Indianapolis Gas Company by said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, dated September 30, 1913, and the pretended approval thereof by said Public Service Commission, dated October 1, 1913, be determined and adjudged to be void and of no effect and that the moneys laid out and expended, and paid on account thereof, are in equity the property of said Public Charitable Trust and as such are properly recoverable from said Indianapolis Gas Company as moneys by it had and received; that said Indianapolis Gas Company be determined and adjudged to be insolvent and that its insolvency and its inability to repay the moneys had and received by it, towit, ten million dollars, from said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis renders said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis also, insolvent, or puts it in imminent danger of insolvency; that because of the insolvency of each of said corporations a receiver for them should be appointed in this suit; that if said receivership shall be docketed separately, as to each corporation, for better service of administration, the receivership of said Citizens Gas Company should be adjudged and defined as the major and dominant receivership and the receivership of said Indianapolis Gas Company should be adjudged and defined as the minor and subordinate receivership, the court reserving authority and right to transfer any claim and proceeding from one receivership to the other as justice may require, always, however, upon the condition that no action shall be taken in the receivership of said Indianapolis Gas Company which shall be controlling and not subject to review in the receivership of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, all to the end that there never shall be any conflict between said receivership interests which would obstruct the due administration of justice; that the complexity of rights and issues and the multiplicity of claims, rightfully to become the matter of judicial inquiry and determination, affecting each of said Gas Companies, are such that the assets of said companies are likely to become dissipated and wasted unless the court shall sequester said property with a receivership to be created in this suit, and to be subject to sequestration for administrative purposes as hereinbefore set forth; that in said receivership and receiverships, all conflicting claims and interests should be determined and adjudged and liquidation and payments should be made and enforced accordingly, to the end that complete justice may be done to all parties in interest, and that said Public Charitable Trust in behalf of the inhabitants and taxpayers of said City of Indianapolis may be preserved and enforced; that upon the completion of said liquidation the receiver of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, should, under the order of this court then to be made and entered, turn over and deliver all the property, rights, privileges, franchises and effects whatsoever of said Citizens Gas Company and of said receiverships, and each of them, to said City of Indianapolis as trustee of said charitable trust, and said City of Indianapolis should be ordered and required to accept said property and said Public Charitable Trust entailed thereon, and to carry into effect and perform said trust as equity and justice shall command; that the defendants John W. McCardle, Francis T. Singleton, Howell Ellis, Calvin F. McIntosh and Jere West, and each of them, and their successors in office as said Public Service Commission of Indiana, should be restrained and enjoined from accepting and acting upon any petition for any order, and from acting upon their own initiative and motion in the contemplation of any order, now or hereafter to be made, entered and issued in any manner whatsoever affecting the property, franchises, privileges, rights and interests of each, and of either, of said corporations, viz: said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and said Indianapolis Gas Company; that the defendants Sterling R. Holt, Thomas C. Howe, George J. Marott, A. Dallas Hitz, and William J. Mooney, and each of them, be restrained and enjoined from acting, and assuming to act, in any manner whatsoever, as the board of trustees of utilities pursuant of any authority and power purporting to be conferred by said pretended act of the General Assembly of Indiana entitled 'An act supplemental to an act entitled "An act concerning municipal corporations", approved March 6, 1905,' approved March 11, 1929; that said defendants Edward H. Kahn, Henry L. Dithmer, Eli Lilly, Brodehurst Elsey, John J. Madden, Almus G. Ruddell and Guy A. Wainwright, and each of them, be restrained and enjoined from acting, and assuming to act in any manner whatsoever, as the board of directors for utilities pursuant of any authority and power purporting to be conferred by said pretended act of the General Assembly of Indiana entitled 'An act supplemental to an act entitled "An act concerning municipal corporations," approved March 6, 1905,' approved March 11, 1929; that the defendants City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation, Reginald H. Sullivan, as mayor of said City of Indianapolis; Henry O. Goett, as city clerk of said city of Indianapolis; E. Kirk McKinney, Louis C. Brandt and Charles O. Britton, as the Board of Public Works of said City of Indianapolis, and each and every of its officers, agents, servants and representatives be restrained and enjoined from any and every act and omission intended to give aid and comfort to any and every person whomsoever seeking to hinder, delay, obstruct, retard and defeat said Public Charitable Trust and the full, true and complete performance thereof and the taking over of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by said City of Indianapolis as trustee of said Public Charitable Trust pursuant of the terms of said Public Charitable Trust as created and defined in said franchise contract of August 25, 1905, made and entered into by said City of Indianapolis, through its Board of Public Works, as one party, and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, as the other party, and approved by the common council of said City of Indianapolis by ordinance enacted August 30, 1905, and as otherwise ratified, approved and confirmed; that said defendants Indianapolis Gas Company, Clarence L. Kirk, Frederick G. Rastenburg, Paul E. Crozier and each of them, their servants, agents, representatives and attorneys, and each of them, be restrained and enjoined from any and every act and omission, and from conspiring, confederating and agreeing together and with any other person whomsoever with the intent, by any act or omission, to hinder, delay, obstruct, retard and defeat said Public Charitable Trust and the full, true and complete performance thereof and the taking over of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis by said City of Indianapolis, as trustee, of said Public Charitable Trust pursuant of the terms of said Public Charitable Trust as created and defined in said franchise contract of August 25, 1905, made and entered into by said City of Indianapolis, through its board of public works, as one party, and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, as the other party, and approved by the common council of said City of Indianapolis by ordinance enacted August 30, 1905, and as otherwise ratified, approved, and confirmed; that said defendants Henry Kahn, Otto R. Lieber, Gustav A. Schnull, Thomas L. Sullivan, Frank C. Dailey, James I. Dissette, Gustav A. Efroymson, Edgar H. Evans, James H. Hooker, Henry H. Hornbrook, William H. Insley, Franklin Vonnegut, and John R. Welch and each of them be continued in office as the Board of Directors of said Citizens Gas Company until their several terms of service would otherwise expire; that they and each of them their agents, servants, representatives and attorneys and each of them be restrained and enjoined from any and every act and omission, and from conspiring, confederating and agreeing together, and with any other person whomsoever, with the intent, by any act or omission, to hinder, delay, obstruct, retard and defeat said Public Charitable Trust and the full, true and complete performance thereof and the taking over by said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, as trustee, of said Public Charitable Trust as created and defined in said franchise contract of August 25, 1905, made and entered into by said City of Indianapolis, through its board of public works, as one party, and Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, as the other party, and approved by common council of said City of Indianapolis by ordinance enacted August 30, 1905, and as otherwise ratified, approved and confirmed, and that said named defendants be ordered and required to aid and assist the receiver appointed by this court herein to carry forth and into final, true and complete performance each and every duty of his said trust herein as an officer of this court, in the revelation and disclosure of all the rights and equities of any and every person whomsoever and in bringing the same to the attention and information of the court by proper procedure, all to the end that complete justice may be done herein as a condition precedent to the turning over of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, its franchises, licenses, properties and effects of whatsoever kind and wheresoever situate, to said City of Indianapolis, as trustee; that said defendants Ferdinant Winter and Trust Company of America, as trustees, named in a certain pretended mortgage executed on to-wit October 1, 1902, by said Indianapolis Gas Company to secure the payment of an authorized issue of $7,500,000.00 bonds, payable in gold with interest at 5 per centum per annum and due fifty years after date, be ordered and required to bring said mortgage into court and to make full and complete disclosure concerning the same including the amount of said bonds issued, their legality and their value, and if need be to defend the same at the petition of the receiver herein to have said bonds and mortgage adjudged inferior and subsequent in equity and right to the claim of said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis for moneys by it laid out and expended, out of the proceeds and property of said Public Charitable Trust, to replace and preserve the physical property embraced in said pretended mortgage and to maintain and enhance its value for the use and benefit of said pretended mortgagees and their cestuis que trustent, and for all which said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has received no lawful consideration whatsoever, and to require said trustees to defend said mortgage against this suit to have said mortgage lien adjudged to be an unlawful cloud upon the title to said property and to have said cloud removed by the judgment of this court herein; that a receiver be appointed herein, upon ten days' notice to be hereafter given, who shall be neither a party, nor attorney, nor other person in this suit, and who before entering upon his duties shall be sworn to perform them faithfully, and with sureties approved by the court, unless otherwise qualified, execute a written undertaking, payable to such person as the court, or the judge thereof in vacation, shall direct, to the effect that he will faithfully discharge the duties of receiver in this suit and obey the orders of the court or judge thereof and who shall have power under control of the court, or of the judge, thereof, in vacation, to bring and defend actions, to take and keep possession of the property, to receive rents, collect debts, in his own name as receiver, and generally to do such acts respecting the property as the court or judge thereof may authorize; that the injunction as severally herein prayed for, shall be issued upon hearing respectively after five days' notice to the party and parties concerned; that said injunction shall be issued in the first instance as a temporary injunction and shall continue as such until the trial of the cause when they each shall be continued and made perpetual injunctions.

"And plaintiffs pray for all proper relief."

D., 1930 and the docket of the Supreme Court of the United States; that these causes had their origin in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana, Indianapolis Division, and while said causes were there pending an order was entered in said causes restraining this plaintiff from further prosecuting this cause in this court during the pendency of said suits in the courts of the United States; that the said ruling of said Supreme Court in denying said petition for writs of certiorari absolves this plaintiff and this court from any and every restraint whatsoever in the further prosecution of this suit in this court.

1159 PLAINTIFFS STIPULATION EXHIBIT 37.

State of Indiana, } ss.
County of Marion. }

IN THE MARION SUPERIOR COURT.

Allen G. Williams, et al.,
vs.
Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, et al. } No. A-53965.

SEPARATE AND SEVERAL MOTION OF CERTAIN DEFENDANTS, CITIZENS GAS COMPANY OF INDIANAPOLIS, ET AL., TO STRIKE OUT PARTS AND PORTIONS OF PLAINTIFFS' COMPLAINT.

Come now Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a corporation; Henry Kahn, Otto R. Lieber, Gustav A. Schnull, Thomas L. Sullivan, Frank C. Dailey, James I. Dissette, Gustav A. Efroymson, Edgar H. Evans, James H. Hooker, Henry H. Hornbrook, William H. Insley, Clarence L. Kirk, Franklin Vonnegut, John R. Welch, Frederick G. Rastenburg, Paul E. Grosier, City of Indianapolis in the State of Indiana, a Municipal Corporation; Reginald H. Sullivan, as Mayor of said City of Indianapolis; Henry O. Goett, as City Clerk of said City of Indianapolis, E. Kirk McKinney, Louis C. Brandt, Charles O. Britten, as the Board of Public Works of said City of Indianapolis, Sterling R. Holt, Thomas C. Howe, George J. Marott, A. Dallas Hitz, William J. Mooney, as the Board of Trustees for Utilities of said City of Indianapolis, Edward H. Kahn, Henry L. Dithmer, Eli Lilly, Brodehurst Elsey, Almus G. Ruddell and Guy A. Wainright, as the Board of Directors for Utilities of said City of Indianapolis, defendants in the above entitled cause, and separately and severally move the court to strike out the following parts and portions of plaintiffs' complaint:

1. Subdivision 28 of plaintiffs' complaint which is as follows:

1160 (Here subdivision 28 of the complaint in the above entitled action was copied in full. A correct copy of said complaint is identified in Stipulation No. 1 in each of these causes as Exhibit 35 thereto.)

For each of the following reasons:

First. The above subdivision of plaintiffs' complaint attacks as without jurisdiction and void a final decree entered by the United States District Court for the District of Indiana and not reversed, modified, or set aside, but finally affirmed, in a case brought by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis against the Public Service Commission of Indiana in which suit an order of the Public Service Commission was held to be violative of rights guaranteed to the Citizens Gas Company under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution in that said order was confiscatory. It appears that the District Court of the United States had jurisdiction of both the subject matter and the parties to that action and plaintiff can not in a collateral proceeding attack the decree there entered.

Second. The proceeding before the Public Service Commission to procure compensatory rates for gas furnished by the Citizens Gas Company to its consumers was a proper one. So far as the rates are concerned the city could not by contract fix a rate which would deprive the General Assembly of authority to authorize the collection of higher rates through the medium of the Public Service Commission, acting under legislative authority, failed to prescribe just and reasonable rates the company was entitled to maintain a confiscation case in the Federal Court and the ruling of that court could be attacked only by an appeal.

1161 Third. The plaintiff is attempting to re-litigate in the State Court issues decided in a case in the Federal Court which had jurisdiction of the parties and the subject matter and this the plaintiff has no right to do.

Fourth. The United States District Court for the District of Indiana has power, notwithstanding the provisions of U. S. R. S. Section 720, to restrain the prosecution of an action in the State Court which would interfere with a valid decree entered in the Federal Court in a case in which that court had jurisdiction of the subject matter and the parties. This court should therefore, in order to avoid any conflict in jurisdiction, strike from this emoplaint any averments which seek to reopen judicial questions finally disposed of by a final and valid decree of the Federal Court.

2. To strike out from plaintiffs' complaint the following portion thereof being a part of paragraph 20 and reading as follows:

"That thereupon it was designed by said confederates that a public service commission should be created in and by the State of Indiana with plenary powers to circumvent the constitutional restrictions of the state and by those means destroy said public charitable trust and substitute in its place and stead a plan and method whereby said Citizens Gas Company should be required to bear the burder of replacing said Indianapolis Gas Company as a going concern, invested with modern and efficient methods, all to the end that upon the termination of an alliance between said Citizens Gas Company and said Indianapolis Gas Company, the latter company would be in exclusive control of the territory of Indianapolis for all purposes of gas production and sale, and all without cost and expense to said conspirators, but wholly at the cost and expense of the inhabitants and taxpayers of said City of Indianapolis."

For the following reason:

1162 There can not be in law any such thing as a conspiracy to bring about the enactment of a valid public statute. The averment that certain persons confederated to cause the creation of the Public Service Commission Act to circumvent constitutional restrictions is without any effect and attempts to present an issue to this court which it has no right or authority to determine.

3. Subdivisions 22, 23, and 29 of plaintiffs' complaint, which are as follows:

(Here subdivisions 22, 23 and 29 of the complaint in the above entitled action were copied in full. A correct copy of said complaint is identified in Stipulation No. 1 in each of these causes as Exhibit 35 thereto.)

For each of the following reasons:

First. These subdivisions of the plaintiffs' complaint challenge a lease executed by Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company and approved by the Public Service Commission of Indiana. The Public Service Commission of Indiana has express authority to approve leases between two operating public utilities, and it appearing from the averments of the complaint that such lease did have the approval of the Public Service Commission, the action of that Commission can not be collaterally attacked.

Second. There is no averment in the complaint which shows any ground on which the plaintiff can successfully attack collaterally the order of the Public Service Commission approving said lease. There is no showing in the complaint that the Commission was without jurisdiction to approve the lease between the Indianapolis Gas Company and the Citizens Gas Company or that it exceeded its jurisdiction or that the approval of the lease was procured by any fraud.

1163 Third. It appearing that the lease so approved by the Public Service Commission has been in full force and effect for nearly 17 years and that many millions of dollars have been expended in reliance upon its validity, all persons including plaintiffs (if they have any standing under any circumstances) are estopped to question the validity of the same.

4. To strike out those portions of the plaintiffs' complaint constituting subdivisions 18 and 19, which are as follows:

(Here subdivisions 18 and 19 of the complaint in the above entitled action were copied in full. A correct copy of said complaint is identified in Stipulation No. 1 in each of these causes as Exhibit 35 thereto.)

And that part of subdivision 20 reading as follows:

• • • • • •

"Here is quoted the first three grammatical paragraphs of subdivision (20) of the complaint in the Williams case, which complaint is set forth as Plaintiff's Stipulation Exhibit ~~33~~ 35)".

(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

1164 For each of the following reasons:

First. Such portions of said complaint relate to the organization of the Indianapolis Gas Company, the history of its operations, the character and extent of its property at and prior to the making of the lease to the Citizens Gas Company referred to in the complaint and to the alleged conspiracy between certain individuals to bring about the protection and betterment of the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company through the lease thereof to the Citizens Gas Company. None of these allegations have any relevancy except as they relate to the lease of said property to the Citizens Gas Company. Inasmuch as said lease was duly approved by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, pursuant to the power given it by law the plaintiff is in no position to attack the same, for the reasons heretofore given.

1165 Second. The lease of the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company having been validly made, the actions of any individuals leading up to such lease are wholly immaterial.

Third. The validity of the public charitable trust set up in the complaint is in no wise affected by the validity of such lease. If the lease is valid the leasehold interest created thereby constitutes a part of the public charitable trust and is subject to be administered in the same way as property owned by the Citizens Gas Company in its own right. If for any reason the lease is invalid, it would fall without the scope of the trust.

5. To strike out that part and portion of plaintiffs' complaint in Subdivision 24 thereof reading as follows:

(Here subdivision 24 of the complaint in the above entitled action was copied in full, with the exception of that portion of subdivision 24 set forth in subdivision C of the within motion, being the last complete paragraph of said subdivision 24. A correct copy of said complaint is identified in Stipulation No. 1 in each of these causes as Exhibit 35 thereto.)

For each of the following reasons:

First. Said portion of the plaintiffs' complaint refers to certain expenditures made by the Citizens Gas Company for the alleged use and benefit of the Indianapolis Gas Company, but shows that all of said expenditures were made pursuant to the lease between the two companies approved by the Public Service Commission of Indiana.

Second. In the absence of any possible valid objection to the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission of Indiana in approving the execution of said lease, the plaintiff is not entitled to present to this court for 1166 its consideration any question as to the expenditures made under such lease so approved by the Public Service Commission.

6. To strike out all that part and portion of subdivision 24 of the plaintiffs' complaint reading as follows:

* * * * * *

"(Here is quoted the last grammatical paragraph of subdivision (24) of the complaint in the Williams case, which complaint is set forth as Plaintiffs' Stipulation Exhibit 35)".

(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

For each of the following reasons:

First. The Act of March 4, 1913, with the amendments thereto, creating the Public Service Commission of Indiana is a valid law and is not contrary to any provision either of the Constitution of the State of Indiana or of the Federal Constitution.

Second. The validity of Public Service Commission Acts in their general provisions has been so long established by repeated adjudications of both the State and Federal Courts that the attack upon the Indiana Act should not be considered by the court as an issuable question in this cause.

1167 Third. The business of public utilities is touched with a public interest and is subject to state regulation which may be exerted directly by legislative authority or by administrative bodies duly constituted with power to that end and the Indiana statute creating the Public Service Commission is valid.

7. Subdivisions 26 and 27 of plaintiffs' complaint which are as follows:

(Here subdivisions 26 and 27 of the complaint in the above entitled action were copied in full. A correct copy of said complaint is identified in Stipulation No. 1 in each of these causes as Exhibit 35 thereto.)
For each of the following reasons:

First. Said subdivisions of plaintiffs' complaint challenge the validity of the surrender by the Citizens Gas Company of its franchise, of the law under which such surrender was permitted and generally the validity of the Public Service Commission statute.

Whatever the effect of the surrender of the franchise, the right of the Citizens Gas Company to surrender its franchise and take out an indeterminate permit has been conclusively established by the Supreme Court of Indiana. The Statute authorizing such surrender amounted to nothing more than an offer to the Citizens Gas Company to surrender its franchise and take out a permit and the statute was a perfectly valid one.

Second. For the reasons assigned in the last preceding subdivision the law creating the Public Service Commission of Indiana is valid and is not open to attack.

8. That part of Subdivision 25 of plaintiffs' complaint reading as follows:

1[illegible] • • • • • •

"(Here is quoted the last grammatical paragraph of subdivision (25) of the complaint in the Williams case (Plaintiffs' Stipulation Exhibit 35))".
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

Also, that part of Subdivision —— (on pages 101 and 102 of plaintiffs' complaint) reading as follows:

• • • • • •

"(Here is quoted all of subdivision (31) of the bill of complaint in the Williams case (Plaintiffs' Stipulation Exhibit 35))".
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

1169 For each of the following reasons:

First. There is no showing in the complaint that the certificate holders of the Citizens Gas Company have been paid in full the amounts due them under their certificates and the ordinance set out in the complaint shows that such certificates must be paid in full before the property can be conveyed to the City of Indianapolis.

Second. There is no averment in these portions of the plaintiffs' complaint or elsewhere that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the City of Indianapolis have not resisted and are not resisting vigorously the asserted right of the benefit certificate holders to take over this property. No such averment could truthfully be made and this explains its absence.

Third. The plaintiffs show no ground on which they can invoke the jurisdiction of this court with respect to a public charitable trust and no right to have a Receiver appointed to administer the property of the Gas Company.

Fourth. The Attorney General of the State of Indiana is the sole and exclusive officer who has the right to call upon a court of equity to administer a public charitable trust in the event of misapplication of the trust res by the trustee. There is no showing of inaction on the part of the Attorney General, and he is not made a party to this suit.

Fifth. It has been finally adjudicated by Courts of competent jurisdiction, that a public charitable trust exists in the property of the Gas Company: Todd v. Citizens Gas Company; Cotter v. Citizens Gas Company, 46 Fed. (2nd) 855.

9. To strike out all that part of subdivision 25 of plaintiffs' complaint reading as follows:

1170 • • • • • •

"(Here is quoted the first grammatical paragraph of subdivision (25) of the complaint in the Williams case (Plaintiffs' Stipulation Exhibit 35))".
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

For the following reasons:

This portion of the plaintiffs' complaint seeks to attack the validity of an issue of bonds by the Indianapolis Gas Company and shows upon its face that the plaintiff 1171 has no knowledge as to their legality, but having no knowledge, denies such legality. These defendants can not be called upon to litigate the legality of said bond issue upon such insufficient averments.

10. To strike out that portion of Subdivision 30 of the complaint reading as follows:

• • • • • •

"(Here is quoted the next to the last paragraph of subdivision (30) of the complaint in the Williams case (Plaintiffs' Stipulation Exhibit 35))".
(Inserted pursuant to stipulation filed November 22, 1939.)

For the following reason:

This averment asks this court to sequester the property of the Citizens Gas Company and issue Receiver's Certificates with which to pay all determined debts of the Citizens Gas Company and thereupon to turn the property of the Gas Company over free and clear of any obligation whatever to the City of Indianapolis.

1172 The plaintiffs have no right to invoke the jurisdiction of this court in seeking to sequester the property of the Citizens Gas Company.

Respectfully submitted,

Demurrer of City of Indianapolis et al., in Williams Case.

This demurrer and the supporting memorandum is copied on pages 232-235, inclusive, of the Appellants' Brief in the Supreme Court of Indiana in the case of Williams vs. Citizens Gas Company, et al., Plaintiffs' Exhibit 3 for Identification, which original exhibit is included in this transcript by order of the Court.

Come now defendants, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, a corporation; Henry Kahn, Otto R. Lieber, Gustav A. Schnull, Thomas L. Sullivan, Frank C. Dailey, James I. Dissette, Gustav A. Efroymson, Edward H. Evans, James H. Hooker, Henry H. Hornbrook, Williama H. Insley, Clarence L. Kirk, Franklin Vonnegut, John R. Welch, Frederick G. Rastenburg, Paul T. Crosier; City of Indianapolis in the State of Indiana, a Municipal Corporation; Reginald H. Sullivan, as Mayor of said City of Indianapolis; Henry O. Goett, as City Clerk of said City of Indianapolis; E. Kirk McKinney, Louis C. Brandt, Charles O. Britton, as the Board of Public Works of said City of Indianapolis; Sterling R. Holt, Thomas C. Howe, George J Marott, A. Dallas Hitz, William J. Mooney, as the Board of Trustees for Utilities of said City of Indianapolis; Edward H. Kahn, Henry L. Dithmer, Eli Lilly, Brodehurst Elsey, Almus G. Ruddell and Guy A. Wainwright, as the Board of Directors for Utilities of said City of Indianapolis and separately and severally demur to plaintiff's complaint herein, and for ground of demurrer say that said complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action; and said defendants file herewith a memorandum, stating wherein said complaint is insufficient for want of facts, and make said memorandum a part thereof.

Tr. p. 313.

The memorandum filed with the demurrer of said Citizens Gas Company et al.s., was in substance, towit:

"The complaint herein is insufficient in each of the following particulars, towit:

"1. The plaintiff who sues only as a citizen and taxpayer has no right, either alone or as a representative of other private citizens, to maintain an action seeking to enforce a Public Charitable Trust in the property of the defendant, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, or to attempt to prevent claimed diversions therefrom, or to procure the appointment of a receiver therefor.

"2. It having been judicially established that the property of the Citizens Gas Company is a valid Public Charitable Trust, neither the plaintiff nor any other private citizen or taxpayer has any authority in law to maintain an action to sequester the property of said trust, to procure the appointment of a receiver therefor, or to prevent alleged diversions of said trust property. Such a suit can only be maintained by the proper public officer authorized to represent the interests of the public in said Public Charitable Trust.

"3. No interest is shown to exist in the plaintiff, or in the class on whose behalf he attempts to sue, sufficient to justify the maintenance of this action by plaintiff.

"4. Where as here, there is a valid subsisting Public Charitable Trust being administered by the duly constituted Trustee, no suit can be maintained for the purpose of sequestering the trust property, appointing a receiver thereof, attempting to prevent alleged diversions from said trust, attempting to require the restoration of funds and property claimed improperly to have been diverted from said trust or generally to enforce said trust except by a public officer duly authorized to represent the public interest in such trust. The Prosecuting Attorney of the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit or the Attorney General of Indiana are the only public officers having the right to represent the public in this connection and the plaintiff therefore has no right to maintain this action merely as a private individual and taxpayer either on behalf of himself or others of the same class.

"5. No facts are alleged showing any ground whatever for the appointment of a receiver for the property of the defendant, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, which constitutes a valid Public Charitable Trust.

"6. No facts are alleged showing or tending to show that a cloud exists on the interest of the Public Charitable Trust in the plant and property of defendant, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

"7. It appears that the existence of a Public Charitable Trust in the plant and property of defendant, Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, has been finally and conclusively established by a court of competent jurisdiction in a suit to which said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the City of Indianapolis were parties, and neither the plaintiff nor any other person has any right to relitigate the question of the existence or the validity of such Public Charitable Trust."

Allen G. Williams vs. Citizens Gas Company.

Demurrer and Supporting Memorandum of The Indianapolis Gas Company and the Mortgage Trrustee.

"The defendants, Indianapolis Gas Company, a corporation, and Ferdinand Winter and Trust Company of America, as trustees under a mortgage executed by said Indianapolis Gas Company, separately and severally demur to plaintiff's complaint herein and for ground of demurrer say that said complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action; and said defendants file herewith a memorandum stating wherein said complaint is insufficient for want of facts, and make said memorandum a part hereof.

"The complaint herein is insufficient in each of the following particulars, to wit:

"1. The plaintiff who sues only as a citizen and tax payer has no right, either alone or as a representative of other private citizens to maintain an action seeking to enforce an alleged charitable trust in the property of the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, or to attempt to prevent claimed diversions therefrom or to procure the appointment of a receiver for any corporation on account thereof.

"2. In so far as this is a suit by one of the general public to declare and enforce a Public Charitable Trust, or to sequester the property of such trust, to procure the appointment of a Receiver therefor, or to prevent alleged diversions of such trust property, it cannot be maintained, except only by the proper public officer authorized to represent the interests of the public in said Public Charitable Trust.

"3. No necessity is shown to exist in the plaintiff or in the class on whose behalf he attempts to sue, sufficient to justify the maintenance of this action by the plaintiff.

"4. Upon the allegations that there is a valid subsisting Public Charitable Trust being administered by the duly constituted trustee pending its transfer to the City of Indianapolis as a subsequent trustee, no suit can be maintained for the purpose of sequestering the trust property, or appointing a receiver for such purpose, or attempting to prevent alleged diversions from said trust, or attempting to require the restoration of funds and property claimed to have been improperly diverted from said trust or generally to enforce said trust except by a public officer duly authorized to represent the public interest in such trust, and the prosecuting attorney of the 19th Judicial Circuit or the Attorney General of Indiana are the only public officers having the right to represent the public in such an action and the plaintiff, 1175 therefore, has no right to maintain this action merely as a private individual and taxpayer either on behalf of himself or of others of the same class.

"5. No facts are alleged showing any ground whatever for the appointment of a receiver for the property of the defendant Indianapolis Gas Company, whether as constituting a portion of the assets of a Public Charitable Trust or otherwise.

"6. It appearing from the facts alleged in the complaint that the lease by the Indianapolis Gas Company of its property to the Citizens Gas Company was duly approved by the Public Service Commission and that the Citizens Gas Company has held the leased property thereunder for more than fifteen years and is still holding and enjoying the use of the same, such lease is not open to collateral attack at the suit of a private citizen and taxpayer who has no interest in either company except as an alleged beneficiary under the Public Charitable Trust which attaches to the property of the lessee.

"7. Neither the lessee under the Indianapolis Gas Company lease nor any person claiming by, through or under it as the beneficiary of a trust therein, or otherwise, can attack the validity of such lease while continuing to hold and operate the lessor's property thereunder.

"8. The lapse of fifteen years since the execution of the lease by the Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company is a bar to any action by a person claiming through or under the lease to set aside such lease or quiet title as against the claims of the lessor thereunder."

Comes now the defendants, John W. McCardle, Francis T. Singleton, Howell Ellis, Calvin McIntosh, Jere West, as members of the Public Service Commission of Indiana and by way of demurrer to the complaint of the plaintiffs herein allege and say:

1177 MEMORANDUM.

I.

After alleging on page 3, paragraph 5 that the defendants, John W. McCardle, Francis T. Singleton, Howell Ellis, Calvin McIntosh and Jere West, are made defendants herein in their capacity as members of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, the next allegation of said complaint touching upon these defendants just hereinbefore named is found on page 25 of said complaint, in the next to the last paragraph of subdivision 20, wherein it is alleged in substance that certain defendants herein not including any of the defendant members of said commission designed to have created a Public Service Commission in the State of Indiana. And in the last paragraph of said subdivision 20, page 25 of said complaint, it is alleged in substance that said confederates began to act and did accomplish the creation of said commission.

A.

There can be in law nothing which will constitute a conspiracy to bring about the enactment of a valid public statute. Any and all of the averments of the complaint alleging that certain persons, not members of the Public Service Commission, confederated to cause the creation of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, are without any weight in law and attempt to present an issue to this court which it has no right or jurisdiction to determine. There are no allegations or averments in said complaint that these defendants as members of the Public Service Commission of Indiana or their predecessors in office conspired to bring about the enactment creating the Public Service Commission.

1178

B.

There is no allegation in said complaint that these defendants as present members of the Public Service Commission of Indiana or any of their predecessors in office since the creation of the commission in 1913, were participants in any conspiracy with a view of creating said commission.

II.

Page 25 of said complaint, subdivision 22 alleges in substance that a petition was filed with said commission in May of 1913, praying for the approval of said commission to a certain lease executed by and between the Indianapolis Gas Company as Lessor and to said Citizens Gas Company as Lessee, and sets out in full a copy of said petition.

Subdivision 23, page 26 of said complaint in substance avers the approval of said commission with certain limitations of said petition and sets out in detail the provisions and terms of the lease as approved by said commission.

A.

The said order of the commission cannot be attached in a collateral proceeding, such as this action purports to do, except for fraud.

B.

That if the said order of the commission approving the lease was subject to a review by the courts, such review could only be had under the provisions of section 79 of the Shively-Spencer Act, (Burns' 1926, Section 12750).

C.

There can be no review of a discretionary act of the Public Service Commission in a collateral attack except upon the grounds of fraud and there are no allegations that said commission acting fraudulently in the approval of said Lease or that any review was heard of said order of the commission under the provisions of said section 79, supra.

III.

Page 44 of said complaint, subdivision 6, it is alleged that in furtherance of said conspiracy, the Citizens Gas Company in August, 1921, filed its declaration of surrender of its franchise with the City of Indianapolis seeking to obtain an indeterminate permit under the provisions of the Shively-Spencer Act and on page 45, subdivision 27 of said complaint, it is averred that on December 12, 1921, said Public Service Commission entered its order approving the surrender of the franchise and the granting of an indeterminate permit. Such action of the commission is alleged to be unlawful and void as indicated in paragraphs' 1, 2, 9, 4 and 5 on pages 46, 47 and 48. Said complaint alleges that said order is unconstitutional in that it contravenes the provisions of article 1, section 24 of the Indiana Constitution by impairing the right of contract; that the act creating the Public Service Commission, known as the Shively-Spencer Act is unconstitutional and void, insofar as it attempts to confer authority upon the commission to grant an indeterminate permit and accept the surrender of a franchise; that the commission as a body could not enact legislation in that its members did not reside in the City of Indianapolis and are not chosen under the provisions of law 1180 designating the manner of choosing members of the Indiana legislature.

A.

The Legislature acted within its constitutional limitations in delegating that part of its police power to the Public Service Commission of Indiana in giving to said commission the right to approve the surrender of franchises theretofore existing and grant in lieu thereof an indeterminate permit.

B.

That said act of the Public Service Commission in granting the indeterminate permit alleged in the complaint acted within its jurisdiction.

C.

It is not alleged in said complaint that said commission in approving the said surrender of the franchise and the issuance of an indeterminate permit in lieu thereof acted fraudulently.

D.

That the allegations of said complaint testing the legality of said order of the commission constituting a collateral attack upon the order of the Public Service Commission and can not prevail unless it is alleged that said order was fraudulently entered by said commission.

E.

Said order of the commission does not impair the provisions of article 1, section 24 of the Indiana Constitution and does not abridge the right of contract; 1181 that the Public Service Commission of Indiana has authority to accept the surrender of franchises and issue indeterminate permits in lieu thereof; that said Public Service Commission's members need not be chosen as legislators in Indiana are chosen but may be appointed as provided by law without contravening any provision of the state or federal constitution.

IV.

Page 48, subdivision 28 of said petition alleges that the Public Service Commission in 1922 denied the petition of the Citizens Gas Company to establish a rate of $1.25 per unit of 1,000 cubic feet, and that said commission was restrained by the United States District Court for the District of Indiana, from preventing the said Citizens Gas Company from collecting said rate of $1.25 per thousand cubic feet on the ground that said order of the commission was confiscatory and in contravention of the 14th amendment of the constitution. Said order of the commission being passed upon and restrained by our Federal Court, estops these plaintiffs from presenting in the state court in this action any question involving the legality of said order, it having been fully adjudicated in the federal court.

A.

State courts cannot review the same subject matter previously submitted to and decided by a federal tribunal.

B.

That any and all allegations in said complaint
1182 attacking this order of the Public Service Commission constitute a collateral attack upon said order and do not allege that said order was fraudulently entered by said commission and therefore does not constitute a valid attack upon said order of the commission.

V.

That any and all of the averments of said complaint directed to these defendants, as members of the Public Service Commission either attack the constitutionality of the creation of the commission by and through the Shively-Spencer Act or the orders of the commission, after its creation.

Said Shively-Spencer Act creating the Public Service Commission is constitutional and delegates to said commission such exercise of the police power as is not therein delegated to municipalities; that the commission had jurisdiction to enter and promulgate any and all orders in said complaint attacked by the plaintiffs herein; that all of said orders in said complaint attacked are valid and lawful orders of said Public Service Commission; that said complaint herein is a collateral attack upon said orders of the commission and no allegations are contained in said complaint alleging that any of said orders complained of were fraudulently entered by said commission and therefore do not constitute in law a valid attack upon said orders of the commission in said complaint complained of.

That if said complaint in fact is not a collateral attack upon the orders of the commission said orders of the commission duly entered may only be reviewed under the provisions of section 78 of the Shively-Spencer Act as originally enacted or under the provisions of section 78 of the Shively-Spencer Act as amended in chapter 258, Acts of 1927, page 747, or under the provisions 1183 of an act of the 1929 legislature, pages 530 to 534, inclusive.

Said complaint does not show on its face or does not contain allegations of fact bringing said complaint within any of the provisions of the foregoing sections and that said complaint is not filed within the time designated in said provisions of the law for a review of an order of the commission and the plaintiffs herein are thereby estopped from reviewing the orders of the commission complained of in their petition.

"They shall be issued in denominations of One Thousaid Dollars ($1,000) each.

The City Controller shall keep in file copies of all such statements which holders of such bonds shall have the right at any reasonable time to inspect.

"So long as any of said bonds are outstanding and unpaid, the City shall maintain insurance on the insurable parts of said gas system of a kind and in an amount as would normally be carried by privately owned companies engaged in a similar and comparable business; which insurance shall be placed and maintained in responsible companies qualified to do business under the laws of the State of Indiana; and the proceeds of such insurance shall be used in replacing, repairing, or rehabilitating the property destroyed or damaged or in extensions, additions and/or betterments; and if not so used, shall be used in the purchase and retirement of outstanding bonds.

"So long as any of said bonds are outstanding and unpaid the City shall not sell, mortgage or dispose of said gas system or any substantial and useful part thereof; provided, however, that the City shall have the right to mortgage said gas system or any substantial and useful part thereof for the purpose of refunding said bonds and the City shall have the right to sell or dispose of said gas system or any substantial and useful part thereof if the proceeds of such sale or disposition 1201 are sufficient for and are used for the payment in full of the principal and interest of the then outstanding and unpaid bonds and the City shall have the right to sell or dispose of any part of said system if the proceeds thereof are used for betterments, extensions or additions to said gas system in such manner as that the efficiency of said gas system is not thereby impaired.

"The right to lease such utility property and gas system, on terms and in manner consistent with law and which do not adversely affect the rights and interests of the holders of such bonds, is expressly reserved to the City; and the City agrees to give notice by one publication in one newspaper, printed in the English language, of general circulation in the City of Indianapolis, Indiana; in the City of Chicago, Illinois; and in the City of New York, New York, at least four (4) weeks prior to the execution of any lease, of its intention to execute any such lease.

"So long as any of said bonds are outstanding and unpaid, the City shall not issue additional bonds or other obligations payable out of the revenues of said gas system except for refunding said outstanding bonds, or for the acquisition of revenue producing property, betterments, extensions, and/or additions.

"So long as said gas system is not liable for taxes for City purposes, there shall be paid to the Treasurer of Marion County for the benefit of the City of Indianapolis, out of revenues derived from the operation of said system, to be distributed as taxes are distributed, a sum equal to the taxes which would be assessed for City purposes upon said gas system were said gas system privately owned; such payments to be made at such times during each calendar year as this Board may 1202 in its discretion determine but not to the prejudice of the payments hereinbefore provided.

"The City shall pay at prevailing rates for any gas obtained by it from the operation of said gas system.

"The provisions of this resolution shall constitute a contract by and between the City of Indianapolis, Indiana, and the holders of the bonds herein authorized; and after the issuance and delivery of such bonds this resolution shall not be revoked or amended in any respect which will adversely affect the rights and interests of the holders of said bonds." July 23, 1935.

Indianapolis Gas Company,
Indianapolis.

Gentlemen:

The Department of Utilities of the City of Indianapolis will, early in September, take over the property which has been operated by Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

On September 30, 1913, Citizens Gas Company and Indianapolis Gas Company entered into a lease which was approved by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, by which Indianapolis Gas Company leased its gas system to Citizens Gas Company for a term of ninety-nine years.

Under the authority of an Act of the Indiana General Assembly approved March 11, 1929, the City, in acquiring the property of Citizens Gas Company, does not become liable for the obligations of that Company.

Various provisions of this lease appear to be inappropriate and burdensome to the City when it assumes operation of the gas system. The City, through its Department of Utilities, is willing to enter into negotiations with you looking toward a revision of this lease to meet the new conditions that will result from municipal operation, if you so desire.

Very truly yours,
Thompson Rabb & Stevenson.

Gentlemen,—

With further reference to the recent conversation which representatives of the City had with you as officers or directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company:

The specific question which the City desires answered before September 9, 1935, by The Indianapolis Gas Company, is this:

Will The Indianapolis Gas Company, permit the City of Indianapolis to use its property at present under lease to Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, for a period of six months next following the take-over of the property of Citizens Gas Company by the City of Indianapolis (at present scheduled for September 9, 1935), in order to prevent interruption of service to gas consumers; the City to make, during such period, the payments to and on behalf of The Indianapolis Gas Company contemplated by said lease; but the City not to presently assume said lease, or accept an assignment of it, nor to be considered as so doing by such user; and the City and The Indianapolis Gas Company meantime to endeavor in good faith to agree upon terms for the adoption or modification of such lease or for continued user of such property.

Will you please let us have an answer on behalf of The Indianapolis Gas Company prior to September 9, 1935?

Very truly yours,
Thompson Rabb & Stevenson.

Gentlemen:

Your letters of July 23, August 31, and September 16, 1935, have been brought to the attention of the Board of Directors of The Indianapolis Gas Company. An earlier meeting of the Board was prevented by the absence of many of its members.

In acknowledging these letters, I am directed by the Board of Directors to say that the Board assumes the validity of the lease entered into by it with the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis on September 10, 1913, which was approved by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, and that all of its provisions continue to have binding force.

If the Department of Public Utilities of the City of Indianapolis desires to discuss with The Indianapolis Gas Company any of the provisions of that lease, or any questions relating thereto, The Indianapolis Gas Company will, of course, be glad to take part in such a discussion at a time and place mutually agreeable to the representatives of the Company and the Department of Utilities.

Pending the determination of the questions which you may desire to consider, The Ind...napolis Gas Com-1221 pany, not desiring to disrupt or inconvenience the public service, will be glad to enter into a mutual stipulation with you, if you so desire, that compliance with the terms of the lease shall be without prejudice to the legal rights and claims either of the Department of Utilities or of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

Very truly yours,
The Indianapolis Gas Company

Secretary.

Attention: Thompson, Rabb & Stevenson, Counsel.

Gentlemen:

In view of the near approach of March 9th, at which time our tentative arrangement will expire, and in order to reach if possible some basis of negotiation looking toward an adjustment of the differences between us in relation to the property of The Indianapolis Gas Company which you are operating, but without waiving any rights, legal or equitable, which The Indianapolis Gas Company has in or to any property or contracts relating thereto, permit us to request that without any waiver of rights on your part or any surrender of property or rights by either party pending the making of an agreement between us, you submit to The Indianapolis Gas Company for consideration by its directors, stockholders and creditors, a proposition embracing the prices, terms and conditions upon and pursuant to which you are willing to take over the property and franchises of The Indianapolis Gas Company.

Very truly yours,

The Indianapolis Gas Company,
Indianapolis.

Gentlemen:

In accordance with your request we submit herewith for your consideration a proposal to purchase the entire plant and property of your Company used or useful in manufacturing or furnishing gas or by-products in the City of Indianapolis on the following terms and conditions:

1. We will pay you the sum of $7,500,000 for such property, which will be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of revenue bonds.

2. We will pay you interest on said sum of $7,500,000 at the rate of 3 per cent per annum, from and after March 9, 1936, to the time when the bonds hereinafter referred to have been sold and the proceeds of such bond issue paid to the City of Indianapolis.

3. You are to transfer or cause to be transferred to the City of Indianapolis upon tender of the price therefor a good legal title to said property (free and clear of all liens and encumbrances other than taxes as hereinafter specified) subject to the approval of our attorneys, and, at your own expense, to bring and maintain any and all proceedings which may be necessary to accomplish that result.

4. If title to the property referred to is not conveyed to the City of Indianapolis on or before November 1st, 1936, the City shall have the right at its option to decline to proceed with the transaction.

1225 5. It will be necessary for the City of Indianapolis, in order to obtain a major portion of the consideration hereby agreed to be paid to you, to issue and sell revenue bonds. You therefore are to agree:

(a) When the City of Indianapolis offers revenue bonds for sale in the aggregate par value of not less than $7,000,000 or more than $7,500,000 you will cause to be made a firm bid for such revenue bonds at par plus the interest accrued thereon (from the date of the coupon first maturing to the date of the delivery of such bonds to you).

(b) The bonds are to run for a period of thirty years from the date of issuance thereof bearing interest at the rate of three per cent payable semi-annually and in addition to the interest charge thereon the City is to agree to pay annually an additional sum which will be sufficient over the period of the bond issue to retire and redeem one-fourth of the total amount thereof; these redemptions may be by the creation of a sinking fund and retirements by call or serially upon the principal at your option. In all other respects not herein specifically stated the bonds are to be of like tenor and effect to the $8,000,000 par value of revenue bonds heretofore sold by the City of Indianapolis.

(c) The City of Indianapolis will pay the ordinary and usual expenses incident to such bond issue, such as advertising, cost of printing and delivery of the bonds; and will furnish the opinion of its counsel that the bonds are in accordance with their terms valid obligations to be paid out of gas revenues of the City; but the City will not pay and shall not be obligated to assume any discount on the bonds or the cost of any opinion from the attorneys 1226 for the purchaser.

6. By mutual agreement the lease executed by The Indianapolis Gas Company to the Citizens Gas Company under date of September 30, 1913, is to be cancelled and terminated on and as of March 9, 1936, and neither party thereto is to have any claim, right or cause of action against the other under or by virtue of said lease or for any claimed violations of the terms thereof or otherwise and each party shall execute a complete release to the other; and the City may use the property covered by such lease without any obligation to The Indianapolis Gas Company other than the payment specified in Paragraph 2 hereof.

7. The City of Indianapolis shall in no event be obligated to pay any taxes (other than the property taxes on the real estate and personal property belonging to The Indianapolis Gas Company, all of which will be assumed if this transaction is consummated), or any attorneys' fees or other expenses or costs as provided either in The Indianapolis Gas Company mortgage or said lease of September, 1913.

8. You are to assign to the City at the time of the transfer of the property all your franchises, grants, indeterminate permits and licenses that pertain to such property or to the manufacture or distribution of gas.

9. This proposition is conditioned upon the approval of any public official or officials whose approval may be legally necessary.

In the making of this proposal and the conducting of any negotiations which may ensue subsequent thereto 1227 neither you nor are we to be prejudiced in any way nor is either of us to waive any right which either of us may lawfully assert.

The City of Indianapolis, a municipal corporation; L. Ert Slack, as Mayor of the City of Indianapolis; William A. Boyce, Jr., as City Clerk of the City of Indianapolis; Theodore H. Dammeyer, John C. McCloskey, and Emsley W. Johnson, as the Board of Public Works of the City of Indianapolis, defendants in the above-entitled cause, for answer to plaintiffs' bill of complaint, say:

1. These answering defendants admit all the averments contained in the first subdivision of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint, except that they deny the averment that the plaintiffs are the owners and holders of any shares of the common capital stock of the defendant Citizens Gas Company, but on the contrary allege that they hold and own only beneficial certificates of interest and allege that the voting trustees of the Citizens Gas Company hold all shares of the common capital stock of said company, all as hereinafter in Subdivision 20 of this answer more particularly set forth.

2. These answering defendants admit the averments of the second subdivision of plaintiffs' bill of complaint.

3. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in the third subdivision of plaintiffs' bill of complaint that the defendants Henry Kahn, Robert Lieber, Gustave A. Schnull, Thomas L. Sullivan and Lucius B. Swift, defendants herein, are citizens of the State of Indiana residing in the City of Indianapolis in said state, District and Division, but deny that said defendants individually purport to act as trustees or as a body purport to act as a Board of Trustees of all the common capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company defendant hereto; on the contrary, these answering defendants allege that said named individuals constitute and are the duly legally qualified and acting voting trustees of the Citizens Gas Company, all as hereinafter in Subdivision 20 of this answer more particularly set forth.

4. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in the fourth, fifth and sixth subdivisions of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint.

5. These answering defendants admit the averments of the seventh subdivision of the plaintiff's bill of complaint that the ground upon which the jurisdiction of this court depends is diversity of citizenship between each and all of the plaintiffs and each and all of the defendants and that the residence of all the defendants is in the Indianapolis Division of the Southern District of Indiana, but deny that the defendants, under color of certain statutes of the State of Indiana, are attempting to deprive the plaintiffs and other certificate holders of the Citizens Gas Company of property and contract rights, contrary to the provisions of Article I Section 10 of the Constitution of the United States or contrary to the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment thereto. These answering defendants admit that the matter in controversy in this cause exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of $3,000.

6. These answering defendants admit that on or about the 25th day of August, 1905, the City of Indianapolis granted a franchise to Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, their associates and assigns for a period of twenty-five (25) years; that a correct copy of said franchise marked Exhibit "A" is attached to plaintiff's complaint and made a part thereof and that certain portions, but not all of said franchise, are correctly copied in said Subdivision 8 of said complaint.

7. These answering defendants admit that said ordinance was adopted without first submitting any question as to the proposed acquisition of the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company to the qualified voters of the City of Indianapolis at a special or general election, but deny that such an election was required as a condition precedent to the enactment of said ordinance and deny that by failure to submit said question to said voters the provisions of paragraphs (f) and (g) of Provision 1 of said ordinance were or are null and void. These answering defendants further deny that the provisions of paragraphs (f) and (g) of Provision 1 of said ordinance are null and void and that said paragraphs attempted to create an interest in property vesting on a contingency more remote and that paragraph (i) of Provision 1 and Provision 22 thereof attempted to allow the exercise of options by said city at a time more remote than permitted under the common law of Indiana or under the statutes thereof then in force relating to perpetuities and alienations and deny that said provisions or any of them are or have been illegal or void.

8. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in the ninth and tenth subdivisions of plaintiffs' complaint.

9. These answering defendants admit that at the time the certificate of the Articles of Incorporation of the defendant Citizens Gas Company was subscribed and filed, Chapter 139 of the Acts of the Indiana General Assembly for the year 1905 was in full force and effect and that it required such certificate to include the various statements included in Items (a) to (f), both inclusive, of subdivision eleven of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint, but these defendants deny that said Act provides that such certificate should state only and solely certain facts as set forth in said items (a) to (f) and deny that said Act did not authorize any thing other than such facts to be stated in such certificate. These answering defendants admit that except for amendments not here material, such statute has been in effect at all times herein mentioned and deny that the provisions of said certificate setting forth the provisions of the ordinance of 1905 were and are surplusage under said Act and void.

These answering defendants allege that it was at that time and always since has been the law in Indiana that Articles of Incorporation could contain valid and binding agreements although such agreements were not included in the facts required by law to be stated in the Articles of Incorporation, provided such agreements are not inconsistent with any of the provisions of law.

These defendants further allege that the provisions contained in said Articles of Incorporation respecting the acquisition by the City of Indianapolis of the plant and property of the Citizens Gas Company were to evidence the creation of a public charitable trust, all as hereinafter in Subdivision 20 of this answer more particularly alleged and that the insertion thereof in said Articles of Incorporation and the certificate filed with the Secretary of State was entirely legal and that the inclusion of such provisions in the Articles of Incorporation was legalized by the Act of 1929, as hereinafter more particularly averred.

These defendants further allege that each and every holder and owner of trustees' certificates of beneficial ownership in the first million dollars of capital stock issued by the Gas Company agreed, in the manner alleged in subdivision 20 hereof, by the execution of the subscription agreement and the acceptance of the trustees' certificates as therein alleged, to the inclusion in said articles of incorporation of said provisions, and each and every holder of trustees' certificates of beneficial ownership in the second million dollars of said capital stock, by buying pursuant to the published notice referred to in subdivision 20 thereof, and by accepting the trustees' certificates referred to in subdivision 20 hereof ratified and agreed to the inclusion of said provisions in said articles of incorporation and these defendants say that by reason of the foregoing facts, neither these plaintiffs nor any others similarly situated, can now object to the said agreement contained in said articles of incorporation nor question the validity of such provisions in said articles or in the amendments thereto.

10. These answering defendants admit the averments contained in the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth subdivisions of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint.

11. These defendants admit the allegation in subdivision fifteen of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint that said increased capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company was sold by the Gas Company at public auction to the highest bidders for a price in excess of $400,000 above the par value thereof, without requiring the purchasers at the time of purchase, or at any time, to execute a written stipulation that the power of holding and voting said capital stock might be irrevocably given to holding trustees as required by a statute of Indiana, Chapter 58 of the Acts of 1889, page 91, then in full force and effect, and these defendants admit that the voting trustees caused to be delivered to themselves, took possession of, held and continued to hold and vote the certificates representing said shares of increased capital stock and issued to the stockholders in lieu thereof, trustees' certificates substantially in the form of Exhibit "E" attached to the plaintiffs' complaint herein evidencing the holding of said certificates by them, but these defendants deny that said voting trustees in so doing acted without authority and say that all of said increased capital stock was sold pursuant to public notice all as required by said Articles of Incorporation of said company and in which notice it was expressly stated that all stock sold should be issued in all respects conformably to the terms and conditions of the Articles of Incorporation and franchise of the Citizens Gas Company relating thereto. The circumstances surrounding the issuance of said certificates and the charitable trust created by said Articles of Incorporation and said franchise with reference to the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis are hereinafter more particularly set out in Subdivision 20 of this answer.

12. These defendants for answer to subdivision sixteen of the plaintiffs' complaint admit that for a considerable period prior to 1921 the operations of the Citizens Gas Company in the City of Indianapolis were at a financial loss and that in the month of August, 1921, the situation was acute; but deny that in addition to bonds which the Gas Company had previously issued and sold to finance extensions and additions to its plant it had a floating indebtedness in excess of $2,600,000; deny that said company was unable to fund the same by the issuance and sale of preferred stock because of the provisions of said franchise of 1905 and deny that it was unable to fund the same by the sale of bonds because of its precarious financial condition; these defendants further deny that said company was faced with the danger of defaulting in payments of interest and principal on its outstanding obligations with a possibility of foreclosure and receivership. The defendants admit that the common stock of said company had been sold at prices ranging from a minimum of $25 to a maximum of $40 per share, but say that they have no knowledge as to whether such stock was then selling in the open market at prices as low as $18 per share, but if the same be material leave the plaintiffs to make proof thereof. These defendants further deny that the company's financial condition rendered impossible the making of additions, extensions or betterments of its plant needed for public service. These defendants further deny that in the financial condition of said company the claimed right of the city to purchase the plant and property of the Gas Company pursuant to the terms of the franchise of 1905 was wholly valueless and deny that the price at which the city must purchase thereunder was substantially more than the then value of its property. These defendants say that the financial condition of the company as hereinabove referred to and as referred to in subdivision sixteenth of the plaintiffs' complaint was due primarily, if not altogether, to the fact that by the terms of its said franchise a rate of sixty cents per 1000 cubic feet was fixed as the maximum rate which could be charged for gas and that it had prior to August, 1921, been able to obtain a higher rate for gas only through the procurement of emergency relief from the Public Service Commission of the State of Indiana and that it was impossible under such circumstances for it to procure a rate for gas having such quality of permanency as would enable it to stabilize its financial position.

13. These defendants admit the allegations set forth in subdivision seventeen of the plaintiffs' complaint except inso far as the facts as therein set forth are alleged to follow upon and because of the situation as set forth in subdivision sixteen of said complaint and which facts have been in part denied in the preceding paragraph hereof.

14. These defendants admit the facts set forth in subdivision eighteen of the plaintiffs' complaint herein.

15. Answering subdivision nineteen of the plaintiffs' complaint these defendants deny that by the surrender of said franchise said Gas Company subjecting itself in all its operations to the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act and thereupon all rights, duties and obligations of the Gas Company under said franchise of 1905 and under the provisions of its Articles of Incorporation inserted pursuant thereto and all rights, duties and obligations of the city thereunder terminated and in substitution therefor the Gas Company and the city acquired the rights, duties and obligations defined by the terms of said Act. For a more particular statement as to the effect of the surrender of said franchise upon the operations of said Gas Company and the rights of the City of Indianapolis and its inhabitants in and to the property of said company, reference is made to paragraphs 20 and 21 of this answer.

These defendants admit that subsequent to the surrender of said franchise the company was able to finance necessary extensions, additions and betterments to its plant and to refund its floating indebtedness by the issuance and sale of preferred stock and bonds and to discontinue the existing non-compensatory rates and otherwise to put and maintain its property devoted to public service in a sound operating condition to meet the expanding needs of its service, but these defendants say that such results flowed primarily, not from the surrender of said franchise, in August, 1921 but from the action of said company through proceedings instituted in the year 1922 in the United States District Court for the District of Indiana in securing compensatory rates for the use of its property devoted to public service.

16. These defendants admit the allegations in subdivision twentieth of the complaint concerning the adoption of a resolution increasing the capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and concerning the execution of a Certificate of Amendment of the Articles of Incorporation of the Gas Company in the respects set forth in said subdivision and further admit that true copies of said certificate of increase and certificate of amendment of the Articles of Incorporation are attached to the complaint as Exhibits "H" and "I" and that said certificates were filed in the office of the Secretary of State August 27, 1921. These defendants deny that the said voting trustees, in assuming to execute said amended Articles of Incorporation were wholly without authority, in fact or in law, to execute the same. They deny that they were not the stockholders of said company, either of record or otherwise, at the time of executing said purported certificate amending said Articles and allege that as appears from the terms of the stock certificates themselves, the certificates of beneficial ownership therein and the Articles of Incorporation of the company pursuant to which the same were issued, all of said stock was to be held and was held solely by said trustees with the sole right to vote the same and that in voting the same for such amendments to the Articles of Incorporation they exercised the expressed powers given to them by the terms of said certificates and said Articles of Incorporation. These defendants further deny that the amendments attempted to be made were not confined to the subject matter permitted by the statutes of Indiana in force in 1921, as alleged in paragraph eleven of said complaint, and further, with reference to said voting trust, the reason for the creation thereof and the scope of the powers of the Voting Trustees, these defendants refer to paragraph 20 of this answer. These defendants deny that said voting trustees were not authorized by any terms of the voting trust to vote the stock of the company in order to perpetuate or increase or otherwise modify the powers of the voting trustees, or to sign and acknowledge any instrument as the stockholders of the Gas Company, or to make a new or amended contract affecting the rights or property of the stockholders or otherwise to vote the stock of the company or represent the stockholders of the company in amending Articles of Incorporation and allege that said voting trustees had full power and authority under the provisions of said voting trust as embodied in the Articles of Incorporation of said company and as referred to in the certificates issued representing the stock of said company and the beneficial interest in said stock to vote all the stock of said company and to do all other things as stockholders which it might be found wise or expedient in their judgment to do for the best interests of said company not inconsistent with the objects, provisions and purposes of said trust as embodied in the Articles of Incorporation of said company and these defendants allege that all of the amendments so made in said Articles of Incorporation were consistent with such objects, provisions and purposes, and the action of said voting trustees in voting said stock for the adoption of such amendments was consistent with and within the powers so granted to them.

These defendants further say that at the same meeting of the voting trustees of said Citizens Gas Company at which resolutions were adopted providing for the amendments to the Articles of Incorporation as set forth in Paragraph twentieth of the complaint herein, said voting trustees also adopted a resolution providing for the surrender of said franchise from the City of Indianapolis and that both of said actions by said voting trustees were part and parcel of the same proceeding of said voting trustees. That pursuant to said resolutions said franchise was surrendered as provided by law and the certificate certifying to such amendments to the Articles of Incorporation of said company was filed with the Secretary of State of the State of Indiana on the same date.

17. In answer to the twenty-first subdivision of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint these defendants admit that early in the year 1929 the legislature of the State of Indiana enacted an Act with the title thereto as set out in said subdivision, and that said Act contained an emergency clause to give it immediate effect upon its passage, was approved by the governor, and became effective March 11, 1929.

These defendants admit the bill for said Act was prepared by the representatives of the City, and introduced in the legislature by members residing in such City, and was enacted by the legislature in the exact form in which it had been so prepared, but these defendants say that said facts are not material in this cause.

These defendants admit that said Act provides in effect that if in the original articles of incorporation of any corporation organized prior to May 1, 1913, that being the date of the creation of the Public Service Commission of this State, for the purpose of furnishing natural or artificial gas for fuel or illuminating purposes or for furnishing electric lights and water to the citizens of any city, or to furnish light, heat and power to any city, or the inhabitants thereof, provision is made for the transfer or conveyance of the property of such corporation to such city, subject to the outstanding legal obligations of such corporation, whenever the holders or owners of shares of stock or beneficial interest therein shall have received the par value of such shares of stock or certificates of beneficial interest, together with dividends as provided in such articles, such provisions in such articles are by said Act legalized and declared to be valid and binding upon such corporation and upon the holders and owners of any shares of such stock, stock certificates or beneficial interest therein, or their assigns.

These defendants deny that said Act was passed for the sole and only purpose of attempting to legalize any invalid and illegal provision of the articles of incorporation of the Gas Company as alleged in said bill of complaint.

These defendants say they are without knowledge as to whether at the time of the passage of said Act, any other corporation in the State of Indiana came within the provisions of said Act, but these defendants allege that said Act is general in its provisions and applies to any and all corporations organized for the purpose of furnishing public service of the character therein described to any town or city or the inhabitants thereof, and which was organized prior to May 1, 1913, that being the date when the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act became effective in said

State, and in the articles of incorporation of which provisions were made for the conveyance of the property of such utility to any such town or city upon the retirement of the capital stock or the payment to the holders or beneficial owners of such capital stock at the face value thereof.

Said defendants deny that said Act is unconstitutional and void for any of the reasons set out in said subdivision of the bill of complaint, or for any other reasons.

These defendants deny that said Act impairs the obligations of contracts existing at the time of its passage between the State of Indiana and the Gas Company and its stockholders created by the provisions of the Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act, the surrender of the franchise of 1905 and the acceptance of an indeterminate permit pursuant thereto, and deny that said Act is in violation of Article I Section 10 of the Constitution of the United States, or of Article I, Section 24 of the Constitution of the State of Indiana.

These defendants deny that said Act deprives the stockholders of the Gas Company of property without due process of law, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, and deny that it results in the confiscation of the property of the stockholders of the Gas Company without just compensation, in violation of Article I Section 21 of the Constitution of the State of Indiana.

These defendants admit that said Act has the effect of legalizing the articles of incorporation of the Gas Company as set forth in the bill of complaint, and grants to municipal corporations the power to accept a conveyance of the property of such Gas Company in accordance with such provision without submitting the question of such acquisition to a general election, and that said Act provides that such city may acquire such property in accordance with such provision without submitting the question of such acquisition or the terms and conditions thereof to the Public Service Commission.

These defendants deny that said Act deals with three separate and unrelated subjects, in violation of Article IV Section 19 of the Constitution of the State of Indiana, and deny that it confers privileges and immunities in violation of Article I Section 23 of the Constitution of the State of Indiana, and denies the equal protection of the laws in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

These defendants deny that said Act attempts to create a corporation other than banking and to confer powers thereon by special act, contrary to the provisions of Article XI, Section 13 of the Constitution of the State of Indiana.

These answering defendants say that said Legalizing Act of 1929 is valid in all respects. Said Act only legalizes a contract voluntarily made by said corporation with the State in its Articles of Incorporation and in the amendments thereof and enables said City to take said property in accordance therewith. Said Act does not attempt to revive any obligation abrogated by the surrender of said franchise, but only places the express stamp of approval by the State on a contract made by said corporation and which survived the surrender of said franchise.

Said act does not deprive the plaintiffs of the equal protection of the law by providing for an invalid classification. The classification to which it applies is a self-created class consisting of corporations who voluntarily placed in their articles of incorporation provision for the transfer of their properties prior to the time when the new rules in said Shively-Spencer Act governing such transfers came into effect, on to-wit: May 1, 1913. Said Act does not impose on said class any obligations, but merely approves self-imposed obligations contained in articles of incorporation. Said corporation is not complaining of said Act, but is voluntarily performing its obligations which said Act approves. Plaintiffs cannot complain of said Act for the reason that they, through said board of trustees having power to vote all stock, have given their consent to the performance of said obligation, and further because they are not injuriously affected by said Act in that they took their rights subject to the obligation which said Act approves.

Plaintiffs cannot complain on the ground that said Act should also, to be valid, have approved similar provisions appearing only in franchises held by corporations for the reason that they are not injured by such exclusion. Only an excluded corporation could complain on that ground if any such ground of complaint exists.

Said defendants say that said Act is not invalid in that it provides a method for effecting the acquisition of the instant property different from the methods provided for in said Shively-Spencer Act, or the Act of 1905, mentioned in plaintiffs' complaint. Said Acts do not apply to cases, as the instant one, where a corporation owns its property subject to a trust and an obligation to transfer its property in accordance with an agreement contained in its articles of incorporation. The Act of 1929 directly approves provisions for the transfer of property subject to trusts and obligations voluntarily created by the corporations included in the class to which the Act applies. Plaintiffs are not injuriously affected by said Act on account of approval therein by the legislature of the transfer in question without the submission thereof to a vote or to the Public Service Commission. By such direct approval said Act only provides for the transfer which said corporation voluntarily agreed to, and which the plaintiffs and all other holders of certificates of beneficial interests in said stock agreed to by accepting their certificates wherein said conditions for surrender of said stock and the transfer of said property were incorporated. If said provisions for transfer of said property are not as advantageous to plaintiffs as transfers under the provisions of other statutes, in the absence of such contract, might be, such disadvantage is not created by said Act of 1929, but is a disadvantage voluntarily created by said corporation when it agreed to make such transfer and voluntarily acquiesced in by plaintiffs when they purchased said certificates subject to such obligation to transfer, and said Act cannot be invalid as to plaintiffs in such situation.

These defendants further allege that if said Act is a special law and only applicable to the Citizens Gas Company and said City, it is valid. That the General Assembly of the State of Indiana could have authorized the inclusion in the articles of incorporation of such corporations of the provisions contained in the articles of the Citizens Gas Company before the same was formed, and it could and did legalize such provisions by said Act of 1929.

Said defendants say that said Act of 1929 is not duplicitous. The subject on which it legislates is the transfer of utility properties under agreement to transfer expressed in articles of incorporation.

The provisions approving and legalizing such agreements and those enabling cities to take under such agreements are matters properly connected with said subject and are in aid of the main object of said Act to give effect to such agreements to transfer. Said Act of 1929 is in all respects valid.

18. Answering the allegations contained in Paragraph Twenty-Second of the complaint herein, these defendants admit that at the time the franchise of 1905 was granted by the City of Indianapolis, the Indianapolis Gas Company was furnishing gas in the central portion of the City under a franchise from the City; that the City was dissatisfied with the monopolistic position of the Indianapolis Gas Company and with the rates then being charged by it, but deny that said franchise of 1905 was granted largely to provide competition and to procure a lower rate for gas for its inhabitants, although admitting that the public spirited citizens of Indianapolis who promoted said enterprise did have these objects and others in mind, and these defendants deny that the provisions for the Voting Trust as hereinbefore set forth were inserted principally for the insuring that the control of the Citizens Gas Company should not pass to the Indianapolis Gas Company or its stockholders.

Defendants admit that it was provided in said franchise of 1905 that no Voting Trustee of the Citizens Gas Company should be an employee or stockholder of the Indianapolis Gas Company; that after the passage of the Shively-Spencer Act of 1913 the Citizens Gas Company, pursuant to an order of the Public Service Commission of Indiana and with the full consent and approval of the City of Indianapolis, entered into a contract whereby it leased from the Indianapolis Gas Company all its plants and property for a period of ninety-nine years; that, as a condition to the making of said lease, the Indianapolis Gas Company was required to surrender its franchise in the City and to accept in lieu thereof an indeterminate permit as provided in said Act and the Gas Company was required to subject its rates to the control of the Public Service Commission as fully as if it had surrendered its franchise and received in lieu thereof an indeterminate permit under the provisions of said Act and was required immediately to reduce its rates. These defendants deny that with the making of said lease and the passing of all property devoted to the service of manufactured gas in the city to the control of the Citizens Gas Company, and the subjection of the rates to the control of the Public Service Commission, the original purpose of the City failed and the reasons for the existence of said Voting Trust and of many of the provisions of said Ordinance of 1905 disappeared, and allege that quite to the contrary, the prime purpose of the City and the reasons for the existence of said Voting Trust continued in full force and effect, all as is more particularly set out and alleged in Subdivision 20 of this answer.

These defendants admit that the plant and property subject to said ninety-nine year lease and the business and the public service furnished thereunder were in some respects more extensive and have at all times been more extensive than those of the Citizens Gas Company, but they deny that the business and public service furnished through the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company were at that time or have since been in all respects more extensive than those of the Citizens Gas Company.

These defendants admit that since 1913 the Citizens Gas Company with full knowledge and consent of the City has operated the combined properties under the provisions specified by the Commission and has used its earnings and its financial credit in the making of extensions, improvements and betterments, both to its own property and to the property subject to said lease.

These defendants admit that at the time of the surrender in 1921 of said franchise of 1905, the City neither objected to nor protested said surrender, but deny the averment of plaintiffs' bill that "the apparent purpose of the surrender was to extinguish all original franchise obligations not already destroyed by acquiescence of the parties in said transactions of 1913," relating to the lease of the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company by the Citizens Gas Company.

These defendants further admit that thereafter the Citizens Gas Company openly conducted its operations in the city and elsewhere in accordance with the provisions of said Shively-Spencer Act and thereafter did not in any respect comply or attempt to comply with any of the terms and provisions of said surrendered franchise of 1905, except to this extent, that said Citizens Gas Company has at all times recognized the limitations contained in said franchise and in its Articles of Association restricting the amount of dividend which can be paid upon its common stock, and in addition thereto it has, as alleged elsewhere in said complaint, taken steps looking to the partial retirement of the principal of its common stock in accordance with the provisions of said franchise of 1905 and the provisions of its Articles of Incorporation, and except that at all times it recognized the existence of the public charitable trust as set forth in Sudivision 20 of this answer.

These defendants further admit that during all of this time until said City recently caused legislation to be perfected, introduced and enacted as alleged in Paragraph Twenty-one of the complaint herein said City, with full knowledge of the surrender of said franchise and of the fact that the business and service of the Gas Company was being conducted pursuant to the terms of said Act as here-inbefore alleged made no protest or objection thereto and made no demands or claims of any kind upon the Gas Company to comply with said surrendered franchise, but these answering defendants allege that the City of Indianapolis has never at any time either by conduct or acquiescence waived or attempted to relinquish said trust impressed on the property and plant of Citizens Gas Company. As to the allegation that said City acquiesced in said surrender and subsequent operations, these defendants neither admit nor deny the same but leave to the plaintiff to make proper proof thereof.

These answering defendants deny the allegations in said Paragraph Twenty-two of the complaint that the stockholders of the Gas Company relying upon the acquiescence of the City in said surrender bought and sold shares of the common stock of the Gas Company in open market with the understanding that the City no longer had or asserted or claimed any rights under the franchise of 1905 and the Articles of Incorporation adopted pursuant to its conditions, but allege that each person who purchased a beneficial certificate accepted the same under an express agreement that the City had the right to acquire said property; as to the allegations that due to the improved condition of the Company brought about as stated in the complaint the stock of the Gas Company increased in market value until it reached in the year 1928 the price of $57 per share in the open market and many of the present stockholders of the Gas Company purchased shares at that price and will, if said shares are subject to retirement at the price of $25 per share as provided in the franchise of 1905 and the Articles of Incorporation adopted pursuant thereto, suffer as part of their damages a loss of the difference between said market value and said retirement price, these defendants have not sufficient knowledge as to the matters and facts so alleged but leave to the plaintiff to make strict proof thereof.

These defendants deny that by reason of the facts as alleged in said Paragraph Twenty-two and the reliance of the common stockholders thereon that the City is now estopped from asserting against the Gas Company any rights it otherwise might claim by virtue of said surrendered franchise and said Articles of Incorporation, and for a more detailed statement as to the effect of the surrender of said franchise, reference is made to Subdivision 21 of this answer.

19. These defendants admit that on the 20th day of March, 1929, said City, acting through its Board of Public Works, adopted and subsequently presented to the Gas Company the resolution referred to in subdivision twenty-three of the bill of complaint, a copy of which is filed with said bill of complaint as Exhibit J, and admit that said resolution was presented after the surrender of said municipal franchise in 1921, but these answering defendants allege that the surrender of said franchise in 1921 and the fact that said city had taken no affirmative action since said time until the adoption of said resolution, did not deprive the said City of the rights demanded in said resolution and the right to have the property of said Gas Company conveyed to it in accordance therewith.

These defendants say that said City was and is entitled to have the property of said Gas Company conveyed to it pursuant to the terms of a public charitable trust with which all of the property of said Gas Company is impressed.

These defendants allege that said public charitable trust arose and was created, all as is alleged in subdivision twenty of this answer, the terms and provisions of which said trust are therein more specifically set out.

20. These answering defendants allege that a public charitable trust was created and exists in the plant and property of defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis in favor of the inhabitants and/or gas consumers of said City of Indianapolis, which trust was to be administered by the defendant Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and by the defendant City of Indianapolis as respective trustees thereof, in accordance with the terms of said trust, as hereinafter in this subdivision of this answer alleged.

That the facts in connection with the establishment of said public charitable trust were and are as follows:

That in the year 1887, the City of Indianapolis by an ordinance granted to the Consumers Gas Trust Company a franchise to furnish natural gas to the citizens of said City and vicinity upon the terms and conditions specified in said ordinance; that the supply of natural gas failed some time prior to 1904 and that an attempt was made by said Consumers Gas Trust Company to engage in the business of furnishing artificial gas to the citizens of Indianapolis; that as a result of this effort, litigation ensued in the District Court of the United States for the District of Indiana and the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, wherein it was held and finally adjudged as follows:

First. That the certificate holders of the Consumers Gas Trust Company of Indianapolis had the right to enjoin that company from engaging in the business of supplying artificial gas to the citizens of Indianapolis on the theory that such business was ultra vires the corporation.

Second. That under the franchise, Articles of Incorporation, Subscription Contracts and other relevant agreements, the City of Indianapolis had the right, by giving six months' notice, to purchase the property of the Consumers Gas Trust Company at any time after the expiration of ten years from the date of the ordinance, the amount to be paid for such plant to be determined by three disinterested appraisers.

Third. That a public charitable trust existed in favor of the inhabitants and/or gas consumers of Indianapolis in the property of the Consumers Gas Trust Company to the end that gas should be furnished at cost after the holders of beneficial certificates had received by dividends or otherwise an amount equal to their subscriptions and ten per cent. interest per annum.

That as a result of such litigation the City of Indianapolis was determined to have the right to purchase the plant and property of the Consumers Gas Trust Company and did in fact exercise such right by the assignment thereof for a nominal consideration to Alfred F. Potts, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt, being the same identical persons to whom the franchise and ordinance set out in paragraph six of the plantiffs' bill of complaint was granted, to the end that such persons should organize or cause to be organized the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis.

That the property formerly belonging to the Consumers Gas Trust Company was in fact purchased by the said Alfred F. Pots, Frank D. Stalnaker and Lorenz Schmidt and by them conveyed to the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, defendant hereto; that as a result of said litigation there was a widespread public movement in the City of Indianapolis to the end that a Gas Company should be organized which should own the property and plant formerly owned by Consumers Gas Trust Company; that said property should be acquired through the medium of a new corporation in which the stockholders or the owners of beneficial certificates representing common stock should be entitled to receive only the re-payment of the face value of such beneficial certificates with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum until paid and that thereafter the city on behalf of the gas consumers of Indianapolis and the inhabitants thereof should have the right to acquire such property without the payment of any additional consideration; the plan was so formed for the purpose of avoiding that which had theretofore happened, viz: that the persons owning the beneficial certificates of stock should receive the face value of such certificates with interest and thereafter the city be compelled to purchase said plant and pay therefor a large sum of money.

That wide publicity was given by the public-spirited citizens engaged in the organization of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to the plan, including publicity in all of the newspapers in the City of Indianapolis, Marion County, Indiana, and that the essential elements of the plan and of the public charitable trust to be thereby created were stated and agreed upon as follows:

First. That all of the common stock of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis should be issued to and perpetually voted by voting trustees to be appointed as provided in Section 6 of the original Articles of Incorporation which are set forth in Subdivision Seven of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint.

Second. That such Trustees should issue to each subscriber to the capital stock of the company a beneficial certificate and that the holder thereof should be entitled to re-payment of the face value of the same out of dividends or otherwise with interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, and that when the face value of such certificate had been paid the holder should have no further interest in the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company.

Third. That when said certificate holders have been paid in full the City of Indianapolis should have the right to acquire said property for the benefit of the public and the consumers of gas in Indianapolis without the payment of any money or further consideration.

Fourth. That a public charitable trust to be administered by the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis and the City of Indianapolis respectively as trustees was to be and was created in the property and plant of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis to the end that private exploitation thereof should be prevented and that gas should be supplied at the lowest possible cost to the citizens of Indianapolis who should desire to use the same.

It was necessary, in order to acquire the property and plant formerly belonging to the Consumers Gas Trust Company, to interest local capital in the enterprise and for the purpose of inducing the persons who should invest in the common stock of said company to make such investment upon the condition that they should never receive any more than a return of the face value of said certificate, it was proposed and agreed that interest thereon should be paid at the rate of ten per cent. per annum.

Fifth. Said plan contemplated that the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis should be the Trustee of said public charitable trust until such time as said certificate holders were repaid the face value of their certificates with interest at the rate of ten per cent. annually and that thereafter the City of Indianapolis should acquire said property for the benefit of the gas consumers and inhabitants of said city, but that it was never intended that title to the plant and property of said Ciizens Gas Company should be vested and it was not in fact vested in the City of Indianapolis as an agency of the State, but solely for the benefit of the inhabitants of said city and particularly those who at that time or thereafter should desire to use the gas to be supplied by said company.

That each of the original subscribers to the common capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company with which it was to begin business, to-wit: One Million Dollars par value thereof was required to and did execute subscriptions to the capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company upon the form set out as a part of the bill of complaint and marked Exhibit B.

That all present holders of beneficial certificates representing their ownership of the first one million dollars to be issued of the common capital stock of the Citizens Gas Company acquired the same either directly or by mesne assignments from the original subscribers to said capital stock and each and all of such present holders of said beneficial certificates had full knowledge and notice at the time of such acquisition, of the terms of said subscription contract hereinbefore set out; that said subscription contracts constituted and were a part of the general plan to form said public charitable trust.

That after the organization of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis the voting trustees issued to each subscriber of the common capital stock and thereafter to all purchasers of such stock a trustee's certificate in the form set out as a part of the bill of complaint as Exhibit E thereof.

That there was issued to each of the plaintiffs as evidencing his beneficial interest in said stock a trustee's certificate in said form, duly signed by the President of the Board of Trustees of said Voting Trustees, and attested by the President and Secretary, respectively, of the Board of Directors of said Gas Company, and each of said plaintiffs now have and hold such certificates in such form, and in which certificates it is agreed that the capital stock of said Gas Company shall be and remain under the exclusive and irrevocable control of said Board of Five Trustees and their successors, with full, complete and exclusive and irrevocable power in said Board of Trustees to hold said stock and vote the same during the continuance of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis as a corporation, for all uses and purposes in the articles of incorporation of said Company mentioned, set forth and described.

It is further provided in said certificates so held and received by the plaintiffs that when said certificate holder shall have received by dividends or otherwise upon said certificate an amount equal to the face value thereon, together with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, then such certificate shall be fully paid and cancelled and the interest of said holder in said Company and its assets shall thereupon cease, and the property of said Company shall be disposed of as provided in such articles of incorporation.

That on the 25th day of March, 1911, pursuant to the provisions of Article 4 of the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, as set out in Subdivision Seven of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint, the common capital stock of said Company was increased from One Million Dollars to Two Million Dollars, and thereafter, from time to time, prior to July 1, 1919, said additional One Million Dollars of common capital stock was sold at public auction to the highest bidder therefor after giving thirty (30) days' notice of the time and place of such sale by publication in three Indianapolis newspapers having the largest city circulation, all as provided in said Article 4 of said original Articles of Incorporation.

That in said published notices of the offering of said additional common stock for sale at public sale, it was specifically stated that all stock sold should be issued in all respects conformably to the terms and conditions of the rticles of Incorporation and franchise of the Citizens Gas Company relating thereto.

That all of said additional One Million Dollars of common stock was sold, pursuant to such notices of sale, and Trustees' certificates representing the beneficial ownership of said additional One Million Dollars of Common stock were issued to the purchasers at such public sales, or their nominees, in the form of the certificate hereinabove set out, and no other form of certificate or other evidence of ownership was ever issued to any of such purchasers of the nominees of any such purchasers.

That all subsequent owners of any of said second Million Dollars of common stock, upon acquisition thereof from prior owners thereof, received, and the present owners thereof now hold, Trustees' certificates of beneficial ownership in the form hereinabove set out, and there has never been issued or authorized any other form of certificate representing any part of the Two Million Dollars authorized common capital stock of the company other than the Trustees' certificates of beneficial ownership in the form hereinabove set out.

That the plaintiffs and each and every present or former holder of trustees' certificates has received, accepted and held such trustees' certificates containing the specific agreements hereinbefore set forth and has never at any time had any other evidence of his ownership of the beneficial interest in the Citizens Gas Company and that the plaintiffs and all other holders of beneficial certificates of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, defendant hereto, are bound by each and all of the terms and conditions of the foregoing subscription contract and beneficial certificates as well as by the provisions of the franchise contract, the Articles of Association, the amendments thereto and the public charitable trust created at the time of the organization of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis, defendant hereto, as in this paragraph of answer specifically alleged.

That neither the plaintiffs nor any other present holder of such beneficial certificates has ever objected or protested against the form of such beneficial certificates or the covenants or agreements therein contained or in any way at any time evidence his unwillingness to be bound thereby until within the last few months when publicity was given to the plan of the City of Indianapolis to acquire the plant and property of the Citizens Gas Company; that at no time either before or after such mentioned publicity has the plaintiff or any other holder of beneficial certificates of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis surrendered or offered to surrender the same or asked or demanded for the issuance to him or them of certificates representing their beneficial ownership free from the conditions above set forth.

21. These answering defendants allege and say that the City of Indianapolis now has all of the rights in and to the property of the Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis as claimed by it in the resolution set out in Subdivision Twenty-third of plaintiffs' complaint, as Exhibit J, and as recognized in the several resolutions of the board of directors and the board of trustees of said corporation set out in Subdivisions Twenty-fifth and Sixteen of said complaint, as Exhibits L and M, that the surrender of said franchise did not, and legally could not, take said rights from said city, or impair in any manner the aforesaid trusts or the rights, interests and obligations thereunder. As to the effect of the surrender of said franchise upon the said rights of said city, these defendants allege more particularly as follows:

(a) That it was the desire of the public-spirited citizens of Indianapolis who promoted the formation of said public charitable trust, as set forth in Subdivision 20 of this answer, of the City of Indianapolis and of said Citizens Gas Company, that said public charitable trust and the terms and conditions thereof should, for the protection of all concerned, be evidenced in every possible way. In order to accomplish such purpose, the dominant terms and conditions of said trust were placed in the franchise contract itself, in the Article of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company and the amendments thereto, in the subscription contracts and in the beneficial certificates issued by the trustees of the Citizens Gas Company. These answering defendants allege that the agreement so arrived at was not intended to be merely a part of the franchise contract or of the Articles of Incorporation, or of the subscription contracts, or of the Trustees' Certificates, but was stated in each and all of said papers and writings for the purpose aforesaid and in order to evidence the public charitable trust which had been created and which was to continue to exist and which trust could not be abrogated by the surrender of said franchise.

(b) Any provisions contained in the ordinance granting said franchise which provide for the retirement and cancellation of the common stock and the conveyance of such property to the city, were not abrogated by the surrender of the municipal franchise to the state, but the surrender of such franchise only had the effect herein alleged in sub-paragraph (c) (2) hereof, and all such provisions relating to the retirement of such stock and the conveyance of such property continued and remained in full force and effect after the surrender of such franchise and are still in full force and effect.

The voting trustees of the defendant Citizens Gas Company, at a meeting thereof held on the 11th day of August, 1921, adopted a formal resolution authorizing the surrender of said franchise and at the same meeting of said voting trustees a formal resolution was adopted authorizing the amendments to the Articles of Incorporation of said Gas Company which are particularly set forth in Subdivision Eleven of the bill of complaint herein; that by such action of said voting trustees taken at such meeting in authorizing the surrender of said franchise and the amendment of its Articles of Incorporation the purpose of said trustees was plainly evidenced and expressed to preserve and protect all rights of the City of Indianapolis and the inhabitants thereof in and to the property of the Citizens Gas Company.

These defendants further say that under the provisions of Section 53 of the Act of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, entitled, "An Act Concerning Municipal Corporations," approved March 6th, 1905, said City was authorized and empowered by ordinance to receive and accept public trusts and to agree to conditions and terms accompanying the same and bind such City to carry them out, and by the ordinance referred to in plaintiffs' bill of complaint and attached thereto as Exhibit A, the Common Council of said City did receive and accept the public trust created in the manner set out in Subdivision 20 of this answer and as provided in the Articles of Incorporation of the Citizens Gas Company, and did agree to the conditions and terms therein provided, and the surrender of said municipal franchise by said company did not abrogate or affect the public trust so accepted and agreed to; and said defendants further allege that independently of statutory authority said City had power to accept and execute public trusts.

(c) Even though it be held that the surrender of said franchise operated to abrogate all the terms and provisions embodied therein, such fact would not impair the rights of said city in and to the property of said Gas Company for the following reasons:

(1) The rights of said city in and to said property were never in favor of the state or of said city as the agent of the state and were in no sense subject to any power reserved in the State of Indiana by virtue of which it could make a legally effective offer to said corporation to abrogate the same.

(2) The only offer made by the state to said corporation in said Shively-Spencer Utility Commission Act was the offer to abrogate the franchise contract entered into by it, through said city as its agent, and said corporation, and to substitute therefor a new contract directly between itself and said corporation. The effect of such offer was to establish new contractual and regulatory relations between the state itself and said corporation, and, to that end, to substitute for the permit granted by the city, as such agent, an indeterminate permit direct from the state, and to substitute direct regulation as to rates and service by means of state legislation to be administered by the Public Service Commission for regulation by the agency of the City of Indianapolis as embodied in such franchise contract. Such offer did not include the abrogation of obligations owing by said corporation to anyone other than the state or to said city in its capacity as an agent of the state. Said offer did not include a proposition to surrender the corporate franchise of said corporation, or to abrogate the contract between the said corporation and the state which existed between them by virtue of the Articles of Incorporation of said company, or to abrogate said trust which was created as aforesaid, or to abrogate the obligations of said corporation to said city in its capacity as the beneficiary or prospective trustee of said trust, or to abrogate the rights and interest of the inhabitants of said city as beneficiaries of said trust, or as beneficiaries of the right to have said city acquire said property in accordance with said provisions for the acquisition of said property for their benefit. Said corporation could not, and did not, by surrendering said franchise, abrogate more than said offer included, and such surrender in no manner affected matters which were not a part of, or dependent upon, said franchise.

(3) Said rights of said city in its said capacity as the prospective owner and/or trustee of said property, and the obligation of said corporation to transfer said property to said city, and said trust, and said rights and interests of the inhabitants of said city were not dependent alone upon the franchise which said corporation surrendered. Said franchise and the exercise of any rights thereunder were themselves dependent upon the prior creation of said obligations, rights, trusts and interests aforesaid. Notwithstanding the fact that the provisions for the acquisition of said property by said city were included in the original instrument by which said city granted said franchise, the said provisions and the obligations and rights thereby created were at no time solely dependent upon said franchise or on the terms and provisions constituting the contract or franchise. The facts hereinabove alleged relating to the circumstances existing prior to, and at the time of the granting of said franchise, together with said original instrument, show that said provisions were included in the same instrument which evidences the contract of franchise, in part for the purpose of providing what should be incorporated in the Articles of Incorporation of said company when it should be thereafter incorporated and it appears therefrom that a further and permanent agreement embodying said provisions should be the Articles of Incorporation of the corporation to be formed by the grantees of said franchise. The form of such permanent agreement was embraced in said original instrument, and the same was intended to be incorporated in said articles in haec verba. Such permanent agreement was intended to become a part of the corporate franchise thereafter to be granted by the state to the proposed corporation, made by the articles of incorporation between such corporation and the state, and, as there evidenced was to be effective for the benefit of said city and its inhabitants. The provisions for the formation of said corporation and the inclusion of said permanent agreement for the acquisition of said property by said city in its articles constituted part of the consideration for the granting of said franchise by said city to said grantee and constituted conditions precedent to the exercise of any rights by said corporation under the said franchise to be assigned to it. The said circumstantial facts and said original instruments show that it was intended upon the organization of said corporation and the adoption of its Articles of Incorporation thereby to create vested rights and interests on the part of said city and the inhabitants thereof in and to the property of which the corporation might become the owner and that said corporation should own such property subject to said rights and interests and the obligation to transfer its property to said city in accordance therewith.

(4) In conformity with the aforesaid intention of the parties to said original instrument, and in performance of said conditions precedent, the persons to whom said franchise was granted formed the contemplated corporation, the said Citizens Gas Company, defendant herein, and incorporated in its articles the said provisions for the acquisition of said property by said city, and assigned said franchise to said corporation. Said corporation was thus created and said provisions were thus incorporated in its articles of incorporation more than fifteen years before said corporation surrendered said franchise. Said provisions have ever since remained in, and are now a part of, said articles of incorporation. Said articles are a part of the corporate franchise of said corporation and constitute a permanent agreement between said corporation and the State of Indiana for the benefit of said city and its inhabitants, as aforesaid. By said provisions, said Citizens Gas Company became a trustee of its property for the purposes of said provisions. All of the property acquired by it became affected by said provisions and said trust, and the inhabitants and said city acquired vested rights and interests in and to all of said property, as aforesaid, before the said surrender of said franchise, and they are now the owners of said vested rights and interests. Said provisions in said articles, and said trust and said rights and interests have at all times since said incorporation existed wholly independently from said franchise. When said franchise was surrendered the said provisions in said articles, and the corporate franchise of said corporation, and said trust and said rights and interests, were not abrogated but remained unimpaired, and are now in full force and effect. The new contract arising between said corporation and the state upon surrender of said franchise, and the indeterminate permit as part thereof, do not in any sense supersede or abrogate said corporate franchise, said articles of incorporation or the contract made thereby, or said trust or any of said rights or interests. Any rights which said corporation may have under said indeterminate permit and under said new contract are subject to its obligations under said provisions in said

Articles of Incorporation and to said trust, and to said rights and interests on the part of said city and its inhabitants to have said property transferred to said city in accordance with said provisions in said articles. The provisions in said Shively-Spencer Act relating to the purchase of the property of a utility that has surrendered its franchise do not supersede said provisions for the transfer of its property contained in the Articles of Incorporation of said corporation, and said corporation has no right by virtue thereof to a purchase price for its property determined in accordance with the provisions of said act. Said act did not intend that said corporation could abrogate the contract made by its Articles of Incorporation and particularly by said provisions therein hereinbefore referred to, and did not intend that said trust and said obligations, rights and interests could be abrogated by the surrender of said franchise. The right of said city to the transfer of said property and the right of the inhabitants to have it so transferred, the obligation of said corporation to make such transfer, the said trust, and the said vested rights and interests in no degree depend for their existence on the franchise which was surrendered, but they arise out of an executed consideration and executed conditions precedent, and are efficaciously evidenced by said provisions in said Articles of Incorporation.

(5) The inhabitants of said city and the said city have a continuing right to the transfer of said property in accordance with said provisions. Said right was created and given by said corporation as a consideration for and condition precedent to the granting of said franchise and the exercise of any rights thereunder. The surrender by said corporation of its franchise did not in anywise surrender or abrogate the irrevocable rights of others which it had agreed to confer, and did confer, before it could receive and enjoy the thing with which it has voluntarily parted, viz : said franchise. Said corporation could, by said surrender, abandon or exchange the rights it received, but it could not escape its obligation provided for in the independent contract and which constituted the consideration and condition precedent which were essential to the existence and enjoyment of the rights granted it by said city.

(6) If the provisions for the transfer of said property constituted no more than an offer to make such transfer, the surrender of said franchise would not have operated to withdraw the same, inasmuch as said provisions have at all times appeared in said Articles of Incorporation and such articles were unaffected by the surrender of said franchise. Coinciden' with such surrender said provisions were reincorporated in articles of amendment of said Articles of Incorporation. Neither said corporation nor plaintiff ever did anything to withdraw or to avoid said provisions in said original and amended Articles of Incorporation before said city made demand for performance. On the contrary, said corporation, by and through its board of directors, and its board of trustees having full power to represent plaintiff by virtue of the terms of said voting trust, is now carrying said provisions into effect in response to the demand made in behalf of said city, all as shown in Subdivisions Twenty-third and Twenty-fifth of plaintiffs' complaint. Plaintiffs' certificates, by virtue of which they claim the right to maintain this action, were issued and purchased by them after said franchise was surrendered, and the same have incorporated therein the same provisions for such transfer as appear in said original and amended articles. Said provisions were in effect when plaintiffs acquired said certificates, are a part of said certificates, and their rights in and to the property and assets of said corporation are subject to the rights of said city under said provisions for transfer.

(7) Said Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis has at no time claimed, and is not now claiming, that the surrender of said franchise abrogated the right of said city to said property in accordance with said provisions. On the contrary, said corporation reaffirmed said provisions in said amended articles coincident with said surrender, as aforesaid, and it now intending to perform in accordance therewith. Plaintiffs are in no position to complain of said corporation's intention to transfer said property in accordance with said provisions for the reason that said provisions are a part of the contract between themselves and said corporation and they took their certificates subject to said provisions, also for the reason that so far as their consent is material to performance of said provisions by the corporation such consent is being given by said board of trustees, who have full authority to give such consent for plaintiffs by virtue of their power under said voting trust to vote all of the stock of said corporation on all matters affecting said corporation.

22. These answering defendants admit the allegations contained in subdivision twenty-four of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint.

23. These answering defendants admit the allegations contained in the twenty-fifth subdivision of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint.

24. These answering defendants, in answer to the twenty-sixth subdivision of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint, deny that the only purpose of creating the voting trust therein referred to, other than as previously set out in the plaintiffs' bill of complaint, was to carry out and make effective the rights of the city under said franchise of 1905, and deny that upon the surrender in 1921 of said franchise, all rights, duties and obligations thereunder, and under the Articles of Incorporation, terminated, and deny that the voting trust ceased to serve any useful or lawful purposes whatsoever, and deny that since said date said voting trust has existed only by the sufferance of the common stockholders of the Gas Company, and deny that in respect of the holders of the second million dollars issue of the common stock of the Gas Company there was no legal basis for the maintenance and/or validity of said voting trust, and deny that from the beginning said trust has existed in respect of such shares only at the sufferance of the owners thereof, but allege that said voting trust was performed and agreed to by all of the holders of said trustee's certificate, including these plaintiffs, in the manner and for the purposes set out in subdivision 20 of this answer.

These defendants deny that at the present time said voting trust operates to sever perpetually the voting rights of all the common stock of the Gas Company from the ownership of said stock without any lawful purpose or object to support such separation, and deny that the same is illegal and void.

These answering defendants deny that in voting said shares said Voting Trustees have not in the past, and deny that by their adoption of said resolution and their public utterances they have indicated that they will not in the future, consult the wishes or act for the benefit of the owners of said stock in voting the same, and deny that without regard to the wishes or rights of said owners they will vote said stock for the destruction of the rights of the common stockholders of said Company, but allege that said trustees have in the past, and intended in the future, to exercise their rights and perform their duties as such Voting Trustees in strict accordance with the power and obligations conferred upon them, as is more fully set out in subdivision 20 of this answer, and these defendants further say that said voting trust was established as a part of and to more effectually preserve and execute the public charitable trust as set out in subdivision 20 hereof.

25. In answer to the twenty-seventh subdivision of the bill of complaint the defendants deny that the plaintiffs are owners of shares of stock of the Gas Company, but allege that said plaintiffs and all others similarly situated, are holders and owners of trustee's certificates as hereinbefore set out, and are only entitled to the rights and privileges prescribed by said trustee's certificates, and that all the rights of said plaintiffs in and to said stock are subject to the public charitable trust, as is fully set out in subdivision 20 hereof.

These defendants say that they are without knowledge as to the value of plaintiffs' said trustee's certificates, but admit that if said public charitable trust be declared invalid and that the holders of the beneficial interest certificates become entitled to the entire equity in said property, subject to the payment of the Gas Company's preferred stock and other indebtedness, and if the right of the City to acquire said plant and property be defeated, that the said certificates of beneficial interest would be worth more than their present value.

These defendants further say that the plaintiffs, and others in like situation, are only entitled to receive on account of their ownership of said beneficial certificates the sum of $25.00 per share and interest at the rate of ten percent per annum and no more, and that these defendants are not threatening or intending to do any act which will deprive either of the plaintiffs, or others in like situation, of any such rights.

26. In answer to the twenty-eighth subdivision of the plaintiffs' bill of complaint, these answering defendants admit that the individual defendants acting as officers, Board of Directors and Voting Trustees of the Gas Company, are in sole and exclusive possession and control of the Gas Company and all of its money, property and business, as well as of its corporate organization, and that they are, and for many years have been, transacting all of its business to the total exclusion of these plaintiffs and other holders of beneficial interest in the common stock thereof, so far as any voice in the management of said business is concerned, but these defendants say that said individual defendants have not transacted any of the business of said Gas Company to the exclusion of any of the rights of the plaintiffs, or any other owners of beneficial interest similarly situated.

These defendants admit that unless finally enjoined by this court said individual defendants will continue to manage the affairs of the Gas Company in accordance with the provisions in said franchise agreement, that are now in effect, and the provisions of the Articles of Incorporation and amendments thereto of said Gas Company, and in accordance with the terms and provisions of said public charitable trust will, unless so enjoined, make the capital payments referred to in the bill of complaint to the holders of the trustee's certificates, and when the face value of said trustee's certificates has been paid to the holders thereof together with ten percent per annum interest thereon, and the preferred stock in said Gas Company has been retired, unless so enjoined by this court, they will transfer to said City said property in accordance with the demands of said City.

These defendants admit that the Voting Trustees have in their possession all of the certificates of stock issued to represent the common stock of said Gas Company, and unless enjoined by this court, said Trustees will assert the right to vote and will vote all of said stock so long as the same is outstanding and unretired, and will vote the same for the purpose of complying with the aforesaid demands of said City, but deny that they have excluded or will exclude the plaintiffs, or any persons similarly situated, from any participation in the affairs of the Gas Company in any particular wherein the plaintiffs, or any persons similarly situated, are entitled to participate, and deny that they will assert the right to vote or will vote any of said stock without regard to the rights or interests of the plaintiffs or others similarly situated.

These defendants say in answer to the allegation that they will assert the right to vote and will vote said stock without regard to the wishes of the plaintiffs, and others similarly situated, that unless otherwise adjudged by this court said trustees intend to vote said stock in accordance with the provisions of said Articles of Incorporation and amendments thereto, and said subscriptions to the stock of said Company and the provisions in the trustee's certificates heretofore referred to and in accordance with the terms and provisions of said public charitable trust as set out in subdivision 20 hereof, and if such purposes are not the wishes of the plaintiffs, then said trustees will not, unless so enjoined, carry out the wishes of said plaintiffs and others similarly situated.

These defendants say that none of said acts or contemplated acts are in violation of any of the rights of either of the plaintiffs or any other persons similarly situated.

These defendants admit that the City and its officers, defendants herein, are now asserting and, unless restrained and enjoined by this court, will continue to assert the claimed rights of the City to acquire the property of the Gas Company, and to compel the Gas Company to pay for and retire the common stock thereof in accordance with the terms of the franchise of 1905 and the Articles of Incorporation of said Gas Company, but these defendatns deny that said City and its officers, defendants herein, are thereby casting, or will continue thereby, to cast a cloud upon the title to and adversely affect the actual value of the interests of the plaintiffs and others similarly situated, in the common stock of said Gas Company, or that any of said acts will result in the irreparable damage to plaintiffs or others similarly situated.

These defendants say that all of the rights claimed and asserted by said City and its said officers are legal and valid, and the assertion thereof will not cause the plaintiffs or others similarly situated any damage, nor entitle the plaintiffs or any others similarly situated to maintain this action.

27. In answer to the twenty-ninth subdivision of the bill of Complaint, these defendants deny that the acts done and claims asserted by the respective defendants herein, as set forth in the bill of complaint, are in derogation of the rights and to the irrevocable injury of the plaintiffs or others similarly situated, for which they have no adequate remedy at law and can have no relief save in a Court of Equity. They deny that the plaintiffs or others similarly situated, would each be required to bring a separate action for damages requiring a multiplicity of suits, and that damages would be difficult to ascertain and assess, for the reason that said acts done and claims asserted are not in derogation of the rights or in violation of the rights or interests of the plaintiffs or others similarly situated, and neither said plaintiffs or others similarly situated, have any cause of action for damages on account thereof.

These defendants deny that there is involved the violation of a trust by the individual defendants acting as officers, Board of Directors and Voting Trustees of the Gas Company in respect of obligations owed plaintiffs and others similarly situated, and deny that the claims of the City constitute a cloud upon the title to the property of the plaintiffs or others similarly situated.

Wherefore, these answering defendants say that plaintiffs' bill of complaint should, on final hearing, be dismissed for want of equity and that the plaintiffs are not entitled to any relief whatever in the premises.

Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis
Majestic Building
Office of General Manager

Indianapolis, Ind., June 1, 1919.

The Union Trust Co.,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Gentlemen:—

Referring to the purchase of 19,240 shares of the capital stock of this company which you made on May 29th, I beg to give you the following information about the history and present conditions of this company:

History.

The Citizens Gas Company of Indianapolis was organized for the purpose of acquiring the disused natural gas system of the Consumers Gas Trust Company, and to furnish the people of Indianapolis with gas at 60 cents per M. Cu. Ft. The former purpose was accomplished October 31st, 1907, and the company began to supply gas on a limited scale in April, 1909. The unusually low price at which the company undertook to sell gas made necessary the use of some process of manufacture which would yield large revenues outside of the gas business proper, for it was impossible to manufacture gas by the ordinary processes in use in the industry and sell it at the price indicated. Accordingly the company undertook to construct and operate by-product coke ovens from which the gas would be a by-product. The operation of these ovens began at the close of the year 1909. The initial coke oven plant was duplicated in the year 1913, and further extensions which have been completed this year have nearly doubled the capacity of the plant as increased in 1913. The by-product coke ovens which were in course of construction by the Indianapolis Gas Company were completed by this company after the property of the former company was leased in 1913, and these ovens have a capacity about 50 per cent. greater than the original ovens constructed by this company.

The expansion of the manufacturing plants of the company and the corresponding expansion of all branches of its business have required large additions to the original investment.

Growth of Resources 1910-1918.

The investment of the company in fixed property amounted to $1,507,801.57 on December 31st, 1910, and by December 31st, 1918, it had increased to $5,270,379.64, while it had also acquired by lease the important operating properties of the Indianapolis Gas Company. During this same period the company's necessary working capital had expanded from $153,781.72 to $1,692,024.40. The present sale of capital stock was made in order to meet in part the recent very great increases in the company's investment in plant and working capital.

Revenues.

The gross revenue of the company in the year 1910 was $525,583.74, while the gross revenue for the year 1918 was $5,780,838.09. The net revenue after deducting operating expenses and taxes amounted to $92,013.62 in the former year and $890,363.42 in the latter. The interest charges in 1910 were $32,155.00, thus leaving a net profit for the year of $59,858.62. For the year 1918 the leasehold rental amounted to $382,936.05 and interest and amortization charges were $151,151.46, thus leaving a net return of $356,275.91.

Originating 60c Gas.

The price at which the company undertook to supply the people of Indianapolis with gas was at the time the lowest in the United States. In spite of the very great increase in all manufacturing and construction costs this price of 60 cents per M. Cu. Ft. still obtains in this city. Such a price could not be maintained if it were not for the fact that this company is a large operator of by-product coke ovens. The gross income from the sale of gas amounts to rather less than 25 per cent. of the total income of the company. On account of greatly increased costs of production and the rates of gas which have generally been fixed on the basis of a lower price level, the gas companies of the United States have been passing through a very difficult period.

Government Settlement.

There has already been a revival in the by-product coking business which promises to make the year 1919 a satisfactory one. Heavy investments in manufacturing supplies and heavy increases in fixed charges were made necessary by the war contracts of the company, but these disadvantages will be offset to a considerable extent by the settlement of the company's war claims against the United States Government. The Government has already made payment of $519,456.35 in settlement of the principal claim. Under the contract which has thus been settled, the receipts from the Government would have been applicable to earnings during the years 1919 and 1920, and the amount received from the Government will therefore be allocated to these two years, thus affording a considerable offset to the shrinkage in the company's business due to the sudden termination of the war.

Dividend Record.

The company paid its first dividend on January 1st, 1911, and has maintained an unbroken dividend record since that time. Its total disbursements to its stockholders, including the dividend paid in March of this year out of earnings in the year 1918, have amounted to $1,107,471.98. Under the terms of its Articles of Incorporation and its franchise, the dividends of this company are limited to 10 per cent. on the face value of its outstanding capital stock, but such 10 per cent. dividends are cumulative. The deficiencies in dividend disbursements during the earlier years of the company's business have been made up to December 31, 1911. Other accruals for the period between January 1st, 1912, and June 30th, 1915, will require about $115,000 for full payment. Since the last named date dividends have been paid at the full rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

Surplus.

At the close of 1918 the surplus of the company stood as follows

Stock Premium	$253,714.90
First & Refunding Bond Sinking Fund	75,786.24
Undistributed Surplus	81,209.84
Total	$410,710.98

The paid in surplus designated stock premium will be increased from the recent sale of capital stock by about $165,000.00.

Depreciation Reserves.

It has been the policy of the company to create adequate depreciation and contingent reserves, in addition to charging maintenance costs to current expenses. The depreciation reserves on December 31, 1918, amounted to $676,688.36, from which certain deductions will be made covering the displacement of certain equipment removed in connection with the recent considerable enlargement of the manufacturing plant. It will be the policy of the company to continue to make appropriations to the depreciation reserve accounts to provide adequate reserves for replacements and obsolescence. Contingent reserves for the settlement of disputed taxes and unforseen claims amounted, on December 31, 1918, to $129,463.10.

Capitalization and Funded Debt.

The capitalization of the company prior to the recent sale of its capital stock stood as follows:

	Authorized	Issued
First & Refunding Mortgage
5 Per Cent. Bonds	$10,000,000	$2,462,000
General Mortgage
7 Per Cent. Bonds	1,500,000	1,400,000
Capital Stock	2,000,000	1,500,000

The full authorized capital stock will stand as issued with the delivery of stock sold on May 29th.

The General Mortgage 7 Per Cent. bonds are dated May 1st, 1918, and have been issued to provide funds for the construction of new by-product coke ovens and necessary by-product equipment. These are serial bonds which mature in two to five years. $650,000 of the First & Refunding Mortgage 5 Per Cent. bonds are pledged as collateral for the General Mortgage bonds and it is the purpose of the company to apply the proceeds from the sale of these bonds to the redemption of the General Mortgage bonds. The remaining bonds of that issue will be redeemed as they mature out of current funds.

Lessee Indianapolis Gas Company.

On October 1st, 1913, with the approval of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, this company took over under a 99 year lease all of the operating property of the Indianapolis Gas Company, consisting of a large water gas producing plant, a plant of by-product coke ovens then nearing completion, extensive shops for the distribution department, and the entire distribution system and gas business of the lessor. The manufacturing plants owned and leased by this company have been operated in harmony, and the distribution systems of the two gas companies have been connected and are operated as a single system. The combined systems for the distribution of gas in this city now comprise 621.67 miles of main and the company is now supplying 62,183 gas consumers.

Voting Trust.

The capital stock of this company is held in perpetual trust by a board of self-perpetuating trustees. This board votes all of the stock, and of course elects the directors of the company. The original issue of $1,000,000 of capital stock was sold on popular subscription and was taken by about 3,500 individual subscribers. Under the articles of association subsequent issues of stock have been sold at public auction, the premium going into the surplus account as indicated above. Substantially all of the stock of the company is held by citizens of Indianapolis and almost none of it by persons living outside of the State of Indiana. At present the stockholders number about 2,800. Trustees' certificates are issued to the stockholders by the voting trustees, and these entitle the holders to 10 per cent cumulative dividends. For some years past the company has been paying 5 per cent. semi-annual dividends, and, as indicated above, all of the accruals during the period when full dividends were not paid have now been paid with the exception of about $115,000. In event of inability to pay the full authorized dividend at any time, the company is pledged to make up the deficiency in the dividend distribution as soon as earnings make this possible.

Trustees and Officers.

The voting trustees of the company are Judge Thomas L. Sullivan, President; Thomas H. Spann, Vice-President; Lucius B. Swift, Henry Kahn and G. A. Schnull. The directors of the company are John R. Welch, President; A. F. Potts, Vice-President; J. D. Forrest, Secretary and General Manager; G. A. Efroymson, Treasurer; H. W. Bennett, J. H. Hooker, H. H. Hornbrook, Robert Lieber and Franklin Vonnegut.

I am attaching hereto profit and loss statement for the year 1918 and balance sheet as of December 31, 1918.

Very respectfully yours,

(Signed) J. D. Forrest,
Secretary and General Manager.

PLAINTIFFS' EXHIBIT 91.

Office of Citizens Gas Company

Indianapolis, Ind., June 7, 1913.

To the Stockholders of the Citizens Gas Company:

Your Company is again being subjected to attacks similar to many others which have been made since it was organized by you for the purpose of serving this community. As on many occasions in the past, your Company again calls on you to use your influence in meeting these attacks and in advancing the interests of your Company. The Management of this Company has never yet made a promise which it has failed to fulfill; and no line of policy has ever yet been adopted by this Company which has not worked to the interest of both stockholders and the public. The same Directors and the same Trustees continue in control of this Company, and we believe that the record made in the past by them in serving your interests and the interests of the public justify them in appealing to you for continued confidence in their integrity and in their ability to conduct the affairs of this Company.

Petition to Public Service Commission.

On May 21st your Company submitted to the Public Service Commission of the State of Indiana a petition asking approval of a proposed lease of the entire gas property of the Indianapolis Gas Company, and submitted therewith both the draft of lease and a statement giving detailed reasons for believing that the lease was in the interest of this Company and of the public as well as reports and estimates showing the advantages to this Company, and ultimately to the consumer, from control of the property of the Indianapolis Gas Company under the terms of the lease. All of these papers are public documents, accessible to all citizens who are interested in ascertaining their contents, and extensive quotations from them have been made in the public papers. Further, the Management of the Company has been prepared to furnish inquiring stockholders any other information in its possession. There would therefore seem to be no justification for ignorant attacks on the Company; yet none of those who have made such attacks either in public or in private seem to have paid any attention to facts already made public or any desire to obtain further information. In brief, the statement filed with the Commission set forth the following information:—

Competition Dangerous to the Company and the Community.

Although the Citizens Gas Company has been able to compete successfully with its larger rival, and will continue to do so if necessary, this competition has not been without dangers in the past, and may be found to be more dangerous in the future. The old management of the Indianapolis Gas Company was bent on bringing the Citizens Gas Company into bankruptcy. It had much larger financial resources than the Citizens Company and had the approval of the immensely powerful interests which control many other gas companies in the United States. The old company has at last followed the lead of your Company by constructing By-Product Coke Ovens and it was the avowed intention of the old management of that company to begin immediately such character of competition as was best calculated to destroy the Citizens Company. The far greater volume of business which the old company has always had would enable it to spend far more money in gaining and holding business than the Citizens Company could possibly afford, and when the cost of manufacturing gas could be reduced, it would be possible to injure this Company in many ways not previously attempted.

The Citizens Gas Company has had ample capital for its necessary work, but not for rapid extension or enlargements to outstrip its competitor. Under any competition which would prevent the Citizens Company from paying dividends, it would be difficult for the latter company to sell additional stock or bonds with which to keep itself abreast of the requirements of its business. Therefore, although an unreasonable cut in the price of gas would certainly cause great injury to the Indianapolis Gas Company, the greater size of that company and the greater resources of its New York owners would have enabled it to stand the strain far better than the Citizens Gas Company could do, and the latter might have become discredited and weakened beyond repair.

At the suggestion of the Citizens Gas Company certain citizens of Indianapolis acquired control of the Indianapolis Gas Company at a cost of nearly $2,000,000. This was done under an agreement in advance that the old plant and mains would be leased to your Company, which should then operate the entire system under your Franchise. This purchase was made in good faith, and these gentlemen stand ready to fulfill their part of the contract, if permitted to do so by the Public Service Commission. However, although the present owners of the Indianapolis Gas Company are friends of the Citizens Gas Company, if the lease does not become effective, they are bound to operate their property to their own best advantage. They would be obliged to carry on such competition as would best advance the interests of their company, and after establishing a record of large dividends for a year or two, they would probably sell the control to other large gas interests which would not be friendly to this Company and which would probably have larger resources than those of the previous owners. Thus the dangers of competition will not be removed unless the lease becomes effective, even although the control of the old company may continue temporarily in the hands of friends of your Company.

Competition Wasteful to the Company and the Community.

It has never been disputed that a single gas company can be more efficiently operated than two in the same community, and where the single gas company is regulated by a franchise which safely guards the interests of the community, as yours does, or where it is operated under the regulation of a conscientious Public Service Commission, there is only loss to the community from a duplication of the service. Although the two gas companies in this city have generally made extensions in such a way as not to duplicate each other, there have been many duplications of mains; sometimes in the scramble to get into desirable territory, sometimes through ignorance of each other's plans which caused both companies to begin laying mains simultaneously in the same streets, sometimes because one company must put in new mains to improve its circulation, whereas the other company had already an adequate main in the same street. During the season of 1912 the Indianapolis Gas Company laid 28,000 feet of mains 8 inches or more in diameter at a cost of over $27,000. The greater part of these extensions was for the sake of strengthening the system and not for the purpose of taking care of new consumers. Now the Citizens Gas Company had adequate large mains in nearly all of these streets which could have served this purpose fully as well as the new mains just laid, if it had been possible for the two companies to operate as one. Such wastes of investment mean that ultimately the community must pay interest and dividends on such duplications. Similarly, thousands of new gas services have been laid to connect given houses, whereas those houses were already connected with the mains of the opposing company; yet it would be impossible to avoid these duplicate services if each company should continue to try to get and hold all business possible.

The Indianapolis Gas Company was subjected to an expense of about $22,000 per year for the maintenance of a New York office and the payment of salaries to New York officials. This was a waste of absentee ownership which the present owners can cut off regardless of any
